Chapter Notes

Yes, Finn is non-binary in this, so if you don't like that, this might not be for you :))

Also, This dance is a " beginning of school" dance?? I don't know, I haven't been to middle school in years lol

The music was at an astronomically loud level, and the humid grossness of the gym irked Catra's soul. Her fur was sweating under her suit and her hair just wouldn't sit right.

She was at a school dance, but not for her. For her kid. They said something about getting extra credit if she volunteered to chaperone, so she did. And did she regret agreeing? A tiny bit. She loved Finn with all of her heart, but this was ridiculous.

Catra watched as immature 8th graders ran around playing tag, stood lamely next to their dates, and spilled punch all over the gym floor. It was horrible. She sighed and went over to stand by the wall.

Catra wasn't exactly popular or unpopular in middle school, she was… ok maybe she was with the cool kids. The ones who… what did cool kids do in middle school? Oh right, she didn't do her homework or participate. It was a shame because she was actually pretty smart, but she got with the wrong crowd. And they influenced her heavily.

Her grades were fucked when she got to high school, turns out she needed some of the credit she was supposed to earn in middle school. But, lucky for her, she caught up and managed to graduate early.

It was pretty lonely after that, so maybe she wasn't that lucky after all. And when you're lonely, you seek company wherever you can find it, and unlucky it was with a woman who would screw her over and leave her with a baby.

After having Finn, Catra tried to go back to school, but that was hard with a baby and no support. It was just them, she and her baby. But, they weren't a baby anymore.

Catra saw them dancing with a girl, she was pretty and had an off the shoulder dress on. A secret girlfriend perhaps?

" Excuse me." A voice said next to her, spooking her a bit. Her eyes widened and her breathing sped up at the surprise.

“I’m sorry! I didn’t mean to scare you.” The voice said frantically, and Catra turned her head to see who it was.

Wow.

She was in awe, this woman in front of her was gorgeous. Her hair was down and styled back, making some kind of a poof. And she had a red jumpsuit that showed off her impressively long legs.

What. This was the principal. If it wasn’t more apparent by her walkie talkie clipped to her hip and a lanyard full of keys and her ID.

Catra straightened (if that was even possible) and tried to make herself look focused when talking to this important woman.

“ No, you didn’t scare me at all.” She said, trying to appear nonchalant. It would’ve worked if her fur didn’t puff up from under her suit, giving her away.

The blonde woman stuck her hand out quickly and Catra shook it, she had a firm grip and her eyes were laser focused on their hands. While talking, she introduced herself, as if the whole school didn’t know who she was.

" Hi, I'm Adora, or Principal Grayskull. And sorry for the whole sneaking up on you thing." She said, her tone sincere. Catra gestured beside her and the woman silenced her radio and stood on the wall next to her.

Catra introduced herself. " I'm Catra D'riluth. That one's mom." She pointed to Finn, they were doing some sort of handstand, trying to impress their date. It seemed to work because the girl was covering her face with her hand and blushing.

" Oh! Finn's your kid? They're wonderful." Adora said, turning her head to face Catra. The magicat raised an eyebrow and crossed her arms, skeptical. " You're telling me, you didn't know that was my baby?"

Finn was the only magicat in the school, it seemed obvious that Catra was their mother. Maybe it was an " I don't want to be offensive, so I'll feign ignorance" kind of thing.

Adora held her hands up in defense, a goofy smile coming across her face, " Okay, I didn't want to assume. Families come in all sorts of ways."

Catra laughed. She laughed so hard her ribs hurt. This woman was so ridiculous, but in a good way. " I'm glad you're conscientious, I wouldn't want my baby to go do a speciesist school."

Adora eyes widened and she waved her hands quickly, her keys making wild jingle sounds at the movement. “Oh no. No no no no. Not here. We have a no tolerance policy for that kind of stuff.” She sighed when she finished talking, like she was out of breath.

It was a joke, but Catra was actually glad it was in place, she wasn’t afraid to put her hands on another kid if they were to harass or hit her own.

“ That’s good.” She said.

Then, there was silence or, as much silence you can get in a rowdy gym. Catra tapped her foot on the ground to the music and looked at the dance floor for Finn, but couldn’t find them. Maybe they went to get some more punch?

“ I have a question to ask.” Adora said, her voice laced with a twinge of hesitation.

Catra swiveled her head around to the blonde and gave a “ go ahead” look. The principal sighed and made eye contact with her. The room was slightly dark, but Catra had no problem seeing. Adora, on the other hand, was squinting a little.

Catra nodded. Her sharp nose caught the smell of Adora's shampoo, a light flowery scent. Was this a little weird? Yes. She was making goo goo eyes with her child's principal, very weird. But she deserved a little excitement in her life.

She knew what question was coming, and she braced for it.

"Are you single?" She asked, almost in a whisper. Not what she expected. Maybe more of a "where's the other parent?", or something along those lines. It shocked her, she was never asked about herself.

Then, Catra answered, her eyes flicking down to Adora's lips. " Yes, do you want to date me or something?"

Adora leaned back from the closeness and smirked.

Wow again. Could this woman get any hotter?

"Maybe. Let's talk later. I gotta go." The woman said, walking away from her, heels clicking as she walked.

What the hell just happened.

Date night

Catra's date fit

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Catra squeezed her eyes as images of Friday evening flashed through her mind. Sexy principal, sexy jumpsuit, sexy smells…

" Oh, my Stars." She let her head fall on her steering wheel, the horn blaring. Catra popped back up when she heard light taps at her window. It was her.

She was parked on the curb of the school, waiting for her kid. They stood at the passenger seat window and she waved at them happily. She unlocked the door and Adora opened the door for her baby and they hopped in excitedly. The principal opened her back door and put Finn's backpack in the seat.

Her kid clicked their seatbelt and Catra saw Adora come over to her side of the car. She rolled down the window and saw the blonde turn her walkie talkie down.

"Hey." She said, resting her arm on the inside of the window.

Be cool, Catra. Be cool.

”Hey yourself.” She answered back, eyes moving across Adora’s outfit. A lot more professional today, well, considering the last time she saw the woman it was a school dance.

Adora smiled at her and leaned into the window, Catra looked straight ahead, not trying to look completely smitten in front of her baby.

She got close to her ear and it twitched as her breath hit it. “ I’ll text you.” Catra furrowed her eyebrows, then, before she could process what was happening, Adora was out of the car and waving at the two of them from outside of the car as she walked back into the building.

Catra put the car in drive and drove off, feeling her offspring’s blue eyes boring into her head. Not now. Please no-

“ What was that about, mommy?” Finn said, a hint of attitude in their voice. Catra huffed and rolled her eyes, she loved them to death, but man could they ask questions. “ Nothing, what are you talking about?”

She glanced over at them and they had a confused expression on their face. Catra was glad that Finn looked nothing like their other mother, they were all her. Good. She was the one who went through all of the pain and strife, they better had looked like her.

Catra sighed and used a hand to run through her hair, scratching at her scalp. " I don't know, what did it look like?" She asked, wanting to know what they thought of the situation.

Finn tapped their chin and hummed. " Well, it looked like you were about to make out with my principal." Very astute, as always.

