Leaning Into Love

by ResFlower

Summary

"You asked me to do this trend with you." Adora reminds her.

"I know. Okay, I'm ready." Catra leans against the wall, her chin tilted as if she's looking toward the floor off to the side.

Adora takes a deep breath and just admires her. Catra looks so effortlessly gorgeous, even now in a pair of sweatpants and a tank top. Adora lets herself pull on that, lets herself imagine a world where maybe she could try to pull a move like this on Catra.

She takes two confident steps forward until she is right in front of Catra. Adora purposefully presses her hand off to the side of Catra, pushing her weight onto her hand. She then uses her other hand to tilt Catra's chin so she's looking up at Adora.

Catra looks at her from beneath her lashes, and Adora forgets Catra's phone is recording. Adora leans closer still. "Is this what you wanted?" She breathes out.

Catra licks her lips her eyes flitting across Adora's face as she melts into the wall she's pressed against. "I..." Something flashes on her face but before Adora can discern it, she feels Catra's lips on hers.

OR

Catra asks Adora to be her fictional book boyfriend for a video. Things escalate.

"Adora!"

The blonde sighs at hearing her best friend call her name. She had just gotten comfy in her bed, settling in for some doom-scrolling on her phone, or perhaps to take a quick nap. She groans as she gets up, going to see what her roommate wants.

"Yeah, Catra? It better be good I was about to nap." She calls out, walking toward their living room.

Catra rolls her eyes, looking Adora up and down for a moment. "You're always trying to nap."

"And I have no regrets." She says with a shrug. It's at that moment when she notices that Catra's phone is propped up on a table, recording. Adora groans. "Is this one of those dance videos again? Catra, you know I'm no good at that."

Adora might make a show of it, but she secretly likes when Catra asks her to be in videos with her. She doesn't have a huge following and she doesn't really let any of her other friends be in her videos. Adora doesn't really know too much about how it works but she knows Catra has fun with it and Adora is happy to do it if it makes the brunette feel happy.

"Well, it's not. It's for another type of trend." She grabs Adora's hand and pulls her toward the living room door, stopping a few paces away. Catra looks up at her expectantly. "Okay, you know how in books, dudes do that thing where they lean on a door frame?"

Adora tilts her head. "They what?"

"Come on, Adora! Like they're trying to seduce the girl and they lean in using their forearms and stuff. Or sometimes she's against a wall and he comes up close?" Catra looks around the living room. "Actually, yeah that's better." She moves them both two paces so now they're in front of their light green accent wall.

"You want me to pretend I'm hitting on you?" Her brow knits together in concern. This wouldn't really a big deal if it weren't for Adora's massive crush on Catra. She's always been attracted to the brunette, but since they moved in together to save on rent, it's like all Adora thinks about is her.

Catra makes an impatient noise. "Yes, but like in a fictional boyfriend way." She explains again.

"I'm a lesbian," Adora says slowly. She thinks she has a gist of what she's supposed to do but it still feels murky.

"Yeah, and you're taller than me so you can absolutely pull this off. Please?" Catra brings out a dramatic pout that Adora thinks is mostly for the video but it makes her heart clench in her chest anyway.

"Alright. So, you lean against the wall then?"

Catra claps her hands together. "Yeah, I'll just stand here and you lean close and maybe tilt my chin or something." She explains as she walks to her place.

Adora stares at Catra for a few seconds, her legs feel like they're trapped in cement. "Okay, okay. I can do this." She mutters under her breath. Adora takes a step closer to Catra. Just as she's about to put her hand on the wall, Catra bursts out laughing.

"Catra, you can't laugh!" Adora whines, feeling her cheeks redden. A part of her gut drops. The thought that Catra's laughing at this attempted seduction, no matter how contrived, makes her feel vulnerable.

"I'm sorry, I'm sorry." Her voice is still giggling and it makes Adora's heart thump harder. "I'll stop laughing." She promises.

"You asked me to do this trend with you." Adora reminds her.

She lets out another giggle before biting her lip. "I know. Okay, I'm ready." Catra leans against the wall, her chin tilted as if she's looking toward the floor off to the side.

Adora takes a deep breath and just admires her. Catra looks so effortlessly gorgeous, even now in a pair of sweatpants and a tank top. Adora lets herself pull on that, lets herself imagine a world where maybe she could try to pull a move like this on Catra.

She takes two confident steps forward until she is right in front of Catra. Adora purposefully presses her hand off to the side of Catra, pushing her weight onto her hand. She then uses her other hand to tilt Catra's chin so she's looking up at Adora.

Catra looks at her from beneath her lashes, and Adora forgets Catra's phone is recording. Adora leans closer still. "Is this what you wanted?" She breathes out. She doesn't know why she's whispering but it feels right.

Catra licks her lips her eyes flitting across Adora's face as she settles into the wall she's pressed against. "I..." Something flashes on her face but before Adora can discern it, she feels Catra's lips on hers.

Adora lets her hand tighten on Catra's jaw and deepens the kiss. It's like something cracks inside of her, in that little box where she's stuffed every inappropriate thought she's had of her best friend.

Adora pulls Catra up, pressing her fully against the wall. She feels Catra wrap her legs around her and she leans down, one of her hands wrapping around the brunette's waist. She drops her head, kissing along Catra's jaw.

She smells so good. How can a real person smell like that all the time? Adora can pick out Catra's smell anywhere, haunted by it every time they've cuddled to watch a movie or Catra's fallen asleep on her shoulder. But now, Catra's breath is hitching and Adora can just kiss her, can feel her the way she's been dying to.

