Summary

What if things took a slightly different turn in Season 2 Episode 5 where She-Ra becomes infected? What if the virus was a bit more than we really thought? What if it could evolve past what it was supposed to be?

If you like the idea feel free to use it I really do not care. I think that Infected She-ra needs more love and honestly I thought that's where the show was going in terms of plot. Would have been interesting if they did.

Notes

Another note- I absolutely love this show but I did watch it in about 3 days. I might make some errors in terms of locations or actual plot from previous episodes and if there is any please just let me know and I will try to fix it.

I have a very short attention span sooo yeah I sped through it because I got addicted.

Also I am a subpar writer. I can and will make mistakes in terms of grammar an actual plot points.
Other than that enjoy

Instinct

Ok so perhaps Catra overstepped this time with her idea. Entrapta should have told her that She-Ra was gonna turn into a homicidal maniac as soon as the crystal came into contact with her sword but apparently she left that part out or maybe she didnt listen correctly , she thought to herself in slight guilt. It didnt matter either way as she could no longer recognize the Adora she knew as She-Ra swung with no regards to life with a menacing laugh. Catra saw Glitter and Bow boy trying to stop her but She-Ra quickly knocked them out of the picture with a fist to each of them sending them down the ice ravine to Catras horror .

Catra was being backed into a corner quickly as Adora kept swinging at her and she was not holding back as she got a nasty gash on her arm from her already. As Catra thought of ideas, she ducked another swing from the raging Adora and saw some hope out of the corner of her eye. Catra saw Scorpia charging She-Ra to her delight but she was no fool as Catra thought she was. She-Ra saw Catras eyes shift just a little and right as Scorpia was about to make contact she stuck her arm out and grabbed her by the throat, hoisting her in the air. Scorpia gasped for oxygen as she looked into She-Aa' s blood red eyes as she chuckled darkly. Before Scorpia could do anything else she was flung violently towards an ice hill, going straight through it landing on the other side out cold.

Catra gasped "NO, ADORA!" Catra leaped at her putting her legs around her neck trying to put her in a chockehold but was mortified as She-Ra simply grabbed her and swung her towards the ground leaving a huge crater from the impact. She-Ra kneeled down as she grabbed Catra's neck slowly squeezing as the magicat started to struggle.

"Please, Adora." Catra had tears in her eyes as she started running out of air. She tried using her claws to scratch at Adora's arms but she seemed to not even be fazed as her arms bled.

"I'm sorry I did this to you. Please come back." Catra whispered before going limp as she passed out in She-Ra's tight grip. She-Ra looked around for anything else that she could destroy. She could see nothing but the base that the Horde had set up and with one big leap she bounded over to the base with a gleeful smile.

A couple of minutes later She-Ra came out of the decimated base breathing heavily as she dragged her sword on the now ash-filled snow. Before she left however, she stopped where she left the cat women. She did not know why she stopped but she could not take her eyes off this creature. She looked down, not really in control of herself as her heart sped up each time the cat person took a breath.

Before she could do anything else, her sword glowed a dark red as the veins on her arms slowly traveled further up her body. It was a painful process to She-Ra as she swayed and nearly collapsed on the ground screaming painfully as she used her sword to hoist herself up. After a couple of seconds the process was complete and she got up slowly feeling a new sense of energy from her sword. As she did this she heard a soft whimper of pain from the crater she made earlier.

She stared down at the unconscious magicat and some part of her knew she needed her, one way or another.

She kneeled down slowly cupping Catra's face with her hand delicately as if she thought she would break at any moment "Mi-, -ne" She gasped out roughly as she softly petted Catra's fur enjoying the nice fuzziness. With no effort she picked up Catra and hoisted her on her back, walking away from the burning base, sword still in her hand in a tight grip.

Recovery and truces

Chapter Summary

A reluctant truce is made.

Chapter Notes

Scorpia does not act like her usual self in this story. I think it kind of makes sense as I don't think any person would keep their same happy personality in a situation like this. It wouldn't make sense of how I would want this to go.

Scorpia had the worst headache of her life and never felt so cold as she laid in the snow. She opened her eyes as she looked around and could hardly breath as she felt her throat was going to collapse in on its self. With great effort she got herself up and looked around before noticing the state of their base.

She watched in horror as she saw a thick smoke coming from the center of the completely destroyed area. She could not recognize anything as she walked over, either it was too warped from the heat or pulverized to oblivion. She saw deep gashes everywhere as if something so full of rage came in and left nothing.

That's when Scorpia froze as she remembered what actually happened. She quickly hobbled over to where she last saw Catra only to find nothing but a huge crater and a trail of ash leading away from it. Scorpia collapsed on her knees as she knew whatever She-Ra became had taken Catra for some reason.

As she sat to herself she heard voices behind her coming from the ravine off to her left side.

Glimmer's voice was distant "I can't believe we let this happen, Bow! I thought we had destroyed that crystal for good so nothing like this could ever happen!"

Bow shook his head as he climbed out of the ravine followed by Gilmmer. "Entrapta must have kept it for her science projects and Catra probably learned what it could do to her. She has always looked for a weakness and she would have never even hesitated to use it."

Scorpia saw from afar as she heard their conversation. Now just thinking about it, where was Entrapta? Shouldnt she be here? Scorpia's blood froze as she thought that maybe Entrapta was in the base at the time of the destruction. Right as she was about to go check, a happy Entrapta popped up right next to her . "HEY SCORPIA!" Scorpia screamed before quickly covering her mouth but it was too late as Glimmer and Bow already noticed.

"What was that?" said Glimmer as she looked towards the small hill of snow with Bow. Bow notched an arrow as he slowly walked over with Glimmer. "Who' s there? Come out and we wont harm you." Scorpia, having no choice, raised her arms as she came out of her hiding place right beside a clueless Entrapta as she kept messing with her tracking pad.

Glimmer narrowed her eyes as she came face to face with Scorpia, anger written all over her face as she yelled. "DO YOU HA VE AN IDEA WHAT YOU JUST DID! NOW SHE HAS TO CA TCH RA GA VE HER SHA T CRYST AL WE LOST ON LOST ADORA BUT NOW SHE IS ON THE LOOSE AND WHO KNOWS HOW MUCH DAMAGE SHES GOING T O CAUSE!"

Scorpia, usually being friendly did not keep her same demeanor as she snapped right back at Glimmer "It was not my idea that got She-Ra acting like a deranged beast princess."she spat

"W e thought it was only going to make her go a bit crazy and leave her defenseless. We are not that stupid to put ourselves at risk." Glimmer grew red in the face but right as she was about to retort Bow put his hands in between the two women in a reassuring manner.

“Alright ladies, let’s calm down. I think we can both agree that both of us did not want this to happen but let’s call a momentary truce while we figure things out.” Bow smiled nervously and sighed to himself in relief as both women reluctantly backed down.

As this was happening Entrapta was still on her tracking pad as she kept typing something. Scorpia, already frustrated, grabbed the pad from her and shattered it in her claw without a second thought. “Why are you typing something right now Entrapta! We have no idea where Catra is and you’re just playing with your relics that we got for you!” she said barley containing her anger .

Entrapta clueless as ever simply said “I was trying to find information for this virus that infected She-Ra.” Entrapta walked over to the crater putting her hand on the snow with a gleeful smile on her face.

“I watched She-Ra in fascination as she completely lost control but I saw something even more marvelous. It was not until a couple of minutes later after she destroyed our base that the virus evolved slightly. She-Ra was able to speak a few words in her enraged state and she actually softly petted Catra before taking her with her.”

Scorpia had never been this close to killing someone as she used her claw to grab to hold Entrapta by her collar. “ARE YOU SAYING NOT ONLY DID YOU SEE CATRA GET CLOBBERED BY SHE-RA BUT YOU DO ANYTHING TO STOP IT IN ORDER FOR YOU TO STUDY HER!”

Entrapta nervously laughed as she grabbed her neck “Well if you put it like that.” Scorpia was about to launch Entrapta but relented because she knew she would be useful in trying to find her. She dropped her on the snow half-hazardly , not caring enough to put her down gently.

As Scorpia thought of what to do Bow came up beside her “Heyyy , what if we work together.” Scorpia narrowed her eyes at the boy as he continued “We both want She-Ra to not be a killer monster and you can get Catra back safe and sound. I think we can have a momentary truce as of now?" Scorpia thought of her options but knew she was beat as she put her claw up for a shake. Bow shook her hand (claw?) with a smile as Glimmer eyed down both Entrapta and Scorpia.

Scorpia stared down the ash filled path "Let's get moving already. Who knows how long we have been out and Catra will be in danger as long as that thing has her."

Glimmer took offense to this "Hey! That thing is our friend and she has a name!"

Scorpia simply brushed her off as she kept walking "As of now that thing is not your friend. You didn't see her fling me through a mountain with ease as she laughed in my face. You guys got lucky that you were knocked in that ravine. If you hadn't seen it yet, our base is completely destroyed. Guess what did that?" Scorpia gestured to the base and saw both Bow and Glimmer's shudder. "Whatever that thing is now, it won't show us mercy and we can't afford to treat her lightly because of it."

Bow and Glimmer held their gaze to the ground as they kept walking. Hopefully they can find a way to fix Adora and they can only pray that she won't cause too much damage before they can find her.

Pretty kitty

Chapter Summary

What She-Ra wants she gets.

Chapter Notes

Sorry for the short chapters but it is usually how I roll. I feel if I make them too long I often lose focus of what I am trying to do. When I get further down the stretch I will try to expand because I know they are pretty short.

Catra woke up in complete confusion as she was looking down at the ground. For some reason she seemed to be moving side to side. Before she could look around she noticed a tight grip around her waist and she now realized that she was also looking at the back of someone's legs.

She recognized them anywhere sadly as they belonged to none other than She-Ra. Curse her thoughts only she knew how many times she thought of those legs late at night and she was not proud of it. Just as she was about to try to escape, She-Ra set her down roughly against a tree.

"Hey, you know how to treat a girl dont you?" Catra sarcastically said while holding her back roughly as she still felt the impact from where she was slammed against the ice. That's when she noticed that She-Ra had never taken her eyes off her and Catra could not get a read on what she was thinking as she stared in her now red eyes. As she was thinking to herself, She-Ra took two steps closer to her now only standing inches from her face.

Instinctively Catra's ears went down and her fur spiked slightly as she let out a low growl from the impending threat she felt. Out of all the things Catra expected she did not expect to be grabbed roughly and hugged to death. Catra could barely breath as She-Ra laughed to herself as she spun the magical around.

"Pretty kitty!" She-Ra kept petting her and nuzzling her cheek right on Catra's face. Catra could not do anything but take the onslaught as she kept being rubbed by She-Ra to her growing embarrassment. Finally having enough, Catra freed her claws and swiped at She-Ra's face. She-Ra yelled out in pain as she felt the new mark with her hand as she looked down to find blood on her fingers. Now being free, Catra couldn't help but speak her mind.

"I don't know what happened to you princess but we are still not friends and we never will be! I don't care what this crystal did to you." Catra had a smug smirk but quickly dropped it as She-Ra drew her sword from the back as something seemed to trigger her as her sword glowed a dark red. With a yell She-Ra swung right at Catra to which she barely managed to dodge. She-Ra continued her onslaught with no regard to anything as she now honed in on the magicat.

Catra kept dodging by jumping into trees and using her agility but She-Ra was hellbent on getting her as she cut straight through rocks and any obstacle. Catra was running out of breath as She-Ra only grew angrier as she kept missing her mark. Catra knew she was running out of options as She-Ra was tearing this entire forest apart trying to get to her.

Reluctantly, Catra finally swallowed her pride as she was running out of trees to hide in. She put her hands up as she yelled "ALRIGHT! Alright we're friends Adora! How about we put the sword away and we can talk about this." She-Ra still looked angry but she seemed to calm down slightly as she lowered her sword. Catra sighed in relief but was quickly tackled as she was crushed again by She-Ra's hug to her great displeasure.

Catra could only be surprised by what came out of She-Ra's mouth next.

"Y o- You.. Good. Fri- Friend."she managed to gasp out.

Catra knew that this creature wasn't really Adora but she could only think that some part of her was still in there as She-Ra quickly went to sleep. Catra tried moving but She-Ra was not having it as she growled protectively and only got tighter in her hold. After a couple of minutes Catra finally relented as she knew she wasn't going anywhere. These past two days had been tiring and she was done fighting for now. Hopefully Scorpia and Entrapta can get her out of this mess before She-Ra kills her with her hugs.

Catra eventually fell to sleep as she focused on Ador-, She-Ra's breathing. She would figure out something in the morning.

Confusion

Chapter Summary

Another step.

Chapter Notes

Please do not expect daily updates. Sometimes I just get locked into my ideas and have a splurge of writing I want to get done. Other than that enjoy and I hope to keep up my progress.

Also yes I have nothing to do so I have extra time to focus on this story.

Catra had been plagued by nightmares throughout her whole life. Whether it be Shadow Weaver, her bullies, or even Adora herself as Catra imagined her leaving no matter how many times she begged her to stay.

It bugged her to no end that she could not keep her mind off the blonde and whenever she saw her in battle she couldn't help but take out her frustrations in person as she had nearly killed her on multiple occasions at this point.

This nightmare however was something that chilled her to the bone. She stood in a dark room by herself and she could not see anything but pitch blackness all around her. All of a sudden she saw a crying Adora on her knees about five feet away from herself. Catra slowly walked over to where she stood before softly whispering, fear in her voice as she reached her hand out. "Ad- Adora... Are you alright?" Catra gasped as she saw Adora snap her head back to look at her. Blood red eyes watched her which were full of tears as she got up right up to Catra's face.

Adora whispered softly and pain laced her voice. "Wh- What did you turn me into Catra." Adora was limping towards her as Catra noticed red veins started appearing on Adora's arms slowly making their way up her body to Catra's growing dread.

"I'm a monster now . You made me this." Catra slipped on her own feet as she was now crawling backwards as Adora grew angrier and her voice was getting more distorted.

"Your own selfish need for you to win cost me my sanity Catra! Are you happy now that you got me!" Adora' s body was now fully covered in red cracks as she grew into She-Ra to Catra's horror.

She-Ra's voice grew bitter . "At least I was forced into this. Unlike you I didn't choose to be a monster ." Catra screamed out as She-Ra grabbed her throat with her left hand.

"Don't be scared darling." Adora spoke crazily , Catra struggled as her feet dangled helplessly as She-Ra pulled her sword from her back. "I will free you." Catra could only watch as She-Ra went to stab her in the gut and right as it made contact Catra woke up on the forest floor.