Catra laughed. Finn was so funny. They definitely got it from her. " Ah, I'm not going to lie to you, kid. Your principal is hot."

They covered their face and squealed, " EWW. Moooom, don't say that." Finn wiggled in their seat and made fake throw up noises.

She scoffed at the gesture, " Oh really? I know I saw you with your little girlfriend on Friday, you're not slick." Catra said, exposing them.

They stopped making the noises and turned to look at her, she faced them and laughed at their face. " Oh, that's great. I wish I could take a picture of your face right now. You're like, 'oh no betrayal' !" Finn huffed and slouched in their seat, arms folded.

" She's not my girlfriend." They said, quietly.

Catra hummed. " Sure. Not right now she is, but your wicked charm, which you get from me, will be pulling her in." Then, they looked hopeful. Their face lighting up at the words of encouragement.

" Really?" Finn said, looking at Catra.

She nodded, peeked over, and gave them a wink.

" So, that means you'll be dating my principal?" They said, quickly done with their own dilemma.

Those damn questions.

" I don't know? Maybe? Maybe not? Who can tell?" She said, not wanting to give them false hope. And probably herself.

" But, I thought you said you were charming. Doesn't that mean you could date anyone you wanted?" This kid! Catra chuckled dryly, " Yeah, I did say that. Didn't I?"

As Catra got into bed for the night, she was alerted with a message on her phone. It was an unknown number, it had to be Adora. She took a deep breath and read the message.

Adora: Hey, sorry for texting you so late. I was wondering if you wanted to go out sometime? Like for real, No teasing, or anything?

Catra bit her lip as she read the text. Not only was she getting a date with a woman. It was a hot woman at that. Did she also work at Finn's school, yes. But that's besides the point. They were in 8th grade, and this school wasn't forever.

The magicat huffed and sent a text, not proofreading or anything.

Catra: Yes, but where would we go?

Flirty, promising, a little sexy. Catra still got it. It had been 13 years since she last had been with someone, and she was losing her mind. But, this assured her that she still had some game.

The stupid ass ellipses popped up and down at the bottom of the screen and Catra wanted to tear her hair out from the roots. Then, after what felt like an hour she responded.

Adora: My place?

Catra had been through this before, it's how she was stuck with the most life altering thing she had right now. She sighed and rubbed her temples, this wasn't going to work.

Adora: I was thinking of cooking dinner. And you could invite Finn over! And I'll make you some dessert…

Adora: I love to cook by the way

All of the grief from the possibility of this relationship not working, fled from her body and she got more comfortable. She didn't want to subject Finn to her new relationship, it was already enough for them to see Catra get flirted with heavily right in front of them, but to be in her house? No.

Catra: No, just us.

But where would her baby go? It was the middle of the week. Maybe she could subtly ask them to have a sleepover or whatever kids did at that age. But, they were 13 now, it could be time to let them learn some independence.

They have been together forever, joined at the hip. Was she smothering them? Was she a helicopter parent? All she did was for the best. Oh stars, that's what bad parents said.

In her frenzy, she texted Adora back and flopped on her back, landing in her soft pillows. Her tail was moving frantically in her slight panic.

Catra: when?

Adora: Friday night? Is that alright?

Catra thought about it. She didn't have to work late as of recently and Finn didn't have anything that day. So, yeah. That would work.

Catra: it's a date.

As if sensing their mother's panic, the door creaked open to reveal her child. They had pajamas on and their usually styled brown hair was a bird's nest. They groggily rubbed their eyes as they climbed in Catra's bed. The woman turned on her side and accepted the child into her arms.

" What are you doing awake, kiddo?" She asked, stroking at their hair. At the action, the small rumble of a purr came from them. It made Catra's heart soar, she loved moments like this, and always will.

" I just woke up. And then I came in here." Finn said quietly, nuzzling further into their mom's embrace. Catra breathed in her kitten's scent, the same as when they were just born.

She had been so scared then. After having a baby you can't really do anything, but she had to do everything. It was hell for a while, trying to shuffle motherhood with becoming an adult, but she eventually got the hang of it.

"Okay, go back to sleep, pumpkin." Catra said, kissing their forehead.

Catra didn't dare mention how kids at 13 don't sleep with their moms anymore. Or how she was touched starved, not from her kid, but from another kind of touch.

Why was the last time the one to get her pregnant?

And it probably was Catra's fault in some sort of way. She didn't trust anyone to watch Finn, magicats are already rare, Catra was not taking the chance of someone having the chance of taking a baby magicat.

But, now Finn was older and responsible. They can take care of themselves for an evening or night. She was surprised that Adora was in it for romance. Dinner? Inviting the baby over? Wow. She couldn't have been a bad person, she worked in a school.

Catra exhaled and walked over to Finn, they were at the dinner table doing their homework. Like the good kid they were. And their ears twitched when she approached, she got a sweet smile and they put their pen down. She sat at the chair next to them and leaned on the palm of their hand.

Finn’s eyes widened and they moved to touch Catra’s shoulder and look at her fully. “ Are you okay?” They said, concern.

Catra shook her head and held onto her baby’s hand and gave it a kiss. “No, I’m fine, sweetheart.” Finn visibly relaxed and smiled.

“Okay, so what is it?” They asked, bubbly all of a sudden. The mother dropped their hand and stroked their hair.

“ I have a date on Friday.” She started with. Finn didn’t look surprised, they just nodded along as she spoke.

“And... I think you’re getting old enough to spend the night alone — at home, by yourself. I've been thinking about it, and- yeah I think you can.” She said, her tail flicking nervously behind her. It was hard, she felt like she was giving them away.

“Oh, that’s cool.” Finn said, going back to doing the work on the table. Uh.

“ You’re not happy or anything? Not gonna throw a party?” Catra asked, trying to see if they cared or not.

“No? You didn’t say I could, so why would I?” They answered, the words coming out genuine and honest.

It was so refreshing to see. 8th grade Catra would've never hung around her 8th grader child, both so different, but the same.

Catra got out of her chair and hugged Finn. It was full of kisses and squeezes. She stopped when they started wheezing, from lung collapse or laughter, who knew. But, it turned out to be the latter. A high pitched laugh coming from the kid.

"Mommy's got a date! Mommy's got a date!" They said, sing-songy, and making Catra's ears want to bleed.

" Ugh! You're the worst." She said crossing her arms and pouting like a child. Finn giggled and hugged her at her waist. She rolled her eyes, and hugged them back.

She was glad they weren't a bad kid like she was, Finn was just… smart and resourceful.

"You're the best, kiddo."

" Remember you have leftovers in the fridge and a whole pizza in the freezer to eat. Why am I telling you this? You can cook." Catra said while chaotically moving from room to room in their apartment. She went inside her bathroom to check her hair once more before coming to where Finn was, in the living room.

She leaned down to give them a kiss on the forehead, and they leaned back to look at her upside down. “I’ll miss you mom, come back safe.” So cute! She playfully patted their cheeks and squeezed them.

“ I’ll miss you too, baby. Don’t have too much fun without me.” She told the magicat, they got up and turned around to face her as she grabbed her wallet and keys. Finn waved at her as she slowly closed the door, trying to get more sight of them.