"Adora." It's a throaty moan and Adora's first instinct is to squeeze her tighter. To make it so she never leaves Adora's arms again. She pulls back and Catra looks ravaged—her lips are swollen, her top disheveled, and her eyes hazy.

And then Adora's realized what she's done. She feels panic clutching at her heart. Catra didn't sign up to be pressed up to a wall and touched by her. Adora slowly lets her go, mindful to make sure Catra is standing before she pulls back completely.

"I'm sorry." She blurts out. "I wasn't thinking." She takes another several steps back and it feels like miles of distance. She can't read Catra's expression and doesn't know how violated she might feel. "I'm so sorry I did that I—"

"Adora, I kissed you." She says plainly. "If anything I should apologize."

Adora furrows her brow, trying to remember. That can't be right. She must have ducked down and kissed Catra, right? She shakes her head. "But I lifted you up and I touched you. I escalated it." She bites her lip, trying not to cry. "I shouldn't have done something like that. It's not what you asked me for."

Catra asked Adora to lean up against a wall for this silly viral trend—of course, Adora couldn't keep her feeling in check long enough to be a good friend.

"And if I wanted it?" Catra says boldly, stepping away from the wall and toward Adora.

She blinks. "What?"

"If I wanted you to do that." She repeats. "If I wanted you to press me up against that wall again and kiss me—what would you say?"

"I'd ask you if I was dreaming." Adora snaps her mouth shut, pressing her lips together to try to keep the stupid on the inside.

"Adora?" Catra reaches, gently grabbing her hand. "Do you want to kiss me?"

She stares at her best friend, not knowing what the right answer is. Of course, she wants to kiss Catra, she's only been thinking about it since the day she first met the brunette in high school. But Adora's afraid of what this might mean—she can't lose Catra.

Still, Catra is asking her outright and she deserves her honesty, especially after they made out like that. Adora takes a fortifying breath but it doesn't seem to do anything for her. She presses forward anyway.

"I do. Want to kiss you." Her lips are as dry as her throat and she struggles to swallow.

Catra takes another step closer. Her eyes, one gleaming blue and the other like honeyed butterscotch, hold her gaze as if approaching a skittish animal. She presses herself to Adora, wrapping her arms around Adora's shoulders. It makes Adora crane her neck down without a thought until they're at eye level.

The silence is heavy, laying on Adora like she's trying to breathe through gelatin. She's laid herself out there and there's no telling if it's the right call, but she wants it to be so desperately.

"Then kiss me, Adora." Catra looks up at her expectantly.

She can feel her mouth pop open in surprise. Then she thinks back—Catra kissed Adora first, pressed the conversation, then asked Adora to kiss her.

"You're—you're making a move on me." She says slowly, letting her hands wrap loosely around Catra's waist.

She has the audacity to roll her eyes. "I'm glad you've noticed, princess."

Adora tilts Catra's chin up again before leaning down and pressing their foreheads together. "I want you so badly , Catra. But only if it's all of you." She pulls back slightly , trying to gauge if Catra understands. "When I kiss you again, for real, it means that this is all I want." She can't have a misunderstanding about this, some kiss fueled by the situation and not by their feelings.

Catra looks up at her with the most tender look she's ever given Adora. "I'm still waiting." She all but whispers, her nose bumping into Adora's.

Adora cups her cheek and leans down, pressing their lips firmly together. This kiss is nothing like the first. Where the other one was frantic and passionate, this one feels slow—like they have all of the time in the world to kiss each other . She lets her hands wander more, sliding her fingers over the small of Catra's back. Catra tugs her closer her nails lightly grazing Adora's shoulders as she tries to find purchase. It's everything Adora has ever wanted in a kiss, probably because Catra is all she's ever wanted in a girlfriend.

When they pull back, Adora just knows she has a stupid grin on her face. "Wow." She mumbles before pulling Catra in for a hug. It feels a little counter-intuitive but there's just so much emotion running through her body she doesn't know what else to do.

Catra holds her back just as tightly . "Don't ruin it." She mumbles into Adora's neck.

Adora drops a soft kiss on her head. "There's no ruining it," She promises.

Catra rolls her eyes but her smile feels just as big as Adora's her cheeks red. "Could've fooled me. I don't know how many more videos it would have taken for you to make a move." She teases.

"What? Is that why we've been filming one like every week?" She shrieks, eyes wide.

"Yeah! I did the one where you're supposed to kiss your best friend and you pulled me into a noogie!"

"How was I supposed to know? You just came at me, Catra. It was very aggressive." Adora defends. She'd honestly panicked when Catra's face had gotten so close so quickly. Adora had thought she'd been the one to lean in.

"Well, you didn't seem to mind this time."

Adora leans down slowly, kissing Catra again. She still can't believe she gets to do that now. "I don't mind at all," Adora murmurs against her lips. Catra deepens the kiss, pushing Adora toward the couch. "Catra?" Adora calls out breathlessly.

Catra doesn't bother to part her lips from Adora's neck, easily finding a tender spot that makes Adora's eyes snap shut.

"We should probably turn off the recording." She manages to suggest.

Catra springs back, eyes wide as she looks at the phone. "Shit." She quickly turns off the phone before turning back to Adora.

Their first kiss goes viral when Catra posts it, getting all kinds of support from Catra's followers who had been rooting for them and people who had never seen her account before. The rest of the recording is just for them.
