Take Two

by DandyVela

Summary

During a promotional photoshoot, Catra and Adora have to deal with their usual fight or fuck reflex.

Notes

The "Break A Leg promo photoshoot" prompt was the winner of the poll I ran on T witter for hitting 4k. This one is a bonus story set in Chapter 3, after Catra meets Lonnie on the roof and before her gym session with Huntara and Adora.
Thank you so much for the suggestion, @SmileeDoodles!
I hope you guys will like it.

See the end of the work for more notes

"Could you just go the fuck to sleep?"

Adora kept her voice a hurried, furious whisper as she pushed herself into a plank on the mattress and punched her pillow with a shaking fist. The blanket slipped off of her shoulder, the whole bed creaking at the impact of her hit.

Catra didnt even bat an eye. She turned her head towards Adora, drawing lazy circles in the air with her foot.

Her narrow eyes were glowing.

"What do you care?" she asked in a casual fuck-you manner, rustling with her book even louder. "I don't want to sleep, I won't. You can't make me do shit, Princess."

"I don't care if you don't sleep," Adora snapped immediately. "I care that I can't sleep because of you."

"Oh, why didn't you start with that?" Catra asked with a wicked grin and feigned consideration. "God forbid our perfect little Adora can't have her beauty sleep before the big photoshoot."

Adora grit her teeth, jaw clenching. She was one second away from jumping out of the bed and grabbing Catra by her hair to show her the only acceptable activity they could do instead of sleeping, but - surprisingly - Catra slammed the cover of her book closed.

Adora's eyes followed Catra as she sauntered to the other side of the trailer and turned to stare right back at Adora as her curled finger hovered over the switch.

As soon as Catra flicked the lights off, Adora's alarm started blaring.

Adora fell onto her pillow face first, and screamed.

"Aww, no," Catra cooed, her smirk evident in her tone alone. "Too late."

Oh, Adora was going to kill her.

Adora almost believed that her luck had changed.

Catra obviously went into the bathroom first and had taken her sweet time. It took Adora two minutes of constant banging and cursing to get Catra out in time for her to clean up, too, but after that?

It was all a breeze.

For a while.

Adora had made it to the van that took some of the actors to the studio in time. Not so much in time that she could choose a seat for herself, but the last unoccupied seat was the furthest from Catra, so it was perfect.

With a comfortable seat to fall back into, her earbuds in place, and the gentle purr of the van's engine vibrating beneath her, she was able to doze off eventually.

Unlike Catra, she had slept through most of the night no problem. She woke up once to pee; that was when Catra made it absolutely impossible for her to fall back asleep. She was listening to her annoying whatever metal way too loudly (even with headphones) and had kept the lights on to read. After tossing and turning for about two hours, Adora finally snapped.

We all know how that ended.

After her power nap, Adora winced awake relatively refreshed when Juliet shook her by the shoulder. She was ready to tackle this photoshoot and do a perfect job.

Except.

There is always one except. And her name is Catra.

Catra, who was usually insufferable to begin with. Catra, whose favorite pastime was getting on Adora's nerves. Catra, who was just always on her mind.

Catra, who was very, very sleep deprived right now.

Adora's separate character shoot was going smoothly. She may not know how to use her words, but she did know how to use her body; how to show it off, even. Posing for a couple posters and promotional materials was not a big deal for her. She's been on billboards before, advertising the weirdest stuff. Putting herself out there was just part of her job, and it's been a long time since she was camera shy.

Plus, she had worked hard to look the way she did. It was nice to be all dressed up in a bespoke suit and leather brogues, every part of her outfit probably more expensive than her whole yearly income.

It was a stupid luxury, but luxury nonetheless. At least she didn't feel like a clown anymore doing this.

The camera hissed and clicked.

Adora tiled her hips, and pretended to unbutton her suit.

"Perfect. Could you raise your jaw for me? Not so high. Yes, wonderful. Keep it there."

Adora breathed out, crossed her ankles, and eased her muscles. As she found her usual spot somewhere behind the photographer to focus on, someone walked into the room and into her peripheral vision.

Adora lost her balance. She slammed her foot down to ground herself with a little yelp before she could fall, arms thrown up and out.

Then came that familiar raspy, mocking giggle, almost immediately. "Please tell me you got that."

Adora grumbled to herself. People around her asked if she was okay, but she didn't care to answer with more than a stern nod.

"Just a couple more minutes, okay honey?" the photographer told Catra, whipping his vivid cyan hair back from his shoulder.

Catra's grin melted immediately. She crossed her arms in front of her chest, hugging herself. "Dont call me honey ."

"Sorry , darling," he said, then laughed immediately. "Oops. You probably dont like that either , do you?"

Adora saw Catra's eyes flaring up dangerously. This poor man had no idea how close he was to an explosion, like a naked flame swung right above a propane tank.