She sighed and felt at her pockets. No phone. Catra chuckled cheekily, but was met with Finn holding the door open with her phone in their hand. No spending extra time with them. Damn.

“Go, mom. Or you’ll be late.” They said as Catra got the phone and put it in her pocket. She turned her head and pointed to her cheek, waiting for a kiss, and she was granted one. “ Love you!”

“ Love you.” Finn said back, and closed the door.

As soon as she heard the door lock, it really settled in. She was having a night to herself. It was hard to imagine, let alone live it.

Catra walked down the stairs, and when she got to the base floor, she got to her car. Each step taking her farther from Finn and closed to some real adult time. With Adora. With sexy Adora.

Oh wow.

She started the car and put the address she was given during the week.

She knocked on the door and it was opened immediately, almost as if she was waiting for her.

“Were you waiting at the door for me?” She asked, stepping into the home. Adora chuckled. “ Maybe. Okay, yes I was.”

Catra looked around the home and took in her surroundings. It was quaint and homey, good for someone living by themselves.

“ let me take that for you.” Adora said behind her, and Catra shucked off her coat and Adora took it and hung it up, like a perfect gentleman.

The air was rich and flavorful, Adora had cooked. It smelled like… baked chicken.

“I told you I was going to make dinner, so I made baked chicken with asparagus and mashed potatoes.” Catra smiled and followed Adora into the kitchen, where a whole thanksgiving dinner was set up.

" It smells delicious." She said turning to Adora and smiling. The blonde smiled and gently put her hand on the small of Catra's waist to lead her to the dinner table. She held the chair out and pushed it in when Catra sat down.

This was the most effort anyone had put into Catra, besides Finn of course, they made the best food for Catra on Mother's Day. From toast to spaghetti. It was the thought that counted.

Adora brought the food in from the kitchen and placed it in the middle of the table, family style. The blonde chose the seat next to Catra and smiled at her sweetly.

Ok, wow.

Catra made her plate and evenly put everything on her plate to not seem disingenuous. She waited for the woman to finish plating, before taking a bite. It was delicious. So good. She was average in cooking, she knew just enough to get them by.

She chewed and swallowed her food, then spoke. "Adora, this is really good." The blonde lit up and hopped up from the table and to the kitchen. "Do you want wine? I have some. White or red?"

This woman was all over the place. " Red, please."

Adora poured their glasses and made her way back with them. She sat them down and Catra casually took a sip at it, good. Everything was good.

Catra, I really like you so much. I had a really good time." The blonde said, smiling a wonky, toothy smile. Adora was great. She had a job, a personality, and she could cook! Wow.

They were in her living room, still giddy from how well their date was going. The tv was on, but they weren't watching it.

"I- I did too." She admitted, running a hand down the other woman's chest. Swallowing nervously at the implication, Adora's eyes flicked up and Catra felt her heart speed up at the touch. She brought her legs up and over the blonde woman's lap, and brought their faces closer together.

Adora gasped at the action and her hand rose up and rested on the magicat's cheek. She smiled and leaned in for a kiss, Catra smiled as she kissed the blonde, it was slow and deep. It felt like she was putting her entire soul into it. She was running out of breath, but she wanted more, too encapsulated in the feeling to stop.

Catra pulled back a little and huffed, trying to catch her breath, but Adora wouldn't let her go. The blonde pulled her back in and pecked her, then she licked at her fangs, earning a groan from Catra. The magicat splayed back further into the arm of the couch, giving Adora more room over her, and she took it.

"You're so sexy, Catra," she said, trailing her hands up her hips, making the fur there go crazed, but she didn't care. Catra laughed and twirled the woman's ponytail in between her fingers. " You are too."

Then, Adora got off of the couch and onto the floor. Oh shit. Catra turned to look at her and Adora gave a sweet smile, as if she wasn't on her knees for her. The magicat moved her body to sit on the edge of the couch, the blonde caressing her thighs through her pants. Adora reached for a pillow on the couch and put it under her knees for support.

She exhaled roughly, she kept forgetting to breath. But how could she? This woman was hot as hell and she was about to eat her out.

Adora gripped her hips, she was kneeling in the space between Catra's thighs, peeking up from her dark eyelashes. She reached for the waistband of Catra's pants, a pleading look in her icy blue eyes. Catra nodded and the blonde started to unbutton and pull the zipper down on her pants. They were leather, which was a pain in the ass, but it was either comfortable or sexy, so she chose the obvious choice, sexy.

She lifted her hips when they got to her ass, and then, there was nothing. Catra didn't notice she was taking off her underwear too, so she was completely naked from the bottom down.

The blonde opened her legs wider and basically marveled at the sight. It was weird, to be ogled this way, when she hadn't been in a while. Catra knew she was sexy, she knew that she was still young and could live out her sexual fantasies with whoever she wanted, but there was a nagging in the back of her head that repeated. " Who's going to want you? You had a baby, and how old are you?"

Catra found it hard to make friends with the parents at Finn's school, not because they were the only magicats there, but because of age. Catra was 32, 29 on a good day, and she was considerably younger than many of the parents on the PTO. They shot her weird looks at pickup or field trips, it was horrible.

Then, Adora interrupted her thoughts by licking a long stripe up her pussy. Her eyes focused on her as she continued to stimulate her most sensitive part. Her clit was rubbed with the blonde's thumb, and at that she had to close her eyes, reveling in the feelings she felt. It was way better than solo, for some reason when someone else did it, the pleasure rises ten fold.

"Ah, fuck, Adora. That feels good, keep going." Catra hands snuck to the blonde's ponytail and held it at the base, pushing her head further into her vulva. The thumb sped up and Catra swore she could see Stars. Adora smiled and tongues at her vagina, the muscle teasing in and out.

Catra's legs were shaking and she felt like her eyes were going to roll into her skull. The magicat thought that it was the crux of her pleasure, then Adora added her fingers.

"More. More." She pleaded. Whatever that meant. She was glad words could even come out of her mouth, she was so far gone. Her date sat up leaned over her thigh, her left hand going behind her back. Two fingers were steadily stroking into her, and Adora's other hand stopped right above her tail.

Oh no. How did she know?

Adora dragged her blunt nails across Catra's lower back, and that's when it was over for her. She moaned loudly and the back of her neck hit the couch.

"Mmm," she said, as Adora moved her hand and fingers from her. She heaved for air, the orgasm taking all of it from her.

She opened her eyes and laughed outwardly at Adora's face; it was still wet and her ponytail was loose, her eyes were blown out, a ring of blue barely visible.

"Was that okay?" She asked, still looking up at her like a goof. Catra shook her head at the ridiculous question and held onto Adora to pull her back on the couch with her. She moved and put her head into Adora's lap, now looking up at her with glazed eyes. "You're an idiot."

Adora chuckled, " How am I an idiot?" She asked. Another dumb question. What is with the questions?

"You just ate me out, gave me what was probably the best orgasm of my life, and you asked if it was okay." Catra said to the blonde.

Adora tilted her head and smirked. "Best orgasm of your life, huh?" She teased.