She was shaking badly and quickly looked around for She-Ra. Catra sighed in relief, as she realized she was alone from the warrior for once. Catra not wanting to waste time got up quickly to hide into a tree but just as she was about to she saw She-Ra emerge from the forest.

She-Ra to Catra's observation tried to smile but was failing horribly as she just looked creepy trying to force it. Not that the blood red eyes or the red vein like cracks on her skin helped but Catra pretended not to notice that much. Catra was not one to show fear and she wasn't going to start now .

She-Ra was carrying apples and a mix of fruits from what Catra could see and placed them down at her feet to Catra's surprise.

"Uhh, what is this for?" Catra asked as she looked up to the woman as She-Ra tried smiling to her.

She-Ra had trouble talking as she tried articulating the words she thought of. "Fo- od, fo- for , kitty" Catra' s fur bristled as she heard the embarrassing name this women kept calling her.

"First of f I am not a kitty, and second." Catra blushed slightly as her stomach growled. "Thank you." Catra reluctantly took an apple that looked decent enough to eat. She started munching on it as she kept her distance from She-Ra.

She-Ra smiled again, this time softer to Catra's relief. Catra also noticed that most of the other fruits were either unripe or simply inedible as Adora for some reason got an entire branch full of leaves.

To Catra's utter disgust, She-Ra simply grabbed the branch and took a big bite out of it either not caring or actually enjoying the taste of it for some reason. She-Ra noticed her stare and tried lending her the branch assuming she wanted some.

Catra shook her head as she raised an eyebrow. "No thank' s princess, uh magicats dont eat bark." She-Ra simply went back to eating as if nothing happened.

Catra gestured to She-Ra. "I really hope that this is whatever got into you and not something you actually eat Adora. I think we would both agree that eating trees is not good for you."

She-Ra tilted her head to the side as she narrowed her eyes at the magicat as if she was trying to understand what she just said.

Catra quickly finished of f a couple of fruits before getting up casually waving her arms to the back as she stretched.

Catra put on a far too casual voice. "W ell Adora, it's time for me to head out. Thanks for whatever this has been but I think it' s best we each go back to our own little lives."

Catra tried speed walking away but was quickly met with an angry She-Ra as she blocked her way out.

Catra laughed nervously as she tried turning around but was grabbed by She-Ra.

"Y o- You, Stay, wi- with, me" She-Ra stammered out.

Catra grew frustrated as she tried moving her hand out of her grip but she could not seem to find the right angle.

"And why should I miss perfect?" Catra spat.

She-Ra was about to speak before she screamed in pain as she went to the ground. Catra stood back as she saw in shock of what was happening.

She-Ra's sword started glowing a dark red almost blinding Catra entirely. She-Ra stood to her knees as slowly the cracks moved up her arms through her outfit reaching just above her neck. T iny cracks also appeared on her forehead and right as Catra was about to leave in fear. She-Ra collapsed on the ground heavily breathing as the process finished.

Catra knew that this was her moment to escape but she had never seen She-Ra so vulnerable. She was just checking for weaknesses not for stupid, dumb, gorgeo- , no not gorgeous friend. Catra shook her thoughts away as she walked over to the fallen warrior.

Catra poked She-Ra with a single claw, "Uhh, hello, She-Ra? Adora you with me here?" She-Ra stood up faster than Catra expected as she steeled her shoulders back with a blank stare on her face. Catra waved her hands in front of her but nothing happened.

With a pop of her neck She-Ra looked down at Catra. Catra nervously backed up as the warrior got up and kept getting closer and closer to her. Catra didnt notice the tree behind her and now was pinned as She-Ra put her hand right above her shoulder effectively trapping her.

Catra breathed heavily as she waited for the woman to do something.

She-Ra softly gasped out with tears forming in her eyes "Beca-cause, Catra wi- will, leave me a- again."

Catra could only stand frozen as She-Ra hugged her softly and without any of the bone crushing stuff before. Catra could only awkwardly hug back as she stood there for who knows how long as she felt tears go down her back as her ex-friend softly cried to her .

Theories

Chapter Summary

Entrapta makes some concerning connections

Chapter Notes

Dog dammit! How did I forget that Seahawk was with them in the base. How did I not remember him being there!

Uhhhhhh, For now he'll just be left out. He would've been a side character anyway but still that's frustrating to know.

Scorpia along with Bow, Glimmer, and sadly Entrapta were making good progress with their tracking as they had now reached some sort of forest. However, since they reached this forest now the ash trail left by She-Ra was not an option anymore so the four had been following a random dirt path.

As Scorpia tried thinking of a strategy to track She-Ra she kept hearing random beep noises and as she turned, she saw Entrapta was still on a tracking pad somehow to her frustration.

"How did you possibly get another one of those Entrapta. I literally snapped yours in half back at our base!" Scorpia spoke clearly irritated.

Entrapta either didn't hear her or simply didn't care as she kept on typing. Scorpia was about to destroy it but knew that Entrapta would probably be the only reason she could find Catra.

"Entrapta, is there any way you can track She-Ra or her relic that Catra gave her?" Scorpia asked in a clearly forced nice voice.

Entrapta finally looked up at Scorpia with a knowing smirk "What do you think I have been doing Scorpia? I have been tracking her this whole time. I dont know why you guys stopped moving, shes this way."

Before Scorpia could snap at her again she had already chosen a direction and went off in front of them.

Scorpia turned towards Bow and Glimmer defeated.

"W as she always like this or did she magically become this annoying little brat when we took her."

Bow and Glimmer simply chuckled nervously as they kept following her into the middle of the woods with no option left to follow her.

As they continued walking all of a sudden Entrapta frantically started typing something as she started murmuring worryingly to herself.

Bow finally spoke up as he was getting worried with Entraptas behavior.

"Uhh, Entrapta what' s gotten into you? Did you lose the signal or something?"

Entrapta turned towards him with a stressed smile "Uh no of course not but the only problem is that my theories for how She-Ra is reacting are not looking so good."

Glimmer spoke up for the first time this trip "Y ouve been developing theories while tracking her too. Do you ever stop looking into technology at any point?"

Bow simply shook his head, ignoring Glimmer as he spoke again. "What are these theories Entrapta? Is Adora or Catra in danger?"

Entrapta bit her nails as she did some final connections and finally narrowed her two options.

"W ell, I have two theories and they are both pretty bad. The first one to my calculations if I predicted the evolutions correctly. She-Ra is slowly forming a connection with Adora's mind."

Bow and Glimmer shared worried glances as they pressed her for more.

"What does that mean Entrapta?" Bow urged her .

"That means that She-Ra is slowly melding into Adora and vice versa. Unlocking her memories, her fears, her feelings, and all her mannerisms."

Scorpia scoffed as she kept following Entrapta.

"Why' s that so bad? It' s not like Adora is the blood killing machine? Shell see more reason if this She-Ra is bonding with her ."

Entrapta shook her head frantically "No you do not understand, this virus is still going to have the same effects, make her act more frantic, and raise her emotions up one-thousand percent of what they usually are. She will get more angry and most likely more dangerous as she unlocks memories through these stages."

Entrapta did some more calculations on her tracking pad as she spoke in fear. "The worst part about that is that there is no control over which memories she unlocks. She could all of a sudden unlock her memories of the Brightmoon siege and think she's in a battle. Or unlock traumatic memories from her childhood, there is no telling how shell react to each of these."

Bow, Glimmer, and Scorpia faces grew pale as Entrapta grew more frantic in her ramblings.

"W ell what's the other theory then?" Bow asked nervously , in hope that it was better.

Entrapta grew more grim as she kept typing on her pad.

"The crystal I found is a virus that needs a host. Itll try to find as much power as possible in order to achieve what it wants. If this also collides with my other theory then She-Ra will have access to more and more powerful relics through Adora’s memories this will most likely cause a world disaster event which would be nearly impossible to stop.”she finished grimly .

Bow, Glimmer, and Scorpia had nothing to say as they kept walking and before they could break their awkward more they heard a deafening roar as they felt the ground beneath shake.

Entrapta rushed through the trees as she screamed out. ‟It’ s She-Ra!W e have to act qickly!She must be on a rampage!Something must have triggered her!‟

‟he four rushed of f to a cloud of growing smoke as the ground kept shaking. ‟ey could only hope to reach her in time before her stages kept progressing.

P otect at all cost

Chapter Summary

She-Ra will protect Catra at all cost...

Catra stood there with She-Ra in her arms for what felt like hours as she kept wailing on her back. Catra was not gonna lie that she enjoyed the hug especially since she wasn't being crushed again. She finally had the courage to speak up as She-Ra seemed to calm down a bit.

"Uhh, Adora? Are you with me now?" She-Ra straightened up as she still had tears in her eyes as she looked down at Catra.

"Wh-What is Ad-Adora?" She-Ra managed to gasp out.

Catra could only huff in frustration as she realized that whatever this thing was doing to Adora must have some sort of memories of her.

"W elp that's a no then" Catra said sarcastically .

To Catra's surprise She-Ra gently cupped her cheek as she smiled at her. It seemed less forced than last time and more genuine as she looked with glee at her. Catra had enough as she batted her arm away as she blushed but was quickly met with an angry She-Ra again.

She-Ra grinded her teeth together as she growled and kept Catra pinned against the tree.

Catra quickly back tracked as she smiled nervously . "Ok, k O . You can pet me just a little. Don't get in a twist princess." Catra kept blushing as She-Ra slowly petted her to her growing delight as she laughed.

Catra made sure to be less aggressive as she slowly put She-Ra's arm to the side.

Finally having enough of waiting around Catra spoke up. "Alright, alright that's enough Adora. What do you want from me? Why are you just leading me around in the middle of nowhere?"

She-Ra went blank for a moment before she looked in a certain direction and before Catra could protest she simply grabbed her and put her on her shoulder again.

Catra yelped as She-Ra started walking again and she could only yell in frustration as her claws only seemed to give She-Ra a laugh as if she was ticklish or something.

"Are we going to do this every time princess! I have legs and feet you know! I can walk just fine on my own!" She-Ra stopped and grabbed Catra putting her in her arms bridal style as she looked down into her eyes.

"Y o-you leave, a-again" Catra rolled her eyes as She-Ra made a valid point.

"Fine, I promise I wont try to escape If you let me down, Happy?" Catra raised her eyebrow in question.

She-Ra narrowed her eyes and searched Catra's eyes for deceit but could not find any. She slowly put her down on the ground to Catra's delight.

Catra dusted herself off and groomed herself quickly as she got up on her legs. "See was that so hard princess. I keep my promises unlike someone." Catra bit out harshly and perhaps she shouldnt have said that as She-Ra seemed to remember something. The sword let out another blast of energy as She-Ra gasped out in pain. This stage was quicker as She-Ra only grew a few more tiny cracks on her head and was still able to stand as the process finished.

She-Ra looked at Catra with rage as her ears went flat again on instinct.

"Adora, dont br-break promises."Adora stammered out in anger .

Catra's eyes brightened momentarily but was quickly brought back to earth at what She-Ra said next

"I not Adora, but I-I remember , you hu-hurt her."

Catra's hand was grabbed in a harsh grip as she was dragged along with She-Ra.

Catra's anger grew as she didnt understand what she was trying to say.

"If youre not Adora, What the hell are you then you freak!"She-Ra grew angrier but was stopped from her retort as she heard voices up ahead.

Catra looked in delight as she saw a Horde patrol approach her, there must be a base nearby if soldiers were here. Before She-Ra could stop her Catra let out a huge yell for help.

"I need help!This crazy lunatic wont let me go!"

She-Ra looked betrayed as she saw Catra smirk at her. To Catra's shock however she was hit by a blast of electricity from one of the soldier's weapons. She-Ra' s eyes locked in on the soldier and without anyone noticing she disappeared in a blur.

Catra recovered quickly as she looked at the soldiers in frustration.

"What the fuck are you doing!Know where youre aiming, soldier!"
The soldier looked guilty but before Catra could say anything more she noticed She-Ra right behind the group shaking in absolute rage.

Catra didnt know how she got there but she could not tear her eyes off what she was about to see.

"YOU HURT CATRA!" The soldier's head whipped around before being stabbed straight through their chest as She-Ra stared at him with delight as she took the sword out with the sickening sound of flesh and bone being ripped apart. The other three soldiers all drew their tasers as they all attacked at once but either She-Ra didnt notice the pain or hardly felt it at all, with one strong swing she cut off the remaining three's heads. Each soldier's body collapsed as She-Ra smiled, blood caking her face.

Catra's face paled as She-Ra approached her with a smile. Blood dripped down her sword as slowly pooled on the ground.

"You safe now." Catra had tears in her eyes as She-Ra slowly grasped her cheek. Catra through her fear noticed a certain beeping from one of the soldiers bodies and realized that it was a SOS beacon. Those soldiers must have called for backup, Catra realized. Right as she was about to turn it off she saw a whole battalion of soldiers emerge from the forest.

"NO, NO! Listen to me She-Ra, I can talk them down!" She-Ra was not listening to her as Catra tried grabbing her face to grasp her attention.

"Please Adora! If you're in there you know these soldiers are following orders! Dont do this!" Catra knew her attempts were falling on deaf ears and in a desperate attempt to save these troops she lunged for the sword but She-Ra was not letting go no matter how hard Catra pulled.

WIth surprising speed she grabbed Catra and launched her behind her. Before Catra could do anything She-Ra grabbed the soldiers emergency rope and tied her along a tree.

Catra struggled as much as she could but She-Ra was not planning for her to go anywhere.

"Please Adora! There could be cadets in this base! Have mercy!" She-Ra turned away from Catra's screams as she focused on the army that approached her.

The commander in charge was none other than Captain Grizzor in all his might. The huge beast man was one of the most feared generals in all of the Horde. He led their biggest army to multiple victories over the rebel scum. He had never felt so lucky as he now had the opportunity to capture the pride and soul of the rebellion.

"Well, well, well look what we have here soldiers, a lonely little She-Ra." He laughed as he knew he was getting a huge promotion if he were to capture the princess. He could change the war in the Horde's favor with She-Ra in their possession.

"Alright Boys. Let's take care of business." The Horde marched forward as three tanks emerged from the forest along with Grizzor's prize jewel in his mammoth class tank equipped with twin turrets that could wipe entire towns off the map.

She-Ra simply smirked and let her rage take complete control of her as she slammed her sword in the ground. Grizzor locked eyes with She-Ra and was just beginning to notice her red eyes and red veins surrounding her body. Everything seemed to slow down a bit for Grizzor as he noticed the negative energy and crazed look of this princess.

"Oh shi-"

With a mighty yell She-Ra took her sword out of the ground setting a massive shockwave of rock and dust towards the army.

Half of the soldiers that were marching forward were crushed with boulders while the other half was sent flying towards all directions.