Catra pulled her shoulders up, and said, slow and quiet:

"Don't push your luck."

The photographer either didnt hear her, or was pretending he didnt. His focus was back on Adora.

"Let' s try one last pose for you, and then your cute, grumpy friend can join you."

"She' s not my friend,"Adora barked as soon as Catra went:

"Im not cute."

So Catra said:

"Y eah, we're not friends."

And Adora went:

"She' s definitely not cute, trust me."

There wasnt even a beat of silence before Catra bared her teeth.

"Look who thinks she's hot shit just because they put her in a Dior suit."

“At least I’m acting like a professional, and not a cranky child who couldn’t sleep without her binky!”

“I’ll give you something to suck on, asshole.”

Adora clenched her jaw shut, blush spilling all over her face. Her ears were ringing; her anger was bubbling like boiling lava in her chest, her skull, between her thighs, until her whole body was trembling with it.

They all glared at each other; Adora and Catra fuming, the photographer contemplating if he got paid enough to deal with them.

He decided that he didn’t.

“Alrighty,” he chirped, clearly swallowing back his own opinion about both of their behavior. “Starting to understand the notes I’ve gotten from D… your director. Why don’t you join us, Catra? Let’s try the couple’s shoot first.”

Catra took a step back.

Adora did, too. She didn’t realize they had stepped into each other’s personal space, faces so close that she could feel Catra’s dismissive scoff blow on her cheek.

“Let’s stay on the suit unbuttoning topic,” the photographer said, and waved for Catra with a flick of his fingers. “Get behind her. Put your hands on top of hers.”

Adora gulped.

Catra’s tiny, cold hands were cupping hers, slender fingers curling into Adora’s suit to pull it open on her chest. She was standing so close, pressed into Adora’s side, resting her cheek on her shoulder.

Catra was already acting like nothing happened.

Adora hated her for it.

"Look at me. Not the objective, love. Remember? Look into my eyes."

"Sorry," Adora mumbled, a little dazed.

It made Catra growl behind her; the vibrations shooting through Adora's veins. She rolled her shoulders to keep a full-body shiver contained, and controlled her expression again.

Catra was dressed in a tight leather corset that clung to her petite form like it was her own skin. Her combat boots had studs sticking out of them, and the stylists let her wild hair flow over her shoulders and curve around her sharp jaw. The thick winged eyeliner made her mismatched irises look even brighter; her blue eye glowing azure, her brown one like dripping honey.

"Don't look at her, either," the photographer said, humor hiding in his voice.

Shit. She wasn't staring. Was she? She wasn't.

Catra's lashes fluttered. She met Adora's eyes, and Adora was drowning. Catra reached up to cup Adora's jaw roughly - the tips of her nails digging into her skin - and moved Adora's head towards the camera without saying a word.

Adora took her hand and shoved it away.

If Catra could stay professional, so could she.

Right?

But Catra couldn't.

By the time their fourth pose came, Catra had started slipping. She was talking back to the photographer after all of his instructions, and her gaze had become cloudy and unfocused. Usually, she carried herself with graceful confidence; but that was nowhere to be found in her hunched shoulders and sloppy demeanor.

They were supposed to be standing chest to chest, facing each other, and showing their profiles to the camera. Production had packed some of their props: Adora had her gun to tilt Catra's chin up with, while Catra held a knife to Adora's throat. Their free hands were tangled in each other's hair, pulling slightly while they were directed to stay so close that their noses brushed together.

The easiest part was to look like they were pissed off at each other.

The photographer had instructed Catra to tighten her grip on the hilt for the fourth time, and she lost it.

She pushed Adora away, and threw the prop knife on the ground. It hit the wooden floor with a clank, and slid further away from her.

"Just make up your mind already!" Catra raised her voice. She was not yelling yet, but getting very close. Her whole face was burning red, eyes shining strangely.

Someone whistled. As the slow clapping of heels sauntered closer, Adora swore she could see Catra's hair rising.

Double Trouble twirled by the photographer's side in full glam, and leaned on his shoulder.

"Looks like my timing is perfect," they drawled, playing with their hair. Their sharklike grin didn't fade as they asked the photographer: "What's going on, Baby Blue?"

"Your little kitten hissed at me," he said pitifully. "And all I did was follow your requests perfectly."

Double Trouble tutted. "Is that true, Kitten?"

Adora's whole head flushed with hazy heat. Her thoughts were overcast so quickly, like a rainstorm breaking through blue skies. For a moment, she couldn't even see anything, her vision blurry like she had just blacked out. When she came back to her senses, her jaw was numb and tense at the same time, her hands trembling in tight fists.

It was Catra's cold, raspy voice that brought her back to Earth.

"Why don't you tell your boyfriend to stop treating me like an idiot instead?"

