Hacked into Her Life

by Xenakis (IceRosesCrown)

Summary

It was November 30th and Adora opened her Twitter account one day to find she had been hacked. What did she do? The most logical thing, of course: try to befriend the hacker.
And stuck in the middle, there's Glimmer, watching Adora and her hacker chatting in her DMs.

Notes

Greatest of thanks to Jay for sharing this extremely funny Tweet, thanks to which this idea literally spawned into my mind. Feel free to check the thread, it's hilarious XD
And the amount of inspiration I took from twt users like Clo and her circle of friends (Roxie, Anna, Mimi, Rii, Iri, Alina, Anna) is pretty obvious if you follow them, so all due credits to them too.
Finally, for my own mental sanity, at the end they are dressed like in Princess prom.

Now go, hope you enjoy it!
(This is the first time I write catradora as main ship; such uncharted waters I'm exploring…
For the same reason you can suggest more tags cause I don't know what else to put there TT-TT)

Ps: feel free to use the "tweets" format if you'd like, and also to ask me how to make it ;)

I WAS HACKED WHAT THE FUCK

The morning was barely starting when Adora arrived at college and decided to open her Twitter. But something was off, and soon she realized she had been hacked. Her first thought was to tweet about it, which lead to her friends quickly commenting, wanting to know what had happened. Later, during their break between classes, Adora showed them she had been trying to talk with the hacker, yet got no replies.

Soon they had to return to class, but Adora couldn't focus at all. Why wasn't the hacker answering? Instead of paying attention to the class, she went to Glimmer's DMs and tried something else.

Glimmer✨

@aggro_fist_sparkles

Hello, hacker? What about DMs?

11:30 AM

Please, I just wanna talk!

Can u tell me your acc?

Or ur name?

11:32 AM

Adora, wtf!?

12:30 PM

Meanwhile, somewhere not-so-far from there, a girl panicked while trying not to punch her friend.

—No! I am not- I'm not going to reply! What's your problem, DT!?

—Oh, Dear, you wouldn't even ask her for the time of the day if I don't try and push it a little — they replied mischievously.

—Why would she want to talk to me!? And now you want me to pretend I was the hacker!? — she panicked.

—But now you know she wants to be friends! Go ahead, you'll thank me later!— they insisted, winking.

—No, no. Forget it! I'm out!— she yelled, as she picked up her backpack and walked away.

Double Trouble let out a long exhale, looked at the phone where Twitter was open, and checked the DMs.

—I have to do it all myself— they sighed dramatically.

Glimmer✨

8:21 PM

Double Trouble was shaking with laughter at the conversation. Catra was totally going to hate them. They took screenshots of the conversation, logged out, and went for a coffee.

—I wonder how long it will be until Catra finds out— they wondered, grinning amusedly. However, sooner than expected, their phone rang. —A call!? Oh, my. She must be furious— they laughed. —Hello, Dear— they picked up.

—Are you insane!?

—I'm doing great, thanks for asking— they mocked her, as they went to sit at a table with their coffee.

—Now I have two excited girls tagging me in ten different tweets! Wanting to message me!— she yelled.

—This is your chance! Go ahead! Talk to them! Don't be shy— they encouraged her with a playful tone.

—I'll make you pay for this!

@NotSheRa replying to @aggro_fist_sparkles and @FeralClaws

FINE!

Come on @FeralClaws Don't be shy 😊

The flood of screenshots arrived into Double Trouble's messages, but all they did was reply with the screenshots of the Twitter chat and sip their coffee.

Late at night, Catra was simply unable to fall asleep. She kept tossing and turning, cursing Double Trouble under her breath, even considered deactivating her Twitter. But, instead, she went and read the whole thread again.

—She's so silly— she muttered with a small smile. She closed her eyes, chewing her lip; she knew she'd regret it… But finally gave in. —Why not, right?

She followed both girls and turned off the phone for the night.

The next day, Adora and Glimmer arrived early so they could talk about the hacker before classes began.

—She followed back last night! Means she want to be friends, right?— Adora wondered excitedly.

—Why else!? Perhaps she just wasn't seeing Twitter earlier?— Glimmer suggested.