Catra rolled her eyes. " Yes, your mouth is to die for." She leaned up and gave Adora a peck on the lips.

Chapter End Notes

Yes, I wrote this fic for the smut. Do not hate on me. I love writing it, it's so fun.

Anyways, its so hard to write it when there's always kids around.

Like, they absolutely cannot do anything in a school, or with Finn awake. It's so awkward, I wonder how real parents feel. Lol

Anddd don't question the logic of how Catra got pregnant, hehe I just wanted her to have Finn, but didn't consider the logistics

“So, how did your date go?” Finn said, eyeing their mother. Catra rolled her eyes. Questions, questions, questions.

She couldn’t tell them a lot of what happened, so she decided on, “ good. Great, actually. You might have yourself a new momma!” She joked, it was funny and Finn seemed to be bursting at the seams from it.

“Ew, my mom being the principal? I would get bullied.” They said, scooping some cereal out of their bowl and eating. Catra scoffed, “ What? No. It would stop bullying.”

Finn shook their head and explained. “ No, mom. Kids don’t bully like they did in the old days, or whenever you were born, they bully in secret.”

What the hell?

“Finn, I love you with all my heart. But, if you ever say I’m old again, I’m kicking your ass.”

They laughed harder than they did before, milk coming from their nose. Catra huffed, and got some paper towels for them. She was never going to get over how old they were getting.

She wiped their nose and sat back down, leaning back and crossing her arms. " What did you do last night, baby?" Finn sniffled.

Then suddenly they said,"Mom, I'm a teenager! I don't think you should call me baby names anymore."

"What? But you're my baby." Catra said, not knowing where this was going.

Finn sighed. This was not happening. They continued to talk. " I talked to my friends last night and they said it was weird for me to sleep in your bed, and for you to kiss me, and—"

Catra reached over and pulled them into a hug, this is what she feared. She gave them space, and now Finn wanted to leave her. Nope.

" That's okay, Finn. Everyone is different. There's not one way to love your parents, but if you really hate it I'll stop. I'm serious."

The younger magicat hugged her back and she squeezed them. "I like it. I'm just embarrassed. They said they stopped calling their mom's mommy when they were like 3! I could never!" Catra chuckled and pet their head, it was way too early for this, she could feel her eyes stinging with unwanted tears.

"You don't have to. You know what? Tell them you stopped, then we can have this all to ourselves, okay?" She said, pulling back from the hug and seeing her child's eyes brimmed red from holding back tears. Oh, Stars.

She wanted to fight whoever said that to her baby. And that was why they started calling her "mom" all of a sudden.

They nodded and Catra patted them on the shoulder. Putting that far too emotional moment, for a Saturday morning, to an end.

" Want some waffles? We can go to IHOP?" She asked heading to her room to get dressed, they always said yes to ihop. "Uh, yeah!"

Her and Adora had been dating for two months, and it was pretty great. Adora was a perfect woman, who treated her well, but she was hesitant to make the connection between her and Finn. In all honesty, Catra was scared. Her birthday was approaching in a week, and Adora had been sending her tiny gifts leading up to it.

She called it, " 28 to 28". Which made absolutely no sense because she was turning 33, but Adora explained it to her.

“No! It’s 28 because your birthday is on the 28th. Not because you’re turning 28!”

“Why not just do ‘33 to 33’?”

Adora's face dropped, and her brow furrowed. Then she whispered, “Damn it.”

It was funny. She tried her best. That’s all that mattered. Catra was getting flowers delivered to her job, stuffed animals sent to her apartment… it was a lot. And she appreciated the sentiment so much, but why? They had only been together so short and only had 4 dates.

Could Adora be in it… for the long run? That’s what people did when they liked you right? Shower you with unconditional affection until you’re suffocating on it. It had been years since she had felt like this, and it was starting to warm up to her.

Ding, dong.

“Mommy, is that another one?” Finn said from the living room. Their hearing was better than hers, she must have really been getting old.

She walked up to door and looked through the peephole, nobody was there, so she turned and shrugged to her kid. They were watching her from the couch, their blue eyes watching curiously as she opened the door.

It was a large purple box sat on in her doormat. She picked it up and read the note sitting on top of it, closing the door with her foot. Finn skipped over to lock as she kept walking.

Dear, Catra

I hope this finds you well, and as you know, there are three days left till your birthday! I'm happy to give this to you because the last three gifts (including this one) are special. This one has something for Finn in it too!

From your girlfriend, Adora

Oh, Stars. She set the box on the dining room table and lifted the top off slowly. It was full of stuffing, so she got to work, removing the paper.

"Oh. My. Stars! Mommy! That's a switch!" It sure was. In the box, there was a blue and red switch, still in the box and everything.

Catra pulled out her phone from her pocket and dialed Adora.

Finn reached for the box and Catra shot them a look. She did not want them to touch it yet.

“Hey, Catra. How are you?” Adora asked when she answered the phone. It only took two rings.

“I’m good. How are you?” She said, her voice tense. Finn sat down and eyed the box, staring at it like it would disappear if they blinked.

“I'm great! You got my package?” The blonde said excitedly over the phone. And Catra looked over at the box and to her kid, who was still looking at it.

“Yeah… about that.” She answered, conflicted.

“Catra, I know by now how you are. I put the receipt at the bottom of the box. And… you haven’t looked through it all.” She put the phone on speaker and set it on the table. Then, she picked the Switch box up and onto the table as well, and she saw the receipt stuck to the side.

“Okay, I see the receipt.” She said, chuckling lightly.

“I told you, now move the paper there’s something for you,” Adora said, excitement evident in her voice.

Catra moved the paper and gasped at what she saw.

“What is it, mom?” Finn asked, peeking over to where their mom was.

“A-Adora.” She said, her voice choking up. She got the box out of the bigger box, it fit in her hand and was black. She shakily lifted up the box and was met with a necklace. She lifted the jewelry out and her mouth was wide open in shock. It had her name on it. In a pretty, cursive font, it said “ Catra.” Wow, it was the brand made for magicat’s too.

“Do you like it?” The blonde asked over the receiver. If Catra could see her, she knew her face would be split in a grin.

“I don’t know what to say, Adora.”

“Don’t say anything. This is for you and Finn to enjoy.”

Catra bit her lip and looked over to Finn, who was still eyeing the box. She huffed and rolled her, she was beaten.

“Ok, we will.” She said, finally giving in.

The kid basically tore open the box and their eyes were crazed, when they finally got it out, they ran to the nearest outlet to plug it in.

“Finn, you forgot to say something.” She said, giving them a pointed look and nodding to the phone.

“Ohhh, thank you Adora! It’s great!” And they were gone in an instant.

Catra chuckled and took the phone off of speaker, putting it close to her ear. “Adora, I still don’t know what to say… and there’s still two more after this. I’m afraid.”

Adora sputtered over the phone, “Pfft, don’t be scared. Why would you be scared?”

Catra shifted the necklace in her hand, the light catching the silver. “ I don’t know… why? Why are you doing this for me?” She asked.