Fuck.

Now Adora got it.

She tried to swallow the bile that had started scratching at the back of her throat. She knew this venom by now, but still she wanted none of it.

It was the same thing that poisoned Catra.

And it was ugly.

The photographer turned to Double Trouble, pouting. "I don't think she'll be able to behave."

Before Catra could jump on that, Double Trouble clicked their tongue. "You're right. What should we do with her, love?"

They clung to the photographer tighter, practically huddling up by his side. Their fingers walked up his chest playfully, but their eyes were fixated on Catra.

Adora chanced a glance towards Catra; she seemed to be vibrating with fury, arms crossed under her chest and her features distorted.

Adora's throat flared up. Her eyes, too. Shit, why did this feel so–

Catra's arms went slack, hanging lifelessly by her sides. She stepped back, raising her jaw. Her voice was quiet, emotionless, wavering with how much self control she needed to keep it down.

"You're not worth it."

Double Trouble's grin split even wider. "Well, well, well. Will you look at that."

The photographer looked almost disgusted; his nose was scrunched up, pulling his upper lip into a faint grimace.

"Tell you what," he clicked his tongue, tipping his wrist so he could rest the camera on his shoulder. "Why don't you lovely ladies take a little break, and we can regroup later. We can rearrange the schedule and put you two at the end of the day. I'll just continue with Dee for now."

"I don't–" Catra starts, to no avail.

"It wasn't a request, honey."

"Fucking fantastic," Catra said as they stepped out of the room, before slamming the door shut. "Thanks, Catyskull. I hate getting the fucking job done on the first try. I'd much rather get kicked out and screw around again."

"Like that's my fault!" Adora's voice grew shrill as she raised it. She didn't know where Catra was going, but Adora was following her without thinking, matching her furious pace while Catra was trying to shake her off. "You're the one who's acting even more insufferable than usual! What's wrong with you?"

"Don't act like you actually care," Catra said curtly, shooting a killer glare in Adora's direction. "We both know you don't give a shit about me."

Now that - that was gasoline to Adora's flames.

She didn't reply with anything other than a growl, just reached out and grabbed Catra by her wrist. She pulled her in rough and picked her up, palms on her back and under her knees.

"What do you think you're doing!?"

Catra's voice was dripping with fury, but otherwise she was either too tired to fight back, or didn't want to. She crossed her arms instead of wrapping them around Adora's neck, and curled her lips into a pout that made her look annoyingly cute when Adora glared down at her.

"Just shut up and let me do this," Adora said.

"I'm not going to fuck you."

"Pffft, and you think I want to? I don't," Adora lied, and started looking around frantically. "No one's fucking anyone when you're acting like this." She finally spotted the person she wanted to see. "Juliet!"

Juliet looked up from her business laptop that she had been balancing on her palm, and cocked a brow.

"Why are you carrying Catra?"

"She hurt her leg." Catra snorted in her arms, so Adora pinched the skin on her back.

Catra hissed in surprise.

"Yep," she said with a sigh and a very unconvincing smirk. "I think I broke it, actually."

"Shit." Juliet's hand was in her pocket in a second. "I'm calling the ER nurse—"

"No need. It'll pass." Adora said quickly. "Listen, can I have the keys to the van?"

Juliet pulled her hand out of her pocket very slowly. She looked at her like Adora had lost her goddamn mind.

"What for?"

"I left my phone there."

"And… not to…" Juliet's hardened gaze zigzagged between Catra's legs and Adora's face.

"Oh!" Adora said. "Yes. Yes, of course. That's why I need the keys. To let Catra rest, obviously."

There was a long, long moment of silence.

"We don't like each other," Catra broke it cheerfully.

Juliet closed her eyes, brows furrowing. From the way her lips moved, she probably counted to ten, then she looked back at them.

Her hand was in her pocket again, and something jingled.

"The parking lot is under surveillance," Juliet warned them. "Don't. Take. The van. Anywhere."

She threw the keys towards Adora. Catra caught them mid-air, clearly not trusting that Adora would not drop her if she had tried to catch them instead.

"And I'm going to check on you," Juliet said, narrowing her eyes.

"Well be quick," Catra purred, making a show of sliding the keychain loop on her index finger like a ring. Or... something else. "We always are."

Adora felt her cheeks burn. She pinched Catra again for good measure, and hurried to fix the catastrophic outcome of an already doomed conversation:

"Thank you so much. Well be good. I wont let you down. Thank you. See you later!"

And with that, Adora spun on her heel and walked away as fast as she could without bringing any more attention to how goddamn weird they were acting.

Catra stayed miraculously quiet in her arms on the walk to the parking lot. She was poking the keys that were still hanging from her finger, making them jingle.