As the dust settled Grizzor looked around for any sign of his troops or She-Ra and just as it finally cleared he saw her standing above him grinning like a maniac hoisting a tank above him. With one huge throw the mammoth tank exploded into smithereens as She-Ra came back down from her strike.

The remaining soldiers put their hands up in surrender in hope that She-Ra would spare them.

She-Ra was not taking prisoners today however. This was not a battle but the beginning of a slaughter.

In those last moments of the soldiers a haunting laugh would fill their heads as She-Ra chased them down as if it was a game. No one is making out of this. She-Ra is making sure of it.

Massacre

Chapter Summary

> The rivers will flow with blood to those who dare stand in She-Ra's way

Chapter Notes

> I am very surprised of how fast I am doing this. This is definitely not my usual self.

Scorpia, Glimmer, Bow, and Entrapta all rushed towards the growing smoke as they felt the forest shake around them.

"Come on guys!" Entrapta yelled out behind her. "She should be straight ahead"

The four of them ran faster as they started hearing yelling coming towards them.

A frantic Horde soldier sprinted towards them from the trees with his helmet off as he called for help.

"Please, PLEASE save m-" The soldier didn't get to finish as a piece of jagged metal went straight through his chest. The four could only watch as he slumped to the ground, blood coming out of his mouth.

"Run." The body slumped to the side as the soldier passed on.

Glimmer started panicking as they started looking around "WHAT THE FUCK WAS THAT!"

Scorpia turned towards her with a haunted gaze as she remembered what Adora did to her. "I told you that we shouldn't take her lightly. I think you can see my POINT NOW!"

Glimmer was about too retort but stopped as she heard a bunch of screams right in front of them.

She-Ra was not holding back on the remaining Horde soldiers. Grizzor's armies were one of the best in the entire Horde army but in mere seconds she had reduced the army of 300 to about 80 in one fell swoop along with killing the Horde captain and destroying his signature weapon.

She-Ra was quickly making work as she had destroyed the two remaining tanks with ease as she sliced them in two leaving them in mangled metallic corpses as the fire consumed them.

The more senior soldiers activated emergency orders as they told the young cadets to retreat while they held the princess off. Every single horror story those cadets had first heard whether it be young or old came true as they witnessed the true fury of what a princess can do. She-Ra cut through the soldiers who were stupid enough to face her one on one and those who attacked with range were met with a fierce sword slash that dropped them and the trees behind them.

Blood was everywhere as She-Ra kept laughing in a more distorted voice not even feeling tickled by the tasers that these pathetic humans had.

With another swing of her sword she finished off another six soldiers as they dropped on her feet. She looked around and noticed many retreating or trying to help others. They hurt Catra and She-Ra was not going to be merciful to those who hurt her. Using her momentum She-Ra launched herself in the air spinning her sword in a wide arch as she charged up.

"AHHHHHH!" She screamed out as she landed and sent a huge wave of energy towards the remaining soldiers. Those who stood close to the blast were instantly vaporized as the sheer power of the blow disintegrated their entire bodies. Those who stood outside of the blast were either blown into pieces or launched in random directions into rocks, trees, and any structures that lay around. Anything that She-Ra aimed at was now dead or dying as the trees were set ablaze and blood smeared the ground.

She-Ra breathed heavily as she eyed her surroundings and kept her ears open for anyone else that could pose a threat. Right as she was about to return to her Catra she heard voices come from the trees about 50 yards from her. The voices sounded frantic and She-Ra held her sword in a tight grip as she walked over to these survivors.

The group of four were panicking as they argued about what to do. Entrapta was the only one who noticed a very angry She-Ra and tried calling the other three's attention with a wave of her hand.

"Uhh, guys. We might want to get out of here." The three looked at her before looking to where she was staring and could only scream as they scrambled for cover as She-Ra struck where they just stood.

Bow was not fast enough however as She-Ra grabbed his leg, hoisting him in the air. Bow scrambled for his bow but was quickly met with a Blade to his neck as he hung upside down. Bow gulped as her felt the tip of the blade. He looked up to meet She-Ra's eyes as she smiled maliciously at him.

She-Ra eyed him up and down as she determined that this was no Horde soldier. She had to eliminate possible threats so she quickly shook him to get answers.

"You enemy? Hurt Catra!?" She-Ra yelled in his ear . Bow frantically shook his head as he waved his hands in front of her.

"No, No we all are friends of Catra! Please we only want to help you, Adora!" Bow tried pleading.

She-Ra looked around to notice the three other people she saw hiding. They all looked scared of her and they did not look like big threats. She started to recognize them from the base where she was first formed but she could not remember any of these people hurting her Catra.

With a reluctant sneer she dropped Bow, leaving him on the floor. He qickly yelped and went towards Glimmer and with one final look, She-Ra turned around towards where she put Catra.

Before she could leave however she was met by an angry scorpion lady to her annoyance.

"What did you do with Catra!"Scorpia tried swinging her right claw to punch She-Ra in the face but was qickly grabbed by her strong hand. Scorpia could only watch as She-Ra smiled in her face as she chuckled darkly, she started crushing Scorpia's hand as she stared her down.

Scorpia didn't know if She-Ra got stronger or she was holding back this whole time but she was noticing cracks forming on her claw as she cried out in pain. She-Ra finally being done, simply swung her towards a tree as she was done playing with this bug lady.

Scorpia landed roughly as she grasped her injured claw to her chest. She was about to get up but was qickly pulled back by Glimmer , Bow, and Entrapta.

Bow whispered softly, "We don't stand a chance Scorpia. It's clear She-Ra is very protective over Catra and our best bet for now is to leave Catra with her."Scorpia could only breath in pain as she knew they were right.

"I'm sorry Catra"Scorpia watched as She-Ra slowly came out of view as she blacked out from her pain.

She-Ra had protected what was hers and was happy as she rushed over exitedly to where she left her Catra only to be met with an unexpected sight.

Tethered ropes ripped to pieces and a trail of magicat footprints leading away from the battle. She-Ra collapsed to the ground holding the ropes in her hands as she watched them fall apart in front of her.

Clouds had formed and were now thundering as rain started pouring on the battlefield. She-Ra started huffing as she grew angrier and angrier due to her lost Catra and could only release her frustrations through one thing.

"RAHHHHHHHHHH!" She-Ra released a burst of energy vaporizing any trees around her and left an area of 30 feet in ash as she stood in the center.

She-Ra could only think of one thing in her rage and that was that Catra left her again.

Thoughts that weren't there before

What can she do to get Catra to stay. What could she do? What will she do...

She-ra had never been as angry as she got up from the ash that lay beneath her feet. Catra had left her after all the things she did for her. She brought food, she cared for her, she BROUGHT THOSE WHO HURT HER T O THEIR DEA THS!

She-Ra swung her sword in rage, slicing a tree in half as she continued walking down the path trying to find Catra. She-Ra knew she had to be better. She needed to protect Catra from anything that could hurt her but what was she so afraid of?

She-Ra kept searching her(?) thoughts as she scrambled for a reason for why she was alone again. Her sword started glowing and She-Ra started convulsing as another transformation started happening to her.

The cracks grew larger on her head as they now reached her eyes and her heart now being encased with a pattern like lightning creating a circle on her chest. She-Ra's process did not stop as she was filled with memories she did not recognize. A shadowy figure called for her in a praising tone but to She-Ra's distraught she could hear a figure crying behind this creature.

"ENOUGH, CA TRA! YOU HA VE DON E NOTHIN G BUT DISTRACT ADORA ALL THIS TIME AN D YOU LET HER GET HUR T!" This dark entity screamed.

A smaller version of Catra appeared in She-Ra's vision as she sniffled with tears in her eyes.

"Bu-,but I didn't even hurt her , she just fell Shadow W eaver!W e were just playing!"

Shadow Weaver smacked Catra to the side in rage as she yelled to her "YOU DARE R Y T O TWIST THIS IN O ADORA'S F AULT. YOU DISAPPOINTME!NOW GET OUT OF HERE WHILE I END T O ADORA'S AKE!"

Catra ran away from Shadow Weaver with a hand shape mark on her face, tears in her eyes as she went to hide.

She-Ra had never been so angry with this version of her. How could she simply stand there and watch their Catra be simply toyed with when she simply told the truth!?

"There, there Adora. Y ou won't have to deal with that cat for long. Ill try finding some way to get rid of that beast."

Young Adora gently shook her head as she looked up at Shadow Weaver with fear in her eyes. "It' s ok I can take care of her Shadow Weaver. Im sure it was just an accident. Pl-Please don't hurt her ."

Shadow Weaver narrowed her eyes as she got to Adora's level. "Y our heart is too pure for this world, Adora. I will make sure to snuff it out when you are of age. It will only lead to you making poor decisions, especially when it comes to Catra."Shadow weaver said darkly.

Shadow Weaver dismissed her with a wave as she got back to her runestone. Adora quickly left searching for Catra but She-Ra paid no mind to it as she stared at this monstrosity that stood before her.

"This is why Catra is so scared of her . This is WHY . SHE. LEFT!" Catra knows that this Adora would only save herself and this monster was hurting her as she watched.

She-Ra finally came back to reality as she woke up on the path still. Her eyes set ablaze from the anger she now felt and a new goal reached her mind. Eradicate this disease known as Shadow Weaver and bring her head to her beloved Catra. She will see how she has made up for her misdoings as a child. She wont leave her again once she finishes this.

She-Ra got up with a far too wide smile as she walked towards Horde territory. She will kill anything that hurts her Catra. She-Ra always keeps her promises…

Mistakes

Chapter Summary

Catra goes to the only thing she has ever known.

Catra would admit it to nobody but deep down she knew she was a coward. She had already tried talking down She-Ra before but nothing had worked as she tied her to a tree and went to slaughter an entire army. She heard the screams and even saw a soldier be impaled as he tried running away as she scrambled for a way to escape her bonds.

She frantically tried getting herself free and luckily was able to but instead of trying to help she fled to the only thing she knew and that was Horde territory. She tried reasoning with herself as she walked into the base. Those soldiers were already dead once they approached She-Ra. She saw how easily She-Ra killed that patrol with relative ease over a simple mistake. That thing was not her Adora, she was a deranged monster who killed anything that harmed her possession. Catra fascinated this thing for some reason and she did not want to be it's play thing any longer.

As she entered the base she was met with a flock of her soldiers telling her of a mass distress beacon. Catra covered her ears as she was met but nothing but voices and finally snapped.

"ENOUGH!" The crowd grew silent as they waited for their commander to speak. Catra's tone left no room for arguments, "Under my direct orders no one and I mean NO ONE will interact with the princess known as She-Ra."

Force captain Octavia scoffed to Catra's annoyance as she laughed in her face. "What is it sweetheart? Is the little kitty afraid of a princess now?" Catra did not waste any time as she grabbed Octavia and pinned her against the wall.

"IF , you want to die a gruesome and quick death, be all my guest and engage that monster. I saw her single handedly wipe out Grizzor 's entire army as well as his signature weapon while I could hear her laughing as if it was a game!" Octavia gulped as she heard Catra' s growing fear in her tone. "She-Ra is not taking prisoners and she will not show mercy to us anymore. If you want to live, do NOT defy my orders. IS.THA T.CLEAR!" Catra bared her fangs as she looked around the room of soldiers and captains alike.

They frantically nodded their heads as Catra let Octavia go. Right as she was about to leave, another cadet came up to her saluting her as he asked for permission to speak. Catra nodded, "Lord Hordak will like to speak with you directly Captain Catra, He wants an immediate report of how we lost our strongest military division"

Catra briefly nodded and braced herself for what was to come as she walked to his lab. As she waved her pass and entered Hordak's lab she was met with a furious Hordak as he set his tools down roughly.

"Do you plan to tell me what exactly happened Force Captain Catra? Because of my first reports I just lost one of our biggest assets in our northwest division and the ENTIRETY OF GRIZZLIES ARMY T O ONE PRINCESS!" Hordak crushed whatever he had in his hand as he stared at Catra through his beady red eyes.

"Uh, well let me explain Lord Hord-."

Hordak was not to be trifled with as he used his metallic hand to grasp Catra by the throat.

"YOUR POSITION AS SECOND-IN-COMMAND AS WELL AS YOUR P ATHETIC LIFE IS UP IN THE AIR AS OF NOW! DO NOT WASTE YOUR BREA TH FOR NOT O FIND EXCUSES!" Hordak threw her to the side as he stared off to the distance.

"Now tell me Force Captain Catra. What. happened."

Catra held back tears as she coughed violently, finally being able to breath.

"Sh-She-Ra has been compromised entirely , Lord Hordak. She is not the good princess we all know. She is showing no remorse and looks like she enjoyed killing our soldiers ever since she came into contact with one of Entrapta's relics."

Hordak narrowed his eyes to Catra "And how exactly did she come into contact with this relic."

Catra stumbled with her words as she sought something that wouldnt get her killed.

Hordak grew impatient as he slammed his hands on his table. "I AM WAITING FOR A RESPONSE!"

Catra finally thought of something. "Uhh, she came with her two friends and sought to destroy our progress trying to find more relics for Entrapta's experiment. I didnt see what happened but it appears that she came into contact with it trying to destroy Entrapta's collection in order to leave us in disarray."

Hordak raised his hand to his chin as he contemplated what to do.

"If that was the case Force Captain Catra then where were you when that base was destroyed. That was nearly three days ago and yet you only show up as of now"…

Catra couldnt think of a lie as she simply told the truth. "She-Ra whatever she has become now saw some value in me and had taken me prisoner. It was only till today where a Horde patrol found us by chance and was able to get away as they had called Grizzor 's army to try to take her out. "

Hordak scoffed in anger as he pinned Catra with a stare "So by your incompetence of escaping you led my most powerful division of troops to their slaughter. That is UNACCEPT ABLE!"

Catra backed up as Hordak walked towards her.

Catra tried saving herself as she spoke in fear, "Lord Hor-Hordak, there was no possible way for me to escape until those soldiers came into contact. FOR CRYING OUT LOUD SHE T OOK OUT AN ENTIRE ARMY! WE WERE MINUTES! THERE W AS NOTHING I COULD DO!"

Hordak was in sheer rage as he kept approaching Catra "THAT DOESN'T ERASE THAT MY BEST DIVISION IS NOW DESTROYED! IT W AS YOUR OPERATION THAT LOST ARMED ALL THIS AND THAT MEANS IT'S YOUR F AULT!"

Catra braced herself as Hordak raised his fist to unleash his anger but was stopped by blaring alarms echoing the base.

Hordak rushed towards his screen as Catra went pale. She knew only one thing that would be stupid enough to attack the heart of the Horde.