“Because you’re my girlfriend, Catra. And I want the very best for my girlfriend and her kid. That’s it.” She stated simply. It made Catra relax.

“ Ah, I have to get to a meeting— make sure you send me pictures of you in your necklace.” She added another part, “ preferably naked.”

Catra laughed loudly and told her goodbye. Then, she sighed blissfully and put the necklace on. The magicat brand was suitable for those with claws and fur, so it was easy to put on and didn’t catch onto her.

She went into her bathroom and observed herself with it on. It suited her, she never really wore jewelry, but this was breathtaking. If this is what turning 33 was about, she’d do it every year.

“Mommy! I need your help!” Finn said, from… somewhere. It wasn’t urgent, Catra could tell by their tone, but she knew they were soon to turn whiny.

“Ok!” She answered back and gave herself another look in the mirror before checking on them.

They were in their room, it turns out. They turned when she walked in and patted their bed for her to sit on.

“Yes? You needed me?” She said, not knowing what was happening.

“Nope. I didn’t. But, I wanted to tell you something.” They said, swiveling their head back towards the tv where the game was set up.

Catra hummed and fell back in their bed. “Talk away Kiddo.” They glanced at her again before speaking.

“I like Adora. Not her as my principal, but as your girlfriend. And not just because of the switch.” Finn said, and Catra hummed again.

Why was Finn saying this?

“So, you like her, huh? Would you maybe want to have her over on Thursday for my birthday?” Maybe it was time to integrate Adora and Finn together, it was bound to happen sooner or later.

“Yeah! That sounds cool!” They said, tail moving swiftly.

“You know joked about her being your new mom, but it might happen, so don’t be surprised.” She said and got up from the kid’s bed, not before ruffling their hair.

“You can only stay on the switch until 7, then go read a book or something.” Smiling, she left their room and headed for her own.

Maybe it was a good idea to give them that Switch, more time for her.

She closed her door and laid in her bed. Which was weird because it was still light outside, but there was a first time for everything. Catra felt the necklace around her neck, an idea popped in her head.

The magicat brought out her phone and went to her camera app. It couldn't hurt to snap a little picture for Adora. She slid the straps of her tank top off with one hand and pulled the front of it down, showing her chest in the camera. In her screen, it showed her fuzzy sternum, and the beginnings of her tits.

They used to be flat, like completely absent of fat, until she was pregnant. Then they swelled up, almost over night, and now she was sporting a magnificent rack. She snapped a few pictures, even slipping a nipple in one.

When she was done, she picked out the good and bad ones in her selection, and only came out with about three good ones. She sent them off with a smile and waited for Adora's response.

Catra: Sent 3 images

The stupid ass ellipses came up and she wanted to delete the feature on the phone. Why was that a thing? She finally got a response from her girlfriend.

Adora: I’m still in my meeting :(

Adora: but that’s suuuper hot

Adora: u lok ggood

The spelling got a bit off in the end, but it was evident that it affected her. Good.

Catra pulled her tank back up when she heard the sounds of her kid walking pick up in her range of hearing. They opened the door and peeked their head in, “Do you want to play Luigi’s Mansion 3 with me?”

She nodded and got up to play with them.

“Hey, Adora,” Catra said. It was 12 in the morning and Catra was wide awake. After being interrupted out of her sexting, she was still thinking of what could've been. Sure, Adora was in a meeting at the time, but it could've been really fun.

“Why are you awake? I wasn’t expecting you to answer.” Adora spoke, sounding surprised.

Catra shrugged and sighed into the phone. “Sometimes I sleep, sometimes I don’t. It depends, but that’s not why tonight.” She said, playing coy.

“And what is the reason tonight?” Ah! Great. Adora was playing along. Sometimes it took her a while to get what she was hinting at.

“I’m thinking about you. More specifically, your hands.” Catra said, moving the comforter from her body; it was getting hot already.

Adora hummed over the phone. “ What about my hands?”

Catra nibbled on her lip as she used one hand to lower her sleep pants, very hard, but she managed.

“How-uh they feel on my body.”

“What are you wearing?” The blonde asked, breathless. If Catra closed her eyes, she could imagine her in the room, whispering behind her and holding her hips.

She chuckled. “Nothing sexy.” It was true, she had her bottoms pulled down under her ass and her shirt was raggedy and oversized.

Adora tutted. “Well, just take it off then. Then, you’re sexy, problem solved. Catra smiled at her and lifted the shirt over her tits, groping one.

“Okay then, what are you wearing, Ms. know it all?” She asked, cheeky.

“Oh, nothing. I don’t wear clothes to bed.” Catra didn’t know how to answer that, she continued this little thing.

“Are you going to touch yourself since you’re already in your birthday suit?” She asked, dragging her hand up and down the spot in between her breasts and down her stomach.

“I am already.” The blonde said simply.

“Oh, well I am too.” She huffed a laugh out.

“G-good. Your voice is so sexy, Catra. Oh, fuck.” The woman said, breath sounding labored over the phone.

Catra went ahead and slid her hand down to her pussy, feeling how wet she was at just teasing. Stars, this woman turned her on so badly.

"I'm so wet for you, baby."

Adora's breath hitched and stuttered out some words. "Talk more… please." She sounded close already.

"I'm so worked up. My fingers don't feel as good as yours do. You know just what it takes to get me over the edge every time." She said while rubbing at her clit. She was telling the truth, it didn't feel the same, for the most part, it was alright.

"Mmm, Catra. I love your pussy. So… much." She panted between breaths. Catra closed her eyes tighter and rubbed faster, feeling the beginning feeling of her orgasm roll in.

"Adora, I'm close. Hurry." She egged on.

"Okay, yeah. Mmm. Fuck, you feel so good, Catra." The blonde said, the phone going statically at her rise in volume.

Catra whispered expletives and her eyes sparkled with stars because her eyes were closed so tightly. Her back rose from the bed and her mouth was shaped in an O.

“Adora! I’m coming, Oh shit.”

“Me too, me too. Fuck.”

Catra laughed as finished through her orgasm. Sometimes it was too good, she laughed. Over the phone, she heard moans and pants from Adora. She settled back in the bed and ran a hand through her hair.

Then they stopped and she put the phone up to her ear. “Did you like it?” Adora said.

“Adora.” She said, annoyed. The blonde always asked the question when they had sex, even though Catra was sure to have come out of her body from the orgasms she gave her.

“I know, I know. You don’t like that question. But damn, I’ll answer it. I liked it.” She said clearly.

Catra grinned at the honest feedback and sighed. She was right, Catra hadn’t cum that hard by herself in forever. Well, she wasn’t by herself, Adora was right there.

“Me too,” Catra sweetly responded to her girlfriend.

“Ah, I’m glad. I sure enjoyed your pictures from today.”

“About that… and I don’t want to sound ungrateful, but why? And don’t say because I’m your girlfriend.” The magicat asked.

“Ok, I’m doing this for you because you’re special to me. And I want you to be happy.” She explained.

“Adora, I- I have been on my own for so long it’s hard to accept help. I never received any. And now, it’s coming full force. It’s awesome. You’re awesome.”

Adora chuckled and continued. “And I’ve been in Finn’s place before.”