—Pff. Who doesn't check Twitter every hour?— Adora let out, rolling her eyes.

—Normal people don't! You're not supposed to be checking every minute either!

—But what if I miss something?

—It will still be there even days later!

—Wait, back to the hacker— Adora interrupted. —Why don't we do a group chat with her?

—Are you ready for her taking a full day to reply?— Glimmer asked with a questioning look.

—I- Uh, yeah! Of course. Why wouldn't I?— she asked back, nervously.

—Right… Okay, do the group chat— she finally accepted.

That afternoon, Double Trouble was buying Catra a coffee, once again, as they agreed to in order to keep their face intact. And yet again, they both sit at the café while Catra ranted about the group chat and the tweets.

—… And my notifications are always full! You should see them! She'll tweet about the most random things, at all times, and tags me! Or sends a bunch of messages in the group chat, one after the other, instead of writing it all together!— she raved.

—If you find her so annoying, why do you keep following her?— Double Trouble asked with a smirk.

—It's just… She's funny, okay? A bit silly, but that makes me laugh… it's not that bad— Catra admitted, looking away. —But seriously. Why does she always have to spam!? It's like she's hyperactive! And keeps asking to meet me but… I don't know…

—Tell me something, Dear. Is she fun?

—Yeah.

—And do you enjoy your convos with her?

—Despite the spam, yeah, I guess…

—Has she been friendly? Is there anything you didn't like about her posts?

—No, no, she's really nice— Catra assured them.

—Then why are you so scared of meeting her!?— they asked in confusion.

—I don’t know, DT. They still think I was the hacker, and what if I tell them the truth and they think I’m just a coward? What if she doesn’t like me?— she replied, suddenly feeling pessimistic.

—Oh, girl, come on! You can’t really think she’ll be that shallow!— they replied, trying to cheer her up. —I mean, she really seemed so eager to befriend you. You can’t be thinking she’d just ditch you after meeting in person!

—I’m just… Not ready, okay?— she replied, annoyed.

—Well, Dear. Here's hoping you’ll get over it before Christmas— they let out, resting their head in a hand and then taking a sip of coffee.

Ohhh that's them!?

😏 Yes, please, get her a handsome suit

—What the heck!?— Catra yelled.

—Oh, she's bold— Double Trouble noted, reading the tweet over her shoulder. —Here's your lunch— they told them, sliding a tray at her.

—Wha-what!? I'm supposed to eat now!? Didn't you just read that!? Was that flirting!? Am I imagining it!?— she panicked.

—Relax— they insisted, a bit mockingly. —Just take the compliment; you'll have plenty of time to panic once you meet at the party.

—Why did I let you drag me into this!?— she yelled again.

—Because… otherwise, you'd still be here thinking about how or when to go and say "hi"— they replied, unamused, but smirking at the end.

—Ugh!

A few hours later, Glimmer and Adora were at a boutique, both looking for a dress to wear at the Christmas party.

—You know, if we don't find anything today we can still come tomorrow. Or the day after. We have plenty of time before Christmas— Adora commented, calmly looking through the racks of dresses.

—Are you kidding me!?— Glimmer exclaimed from a few meters away, calling her attention. —We just have a week, a week, before everything is gone!

—But you have plenty of dresses already. Why do you need a new one!?— Adora asked, in utter confusion.

—No, no. I can't repeat a dress! I'm going to embarrass mom!— she replied, genuinely worried.

—What? No! Why would you!?

Adora tried to dismiss her concerns but Glimmer began ranting about how everything had to be perfect and how, if any guests noticed she was using an old dress, they would think her mother had spent too much on decorations and catering, so she couldn't afford a new dress for her. However, before they knew it, Glimmer was almost crying about how she just wanted to impress Bow for once.

—He always says "it looks nice" and that's it! What do I have to do to cause an actual impression?— she sobbed.

—I'm sure he's always impressed, no matter what you wear— Adora assured, trying to comfort her.

—Then why doesn't it look like it!?— she insisted.

—Perhaps he doesn't know what else to say.

Adora was trying to be optimistic, but it was useless. She had to do something else to cheer her up; so, minutes later, she had convinced Glimmer to try on as many dresses as she wanted and let her post the pictures on Twitter.