When Adora snatched them away from her to unlock the doors, she spoke up bitterly:

"So youre just kidnapping me?"

"I dont hear you complaining."

"Just did."

"And Im not taking you anywhere."

"Wait, what?" Catra frowned. "That wasnt just a shitty lie you told the PA to leave us alone?"

Adora scoffed, balancing Catra in her arms while she slid the back door open.

"I dont lie to get what I want, unlike some people."

"Then why"— Catra clipped her words. Something crossed her mind; Adora could feel her whole body tense while they climbed in. "Adora, I told you, I'm not fucking you."

Air stuck in Adora's chest as she closed the door and it got darker inside.

Catra not trusting her to keep her word felt like a punch in the gut. Adora couldn't blame her, though - they had always just… collided. Out of spite, out of habit, out of desire. They didn't know each other that well. They had never stopped to care about that. Not until now - not until the whole trailer thing.

Adora's voice softened.

"Hey," she said, tilting her head to ask Catra to meet her eyes. Reluctantly, she did. Adora put her down on her feet, not breaking eye contact. "I know. I didn't take you here for that. I'm never going to come onto you after you've told me not to. I promise."

Catra's chest was heaving a little, her glare cutting through Adora's heart. She kept quiet for a while, but her gaze was unfaltering, seeking out something in Adora's eyes that Adora didn't understand.

Catra ran her tongue between her teeth. She swallowed hard, throat rippling.

"Then why are we here?" She asked. Her small, raspy voice told Adora that she still didn't trust her, but Catra was trying to play it cool; she leaned on her elbows, bracing them on the headrests of the seats on either side of her.

"We're here for you to take a nap," Adora said.

Catra scoffed, like it was a joke. When Adora didn't laugh with her, her whole face scrunched up.

"...What?"

"You didn't sleep at all last night, and it's making you impossible to work with. So you're going to take a nap, and then we're going back to the studio and finishing this shit."

"You're an idiot," Catra said simply.

"And you're going to take a nap."

"I'm not taking a nap. I'm not a toddler. I can do my job, and I can do it without your help. Which I never asked for, by the way."

"Someone needs to—"

"No one needs to do anything for me." Catra's voice was threateningly calm, the shine in her eyes sharp as she continued: "I don't need you. I don't need anyone."

Christ, they didn't have time for this.

She took a calculated step closer to Catra.

Catra didn't move. She cocked her jaw, raising it challengingly.

God fucking...

"Stop being a stubborn brat," Adora said very slowly, emphasizing every word, "and just take a nap."

Catra leans closer to Adora's face. "No."

"Catra."

"Adora."

"If you don't take a nap, I am going to make you."

Catra tilted her head pityingly. "I'd like to see you try."

Adora flashed her teeth. "Fine."

She had her palms on Catra's shoulders in a second, pushing her backwards. Catra lost her balance and flopped down on a seat in the last row. The row was five seats right next to each other without armrests, the widest, coziest part of the van.

Catra tried to jump up immediately, but Adora was on her guard, shoving Catra back and throwing her heavy body on top of her.

"Just take a nap!" Adora yelled, trying to keep Catra down.

Catra was thrashing and grunting in her struggle, but she still didn't give up. Adora felt her sharp nails scratching her, sinking into her cheeks as she tried to push her away. "Fuck you."

"Maybe if you behave," Adora hissed, flinging her arm to slap Catra's hand away. It only resulted in Catra clinging to her ponytail, yanking it. "Ow?!"

"You're such a pain in the ass—"

"Like you aren't!" Adora said without thinking, and shoved Catra back by her shoulders. "You think I'm enjoying this? You think I wanted to spend more time with you after you turned that photoshoot into a shitshow? It shouldn't be my responsibility to clean up your mess, but here I am, because I'm sick and tired of you acting like this! Why do you have to ruin everything?"

Catra froze. She was breathing heavily, her chest fluttering against Adora's with every deep inhale. One palm was still pressed into Adora's cheek, smushing it to her nose, the other's grip around Adora's hair went slack. Now she dropped her hands by each side of her head, defeated.

Adora didn't trust her. She kept laying down on top of her, pressing Catra into the seats, and swallowed back the bile that was dripping down her throat. She hid her face in the crook of Catra's neck.

Catra smelled like vanilla.

Maybe Adora went a little too far with all that.

"Sorry ," she mumbled. Her voice was stubborn, a little rough from raising it earlier, but she meant it.

Catra didn't say anything. She was still breathing heavily when Adora felt her nails sinking into her again. Catra wrapped her fingers around Adora's biceps and tried to move her away.

"Don't even think about it," Adora said. Her lips were sticking to Catra's throat.

"Adora, just move," Catra said, using more force.

Adora stayed still like a statue. "No."