Hordak quickly set up a link with his scouts "WHAT'S GOING ON" The scout in question seemed to be panicking as he kept looking to the side. "LORD HORDAK WE CAN'T STOP HER!" A burrage of blasting was heard in the background along with screams being cut short as if something was silencing them.

"IT'S SHE-RA AND SHE KEEPS SCREAMI-" She-Ra's voice was heard as she yelled "WHERE IS SHADOW WEAVER! BRING ME THIS DISEASE AND YOUR LIFES MAY BE SPARED!"

"WE HAVE TO EVACUATE THE BA-" The scout was cut off as a sword pierced his chest, he gasped for air before being cut cleanly in half to Hordak's horror and was met by a terrifying She-Ra. Covered in blood with a smile on her face she looked at the screen. "BRING ME SHADOW WEAVER! HER HEAD WILL BE MINE!" All Hordak saw next was a powerful strike that knocked down his connection.

Catra grew panicked but steeled herself in front of Hordak

“She is infatuated with me, Lord Hordak. I can talk her down! I can still stop this while we have a chance.”

Hordak went to his table and pressed a series of buttons that locked down his lab as any windows and doors were reinforced with steel.

“Wh-What are you doing!” Catra screamed.

“If she is so infatuated with you then she will come for you once she does whatever she wants to Shadow Weaver.”

Catra grew more panicked as she tried begging to Hordak

“Please sir , she doesnt even know I am here!”

Hordak simply chuckled as he got his weapon ready.

“Oh, shell know”…

Torment

Chapter Summary

She-Ra gets what she wants.

Always...

She-Ra as much as she was powerful was getting tired of slaughtering these fools. Not in the way you might think however. They always said the same thing "GETHER" or "PLEASE HAVE MERCY" It was all sooooo annoying. It brought a smile to her face every single time she ended these pathetic mortals. They could not hold a candle to her or her Catra.

As she snapped a Horde soldier's neck throwing him against the wall she was met by three familiar faces.

Lonnie,Rogelio, and Kyle, her three old roommates from which she could remember through her fractured memories. While she knew these creatures she would not hesitate to kill them if they forced her to.

Lonnie gasped as she saw how much blood was on the walls and on She-Ra's sword. Before she could tell her squad to retreat, the lights went out and she could only stare at She-Ra's glowing eyes as they seemed to reach into her very soul.

"I'm all for the Horde guys but I prefer to li-" Kyle started saying before being knocked out with a single punch as he was flung towards the end of the corridor. Rogelio roared in rage and swung widely in the dark, almost hitting Lonnie multiple times before he was abruptly caught off. Lonnie looked around frantically before the lights came back on and she saw both Kyle and Rogelio knocked out with the lizard missing multiple teeth as he bled from his mouth. Lonnie noticed a shadow right behind her and before she could activate her taser her hand was crushed in a tight grip.

"AHHHHH!" Lonnie gasped out in pain as she could feel her bones being crushed into powder as She-Ra looked down at her.

She-Ra laughed as she had caught her prey but she was smart to not let this opportunity slip in her grasp.

"Where. Is. Shadow W eaver!" Lonnie gaped in confusion as she started to feel her hand go numb.

"ANSWER ME OR ILL JUST KILL YOU AND ASK HER!"

Lonnie gasped out with tears in her eyes barely even hearing She-Ra.

"SHE IS IN THE PRISON! SHE W AS DEMOTED AFTER HER CONFINED F AILURES AND PUT THERE FOR HER DISOBEDIENCE BY HORDAK PLEASE LET ME GO ADORA!"

She-Ra smiled as she quickly knocked out Lonnie with a quick punch. She may be a monster but these people didn't deserve death unlike the others. They gave her what she wanted, they could live for now.

She marched down the path not encountering any more obstacles . Either the Horde finally got the message to not engage her or she had killed most of them on the way. Either way she didn't care as she finally knew where this disease was.

She cut down the door in front of her as she was met with the many cells of the Horde prison. She quickly checked the Horde pad looking for where this monstrosity was held and with a couple more clicks she had her target to her delight.

As this was happening Shadow Weaver stood alone in her cell as she kept hearing the blasted alarms.

“What could possibly be causing this much damage. The rebellion doesn’t nearly have the power or stealth to face the might of the Horde head on. Must be some kind of new protocol made by that blasted Catra”…

As she thought of this a new shadow appeared behind her. Without turning around Shadow weaver scoffed in an irritated manner.

“About time Catra, I was beginning to think this was actually seri-” Shadow Weaver looked back in shock as she heard a huge crash as she saw a mangled She-Ra cutting down the controls that kept her separated from the outside world.

She-Ra finally broke through as the energy shield went down and smiled down at her once mother figure.

“Ad-Adora? What on earth happened to you?”

She-Ra chuckled darkly as she swung her sword, cutting Shadow Weaver’s chains.

“Y ou should be worried about what IM GOIN G T O DO TO YOU!” Shadow Weaver could hardly even process what she said before She-Ra grabbed her ankle dragging her towards the one place she knew they could be alone.

Two minutes later She-Ra threw Shadow Weaver into the Runestone room through her constant protest.

“What is the meaning of this Adora! Why are we here!?” Shadow weaver yelled out in anger and slight fear.

She-Ra smiled as she locked the doors and turned towards her with a far too sweet smile. “This is the place I remember so much. I remember how I was too much of a coward to stand up against you as you hurt Catra. IT W AS N EARL Y EVER Y DA Y FHA T YOU T OOK HER HERE!”

Shadow Weaver surprisingly started laughing too She-Ra's confusion and growing frustration.

"This is about CATRA? That mangy beast! She got what she deserved. She was always a brat and always led you to make worse decisions each and every time."

Shadow weaver narrowed her eyes as she smirked under her mask "I bet she' s the reason you're like this in the first place"…

She-Ra huffed as she started breathing heavily.

"I'm right, aren't I" Shadow W eaver kept laughing as she stood up to her knees. "What do you even plan to do, Adora? Nothing will take away the pain I caused Catra. No matter how hard you try or wish you could take it back."

She-Ra smirked as she started walking up to the Runestone. She raised her sword and to Shadow Weaver's growing dread she saw the magic she once had flow into She-Ra as she started cackling. Lightning went everywhere as the power was absorbed by the sword and with one final surge She-Ra stood while looking at her hands.

Electricity danced between her fingertips and her sword, as her hair was now floating due to the discharge. She looked up at Shadow Weaver with every ounce of hate as she spat at her "I may not take away the pain you caused Catra. BUT I CAN CER TAIN Y MAK E YOU EXPERIEN CE IT TEN FOLD!"

Screams could be heard throughout the entire Horde fortress as the power kept flickering in and out as She-Ra watched in delight as Shadow Weaver convulsed on the floor as her new magic tortured her.

After 15-20 minutes of constant lightning, beatings, and slashings She-Ra finally let go of Shadow Weaver, electricity sparked off her convulsing form as she laid on the ground blood leaking out of her wounds.

She-Ra held her sword up in the air as she looked down at Shadow Weaver with a sly smile. She may hate Shadow Weaver but she needed to find her Catra. This waste of space was not worth any more time, She-Ra had her fun already.

"Any last words, filth." She-Ra spat as Shadow W eaver stood up to her knees shakily.

"I-. I should've left that creature in that burning village. My only regret was not killing. Her. Sooner."

With rage She-Ra swung her sword with all her strength. Shadow Weaver's body fell to the floor as her head rolled to She-Ra's feet.

She-Ra got what she came for as she held Shadow Weaver's head with a giddy grin. She put it in a bag she found and was just about to walk out when screens came to life behind her.

Hordak stared with a grin as Catra was bound and gagged next to him. She-Ra looked with nothing but rage as she saw this thing having her beloved.

"T o the one known as She-Ra. If you value this pathetic magicats life you will find me in my lab. If you so much as try anything, her life will be ended on my command."

She-Ra slashed the tv in rage as she started rushing towards Hordak's lab. A haunting laugh reached her ears as she ran through the corridors.

"I will see you there." Hordak's voice echoed as the screen cut to black.

What you always wanted...

Chapter Notes

> This is a big one. Honestly I think I could've done better so perhaps it could be rewritten in the future. But oh well that is for another time. For now enjoy.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

She-Ra ran like she had never run before as she made her way to Hordak's lair. When she got her hands on him there would be nothing but the stain of blood on the walls and her clothes as she disintegrated his body from this world.

She-Ra finally reached the entrance and with no effort cut the door cleanly in two despite all the extra reinforcements that Hordak put up. She walked in looking around before finally locking eyes with that wretched thing known as Hordak.

He simply smirked as as he stood next to a series of controls confidently as he held a blaster to Catra's head.

"My, my, look at you. Rushing in to save Catra despite her betrayal to you. Such dedication for one who was just hunting for you not even a couple of days ago." Hordak smirked as he saw She-Ra get more angry by the second.

"Now here's what's going to happen, beast. You will pledge your allegiance to me and I won't leave Catra's brains on the floor. How does that sound? Seems like a good trade to me."

She-Ra thought of her options but she could not guarantee Catra's safety with any of the ones she thought of so with great reluctance she sheathed her sword on her back as she put her hands up.

Hordak's grin grew as before She-Ra could react she was surrounded by some sort of red forcefield that was constricting her as she struggled to breath.

Hordak cackled as he walked away from Catra who struggled against her restraints.

"You really think Im stupid enough to actually trust you to be in line. I am not naive enough that you wouldnt hesitate to backstab me whenever you got the chance."

She-Ra went down to her knees as she was slowly starting to fade out of consciousness.

"With you dead the rebellion will stand no chance regardless of how much damage you have caused these past few days. 'Hordak went back over to hold Catra's face in his cold hands.

"You dont have to worry about Catra my dear . Shell make a nice pet as I make her watch everything she loves burn to ash"…

She-Ra couldnt let this happen. She wont let this happen. She reached down into herself and begged for any power in the universe to help save her lover from her fate. Right as she was about to answer a dark force within her answered her as an explosion of light emerged from her.

Hordak and Catra could only gape as She-Ra floated off the ground. She-Ra's eyes glowed a bright red as no pupils were visible within her anymore. Her once golden and white outfit was now a pitch black with red accessories replacing anything gold. Red veins now encircled her entire body as they now reached over her heart and chest.

She-Ra stood floating for another couple of seconds as she breathed in and smiled evilly as she stared at Hordak.

"You made one mistake, Hordak." Hordak started backing up as his machine now was rendered useless to whatever power She-Ra now had.

"You hurt Catra!" She-Ra unsheathed her sword and with all her might flung it towards Hordak. He could hardly even scream as the sword went straight to his chest pinning him against the wall. With no effort She-Ra blasted the machine that created the force field rendering it a useless piece of burnt metal.

Hordak was barely breathing as blood leaked out of his mouth dripping down his chin. He was only standing upright due to the sword piercing him completely through his chest and through the wall.

She-Ra walked over as her eyes returned to a normal red as she stared at him with a smug grin.

"You overestimated yourself Hordak." Hordak held her gaze in challenge but he was quickly losing the battle as his life faded within him.

"You always thought you were this untouchable being, not even thinking of anyone else being worthy to stand by your side. Now look at you, killed by your own cadet because you thought you could still be in control even as you saw me decimate your armies and kill anyone that stood in my way." Hordak' s hands went limp as he could barely breathe now.

She-Ra gripped her sword and twisted as Hordak could barely scream. "Consider this mercy . My only regret is I didnt make your suffering longer." With barely any ef fort She-Ra pulled her sword out of Hordak, instantly killing him as he slumped against the ground. His blood pooled around him as She-Ra rushed to Catra.

"Oh my Catra, are you hurt?" Catra could finally breathe as She-Ra freed her from her gag and cut her ties.

She-Ra carried her as she looked into her eyes with a soft gaze.

"Y o-, You saved me" Catra smiled as she put her hand on She-Ra' s cheek to her immediate happiness.

"I would burn this world for you Catra. Make no mistake, I'd do anything for you"…

Catra blushed but quickly noticed a bag that was leaking blood on She-Ra's waist.

Catra rushed over thinking She-Ra was bleeding. "Why didn't you tell me you were hurt! Jeez, you can be an idiot sometimes."

She-Ra laughed as she quickly put her arms on Catra' s shoulders stopping her before she could reach for the bag.

"It' s ok darling, it's not mine. It was gonna be a gift when I found you again after you left me in the woods." She-Ra had a far too wide smile as she handed her the blood drenched bag. Catra could smell the blood even before she was handed the drenched bag and reluctantly opened it and screamed as she dropped it.

"What the fuck Adora! What did you do..." Shadow W eavor's head rolled to Catra's feet and in disgust she kicked it away as tears formed in her eyes. She-Ra was confused as her smile diminished from her face.

"It-, It' s ok Catra." She-Ra tried approaching her but Catra scampered to the wall as her fur bristled and she hissed in fear.

She-Ra raised her hands and quickly sheathed her blood covered sword as she tried putting a soft smile on.

"Wh-When you left me, I sought reasons of why you would and then I remembered what this disease did to you." She-Ra had a look of rage but quickly hid it in order to not scare Catra anymore than she had already. "She hurt you, and I finally remembered just watching and doing nothing as she tortured you. WE WERE JUST KIDS FOR GODS SAKE!"

She-Ra went down to her knees as she grabbed her hair in frustration with tears in her eyes as she begged Catra. "I saw that I needed to make up for my mistakes. It was the only logical reason that I could find in order for you to leave me"…

She-Ra was sobbing as Catra could not believe she was hearing. She-Ra steeled herself as she slowly crawled to Catra. "She had to pay for all those years she tortured you. I Harnessed her magic from the rhinestone and watched her suffer as I filled her with as much pain as I could!" She-Ra cackled as she grew more desperate in her monologuing "I did it for you Catra... She deserved far worse that what I gave her!"

She-Ra was now right in front of Catra as tears went down both their cheeks. "She can no longer hurt or drive us apart anymore Catra. We can be what we always wanted."

Catra shook her head as she backed up away from this monster that stood before her.

"No, NO! This was never what I wanted Adroa! You just killed who knows how many people on your way for this weir fantasy that I somehow wanted this!"

She-Ra's demeanor quickly changed as she sneered looking down at Catra "Really , Catra! I did this for You! How many times did you cry to me when we were kids as you came back from on of your beatings. How many times did we talk about a future of us ruling the Horde together. You have everything you ever wanted and yet you want to back down now and say you never asked for this!" She yelled exasperately

Catra got up to She-Ra's face baring her fangs as she hissed out. "I didn't think it would be like this Adora! You are not the girl I grew up with. She would've never killed this many people just for me. She would've been the one telling me that I could be more than just some monster. Now look at you. Look at what you have become Adora. How much blood has been shed in these past days!"