Catra raised an eyebrow. How?

“Heh, my mom was a single mom too. She raised me by herself and I could tell it was hard for her, but I was just a kid, you know? I couldn’t do anything.” Adora said, her voice going quiet at the end.

Catra was speechless, what Adora was doing was so incredibly sweet.

“Adora. You’re so kind and sweet. I bet your mom is proud of you.”

The line was silent after that, and the mom in Catra worried immediately. Then, she heard light snores from the phone. Oh, she went to sleep. In the middle of their conversation. She probably had a long day and after the amazing phone sex they just had, it most likely wore her out.

“Sweet dreams, my Adora.” She said into the phone and went to sleep, not ending the call.

Chapter Summary

A Birthday party, family times, smut

Chapter Notes

Catra was placed down into her chair at the dining table and was told by Adora to wait. Finn was beside her, dancing in place and happy. Then, the blonde practically flew out the apartment door.

"Mommy, this is going to be the best birthday party. Me and Adora planned it all— Oops." They covered their mouth at the last part and their eyes grew wide. Catra raised her eyebrow, giving what was called, her " mom glare" at the kid.

"Yeah, I wasn't supposed to say that." They said sheepishly, tail lowering between their legs.

"C'mon Finn, it's my birthday. You can't tell me?" She said, giving her child pleading eyes. They glanced from the door to her face, not knowing what to do.

They sighed and came closer to the table. The magicat put a hand to side of their face and leaned forward whispering in Catra's ear, "Me and Adora have been meeting during lunch all week to prepare for your party today."

Catra moved and made eye contact with her offspring, a crazed look in her eyes. “Really?”

They nodded and their tail went back to its lazy swish.

“She didn’t tell me about the Switch though, so who knows what else she has under her sleeve!” They said, excited.

Catra slowly nodded and chuckled. What was she in for?

“I’m back! And I brought cake and more gifts!” Adora said sing songy. Finn went over to lock the door back up as the blonde made her way over to Catra. She put the things down and leaned down to kiss Catra.

That’s so weird. Catra was stressing on how to make Finn and Adora’s relationship separate from school, but turns out, it happened naturally.

“Okay! So first, we’re going to sing happy birthday. And then we’ll eat cake. Later, we’ll open presents, and tada! Birthday!” The blonde said excitedly. It was very evident how much she planned. And it seemed she was sweating too. Maybe it was from the joy or laborious run to her car.

“That sounds great. Finn, can you grab three plates for mommy? And some forks too?” She asked Finn. They nodded curtly and went on with the tasks.

She looked over to Adora who was going through some kind of mental checklist in her head.

“Babe, come over here and sit with the birthday girl.” She said, pulling a chair out for Adora. She was pulled from her thoughts and came over happily to sit next to her. “Are you enjoying this so far?”

They had hung up streamers and banners while Catra was getting dressed, it looked like a real birthday party.

“ I love it.” She said and stared into pale blue eyes. Adora grabbed her hand and rubbed the back of it with her thumb.

The moment was cut abruptly when Finn came in with the plates and plasticware. They gave each one to each party member, and sat down. Adora sat up and brought the cake over to Catra, opening the box and revealing an ornate cake with swirls and edible beads.

“Damn.” Catra said, peering over the white box.

Adora gently scooped it out of the container and placed it in front of Catra. “For the birthday girl.” Catra felt tears well up, she didn’t want to cry, but it was hard not to. Finn was here, all grown up. And Adora… sweet Adora was here. Here for her.

“I love it, thanks.” She said, sniffing a little.

Truth is, she was never given a proper birthday party. Ever. She loved cards made by her baby and coworkers, but this was different.

“Okay ready Finn?” Adora said, sitting down and looking at the magicat. They nodded and began to sing.

It was horrible. Off key and everything, but sweet. Adora looked like she thought her singing deserved a Grammy and Finn was just beaming.

“Thanks”

“Adora, we forgot the candles!!” Finn said frantically after they finished singing. Adora sighed and took a deep breath. “We have to do it again.”

Catra shook her head quickly, she didn’t want to go through that torture again. “No, it’s fine guys, we don’t have to—”

“But we have to!” Both Finn and Adora said.

The magicat woman smiled tightly and nodded. “Okay, let’s do it then.”

“~HapPy BiRthDay to YoU~” the sweet crooning filled her ears. Not sweet at all, more like nails on a chalkboard, but it persisted.

Finally- sadly, it was over and she smiled at them. They watched expectantly for her to blow out the candles.

She did with ease and they clapped for her.

“What did you wish for?” Adora asked.

Finn shot her a look, “You can’t ask that! That’s birthday 101.” Adora smiled and shrugged.

Catra wished for… this. For them to stay like this. Happy.

The brunette mimicked zipping her lips. “I’m not saying a peep.”

Adora laughed and held her hands up in fake surrender. “Okay, you guys win.”

She got a plastic knife and cut the cake for them all. They ate and they laughed, it was really enjoyable.

Later, Adora brought her last present over to Catra, a grin on her face. Catra waited and watched as it was placed in front of her.

“Go ahead.” She said.

It was a pair of AirPod Pros and a nice black and gold case to go with them. Catra looked up at Adora and she was smiling super hard. She looked through the bag and found something else. An iPad Air. Oh Stars.

She gave Adora a look and she just got the same goofy smile back. Finn jumped in their seat excitedly as she took the gifts out.

“And I got rid of the receipt. No taking them back.” She said proudly.

“Thank you, Adora. But, don’t ever spend this much again, okay? I’m not a materialistic person. I enjoy company more than anything.”

Adora nodded and leaned over to hug Catra tightly.

"Okay, birthday is over, thank you guys. But it is 1 am on a school night, so…" Catra said, getting out of her seat and grabbing her gifts up to take to her room.

Finn yawned and got up to go to bed. "Goodnight, Mommies." They said, and waved groggily, making their way to their bedroom.

Catra and Adora waved back, almost robotic. Both couldn't believe their ears. Adora drummed on the table lightly, filling the silence that spread after Finn's door shut.

"So, about what just happened…" Adora trailed off, looking lost.

"Yeah, how did you feel about it?" She asked hesitantly. Adora looked down and shrugged. "I really like you, Catra. And I want to be with you. Be in your family." She said earnestly.

Catra wanted to cry again. Oh Stars, did birthday wishes work that fast? She breathed in deeply and looked at the blonde.

"I want you to be too. As my girlfriend of course. And I guess as Finn's unofficial/ official step-mom." She said. If her kid saw her as their mom, maybe it was time to make it true.

"Really? Oh Stars Catra this is great." Adora said, getting out of her seat and hugging her girlfriend.

They got out of the embrace and kissed each other. It was sweet and slow. Catra felt herself become intoxicated at each passing second. She swiped a stray hair and pushed it behind Adora's ear, then she and the blonde were making out at the dining table. Catra purred as Adora left tiny kisses and sucked down her neck, basking in the feeling.

But then it was gone. And Adora pulled back. Catra put her head down normally and saw Adora's disappointed face.

"We can't. I have to be there early tomorrow, there's a whole bunch to prepare for, the Halloween festival, the end of the first quarter…" she said. Catra nodded and rubbed at the blonde's shoulder.