"Adora"…

"I told you, we're not leaving until you take a"–

"Argh! Yeah, I know. Got it. I'm not trying to leave, just. Just roll over, okay?" Then, she added in a voice much softer and huskier: "It's uncomfortable."

Adora pushed herself away like she had been stung by a bee. She hadn't noticed that she was practically crushing Catra in their current position. She rolled over as requested, her cheeks burning with embarrassment.

She fully expected Catra to root her way out from the seats, but that never happened. As soon as Adora was laying on her back, Catra had a hand resting in the middle of Adora's chest, and a leg splayed across her hips.

She raised her head just to lay back on Adora, tucking herself under Adora's jaw. Her silky curls piled up to her face, tickling Adora's nose.

Holy shit.

Holy shit.

Holyshit–

Adora was burning because of something other than anger or embarrassment.

Catra fell asleep in one second. She was breathing in tiny snores that almost sounded like she was purring, her limbs sank into Adora with their whole weight.

She must have been exhausted. Even more so after their scuffling.

Adora breathed out with a sigh. She peeked over Catra's shoulder. Adora was trapped between her and the backrest of the seats, while Catra was so close to the edge, one side of her body was hovering above air.

Adora swallowed. The lump stuck in her throat didn't dissolve. She wrapped her arms around Catra, pulling her up on the seat a little bit and keeping her steady. With an arm over her shoulder, another around her narrow waist, she held her tight.

Catra made a tiny noise on content, and nuzzled closer in her sleep.

Adora squeezed her eyes shut.

She still felt a tiny sting of guilt. Okay - she never meant to actually hurt Catra with words that were too real for her of all people to throw around, but she was just so goddamn angry.

Isn't that always the case? Isn't that their whole thing? Adora has always been at least 25% mad at Catra in any given moment. Even if they had just met. Even if they hadn't even spoken to each other yet. Even if they were just existing in the same space, not even looking at each other. Except…

She cracked an eye open, and glanced down at Catra wrapped around her.

Adora's anger had seemed to evaporate. Something warm bloomed in her chest instead, like fog crawling up to her skull and swirling deep down to her stomach. It felt thick. Slow . Heavy.

It settled on her eyelids, on her fluttering lashes.

It was so heavy , and Catra still smelled like vanilla.

It felt like Adora's alarm went off as soon as she had closed her eyes, but she didn't mind. She wasn't planning on falling asleep anyway. This was about Catra, and letting her get some rest.

Adora reached out for her phone blindly, brushing some part of Catra's body in the process. She mumbled an apology that she didn't get a reply to, and wrapped her fingers around her phone.

The noise stopped.

Adora squinted up - her muscles tense in the middle of stretching - and her chest fluttered.

Catra's piercing eyes were hovering over hers, hazy sleepiness completely stripped away from them. They shrank into gleaming half-moons as she narrowed them. She looked dangerous - in a playful, predatory, breathtaking way like she was going to bite into Adora's neck and break her to bleeding.

At that moment, Adora would have let her.

Catra reached for something above Adora's head. Every movement made, every breath taken was slow and calculated. The keys jingled in her hand as she locked the doors of the van with a click, and then she dropped them. She braced herself on either side of Adora's head, and inched closer, tipping her head ever so slightly to the side. Their hips slotted together. Adora burned.

Catra didn't break eye contact for even a second.

Adora's heart was hammering in her chest. It was all she heard; that, and Catra's smoky voice slipping between the drumming.

Fuck, that drumming…

"Color," Catra said.

Adora breathed: "Lime."

Their lips crashed together.

Catra tasted her, hungry and deep, nails digging into Adora's shoulder and scratching at the back of her skull. She slammed their bodies together, not caring about keeping herself up anymore.

Adora gasped into their kiss, their teeth clinking together. Her hands were on Catra's ass immediately, kneading desperately through rough fabric until it creaked in her grasp. Somewhere in the back of her mind she reminded herself that they were still in ridiculously expensive costumes, and they should be more careful.

Catra rocked her hips into Adora's with a low grunt, and Adora's inner voice faded into a very audible whimper.

Adora bit her lip to keep a breathless fuck from slipping out of her throat. It blocked Catra from kissing her again, so she moved to Adora's neck, leaving burning pecks and not so gentle bites where they were going to be hidden by her collar.

Adora gasped, and cried, and ground her hips upwards for more friction, more of Catra's hands, more of her mouth. She tangled a hand into Catra's thick hair, guiding her back to meet her lips.

Catra's nose bumped into Adora's before their lips touched, blind desire making them both clumsier. Adora wasn't sure what had just happened - what this whole thing was - but she didn't care. Whether Catra had just been turned on by cuddling, or this was her messed up way of saying thank you, or she just wanted to take back control - Adora did not care. All that mattered was Catra's warm, petite body crashing into Adora's, her searing kisses and needy little grunts as it got more and more clear that their clothes were in the way.