She-Ra roared back as she towered over Catra. "Look at what I've become?! Really Catra? You're the one who gave me the freedom to do this, and so what if I'm not the Adora you grew up with. I am what she could never be! I just ended the two most powerful beings on this planet in order to help you! I finally grew the courage to end those pathetic people in order to free us from our tortured free lives! We can be whatever we want and however we want to be. I did you a favor!"

Catra grew quiet as She-Ra finished her rant. She simply shook her head as she started backing towards the door. "My only regret was letting this virus affect you, Adora. You are clearly far too gone to be saved." Catra wiped her eyes as she shed more tears.

"You aren't the girl I fell in love with"…

She-Ra had tears in her eyes as she watched her beloved walk away and something broke within her at that moment. Her face blanked and before Catra knew it She-Ra stood ahead of her blocking the only exit to the lab.

Catra grew frustrated as she tried stepping around only to be blocked again. "Enough of this Adora! I want to leave and if you ever cared for me you will let me" She-Ra only responded by grabbing her hand in a tight grip as she squeezed with far too much strength. "Fuck, Adora? What are you doing?!"

She-Ra dragged her back into the lab as she set her on the throne. She-Ra had a crazed smile as she grabbed Catra's face far too roughly as she forced her to look into her eyes.

"I've worked far too hard for you to just leave me again Catra. One day you will learn to see that." She-Ra unsheathed her sword as she started slicing Hordak's equipment and making a blockage that was now a makeshift door.

"For now , you will serve as my right hand side."She-Ra turned around to smile at Catra as she dragged her fingertip along the blade of her sword. "After all this was all we wanted.With both Shadow Weaver and Hordak dead you are now Horde lord being the highest ranked Horde member left."

Catra could only stand there in horror as She-Ra started chuckling darkly. "We will rule this world together, Catra. We will take the Horde as Lord's together into a reign that Hordak and Shadow Weaver could hardly even dream of."

Catra saw no way out as she scrambled for a way out of this. She finally thought of Glimmer and Bow as well as the princess rebellion.

"What about the rebellion, Adora!You wouldnt hurt them even if it was your last option."She-Ra simply smirked as she started laughing harder "Oh you poor sweet thing, dont you get it. I always keep my promises, and I remember all the times they hurt you in our battles. They will fall just like all the others. "

Catra could only grow angry as she knew that was poor reasoning. "You cant possibly think that Adora. We were enemies it was bound we hurt each other. You cant possible think this is what I want!"

She-Ra simply shrugged as she gazed out a window gazing at the wasteland that was now hers and Catra's. "You are possibly right Catra it may not be what you want but it is certainly what you need. Nothing will become between us anymore. I will make sure of that"…

Chapter End Notes

Sooo what do you guys think. Id like to get opinions because I did feel that this was a bit weird overall not gonna lie. I liked the interactions between Catra and Adora but I could probably make the story better. Was it too much in the with Adora taking power for herself or was it just right?

Feel free to share your thoughts even if they are negative.
I want to work on my writing and I do plan to make many more altered She-Ra fics. I already have four ideas with one being a major one.

What you made me...

She-Ra turned away from the window as she was done gazing at her empire. She was finally getting everything she ever wanted since she was but a mere child. To show others how powerful she truly was and to share it with the only person who cared when no one else did.

She proceeded to walk over to the terminal that she had left standing and with a quick sequence of buttons her screen showed up across the entire Horde territory. She smiled as she looked back at Catra and talked with a confident cold tone.

"Hello, all fellow Horde citizens and soldiers alike" Any citizen and soldier of the Horde was now staring at this lady with red eyes with deep hideous red scars flowing throughout her entire body as they were now forced to watch her.

"Some of you may not recognize me but I was your formal enemy known as princess She-Ra. That however does not matter anymore. I have successfully defeated your most powerful army and killed your now former Lord Hordak. From now on I will be in charge along with my beautiful Co-Lord in Catra formally your second in command"… The screen panned to Catra who looked like an absolute trainwreck but held her gaze firm as she sat upon the throne not wanting to look weak. She-Ra quickly panned the Camera back to her as she unsheathed her sword and with fire in her voice she kept talking.

"I have now been on both sides of the war . I have seen the tragedies of many people lost. I myself had been lost in a needless war and was played like a pawn to the rebellion's enjoyment." She-Ra steadied her gaze at the camera as her red eyes seemed to glow with energy. "But with the power of this new crystal that has bonded with my sword I see what they truly are! Cowards who hide behind their castles and let the villagers defend themselves to our great armies. THEY ARE CORRUPT AND MUST BE DESTROYED!"

All around Horde territories the crowds cheered as they listened to their new lord's speech.

"I will lead the Horde to a new foundation and together we can end this war. WE WILL END THE REBELLION. WE. WILL. END. SUFFERING ACROSS ETHERIA AND UNITE IT UNDER ONE BANNER! UNIFIED WE ARE UNSTOPPABLE!" The crowds roared as they cheered and the feed was ended as She-Ra had a sly smile on her face.

Catra spat at her as she walked back over to her. "You may convince the masses but no force captain would serve under you knowing you killed Lord Hordak and those soldiers. They had already surrendered and you still slaughtered them all as if it was a game"…

She-Ra simply laughed mockingly as she held her smirk "Oh, Catra. You called me the naive one when in reality the Horde has always run by fear. They will fall in line because if they don't do well. I can simply replace them. Permanently." She-Ra ended in a dark tone as she ran her finger along her sword.

She-Ra walked over to Catra as she gently cupped her cheek "But don't worry darling I'll take care of anyone who stands in our way." Catra slapped her hand away to She-Ra's immediate anger.

"You are still under this illusion that I somehow would go along with this! You are dead wrong princess, I will fight tooth and nail before I serve under whatever you've become."

She-Ra narrowed her eyes as she talked in an icy tone. "We have discussed this Catra. I am not the Adora you know. She was weak and never was able to fully grasp how much power she could unleash. If my past self would've simply stopped being afraid this war would've been over months ago."

Catra spoke fiercely as she retorted back. "She wasnt afraid! She simply had higher morals and did not sacrifice her mind to the horrors of the war. She was a beacon of light for anyone who needed hope. Now you're just a presence of death and destruction with whatever you hold within reach of you."

She-Ra laughed again as she started circling Catra "Oh that' s rich coming from you miss morals. Y.. ou were the one who chose to not leave the Horde after I left. You. Were the one who was jealous of what Adora could do without you and tried to destroy her for it.". Catra could only shut her eyes as She-Ra kept talking "Y ou. Were the one who was so desperate to get back at the woman you loved that you made her a monster"…

Catra bared her teeth in rage "SHUT UP! YOURE NOT ADORA YOURE JUST SOME MONSTER THA TES I CREA ED BUT NOW THA THIS IS THA VIRUS T ALKS.."

She-Ra got up close to her face as she smiled evilly "Oh, I may not be your Adora, but I can see EVERYTHING. She has seen and known."

She-Ra got up again as she started counting with her fingers. "I know her darkest secrets I.. know her deepest fears." She-Ra got up and close to Catra again as she used her nail to scrape along Catra's jaw "I know her deepest desires". Catra shuddered as She-Ra talked in a husky tone.

She-Ra quickly retreated as she smiled knowingly seeing Catra' s reaction "Y ou may not see me as Adora but you and I both know you are just lying to yourself to save this pretty little image of the girl you so desperately want back"…

"And guess what. She' s already gone and I am the closest thing you are EVER going to get." She-ra unsheathed her sword as she started walking towards the exit. "Now if youll excuse me I will be meeting with the force captains to discuss our new empires plans."

She-Ra slightly turned her head as she made eye contact with Catra. "Have fun my Catra. I will be back soon"…

Catra could only shed quiet tears as she finally let go. What had she done? Where was the girl she had seen just 5 days ago? Why did she not leave this nightmare before it began?

A new plan is made. One that will decide Etheria's fate

Also I made up the lizard guys name.
He was just made up and yes I am not creative with names.

Lizario was the best I could think of.

Unless you wanted John or Harold as the lizard guys name.

Alright the chapter count is still left undecided. I simply put 20 as a rough estimate of how long I plan to continue this story. It could be longer it could even be shorter if so necessary.

It all depends on how I want to finish this story.

Adora walked into the meeting room where all the force captains sat in anxious fear of who their new leader was. One chair stood out as it was labeled Grizzor but the seat was empty to the captain's dread. There were many discussions on radio chatter that Grizzes armies were defeated but this all but confirmed it.

She-Ra made her presence known as she tapped her sword twice on the ground and with an all too familiar smile greeted her new friends.

"Welcome, my captains. It's so nice of you to be early to the meeting I called."

The captains all looked at each other expecting for one person to speak up when finally, one did. Captain Octavia growled out as she stood up.

"What right do you have to stand there and act like you can just take the horde just like that. Just because you killed Hordak doesn't mean that you just took charge."

She-Ra simply laughed as she strutted over to Grizzor's empty chair. She simply got a finger and dragged it along as she gazed at the captains one by one.

"Oh please, I was raised here you idiots. You never were run by loyalty but by fear." She-Ra grabbed her sword swinging it side to side as she kept circling her new captains.

"Grizzor was easily your best military strategist outside of Catra and without them both you need me." She-Ra threw his chair to the wall as it shattered to the Captain's growing fear.

"I slaughtered him and his so-called army in mere minutes. What makes you think that any of you would stand a chance against me." She-Ra looked around as her eyes bored down to each captain's soul. "Come on Ill even give you the first shot, it will be fun to see how long you last vs him. A nice experiment to see who really is or in this case was the strongest." As She-Ra expected no one moved and she chuckled darkly.

"Great, now that my leadership is set in place let's talk about our plans." She-Ra looked around before growing frustrated as no one spoke up. She slammed her sword through the table as her patience snapped. "I'M WAITING!"

A short lizard man quietly spoke up as he got his maps out. "U-Uhh lord She-Ra, our current plan is to play the long game and snuff them out as we slowly capture more and more villages. This would force them to bunch up and while yes they would be more concentrated we can limit their attack effectiveness by slowly removing their run-and gun fight style."

She-Ra narrowed her eyes as she asked him "What is the expected timeline for this plan to be fully executed captain?" She-Ra eyed him as she asked for his name. "Lizario Lord She-ra and by our current projections and with the added loss with Gizors army . It would take 1 year at a minimum but most likely take two to three years" She-Ra grinded her teeth as she sat on her throne.

"I think we can all agree that I do not find that acceptable captain Lizario." She-Ra gripped her sword tighter as she stared at the lizard man.

"You must understand my liege, war is not as simple as you may thi-" Lizario was quickly caught off as She-Ra got up with fire in her eyes. "YOU DON'T THINK I KNOW WHAT YOU RANGY LIZARD! I WAS WITH THE REBELLION FOR A YEAR! DO NOT TREAT ME LIKE A FOOL WHO DOESN'T KNOW WHAT THEY ARE DOING!"

Lizario shrank as She-Ra stood above him and begged "Lord She-Ra I meant no disrespect! I was just meaning to tell you that there is no possible way to shrink this deadline." Lizario closed his eyes as he braced himself for a hit but was met with nothing. He slowly cracked them open to see She-Ra stare at the map he had laid out on the table.

She-Ra started cackling as she now thought of an idea to end the Rebellion with one fierce blow. How did she not think of this sooner!

She-Ra gazed back at her captains as she put the map on the wall. "As we all know our forces have struggled to get through the whispering woods due to some mystical barrier. Even with it frozen it has been guarded by princesses and rebels alike. " She-Ra unsheathed her sword as she waved it in the air. "Well, guess what, we finally have the key to victory"…

The captains were confused about what She-Ra was talking about but quickly grew to realize she was onto something.

"With this sword I have safely walked in that forest due to my connection with this world. There should be no stopping us and our armies to simply walk straight through the forest and take the jewel of the rebellion known as bright moon."

She-Ra wasted no time as she got up to leave. "Order all available troops from all fortresses to report immediately back to HQ. How soon would that take, Lizario?"

Lizario did some quick calculations before finally getting an answer . "It would take around 5 days Lord She-Ra"

"Make that three Lizario, I expect all troops to be ready in three solar cycles. Do not disappoint me."

She-Ra walked out of the meeting room with a cocky grin as everything was falling into place. Soon nothing will stand in her way. Nothing…

Chapter Summary

What will the rebellion do?

After some heavy arguing between Bow and Glimmer, Scorpia was dragged back to Bright Moon. Glimmer would hope that her mother wouldnt be too mad as they dragged the force captain along with them. She was heavily injured and the healers could work wonders on her broken claw.

A bit later Glimmer, Entrapta, and Bow stood before Queen Angela as they kneeled before her.

Angella dismissed her guards and went down her steps facing eye to eye with each of them before finally speaking.

"Do you plan to explain why you brought a Horde captain to our castle Glimmer? Also maybe include how Entrapta isnt exactly as dead as we thought and now that I think of it, where is Adora?"

Glimmer and Bow looked at each other and nodded their heads as they started speaking.

"Mother , I would love to explain more but we have more alarming news regarding Adora."

Angella narrowed her eyes as she saw the fear in her daughters eyes and softly held her shoulder reassuringly. "What happened, Glimmer?"

Glimmer couldnt hold her tears as she finally broke "I-I dont even know how it happened but we engaged with Catra at the ice base and She-Ra went mad. Entrapta,Bow and I were there the first time it happened and luckily we were able to contain her there but now she's out of control. We saw her slaughter an entire Horde division in mere minutes. She didn't leave any survivors."…

Angella grew worried with this revelation and finally spoke up after a couple seconds of silence "Where is she now Glimmer we must know? Is there a way to get her back?"

Glimmer nodded "The last time it was as simple as taking her sword out of her hands. We tried to do it at the Horde base but she knocked me and Bow out before we could."

"She has only got worse as Entrapta explained to us that the virus was spreading further within her. We do not even know where she is right now."…

As Glimmer was saying this Entrapta received a mandatory viewing as her tracking pad lit up.

She scrambled over to the stairs as she got their attention. "Uhh, guys I think I found her. This is really not good."…

Entrapta showed the broadcast that was going across the Horde territories and to put it lightly She-Ra was barely recognizable with a cruel grin and new clothes entirely. She talked about ending the rebellion and how she was the new Lord of the Horde since she killed Lord Hordak.

The feed ended as She-Ra finished her speech, the four stood in silence as they saw what Adora had become. The girl they had just been hanging out with was now the Horde lord along with Catra.

Angella called her guards as she wasted no time "Call the princess alliance to meet immediately! I want all guards to be on watch 24/7! War is coming to Bright Moon again and we will be prepared for it!" Glimmer walked next to her mom as they sped down the hallway

"Mother isn't this extreme, we have to think of ways to stop Adora not preparing for a war!"