"But, that doesn't mean you can't do anything!" She perked up quickly and got out of her seat and pulled out another chair. In it, sat a flat rectangular box. Very smart to put it there.

She picked it up and headed to Catra's room. Catra followed her blindly and closed the door behind them. Adora sat in the bed with the box and smiled excitedly.

“Ok, don’t be mad, but I got you a sex toy.” Adora said. Catra shook her head, “ I’m not mad.”

Adora let out a sigh of relief. “I’m glad, because this is a nice one and I would hate for it to go to waste.” She opened the box and Catra’s mouth fell open.

“Tada! Vibrator. Isn’t it nice. It has 8 different levels, wow, and it’s like a two in one, see?” She pointed to the shiny new black device.

“Yeah.” She said, speechless.

Adora explained and pointed to the different parts. “This part goes on your clit and this goes inside of you.” Catra nodded along, intrigued.

“And maybe you can take a video of you using it, you don’t have to, but it would be hot.” She admitted sheepishly, her face flushed. Catra chuckled and picked the toy up, eyeing it. “Yeah, I’ll send you it.”

“ I have to get going, Catra, but would you like to go to the Halloween festival with me Sunday?” She asked, getting up. Catra held her hand and squeezed it.

“Yes.”

Catra got a call from work saying Finn was sick. The whole shebang, chills, fever, dizziness. Magicat’s rarely got sick, so this was something to take note of. The last Catra remembered her baby being sick, they had to be three.

“Okay. I’m here Finn.” She said, walking up to them in the nurse’s office. The magicat was on a cot in the room, sleeping restlessly, moving uncomfortably every few seconds. The nurse got up and spoke to her.

“You’re his mom?” He asked.

Catra shot him deadly glare. “ Their mom. And yes I am.” She said, correcting the older man.

She put her purse down and felt her child’s forehead, it was on fire. Then she nudged them awake, they had to go.

“Hey, mom.” Finn said blearily, rising off the cot and trying to open their eyes.

“Hi my baby.” Catra sighed and helped them get their feet onto the floor. It was a struggle because they probably saw three of her, but they managed.

“You’re taking him home? It’s just a headache, he’ll be fine.” He said, his input not helping in any shape or form.

The woman scoffed and got her purse and put it on her shoulder. She got Finn’s arm and put it around her neck, supporting them. They took a couple steps and it didn’t work at all. Finn was the same height as Catra and it wasn’t going to work in their favor.

“Can we get a wheelchair or something? They can’t walk.” she asked and looked at the nurse, he was obviously ignoring her.

“Do we have a problem? Because this is your job and my kid can barely walk.” She said, annoyed.

The man muttered something under his breath and Catra put Finn gently back on the cot.

“Honestly, you’re getting on my nerves. Why the hell can’t your lazy ass get a wheelchair for me?” She asked, walking up to his desk and furrowing her brow.

“You-you can’t speak to me like that.” He said, scared. His eyes were wide open and he was shaking.

“Why not? It’s obvious you’re speciesist and you can’t respect my kid’s fucking pronouns. I can talk to you however I want.” Her fur was prickling from her anger and her multi colored eyes were blazing.

“Or I’ll call the principal, and that one will get suspended. For…” the crazy man scratched at his arm so hard blood came out. What the hell?

“Attacking me!” He said.

Catra backed up from him, she was just concerned now, this man was not in the correct state of mind to be around kids.

“Call her then.” Little did he know.

“Fine! I will.” He went over to his phone and dialed, when he answered the phone, he put on an exaggerated voice.

“There’s a magicat in here who attacked me! Come here and sort this out.” Then he hung up.

He had a smug smile on his face when he hung up. Catra really didn’t want to do all this, but at least she got to see her Adora.

“EVERYONE BE CALM! oh, hi Catra.” She said, stopping her panic when she saw her girlfriend.

“Aw, Finn is sick. Need help taking them to your car?” She asked when she saw the magicat on the cot. Catra rubbed her shoulder and smiled.

“What! I was attacked!” The nurse said, pointing to his wound.

Adora looked over to him and to his wounds. Her expression was rigid and her eyes were cold. “They obviously did not do that. Not only are you lying to my face, your petty bias has let this child suffer. When I get back, we’ll discuss.”

The man was shocked and had a surprised face.

Adora’s face turned back kind as she looked at her family. “Okay, I’ll get a wheelchair, and I’ll head to your car with them.” Catra nodded.

The blonde unfolded a chair and Catra set Finn into it. She held the door open for them and when they got through, she gave the nurse an angry look and left.

Adora used her id to open the front doors and Catra held them open for her.

They made it up to the car and Catra opened the back seat. The principal scooped up Finn and set them in there. Catra got in the front seat and started the car up. Adora came by the window and the brunette rolled it down.

“I’m sorry for that. I told you we have a zero policy for that, so he’ll be dealt with accordingly.” The blonde said seriously.

Catra trailed her hand up Adora’s arms peering suggestively. “You’re so hot when you take charge like that.” She whispered. Adora smirked, but was quickly brought out of it. “Catra as much as this is fun to do, I have to get back, and you have to get Finn home.” She said, acting as the responsible one between them.

Catra groaned and kissed Adora on the mouth. “You're no fun. But, also right. I'll see you later hotshot.”

Adora waved and Catra drove off carefully, not trying to disturb her kid in the backseat.

Catra sighed and rubbed at her temples. She forgot how hard it was to care for a sick person. Finn was hard to move and couldn’t tell her what was wrong, everything was a mess. She left their room and fell back on the couch.

Today was horrible. Not only did she get speciesist shit, her baby got misgendered multiple times. It didn't happen often, but when it did, it really irked her to the core. And thankfully Adora was there because who knew what Catra would've done without her support.

She slipped her eyes closed and fell into dreamland for a second, then her front door opened and she turned to see who it was.

Adora.

"I came by to check on you… and I brought soup." She said walking over to the kitchen and putting a bowl on the kitchen counter. She put down her things and walked over to Catra, kneeling on the floor in front of her face.

"Catra, just sleep. I'll stay here and take care of you guys." Adora said, stroking Catra's hair back from her face.

"Okay, goodnight." And she was out like a light.

When she woke, the room was dark. She rose off the couch and looked around. Her ears picked up some noise coming from Finn's room, so she went to the door to see what was happening. She opened it slightly and saw her kid and Adora playing on the Nintendo Switch.

They turned when she entered the room, as she could see, Finn was feeling better already. Adora was laying on her stomach on the bed, a Switch controller in her hand and a smile on her face.

"That's so crazy! I watched Finn get better in what… a few hours!" Adora said, looking at her shocked. Catra laughed and sat in Finn's desk chair, spinning it around to face her.

"Yeah, magicat's barely get sick and it doesn't last that long. Maybe an hour to a day or two?" Catra explained.

Adora's face lit up. "Wow, that's so cool. When I get sick I'm out of service for three or more days."

"Well, your human body is weak compared to our superior magicat dna."

"Actually I'm half hum-" Finn started to say.

Catra shushed them, "We don't speak of that."