After struggling with Catra's belt for the longest five seconds of her entire life, Adora managed to pop her black cargo pants down and slip her hand between the pants and Catra's bikini.

Catra twitched with an embarrassed huff. Adora's heart skipped a beat;Catra was soaked.

Grinning with her lower lip between her teeth, Adora started moving her fingers with just enough pressure to feel , but not enough to matter.

A whimper escaped Catra's throat, almost needier than Adora's. Her head lolled back, dark curls flowing off of her shoulders like fine silk.

Adora knew teasing was a risky game - they didn't have much time, and even though Catra locked the van, and every window was tinted glass so no one could see inside, Juliet had told them that she was going to check on them. Sure, it could have been just an empty threat, because just like Catra, she was convinced that Adora had been lying to her.

Hopefully whoever was around would just assume that they were murdering each other, and not even consider that they could be fucking.

Adora kept her pace steady for a couple stolen moments. Catra was panting, seemingly willing to take anything Adora was giving her, and squirming above her .

Adora quickly got drunk on that thought. Teasing was no longer an option;she wanted to be buried deep inside of Catra, right now .

She drew back, building the pressure of her fingertips as she came up from between Catra's legs, taking her sweet time at the apex of her thighs.

Catra's legs trembled as she was straddling Adora. Her palms found a new leverage on Adora's shoulders instead of the seats, the heels of them pressed into the valley above Adora's collarbones.

Adora slipped her hand under Catra's bikini, fingers caught up in wiry curls and wet heat. Adora felt her out, aiming soft fingertips at the right angle. Her other hand grabbed a fistful of Catra's hair, and tipped her head back so their eyes could meet.

Catra's eyes were burning, the whites of them hazy like smoke whirling in front of fire. They fell half-mast as she nodded with an affirmative, pleading moan.

Adora brought her down to her lips, and slipped in.

Catra whined into her mouth, snuffling through her nose so she could kiss back desperately. She took Adora's finger without any resistance, throbbing hot around her, so Adora gave her another, and started moving.

Adora always let her mind wander, so she didnt stop her fantasies now either.

As her eyes fell shut, she saw the two of them laying on a lush queen-sized bed, the fresh crispy smell of spring and clean sheets wrapping around them. Adora was fucking Catra just like she is fucking her now, but in her mind, she knew her.

She truly knew her.

She knew what her childhood nickname was, and how she liked her coffee in the morning. She knew what she had been dreaming about the night before. She knew how her gorgeous face looked right before she sneezed.

She imagined a world where words weren't forbidden between them.

She imagined Catra smiling at her while Adora's fingers worked her up, murmuring breathless praises into their kisses. She imagined Catra laughing in delight when Adora's thumb circled around her, and begging Adora to take her harder, her tiny voice breaking around pleas and Adora's name.

She imagined calling Catra baby.

This wasn't a Catra thing, obviously. This was an "Adora didn't do random hookups so she had to familiarize the sex somehow" thing. It was just… it was a coincidence that because Adora, in fact, didn't do random hookups, there was no one else to imagine this with other than Catra.

She still didn't understand why she had been so okay with fucking this girl she had just met in an elevator of a random office building. She didn't understand this stupid, inescapable pull - as if Catra had her own magnetic field that was solely there to make sure Adora couldn't let go.

She had run in circles around why this had all happened over and over again. She questioned herself about it every time she pulled her fingers out of Catra's warmth. Every time she clung to her with teeth and nails while Catra's fingertips swirled her into fucking oblivion and back. Every time she laid alone at night, trying to move her vibe like it was in Catra's hands, not her own. Every time she shut her eyes for saying or doing something stupid, and saw Catra rolling her eyes at her. Every time she spotted her in a crowd after months of not being able to see her, and her whole body warmed up with a needy tremble.

Every single time, she came to the same conclusion.

t was simple. t was incomprehensible.

t was because she was Catra.

Catra - the real Catra, the Catra who was right there with her - wrapped her fingers around Adora's wrist, and slowly guided her out.

Adora raised her brows in q estion, glancing up at her. She sucked her lips in. Did she mess up? Did she hurt her?

Catra's mouth had fallen open, her chest heaving. Once Adora slipped out, she moved her hand lower, and pushed her index and middle finger apart a little bit.

Oh.

Adora kept her wrist in place while Catra rocked into her hand with slow, long waves of her hips. Her fist was still full of Catra's hair so she tugged on it, bringing her back for a kiss again.

Catra's neck strained, her nails clinging to Adora's shoulders. She kissed her back with teeth and tongue and hunger. Her hips chased a feverish rhythm now, her little gasps of effort sticking to Adora's lips between kisses.