Angella turned around and got face to face with her daughter "You must understand Glimmer, She-Ra has the means to walk directly towards us without anything stopping her. She is easily the most powerful being on this planet and she has now set her targets on us. I am sorry Glimmer, we must find a way to stop her or we will all be destroyed."

Angella left her as she went to secure the castle. Bow and Entrapta stood to the side awkwardly as they waited for something to happen.

Glimmer straightened herself as she turned around. "We are not giving up on Adora. We are gonna need a plan if we are going to stop her. Entrapta is there any way you can track Horde movement to see how much time we have?"

Entrapta quickly accessed the Horde system and saw a flurry of movement from Commanders and captains alike. She saw a massive calling to arms and they were all being called to the capitol. Something big was happening and it was gonna be soon.

"Well it looks like your mother is right. Whatever Adora is planning it's big, she's already signaled a massive army towards the capital. We can only assume that shell try to take Bright Moon in one big move. I give it an estimate of 3-4 days before all the forces are gathered."

Glimmer and Bow paled as they thought of options.

"You had theories before Entrapta, right?" Entrapta quickly nodded. "Have you thought of anything that could snap Adora out of this?"

Entrapta had been running some simulations she made but the results werent exactly promising. "Well as it turns out this virus has an anti-version of it. I luckily have it on me and if all things go correctly they will cancel eachother out completely destroying each other in the process."

Glimmer and Bow were just about to cheer until Entrapta grew a grim face.

"However , since Adora has been infected for so long and the relic is now forged within the sword. There is a good likelihood that the sword altogether will be destroyed and with it Adora herself"…

Glimmer shook her head defiantly as she grabbed her hair in frustration "NO, there must be another way to defeat Adora!We cannot simply kill her because of what Catra did to her."

"There is a chance that she might be fine as well but it's practically impossible to predict since this virus has connected with her nervous system."

Glimmer and Bow walked away not hearing of Entrapta's ideas anymore. Just as she was about to walk away a limping Scorpia came around the corner. Entrapta smiled as she quickly hugged the Captain much to her pain.

"Oh my goodness!Scorpia Im so glad you are ok. How are you feeling?"Scorpia smiled but quickly grew serious as she heard the conversation between Entrapta and the rebels.

"Are you sure that this relic can take out She-Ra, Entrapta?"

Entrapta nodded "It will absolutely work, the only factor I do not know is if Adora will survive the process of it or not. I cant get a single simulation to work properly."

Scorpia held her claw to her chin and thought of an idea that would absolutely destroy any friendship she had with Catra. She wasnt stupid as much as she seemed to be, she saw the connection her and Adora had. She however was a good friend, she would gladly make that sacrifice as long as Catra was safe.

"We are going through my plan Entrapta. You are not gonna like it but you must understand this will be the only way we can win. Are you with me?" Scorpia held out her claw as she locked eyes with Entrapta. Entrapta reluctantly shook it as she didnt know what Scorpia was planning but it did not seem that any good would come from it.

Chapter Summary

Scorpia's plan is a go.

Catra had been stuck in Horde's lab for a whole two hours at this point. She-Ra made sure to keep the door completely blocked so she couldn't escape.

Catra was in the middle of trying to file the bars on the windows but then to her surprise a certain purple haired girl fell from the ceiling.

She landed with an oomph as she looked around before locking eyes with Catra.

She smiled as she bounded over to her "Oh my gosh Catra! I am so glad to find you! Are you ok, did She-Ra hurt you?" Catra dropped from the window as she still felt pain from her wrist but nothing else was worth mentioning.

"No she did not, also why were you in the vents Entrapta?"

Entrapta grinned "Well obviously I had to sneak in here Catra. How else was I able to get in here?"

Catra simply raised her eyebrow "Uhh, you do realize you're still a Horde member right? You could've just walked right in here." Entrapta scratched her head as she now realized Catra was right. Perhaps Scorpia shouldn't have made this plan after all.

Catra kept going as she saw Entraptas obvious mental lapse "Well I guess since you snuck in here that means that you're working for the rebellion now. Why did you come here Entrapta?"

Entrapta reached into her pocket as she held out a shiny blue crystal. "We have a way to defeat She-Ra, Catra. The only thing you have to do is to put it against her sword. You must do it quickly and to make sure it stays in contact for a couple of seconds. The process should turn her back to normal."

Catra smiled as she snatched the crystal in her hands. "Really Entrapta? You mean it? Oh my gosh YES! I can finally get my Adora back!" Catra squealed before freezing as she watched Entrapta gaze at her with a bitter smile.

"You tell anyone that happened you're dead Entrapta. Also what's with the glum face? We can finally get Adora back." Entrapta simply smiled as she laughed nervously slowly walking back towards a vent. "Uhh, well you know I didn't know that you and Adora were that close. I mean you were just enemies not even a week ago."

Catra narrowed her eyes as she watched Entrapta back up "We grew up together Entrapta. It was unforeseen circumstances that brought us apart. Why are you acting so weird?"

Entrapta was about to respond before her and Catra heard the doors beginning to open. Entrapta rushed towards the vent and Catra quickly pocketed the crystal. She-Ra walked in with a worried face until her eyes landed on Catra and she relaxed immediately.

"There you are Catra. I was beginning to worry that you had left again. We couldn't let that happen could we?" She-Ra smiled greedily as she started backing Catra up to the wall.

Catra felt the relic in her pants move and she would do anything to get her Adora back. "You know I've had a lot of time to think." She-Ra smirked as she raised an eyebrow.

"Oh, really, please tell me what you were thinking about my dear." Catra put on a flirty tone as she walked up to She-Ra.

"I've been so alone spending all this time in this lab. I got worried and it was so cold." She-Ra flushed as she felt Catra's tail grip around her thigh.

"Maybe we can spend the night, just me and you for once."She-Ra smiled as she quickly scooped up Catra "Anything for you my dear… Anything."She-Ra quickly brought her to a bed chamber and laid her down with surprising gentleness.

"What are you waiting for Ado-Adora?"Catra forced the name out of her throat as she hated calling this thing Adora. She-Ra stared sadly as she sat next to her on the bed.

"I know you still dont see me as Adora yet Catra. I know you see me as a monster and I do not blame you. I told you that I had her desires and there is nothing she wants more than to take care of you. If that means we have to wait to bond then Id wait eternity only to feel your lips on mine. I know Ive been cruel to you these past days but know that everything I have done was for you."She-Ra had tears in her eyes as she laid down next to Catra.

"I have her fears and I saw each nightmare she had in a year in only a fraction of a second. You have no idea how scared sh- no I was. Her heart broke each time as you left her over and over again."She-Ra put her sword on her side and didnt even look at Catra as she closed her eyes. "Goodnight Catra."

Before Catra could talk She-Ra seemed to freeze up as her body wasnt moving whatsoever . Catra couldnt help but feel bad as she waited for a couple of minutes to be sure that She-Ra was out. In those minutes she grew hope as she saw the true Adora shine through the monstrosity that stood before her. No matter the version of her she could still show kindness and love that no creature of this earth could ever hope to have.

Catra got up and took the crystal out of her pocket before realizing that She-Ra was frozen solid and had covered the gemstone altogether. Catra tried moving apart the arms but She-Ra hardly even flinched. Catra huffed in anger as this must've been some sort of defense mechanism against the virus. She-Ra might trust her but clearly whatever this crystal is doesnt trust anything to not hurt it.

She would try again tomorrow, perhaps it wouldn't be so bad sleeping off tonight. She still had plenty of time. It's not like Adora would attack the rebels soon. Soon she would have her true Adora back. She would be able to apologize and have no worries with Hordak and Shadow Weaver gone. Perhaps they could be something more, Catra smiled dreamily as she lay on her bed. For once her dreams were full of a laughing Adora. Nothing ever made her smile more.

War is upon us

Chapter Summary

A bit short. Just a transition chapter . As of now the story will finish in 20 chapters as planned. I guarantee nothing however, things can still change.

Chapter Notes

Chapter will most likely be posted tomorrow. Itll easily be the longest in the story and I had a long day. I refuse to rush it and not give an ending that fits the story. Have a goodnight y'all.

A day had passed since the night Catra spent with She-Ra. Unsurprisingly She-Ra left her alone the next day with her confession. Catra really didnt know how to feel about this thing that Adora had become. Clearly it had Adora's emotions but she really did not know if this was some master manipulation or if it was actual emotion. She-Ra had been all over the place these last days. I mean for crying out loud she killed an entire army over a simple misfire by the Horde patrol.

Catra shook her thoughts away as she thought of a way to get the blasted sword away from her. She had tried finding some sort of opportunity to get the crystal on the sword but She-Ra never left without it. Catra hardly even saw She-Ra in the first place as she told her she was planning something with her captains. Catra wasnt surprised with their obedience, She-Ra was very intimidating and she did just kill their best captain.

The only time she did see her or felt her was when she was taking a nap and woke up to She-Ra softly running her fingers through her fur. She couldnt help but let out a content purr but kept her eyes shut as She-Ra just sat there with her .

Catra quickly went back to sleep and woke up to an empty bed to her disappointment.

Today was a different day however, she couldn't wait for this anymore. As much as She-Ra had been kind she couldn't forget that this wasn't her Adora. Even if Adora went back to hating her it would still be worth it. Catra knew Adora would never do the atrocities She-Ra had done. If she had to sacrifice her happiness than so be it.

As Catra was thinking of this She-Ra entered the lab with a smile on her face. Catra noticed this as she put one herself.

"Uhh, what's got you so happy, princess?"

She-Ra smiled as she walked up to Catra. "Our plans are coming together, Catra. We are so close to having everything we wanted."

Catra's heart thumped against her chest as she didn't really like where this was going but put on a charming facade. "You know, we can't really call it our plans if you don't tell me what's going on? Isn't that so?"

She-Ra furrowed her eyebrows as she thought of it "Well, I guess you can know, you have been pretty good as of late."

Catra put on a fake smile as she waited for She-Ra to speak.

"We are marching on Bright Moon as of tomorrow. I summoned our armies to our capitol. We will crush the rebellion into nothing but dust."

Catra was stunned as she realized she was running out of time very fast. "Bu-but, how is that even possible? The whispering woods would prevent any Horde army to reach Bright Moon. Not to mention the princess alliance standing in your way."

She-Ra simply laughed as she put her hand on Catra's shoulder. "Oh, don't worry my darling, with my sword and my connection to Etheria. The whispering woods will bend to my will. As for the princess alliance, well they'll be taken care of by yours truly."

Catra paled as she felt the crystal in her pocket. She kept thinking of what she could do and with conviction she thought of something. "I want to go with you Adora."

She-Ra raised her eyebrow in surprise. "You were so reluctant just two days ago Catra. Why the change of heart now?" She-Ra narrowed her eyes as Catra flattened her ears.

"Uhh, well you know it means more time with you and well I can make sure you don't kill too many people Adora. I really don't like that you do that." She-Ra huffed in anger but was quickly brought back to reality with Catra's tail curling around her leg.

"Please Adora, for me will you spare as many as you can." Catra begged with her eyes and to her relief she saw She-Ra's face slip as she smiled bitterly. "I'll do anything for you darling, I will try my best."

She-Ra bent down and to Catra's surprise put their heads together. "I'll send some soldiers to make you a battle suit darling. We can't have that pretty face of yours get damaged now could we."

She-Ra pressed a kiss to Catra's head as she made her way to leave. Before she did however she stopped "We almost have it Catra. With this, no one can stand in our way. I hope you are prepared, because war is upon us."

Catra saw her shut the doors as she collapsed on her bed. She needed to think of a new plan. She could only hope She-Ra can still be talked down to. If she goes into her beserk state there is no telling how many will fall to her.

Catra hardly got any sleep as she kept tossing and turning in her bed. Her nightmares kept her up as she imagined Bright Moon in flames, while She-Ra watched and even grinned as she saw the countless bodies that lay on the ground. She found it ironic as she had imagined the same thing just a couple of months ago, so hellbent on destroying Bright Moon just to spite Adora.

As she was thinking this She-Ra walked into her bed chambers startling her. She put on a charming facade but she felt her heart speed up as she saw what she looked like.

Looking menacing in every way, She-Ra wore an all black uniform as a red cape flowed behind her she looked even taller with the combat boots she decided to wear. In the back of the uniform it showed the Horde logo in all its glory. She-Ra noticed her staring as she smirked cockily.

"Like what you see, Catra?" She-Ra raised her eyebrow as she saw Catra's expression.

Catra played her fear off as she scoffed with a smirk on her lips. "You wish, princess."

She-Ra smiled but grew a serious look as she gazed out the window to view her army. "We march at noon Catra. I suggest you get ready as soon as you can." Before Catra could respond she was met by the door shutting as She-Ra walked out. Catra quickly changed into her new uniform as she kept thinking of ways to get She-Ra alone so she could put that blasted crystal on her sword. As she finished putting her arm sleeves, she heard an announcement from what she recognized as Force Captain Octavia.

"All soldiers report to your captains at the front of the capitol. I repeat to all soldiers this is not a drill, we are marching against Bright Moon at noon. Be ready."

Catra for the first time left her chambers as she watched soldiers rush past her. They all looked armed to the teeth as they marched in heavy armor and equipped with heavy rifles.

Catra finally made her way outside and froze in horror at what she saw.

She saw a wave of black as she could probably see an army of about five-hundred strong, perhaps even more. Rows of tanks stood to the side as engineers worked on them as the crews loaded ammunition. Next to those were a barrage of skifs as each carried a crew of about three as they mounted their turrets on the front of them.

While Catra watched, a hand gripped her shoulder as she jumped in surprise but recognized She-Ra's hand.

She-Ra gazed at her army in glee as she spoke with excitement "Look at it, Catra. Isn't it amazing! Look at what we accomplished in only a short couple of days. I have assembled a force so great that no princess alliance could stand a chance once we reach Bright Moon."

Catra could only stutter as she put on a forced smile "Y e-yeah, this is so great Ad-Adora."

She-Ra put her finger under Catra's chin forcing her to look in her eyes. "Nothing of this is even slightly possible without you by my side Catra. Soon we can reap our rewards and finish this rebellion." She-

Ra tried leaning in for a kiss but Catra simply ducked her head as she grabbed her arms awkwardly. She-Ra clenched her fist but contained her emotion as she drew her sword from its sheath, turning towards her army.

"BEGIN OUR MARCH! WE WILL END THIS REBELLION TODAY!"

The Horde soldiers cheered as the force began to mobilize. The tanks and skifs started their engines as they trailed behind the soldiers.