I MEAN

I have classes with Glimmer, and

I've seen you with her…

10:26 PM

Oh, great! 😊

see u there!

10:27 PM

Catra groaned and threw her phone aside.

—Really smooth…— she sighed, annoyed.

That was it: she'd have to face her at the party, and whatever her reaction is, will haunt her for the rest of her life. Unless it's a good reaction? In which case she'd owe Double Trouble breakfast for a year.

She stared at the ceiling, grabbed her phone again, and went over the chat. Perhaps, just perhaps, it was a good idea.

December 25th arrived soon, a bit too soon, and Double Trouble practically had to drag Catra to the party.

—You even got her a present! You can't back down now!— they argued.

—But it's so silly! I'll only ruin this!

—No, no, no. You are going to that party or I'm bringing the girls to your place— they threatened.

—No! Don't you dare!

—Then get in there and look for her!— Double Trouble insisted. —I practically handed her to you on a silver platter. So don't waste my efforts like that— they complained.

Catra huffed, still wanting to argue, but they were right. There was no point in going back now; she should just take the chance and hope for the best. She took a deep breath, adjusted the jacket of her dark red suit, and walked into the mansion holding the present tightly between both hands.

The place was brightly illuminated with white and blue lights, festive decorations in golden and purple tones, a tall decorated pine tree at the back, and people dressed elegantly already clogging the room. The music kept her from understanding what people chatted around her, and yet, Glimmer's strident voice quickly caught Catra's attention. There they were.

Her heart was racing all of a sudden; she took a moment to calm down, told herself she could do it, and confidently walked at them. She noticed Glimmer had chosen a purple and pink short dress, Bow was wearing a dark purple and pink suit with a white jacket, and Adora had a long red dress; the three were talking excitedly, laughing, and each holding a drink, oblivious to her presence.

—… I mean, it's not like I didn't try last year— Glimmer was saying, before Catra finally approached them.

—Hey, Adora— she interrupted.

All three of them looked back at her and stared for a moment: whatever they were expecting, she clearly was nothing like it; they were gawking in absolute surprise.

—Catra?— Adora asked, hesitantly.

Next to her, both Glimmer and Bow quickly understood, and silently walked away, stifling a giggle, so the girls could talk alone.

—Yeah… I'm…— Catra tried to reply but felt at a loss of words. As she looked down, embarrassed, she realized she was still holding the present and cleared her throat before extending it towards her. —I got you a present— she muttered.

Adora took it with a smile and quickly opened it: it was a key chain with a small crystal sword. She lifted it, admired how delicate it looked, and put it back on the box.

—It's so beautiful! Thank you!— she exclaimed, wanting to hug Catra but not daring as she looked so uneasy. —I didn't get you anything; to anyone, actually. I'm going to invite everyone's breakfast tomorrow but…— she began explaining, yet interrupted herself to look for her purse. Once she safely put away the gift, she returned and asked her —Would you want to dance?

Catra's heart skipped a beat. Her gentle smile always provoked a warm feeling when she looked at her from afar, and seeing her so close now, left her feeling weightless. She accepted her hand and followed her further into the dance floor, without even thinking. As they danced, little by little Catra recovered her confidence.

—You're light on your feet— she commented.

—So are you— Adora laughed. —So… hacker… Will you tell me why you did that?

—Actually—, she began, feeling silly for having to admit it. —Ah… It wasn't me, it was DT. They thought it was a good idea to break the ice and talk to you.

Catra made her twirl around and caught her between her arms. She didn't really know what else to tell her, but it was Adora who had something to say.

—Well… I think it worked, and I'm glad they did it.

They stared at each other smiling, entirely forgetting about the dance and, for a few moments, it was just them.

Until Glimmer shouted from behind —Wooh! Kiss!

They blushed and Catra released her as they both took a step back.

—Sorry, sorry. She's just… joking— Adora quickly pointed out.

—Yeah— she laughed nervously. —It would be silly, right? We just met in person— Catra added, looking away.

—Then… I hope you stick around until it's not silly anymore— she replied, instantly blushing.

Catra smirked and extended a hand at her, saying —We didn't hack into your life just to walk away, Princess. Deal.

—Deal.