The muscles in Catra's arms were trembling from keeping her up. Soon enough, she started to get tired, her hips missing beats. She broke their kiss with a dissatisfied grunt. Her voice melted into a whimper, and she knocked her temple against Adora's, warm hands cupping Adora's throat. She flexed her fingers to curl them into a fist, her grasp tightening around nothing. She laid them flat against Adora's pulse again, dragging them up to her jaw .

She wasn't close enough.

Adora craned her neck and pecked Catra on her flushed cheek. She left her lips there, and kept up with their rhythm; where Catra slowed down, she sped up.

Catra's voice was quivering with pleasure again, growing thin in waves.

Adora let go of her hair to cradle her skull, inviting Catra to rely on her. Catra hesitated at first, but her release was building, and strength was pouring out of her body. She collapsed on top of Adora, only keeping her ass up at the perfect angle for Adora to fuck her.

Adora felt it coming. Sharp nails were digging into her throat, Catra's body jerking against her. Catra's noises didn't grow louder, but spilled from her lips more frequently until every exhale was a cry .

Once Adora's fingers took her over the edge, she came without any sound. It all broke into hoarse croaks and the whistling of her lungs, her whole body consumed by ripples of shakes.

Then, everything was still.

Adora's breathing was laboured, her throat dry. Her palm was petting Catra's hair softly while Catra was trying to catch her breath, hiding in the crook of Adora's neck.

Adora drew her fingers back from Catra's bikini just as Catra found enough strength in her arms to push herself up, and Adora's caressing hand away.

Adora didn't meet her eyes immediately. Her fingers were soaked, Catra's shine reaching her knuckles, almost dripping.

Adora found herself in trouble. Her brain was whirling, trying to find a solution to her very urgent problem: she didn't have any tissues on her. They were wearing expensive clothes they didn't own. She's not going to wipe Catra's cum on the seats where others will sit later, either…

Narrowing it down to only one solution, Adora put her fingers to her lips, and licked.

Catra's breath hitched in her throat above her. The seats creaked as she shifted, their hips slotting together again.

Adora looked up, lips still wrapped around her fingertips. Her whole face burst into flames from how Catra was looking at her, her heart rate picking up furiously.

Fuck.

She didn't even think about this.

She was tasting Catra for the first time.

With Rule #0, Adora was not allowed to go down on her, or touch Catra with her lips or tongue anywhere between her legs. Catra took her fingers, her thigh, but never her mouth; and while Adora certainly didn't break any rules, not in three years of them fucking has she ever been able to know how she tasted.

Until now.

Adora's brain decided that this was the perfect moment to flash back to the time she had heard the slogan "It's finger-licking good!" in the most annoying frozen meatballs commercial ever.

Jesus Christ. Adora had to reboot her stupid brain.

Focus. Focus!

Catra's taste dissolved on her tongue, sweet and sour. She didn't taste much different than other girls Adora had eaten out, but there was something - or maybe the lack of something - that made her taste perfect; intoxicating, and forbidden.

Adora was addicted to it, and to the way Catra's gaze was fixated on her lips. Catra's pupils dilated like black holes, devouring the colors of her eyes. She didnt blink, she didnt move, she didnt breathe. She stayed still; a predator hiding in the shadows, heartbeats away from throwing herself at her prey.

Adora loved it. To be the center of Catras attention - her devotion - like that… fuck, it was everything. She never wanted it to stop, and she was willing to drag it out as long as she could - starting with luring Catra in some more.

She took more of her fingers into her mouth, flashing the tip of her tongue as she kept licking at Catras shine.

Catras chest hollowed. She glanced up, their eyes finally meeting.

There was a breathless moment of silence.

Then, Catra moved. She moved the same way she started this; cunning, and calculated.

She laced her hand around Adoras wrist, and pulled it away from her mouth. Adora released her fingers with a wet pop, making Catras eyebrows twitch.

Catras hand started sneaking down between their bodies, cupping Adora between her legs. She didnt bother touching her through her clothes first; the trousers werent a tight fit, so Catra's hand slipped between Adoras bare thighs easily.

As soon as Catras fingertips met with Adoras wetness, Adora lost control. Her eyes fell shut with a soft gasp for air, nails digging into the seats.

Catra lay on top of her again, their chests pressed together. She tipped her head and leaned in, meeting Adoras parted lips with her own.

Catra had never kissed her like this before. She usually captured Adora's lips with aggressive want, all tongue and desperation, teeth clicking together every time they tipped their heads to switch. She usually kissed her like she wanted to eat her alive, rip her apart.

This kiss was different. It wasn't gentle by any means; Catra kissed her hard, deep, but slow. The furious rhythm of Adora getting her off was long gone, and all that was left was Catra's tongue seeking hers, and her hand pressing in a messy, rough, but just as leisurely way as she was kissing her. Her other hand was laying on Adora's chest, stroking her through soft cotton.