She-Ra grabbed Catra without saying anything and launched herself off the ground as she landed in front of her army. Catra was shaking from the sudden move but composed herself as She-Ra sat her down Catra finally spoke up as She-Ra stood in front of the whispering woods. "Uhh, Adora, can we talk about something alone? I think this thing can help yo-" She-Ra shushed her as she gazed at the whispering woods. She-Ra tried taking a step in but was met by a movement of trees blocking her path to her surprise. She-Ra simply smirked however as she still held her sword.

"Hmm, smarter than you look. Oh well, time for plan B." Catra got confused as she didnt know what She-Ra was talking about but quickly started stepping back as She-Ra started glowing.

She aimed her sword and before anyone could react a beam of pure energy launched straight towards the whispering woods. The forest stood no chance as any trees,plant, or animal disintegrated instantly as the beam launched straight through the forest. After a couple of seconds She-Ra deactivated her sword as she gazed at her work. Now stood a path of ash as she walked through with ease.

She looked back to her army as they watched in shock of the display of power. She rolled her eyes as she pointed her sword down the path.

“Come on! Bright Moon isn’t going to take itself! Get a move on!”

The soldiers quickly obeyed as they marched through the now destroyed forest as they kept up their pace. The skifs were able to go by three down the path with the tanks now trailing at the back single file as they trampled anything in their path.

She-Ra walked with haste as she used her sword to cut down any trees that remained. Catra walked beside her as she felt the crystal in her pocket. She had to act fast before they reached Bright Moon. Finally taking a chance she grabbed She-Ra’s hand as they kept walking. She-Ra smiled as she looked down at Catra as she felt her hand in hers.

“What’s got you in a good mood, Catra?”

Catra had a serious face as she stopped She-Ra in her tracks. “Please Adora, if you trust me you will hand me the sword.”

She-Ra furrowed her eyebrows as she felt the handle in her grasp “Why do you want it so bad Catra? What aren’t you telling me?”

Catra stammered out as She-Ra gripped her sword tighter. “Please Adora. I only want to help you.”

She-Ra was about to respond until she was interrupted by Force Captain Lizario “Lord She-Ra, Lord Catra, We have spotted the castle and are getting into position for our attack. We await your orders.”

She-Ra sheathed her sword as she walked away from Catra. “We will continue this discussion later Catra.” Catra paled as she saw Bright Moon in front of her. In desperation she tried lunging for the sword but was quickly thrown of f as She-Ra took it out and pointed it at her.

She-Ra was filled with anger as tears filled her eyes. “I knew it was too good to be true that you wanted to share this moment with me.

You still think Iʼm some monster needing to be saved.”

Catra gulped but was surprised when She-Ra put down her sword. She-Ra motioned for two guards as they came to her. "Take her back to the capitol. Make sure she gets there safely. I will handle the raid by myself.”She-Ra walked past Catra without another thought as the guards grabbed her and started to drag her away from Bright Moon.

"NADORA!Please dont do this. I can still help you.”She-Ra ignored her cries as she went to the frontline. She cleared her mind and gave Lizario free reign to move forward. The troops marched from the trees as they set up their positions.

As this was happening the princess alliance all stood at the base of the castle. They each already held their weapons as they saw She-Ra approach them. She laughed as she saw their pitiful army and poor defense.

She-Ra spoke loudly to get their attention. “As promised to my dear Catra, I will give you one chance to surrender and no harm will come to you or your castle.”She-Ra only smirked as she saw the princess alliance not back down while the castle guards set up in defensive positions.

She-Ra shrugged as she unsheathed her sword again. "Oh well, I tried. LIZARIO GIVE THE ORDER!"

Lizario was seated on a tank as he blew the raid horn. The Horde forces charged forward as fire erupted from both sides. She-Ra charged herself up and rushed the princesses straight on. They all barely avoided the strike as they surrounded her. She-Ra was finally getting a challenge, she laughed as she blocked their blows, this was going to be fun.

"Back in the forest

Catra had stopped resisting as the two Horde soldiers marched her back to the Horde Capital. Catra picked her nails casually as she spoke up for the first time.

"You know it's a real shame that you two are missing the action. We can all still go back, hey I bet She-Ra wont even remember who exactly she told. What do you say?" Catra had a sly smile on but was quickly met with the two soldiers pushing her forward.

"No try , Catra I am not getting my head chopped off due to you wanting to be with your girlfriend." Catra huf fed in anger as she cracked her knuckles. "Alright, Im done with this." Before the soldiers could react Catra quickly tackled them both grabbing one of their tasers as she disabled them both with a quick charge to the neck.

Catra ran as soon as she was free back towards the fight. She was the only thing that could stop She-Ra now.

"Bright Moon

The battling was vicious, while the Horde soldiers battled against the rebellion troops She-Ra had all of the princess's attention as she swiped and punched anyone who got close to her.

Glimmer and Bow tried speaking to her but was quickly met with rage filled yells as She-Ra hardly cared to stop.

Entrapta and Scorpia watched from the balcony as they saw the fight down below. Scorpia clicked her claws together as she furrowed her eyebrows. "The princess' s need my help Entrapta. You stay here. Got it?" Scorpia leaped down and joined the fight before Entrapta could even protest. Entrapta sighed but was then met with an alarm from her tracking pad. Entrapta looked down and could only freeze as she saw what she was looking at.

"What no. How is this even possible? She should've been done with her stages. Oh, I need to warn the others!" Entrapta used her hair to propel herself down and started running towards the fight.

Catra finally broke through the trees as she saw She-Ra fighting with Bow and Glimmer. The other princess' s fought hard but both Frosta and Spinarella were already out of the fight while the others were quickly losing their battles. Catra ran over as Bow tried talking to She-Ra.

"Adora, Please! We only want to help you. We're your friends!" She-Ra laughed as she caught another arrow snapping it in two. "Oh, please you hardly ever cared about Adora. I was just a tool to you. You wanted She-Ra and now you're going to get her!" She hit him with a critical blow as she punched him hard sending him into Glimmer as they both toppled to the ground.

Catra screamed as she saw this happening. "NO! ADORA!" She-Ra looked over and fear filled her eyes as she saw Catra run towards her. "What the fuck are you doi-" She-Ra started but was met with pain as she felt an arrow pierce her shoulder. She-Ra's eyes blazed as she ripped it out with one pull and looked over to where Bow stood. He looked just as shocked at what he just did. She-Ra was about to walk over to him but was stop by Catra.

"Please Adora! Stop this! I can still help you!" She-Ra was now starting to have a hard time focusing as she started hearing things all around her.

"Just give me the sword Adora! I can end this right here!" She-Ra was now stumbling as she stood on one knee as her sword started glowing.

Catra was getting worried as she saw her stumble. "Adora, are you hurt? What' s wrong?" Before she could say anything she was met by a frenzied Entrapta who didnt even wait to pull Catra away from She-Ra.

"We need to evacuate Bright Moon right now, Catra! She-Ra is entering her final stage with the virus and there's no telling what she is gonna do!"

Catra pulled her arm back as she held the crystal in her palm. "NO, I can still save her!" She started running but was thrown back as a beam of light lit up from the sky.

She-Ra stood above everyone as she floated up. Her hair flowed behind her but instead of being gold it was now pitch black. She opened her eyes revealing all red as no pupils could be seen, her cracks now pulsated like a heart as they went through her body.. The princesses watched in horror as they saw what She-Ra had become.

She-Ra tilted her head to the side as she seemed to be analyzing the world around her. As she was doing this she heard a row of tanks approach her. Dark memories filled her as she remembered tanks firing upon Bright Moon. Her head ripped back and forth between reality and memories that she could no longer tell which was which. She grabbed her head in pain but it went quiet as she abruptly stopped and turned her gaze towards the tanks. Lizario popped out as he yelled out to She-Ra.

"Lord, She-Ra!" He didn't even have the chance to blink as a beam of pure energy disintegrated his tank where it stood. The soldiers all stopped their attacks as they saw their force captain be killed.

She-Ra kept twitching slightly but a haunting laugh started to echo throughout Bright Moon. Both rebels and Horde soldiers started stepping back and started running as She-Ra sent beams on both sides. She-Ra saw no difference anymore between enemy or foe. All she saw now was targets to be destroyed.

Catra could only watch as she saw She-Ra glide through the air as she chased down troops on both sides of the battle. Octavia recalled a full retreat and ordered a swarm of skifs to distract She-Ra while the majority of their forces retreated. They would shoot from a distance as She-Ra would try to hit them with their beams. Any tanks remaining in the battle were used as blockades as no one was stupid enough to try to anger the Goddess that stood against them.

Catra hid behind a tank as Entrapta laid beside her with Scorpia. Scorpia briefly smiled but it fell quickly due to an explosion nearby. "Hey Catra, I know this is a bad time but I have really missed you. Glad to have you back." Catra smiled as well but quickly looked back down to Entrapta as she shook with the tracking pad in her hand.

"What did you mean when you said that She-Ra was entering her final stage?" Entrapta was still shaking but managed to compose herself as she spoke. "You didn't notice when she was with you? From my calculations I successfully assembled a theory that she would slowly progress with the virus. In this stage it is completing the fusion between herself and whatever this virus has made her."

Catra shielded herself from dust as another explosion rang out behind them. "Will that stupid crystal you gave still work?"

Entrapta hesitated to Catra's frustration and dread "Will it or not?"

Entrapta eventually stammered out after a silent minute of thinking. "It should but if my results were unpredictable before they are even more so now! That crystal you have was supposed to destroy the virus entirely. Since She-Ra has melded so much with the virus there is a good chance it can destroy both."

Catra gasped as she held the crystal in her hands. Scorpia used her claw to bring her back to reality as she gripped her hand. "We cant hesitate Catra! We have to destroy this virus before She-Ra destroys the entire world!"

Catra didn't even hear her as she thought of the times she had spent with Adora. The first time they met. The way they ran through the halls as kids. The way they trained as teenagers as they prepared for the lives ahead of them. All the times of how Adora comforted her as she cried herself to sleep because of what life gave her. She had tears in her eyes as she slumped back to the ground.

"I-I cant do this." Scorpia frowned but held Catra's hand softly as she spoke to her. "Please Catra, I know you didn't want this but think of what Adora would want. Right now her memory is being tarnished by this thing that was created. That thing is no longer Adora. Do what Adora would want you to."

Catra sobbed but she gripped the crystal tighter. She wiped her tears quickly as she started running over looking for a certain princess and Bow boy. Scorpia and Entrapta ran with her as they dodged the beams of energy that She-Ra was launching throughout the battlefield. She finally found them huddled against the Castle walls as Glimmer held a deep wound on Bow's abdomen.

Glimmer as soon as she saw Catra didn't even hesitate to teleport to her and sock her in the face before quickly teleporting back to hold Bow's wound. "IS THIS WHAT YOU WANTED! YOU HAVE SOME NERVE COMING HERE!" Catra rubbed her cheek but ignored it as she spoke. "Bow, can you still shoot?" Glimmer was about to yell at her again but was met with a determined Bow as he notched an arrow. "If I can help you take out that monster I can shoot anything."

Catra nodded as she handed him the crystal. "I still think some part of Adora might still be in that thing's mind. I can be a good distraction along with Scorpia."

Bow nodded. "I have to find the right position but with Glimmer I can get on top of one of the towers in no time. Lead her near there and I can shoot her."

Catra shook her head as he gave him the crystal. "I need you to shoot this crystal straight at her rune stone. That's where the original virus has bonded with her sword. If you can hit that then it should be over."Bow nodded and got up staggering as he was held up by Glimmer. Without another notice they teleported to the top of the tower. Bow tied the arrow together and played the waiting game.

Catra got up and looked towards Scorpia. "I'm sorry you got into this Scorpia. I wish things would have never gotten this far."Scorpia simply smiled and lazily saluted. "All in a day's work Catra. Now let's do this."Catra smiled bitterly as she started running with Scorpia towards the sound of destruction.

Catra whispered under her breath "This is for you Adora."

"Main battlefield

She-Ra had just finished off the remaining skifs but could only stare at the ash filled battlefield as she saw nothing else move. Right as she was about to look for more she heard a voice that her mind recognized. She looked to the side and was met with Catra. Yes, she recognized that name. Memories flooded through her all at once and they were mostly full of pain.

Catra kept yelling as she was on a rock on all her limbs. "Come on! I know you heard me! Come on down Adora!" She-Ra tilted her head to the side and smiled menacingly.

Catra was hardly expecting anything else but she flinched harshly as the thing spoke in a loud distorted voice. "Heyyyyyyy , Catraaaaa."

Catra barely dodged the beam of energy as Scorpia tried calling her attention as well.

She was just a few feet away from Catra but didn't even attract the things attention no matter how hard she tried. "COME ON I'M OVER HERE TOO!" Catra started running to the trees to get more cover and knew that Scorpia helping her was a lost cause. "SCORPIA I'LL BE FINE! JUST GO!"

That was a big mistake however as She-Ra saw where she screamed and didn't even hesitate to send a beam towards where Scorpia stood. Scorpia couldn't even react as she was launched in the air from the blast and landed a couple dozen feet from where she stood.

Catra could only scream as tears went down her face. "NO!" She tried going towards her but was met by a blast right in front of her. She-Ra floated just above her , smiling cruelly as she tilted her head to the side. "Goinggggg, Somewhereee?" Catra could only start running towards the trees. All she could do was avenge Scorpia. Her death would not be in vain.

Catra eyed the tower through the trees as she kept leaping from branch to branch. While She-Ra still sent beams of destruction Catra was much more agile and just a bit quicker as she led her on.

She-Ra's laugh echoed on as she was hardly trying to hit Catra.

She spoke up as she floated above the trees. "Comeeee outtt andddd playyyy kittyyyy" Catra finally stopped as she now stood right below the tower. She waited for an arrow to whiz past her but noticed that She-Ra was moving around randomly as she started to circle Catra. Catra got frustrated as she saw her move around her.

"Come on, too scared to come down and face me?" She-Ra simply tilted her head but finally spoke. "All these memoriessss are sooo interestinggggg." She-Ra was moving slower but Catra knew that Bow needed her still in order to not miss. Catra kept up her questions as she wanted this to be over with "Oh yeah why' s that princess."

She-Ra smiled "No matterrrr how much you hurtttt usssss, we alwaysss go backkkk to youuuuu."Catra could only step back as She-Ra got closer to her. "Guess Im that irresistible eh?"Catra didnt even see She-Ra move but now she felt her throat tighten as She-Ra lifted her off the ground. "I dontttt have those sameeeee weaknessesssss"She-Ra lifted her sword as it gleamed in the sunlight prepared to strike Catra down. It was only for a second but She-Ra finally stood enough as Bow released his shot.