Adora melted on Catra's tongue, becoming putty in her hands. She had never really stopped to think that she would enjoy anyone fucking her hard and lazy, but her body reacted quickly.

Catra was touching her perfectly.

Pleasure was lightning hot under Adora's skin, setting her stomach on fire.

She kissed her back, surrendering to Catra's unhurried torture without a fight. It earned her a satisfied, praising moan that Catra purred between their lips. Adora felt a twist and a stab deep inside her belly, her body shivering for more.

Adora cupped Catra's neck with both hands, her thumbs stroking along her freckled cheeks. Her hips bucked on their own as her mind got flooded with need, all coherent thoughts evaporating. Her lips clung to Catra's lips, her hands to her neck, her heat to her hand, her chest to her chest. Adora spread her legs wider, and didn't hold back the gasps that Catra's clever fingers coaxed out from her, no matter how needy and desperate they sounded.

She was getting close embarrassingly quickly. Her whole body felt like she had been wiped out by a high fever; her head heavy and burning like she was standing right under the boiling sun, eyes hot and shimmering. Her throat was dry, chiseling her whimpers into raspy gasps.

Then it all snapped; Adora felt like her mind was out of sync with her body, and the rest of reality.

Catra kissed her through her orgasm, her hand slowly, slowly coming to a halt. By the time Adora's consciousness started pouring back, Catra had pulled away, dragging her fingers up Adora's skin.

Their lips were still sticking together for a moment before Catra straightened, and sat back on Adora's thighs.

Catra kept her mouth slightly open, the tip of her tongue laying flat behind her lower lip. She spread her fingers across the curve of Adora's chest, leaning on her palm, and raised her other hand to Adora's lips.

Adora took her fingers into her mouth without thinking. Her eyes were entwined with Catra's, catching up on every rapid flutter.

Adora moved her head, taking more. Her mouth tightened around Catra's slender fingers as she slid her tongue along the underside of them, her cheeks hollow.

Catra's grip tightened around Adora's breast, earning a rough, quiet moan. Her features didn't reveal any of her thoughts, if she even had any. Adora sure as fuck didn't.

There was no way that Adora had managed to look hot while she sucked Catra's fingers clean, but watching Catra while she at least tried was worth it already. The more Adora watched her, the more she noticed; the smallest twitches of the corners of Catra's mouth, her heaving chest, the tiny moves of her head Adora only saw from the way her curls trembled. Adora noticed that she couldn't even see the color of her eyes anymore, just the deep, shimmering darkness that pulled Adora in. She never, ever released Adora's gaze.

It was maddening.

t made the throbbing between Adora's legs pick up again. t made her chest flare up with something she couldnt name.

t was something else. New .

t made her want.

Adora gathered all her strength to push herself up to a sitting position. She licked along Catra's fingers again, kissing the soft fingertips and releasing them.

Catra must have seen something on Adora's face that made her retreat; as soon as their noses were only a couple of inches apart, and her hand was free, Catra sprung up from Adora's lap. She nearly knocked her head into the ceiling.

Her hands grabbed at the cargo pants that were slipping down her thighs, and she zipped herself up quickly . She shook her hair back from her face, and glared right into Adora's confused eyes.

"Forget this ever happened," Catra said. t was a threat; her voice was dripping with the usual contempt she always reserved for Adora.

So it was over.

Adora scoffed, ignoring the cold, suffocating ache that settled on her chest. She turned on the seat to put her feet on the ground, and tore her gaze away . "Whatever , Catra."

"I dont owe you anything," Catra went on like she hadnt even heard it. Her voice was just a touch more uncertain, but Adora was too tired to think too hard about it.

Her throat started to burn. She couldnt cry. Not now, not in front of Catra.

"Just go,"Adora said, words tight and empty .

Catra raised her jaw towards the sliding door. "Wait before you follow me."

"I know," Adora snapped, resting her elbows on her spread knees. "We've been doing this for ages. I'm not an idiot."

She expected Catra's sarcastic, curt laugh to slap her, but it never came - and neither did anything else. Catra kept quiet, avoiding any further contact with Adora.

It was fine. It didn't hurt Adora at all. It was honestly for the best; for a second there, she had almost forgotten what kind of person Catra truly was.

She was grateful to Catra for dragging her back to earth.

Catra turned her back to her, slid the door open, and slipped out. She slammed it so hard that the whole van shook around Adora.

Adora was staying still in the silence, waiting for the wobbling to stop.

It never really did.

Not the one inside her skull.

End Notes

Yes, DT was dating Peekablue the whole time.
Yes, Chapter #0 is THA T rule.

Thank you so much for reading! I know I am way too fucking late on the main story. There is no "but." I have absolutely no clue when I can update, so.

Come hang out with me on Twitter, I'm usually nice.