It seemed to flow through the air forever but it finally hit its mark as it was a direct hit. She-Ra automatically went down in agony as the crystals battled each other as electricity bounced off the sword. Catra was left on the ground as she coughed, finally being able to breath and watching as she saw She-Ra struggle. She was about to turn away to not witness Adora's demise but she heard a voice she hadnt heard in so long.

"Cat-Catra"?Catra opened her eyes fast but wasnt met with her Adora. Sparks still flew between the two crystals but instead of She-Ra's red eyes stood a normal blue as they seemed to sparkle with life.

Catra started running but saw something off with Adora. Cracks still flowed in her and she was clearly in pain. "Ad-Adora? You with me?" Adora smiled but quickly dropped it as she reached out to Catra. "Pl-Please, it hurts so much. Take this pain away from me Catra. For me"?Adora started crawling towards her as the sword started getting brighter.

Catra shook her head as she took steps back. "No, NO! You're just another cruel trick! I will not let Adora be your prisoner anymore!" Adora dropped her facade as she screamed in anger. "YOU'LL LOSE HER AND I'M ARE YOU REALLY GOING TO LET ADORA DIE BY YOUR HAND!"

Catra sobbed but held her composure "She would at least rest from the life that was forced on her."

Adora somehow got more enraged as the sword was getting blinding at this point. "YOU WILL NEVER GET OVER THE GUILT YOU WILL DIE KNOWING THAT ALL OF THIS WAS YOUR. FAULT"

Catra only closed her eyes as tears kept going down her face. "I know, and I wont ever forget."

Adora made one last grasp but it was too late as the sword exploded in a beam of light. It was a couple of minutes later that Catra woke up in a crater and was woken up by Entrapta, Bow, and Glimmer. She looked around frantically as she looked for Adora. Bow pointed over towards her left side sadly and she quickly rushed over without a second thought.

Catra found her in a crater similar to her own but she was alone this time. Adora was finally back to normal but her clothes were torn and ash covered her as she laid peacefully on the ground. Catra quickly cradled her head against Adora as she sobbed against her chest. She didnt even bother to keep her composure as she wailed towards the sky. She started begging "PLEASE!Please, Im so sorry! I take everything back!You were my life Adora!I cant bear to live without you!"Catra felt for a heartbeat but couldnt hear it. She budded their heads together as she grew quieter now . "Please, Adora.I.. I love you."

Catra pressed her lips towards Adora in a vain effort. She felt nothing as she cradled Adora. She grabbed her hand and placed a soft kiss to her knuckles and was just about to leave until she felt a grip on her hand.

Catra felt her heart skip as she looked back down. Adora's eyes fluttered open just a bit as she held on a bit tighter . Catra could hardly hear her but she couldnt keep her smile off her face as she heard her. "Hey , Cat-Catra."

Catra had never hugged her so hard as she cried into Adora's shoulder. She was sure she was going to lose her. Bow, Glimmer, and Entrpapta all joined and yelled out as they joined in the hug. Catra could figure out everything later. The Horde, her life, her mistakes, for now she had Adora and that was simply enough.

Some long awaited talks.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Adora was so confused when she woke up. Why did she feel like she was stepped on by a planet? Her brain felt so scrambled and woke up to Catra holding her. She smiled to herself as she thought this was a dream. She didn't get many good ones ever since she joined the rebellion and this one felt so real with Catra' s hand in hers. Her voice felt very rough as she tried to talk. "Hey , Cat-Catra."

Catra didn't even hesitate to hug her and Adora was now even more confused. Why was Catra in her dream crying? Is she going to leave again? Adora with what strength she had hugged her back not wanting to break off the embrace she so desperately missed over the months. She felt other bodies hug her and now was really starting to question what was happening. She opened her eyes to see Glimmer, Bow, and Entrapta? What was she doing here?

Adora's eyes now focused more as the group separated and looked into Catra's beautiful eyes. Catra's voice was music to her ears as she spoke. "I love you so much, Adora."

If Adora wasn't awake she definitely was now as her eyes widened like saucers. "What did you just say?" Catra paled as she looked towards Bow and Glimmer for help. Glimmer lent her a hand as she grabbed Adora. "Ok, come on Adora you must be feeling really bad right now so let's take you back to the medical ward."

Adora fought weakly and looked towards Catra "Wait! What the fu-" Glimmer teleported them away to Catra's relief. Adora was safe now and that's all that mattered.

She sat there with Bow and Entrapta as they started to really look around the battlefield. Everything was covered in ash, with huge craters all around the battlefield. Tanks lay across the battlefield as well as weapons from the mass retreat of both the Horde and Rebellion alike.

Entrapta walked over to Catra and put a hand on her shoulder as she softly asked. "Umm, Catra, where's Scorpia?" Catra could only shed a tear as she felt the full force of Scorpia's death. Catra could only whisper back. "I-I'm sorry , Entrapta." Entrapta embraced her in a hug as they both shed tears but were then met with a distant voice. Catra's ears turned towards the sound as her heart picked up again.

"Hello!? Anyone there? Catra? Entrapta? Come on, even Glimmer at this point!" Catra leaped from the crater as she looked around and was met with a battered Scorpia limping towards her.

Catra screamed out in joy as she ran towards her . "SCORPIA!" Scorpia whipped her head around and was met by a crying Catra as she buried herself in Scorpia's arms. Entrapta soon joined in as they all reunited again.

Scorpia could only hug right back but still be hesitant by the sudden display of emotion from Catra. "Catra? Are you alright? Did you guys win?" Catra could only hug tighter as she sobbed to her . "Scorpia, I thought She-Ra had killed you when you took that shot! I didnt know you were even alive!" Scorpia frowned as she quickly tried reassuring Catra.

"Oh, no Catra I'm right here! Look see I'm just fine! Itll take a bit more than some energy beam to take me out." Catra could only smile as she still grabbed Scorpia's claws to be sure she wasnt seeing things.

After a minute she finally grew concerned with Scorpia's appearance. "Come on Scorpia, let's get you into the Rebellion' s medical ward. Im sure you could use some pain relief right about now."

Scorpia tried playing off her injuries but quickly grimaced as she held on to Entrapta and Catra. "Alright, fine. It has been a long day after all. I think we can all use a break."

They walked back to the crater and noticed that Rebellion troops were starting the relief effort as they looked for any survivors hidden under rubble or laid around the battlefield. Catra could only look on as she saw the destruction she caused. She couldnt tear her eyes off it until Scorpia brought her back to reality.

Scorpia spoke in a serious tone. "Dont blame yourself for this Catra. You didnt know what exactly that crystal would do to her . You wouldnt have ever done this knowing what you know now ."Catra could only nod in response but she thought otherwise as she passed them.

She finally met up with Bow and Glimmer as they coordinated with the other princesses for the relief efforts. Glimmer for once smiled at Catra as she walked over to her. "Before you ask, Adora is fine but really confused. Im ninety percent sure she still thinks this is a dream especially since you dropped that I love you'bombshell on her."

Catra grimaced and blushed at the same time as Scorpia smiled mischievously at her. Scorpia whispered in Catra's ear "Y ou are definitely telling me what happened after all this." Catra could only whisper harshly back. "Ut. A. Chance."she turned back to Glimmer .

"Can you take me to her , Glimmer? I can do the explaining. I caused this whole thing and Adora needs to know the truth."Glimmer nodded as she checked on Bow one last time as he stood upright with bandages across his abdomen. "Ill be fine, Glimmer . You can just teleport right back here anyway ."Glimmer nodded and hugged Catra before teleporting to the medicinal ward.

They arrived in sparkles as they appeared outside her door . Glimmer whispered to her before she grabbed the doorknob. "Her injuries were non-fatal but she is very tired. She has never been in the She-Ra state for that long and she is feeling the full effects of both the medicine and her exhaustion. Dont push her ."

Catra could only nod seriously as she went to open the door but was stopped by Glimmer's hand. She turned back towards her and was met by a fierce glare. "I know the connection you two had. Please do not run away no matter how hard things may be. Adora is gonna react like anyone would once she finds out. Please stick with her through it. I dont think she can bear to lose you again."

Catra spoke back softly. "I'm not ever leaving her again. I already made that mistake once."Glimmer smiled and teleported back towards Bow as Catra entered the room.

Inside it was quiet as Catra looked over to find Adora lying peacefully in her bed. They had stripped her of her clothes and put on a standard medical gown. Catra walked over and brought a chair over as she grabbed Adora's hand doing circular motions with her thumb as she waited. Adora peaked her eyes open as she saw Catra hold her hand. Catra was about to stop as she saw Adora look at her but what Adora said made her halt that train of thought. "Please, stay"… Catra tightened her grip on Adora's hand and whispered back to her. "Shhh, it' s ok princess. Ill stay as long as you need. For now rest, we can talk later."

Adora's eyes fluttered close as Catra heard her speak softly. "This is the best one Ive had."Catra didnt know what she was talking about but she could hardly care less. She simply held her hand and listened to Adora's heartbeat. She sat there for hours until finally she fell asleep along with her. Her tail instinctively curled around Adora's forearm as their minds settled down.

the next day

Catra was partially awake but still had her eyes closed. She didnt even notice that she was purring due to Adora rubbing her fingers through her fur. Adora couldnt believe this was happening. She had thought everything yesterday was a dream. To waking up on the ground, being hugged by Catra, and even when Catra said I love you to her. She still didnt even feel that was real and could only think she made that part up.

As she thought this, she was met by a groggy Catra as her eyes opened slowly. She stretched like she usually did before locking eyes with Adora. She spoke softly as she grabbed Adora's hand again. "He-hey , Adora. How are you feeling?" Adora felt like she was back at the Horde with how soft and casual Catra talked to her.

"I'm feeling a lot better Catra. Umm, I really dont know what happened. All I remember was going to that snow base and blacking out. Everything is all fuzz and I dont even know how this is possible. You were just fighting us and now you're here holding my hand like nothing ever happened!" Adora had started getting louder but caught herself as she saw Catra's ears flatten. She spoke quieter as she kept her eye contact "I'm sorry . I just dont know what to think anymore."

Catra smiled bitterly "It' s ok Adora. If you're ready I can tell you what happened. I just want to warn you and say that the stuf f Im going to talk about is first not your fault, and second is that it's not going to be pretty in the slightest." Adora could only nod as she sat herself up on the bed. Catra let go of her hand expecting the worst to what she was gonna say.

As Catra explained the story Adora could only gag at what she did. Multiple times Catra had to stop before Adora fully broke down or vomited in her trash can. Adora had tears in her eyes as she asked Catra disheartenedly "How many died Catra!? Please, I have to know!" Catra could only look down as her eyes also filled with tears.

"I-I dont even know Adora. But this wasnt you. It was that virus that killed those people. If anything you can blame me for those lives lost.

I gave you that stupid crystal to try to gain the upperhand and look what it did to everyone. Im so sorry Adora!Please dont blame yourself!"

Catra now sobbed herself but was met by a fierce looking Adora. "Did you know that this would happen?Did you know what I was going to turn into when you gave me that crystal?"

Catra shook her head frantically "NO!Of course not!Entrapta told me it would make you a little mad and youd be compromised!I didnt expect for this monster to come out of you!"

Adora then put her hand on Catras cheek as she smiled softly. "Then you are not to blame either Catra."Catra could hardly believe she was hearing as she bared her teeth. "NO!You dont just get to say that I didnt cause this!I was the one who gave you that crystal!I was the one who led those soldiers to their deaths!I WAS THE ONE WHO LEFT YOU BACK THERE MORE!"Adora's eyes widened as Catra sobbed uncontrollably. "If I had only gone with you back in that village instead of being too prideful none of this would have ever happened. We couldve been together so long ago but I chose to be spiteful instead of leaving the Horde when I could."

Adora grabbed Catra's hand and pulled her in for a hug with surprising strength. Adora said reasurringly "Please Catra, I shouldve went back for you as soon as I could. I was so caught up in my own dream that I left my original one behind. For that, I am so sorry Catra."Catra could only sob on Adora's shoulder as they both cried together. They cried for what couldve been and the destruction they both caused due to their decisions.

There is still a lot of healing to be done. Nothing is going to be easy from here on out. It could take years or even an entire lifetime but with each other they will get through this. They wont leave eachother again. They both promised that.

Chapter Summary

The sun rises over a new Etheria

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Things moved quite fast after that fateful battle. Without Lord Hordak or Shadow Weaver there was hardly anyone of the Horde left to keep up the mantle and to be honest no one wanted to keep this war going on either side. There was so much death for so little reason so the remaining of the force captains with some convincing of both Catra and Scorpia collectively agreed to end the war.

Villages were freed of Horde Control across Etheria and in their negotiations promised that no Horde captain or soldier would be punished due to the majority of it being Lord Hordak's doing. The Horde would keep their original territory as Scorpia would now rule over her kingdom. She officially disbanded the Horde name and now was repurposed into the Scorpian's kingdom. She would lead her people into a new era with the help of the princess alliance.

The entirety of Etheria celebrated as families reunited in tears as the war was officially over. Soldiers came home on both sides to their families. The cadet program was now made into a school with multiple opportunities were given to the young ones and it was only the beginning. The princesses hosted a great party to celebrate the ending of the war and all of Etheria was invited across the multitude of Castles.

Catra and Adora sat on the balcony as they looked down at all the party goers at Bright Moon. Bow and Glimmer danced as they laughed together. Without anything else to focus on there was time to develop their bond and it was only the beginning as they looked into one another's eyes with something far more than what they thought possible.

Catra could only softly smile as she sat next to Adora.

Catra softly spoke as her tail wrapped around her knees. "You know I never apologized for getting rid of She-Ra."

Adora simply sighed as she thought of her other half. The crystal had completely corrupted her runestone and in the process of the two crystals fighting her sword was demolished. Not a trace of it could be found after the battle but Adora could hardly care.

Adora simply shrugged as she snuggled close to Catra. "I never wanted to be She-Ra Catra. She was simply my best chance of doing the right thing. Even if I never found the sword I would've fought for what I believed was right. I just wish I handled it differently."

Catra could only argue back "But it was such a big part of you. You were living the dream! I mean you were a literal Goddess at times."

Adora could only softly smile as she raised her hand to Catra's cheek. "I wouldn't ever take her back if it meant losing you. My only dream now is the one sitting right in front of me." Catra couldn't even make a sound as Adora pressed their lips together softly. Catra quickly accepted back the kiss with great passion as she leaned into Adora's touch.

After a minute they finally let go only to breathe. They looked at eachother blushing before Adora slyly said. "Don't think I forgot you said you loved me."

Catra laughed as she grabbed her hand and before pulling her in for another kiss simply said. "And don't you ever forget."

They kissed passionately against the night sky as fireworks exploded across the pitch black. They had their whole lives ahead of them and they were going to make the most of it.