The three of them erupted in giggles, stomachs sore from laughing too hard.

“Well, do you want pizza? I can order it.” Catra said, bringing out her phone.

They both nodded and Catra ordered for them.

“What happened to that mean ass nurse today?” Catra asked Adora.

Tonight, the blonde decided to stay over and it was late. They were both lying in Catra’s bed, facing each other.

“Oh, yeah. I fired him.” Adora said casually.

Catra laughed quietly. “Good. He was an asshole. And he tried to blame Finn for an attack when it was obvious they could barely move. Not to mention the misgendering.”

Adora stiffened, Catra saw her face. “What.”

Catra cringed, she was not supposed to tell Adora that. “Yeah.”

“I would’ve brought that up in the paperwork I had to do. It probably would’ve prevented him from getting another job. Oh well, that’s in the past and Finn looks okay.”

“Yep. They’re fine.” She said, wanting to move on from the taxing event.

Adora got closer to her, if that was even possible, their bodies trapped in a sandwich. Catra’s hand slid her hands down her waist and to the hem of her pants.

“Can I finger you?” She asked, peering up at the blonde. Adora nodded quickly and pulled her shorts down to her knees. She laid on her back and Catra got beside her, reaching her hand to her pussy.

“Hmm, I like when you fuck me, but do you like it when I do it to you?” She asked, whispering in her lover’s ear.

Adora closed her eyes. “Yes.”

Catra brought her hand lower, feeling Adora’s vagina and how wet she was. Then, she dragged her fingers over her clit and rubbed the sensitive nerves slowly.

“Oh, Catra, go faster.” Adora pleaded, and turned her head to kiss Catra messily. The magicat groaned into the kiss and Adora licked her fangs. She always did that, Catra was sure she was obsessed with them.

Catra moved faster and Adora's legs spread out. Adora was moaning so much, the kiss was just exchanging breath and noises at this point.

"Catra, I'm coming. Keep going." Adora cried, her hand gripping Catra's forearm tightly.

The magicat took her through it, going slower when Adora visibly finished.

"Ah, fuck Catra," Adora said, satisfied.

Catra smiled and brought her hand to the blonde's mouth. "Taste." Adora opened her mouth and took Catra's fingers in her mouth, tasting herself.

"Mmm," she moaned around her fingers.

"Damn, 'Dor. You're sucking me so well. " Catra praised, feeling the blonde's tongue swirl around her fingers. Adora looked up at her through her dark lashes and the sight made Catra melt.

She pulled her fingers out and exhaled a breath she didn't know she was holding.

“Can I fuck you?” She asked, looking into Adora’s blue eyes.
“Didn’t you just do that?” She laughed nervously.

Catra shook her head and straddled her lap. She put her hands on her shoulders and leaned to whisper in her ear.

“Not with my fingers, dummy. With a strap.” She said and leaned back, excited.

Adora’s eyes widened and she looked away. Her face was bright red and her breath caught.

“What? It’s okay if you don’t want to.” Catra said, trying to calm Adora down before she panicked.

“No, I do want to, it's just… I’ve never done it this way before.” She said, looking back at Catra, apprehension in her eyes.

The magicat got off of Adora and kneeled beside her, head tilted. It wasn’t completely unusual, she was the complete opposite, trying every single thing she was comfortable with before having Finn.

“That’s fine. That’s...fine. We can just go slow. Yeah, that’s fine. Just stay here. Don’t move.” She said, holding her hand up to Adora.

She went over to her closet, her breath labored. This was a big deal, Adora was trusting her enough to do this with her.

She moved to the very back to it, finding her box with her new strap on the top shelf and bringing it down. Then, she brought it to her bathroom and washed it. It was new, she actually bought it for her and Adora.

When she came back to the bed, Adora leaned back on the headboard and twiddled her thumbs.

She put the strap somewhere on the bed and crawled up to the blonde, consoling her. She stroked her cheek with her thumb and Adora turned to her and smiled.

"Sorry, I'm nervous." She admitted.

"Don't worry, I'm a gentle lover." She teased, and Adora laughed and kissed her, holding her cheek in her palm.

"Mmm, you always take care of me, but tonight you're gonna be taken care of." She said after coming back from the kiss. Adora nodded and happily fell on her back.

“Touch yourself while I put it on.” She said, getting off the bed and grabbing the strap, stepping into it.

She turned back around and showed it off to Adora. “Is this too big?” Adora laughed and waved her over. “I don’t know, let’s see.”

Catra snickered and her tail flicked at the jest. She crawled over to her and got in between her legs. They kissed again, Adora groping at her tits and pinching her nipples.

During the kiss, Catra brought her hand down to Adora’s vulva, thumbing at her clit.

“You want me to fuck you?” She asked, Adora, nodded and stopped touching her tits to wrap her arms around her neck.

Catra looked down to Adora’s pussy, it was glistening and twitching with arousal.

The magicat grabbed the strap and moved the tip near her vagina and pushed forward a little. Adora gasped and her legs went around Catra’s legs. “What?”

“It surprised me. Keep going.”

Catra gave a curt nod and pushed in further, watching it disappear into Adora's pussy bit by bit. She went further until her hips met the blonde's ass.

"Mmm," Adora said, her eyes closed and head tilted back. Catra rubbed at her stomach, watching her face.

She moved her hips in a tight circle. Letting Adora get a feel of it. Blunt nails dragged down her back and Adora's face was frozen.

"Oh, you're in me so deep." She groaned out, breathing hard.

Catra chuckled. "Is that a good thing?" She asked, holding Adora's hips in her hands.

"Yes! It's goo-oomph!" Catra covered her mouth, interrupting her.

"That's great, but you have to quiet down, it's the middle of the night." She said, staring down at Adora. Then she moved her hand away when she quieted down.

"But, it feels good!" She whined. And Catra slapped her mouth again.

Adora opened her eyes and gazed into Catra's, blue eyes glassy. Catra shifted her hips back and gave a big thrust, Adora whining loudly under her palm.

"Mmm."

Catra leaned down and put her face beside Adora, their chests touching. She was getting close. Her thighs were burning from exertion, but it was worth it. Adora's cries of pleasure rang through her ears.

She turned her head and spoke in Adora's ear, trying to get her there faster. "Are you close? Are you about to cum?"

Adora nodded quickly and Catra kept her pace, fast and quick. "I'm close too, fuck, I love you."

The blonde nodded. "Me too. I love you. Ah, I'm com-"

Catra felt Adora shake and tighten her legs to bring Catra further in. Then her own orgasm came and she lost sight and feeling in her toes.

The magicat caught her breath and leaned back to see Adora looking at the ceiling.

“Are you dead?” She asked, and Adora’s eyes went to her. She shook her head.

Catra pulled out of her and Adora exhaled loudly. She pulled the toy off and laid on her stomach, next to her girlfriend.

“You love me,” Adora said, turning to look at Catra. Her eyes widened as she remembered what she said, seconds prior.

“I love you.” She admitted. The cat was already out of the bag.

“I would hug you, but I can’t feel my legs,” Adora said, chuckling.

Catra got up for her and cuddled her.

Catra waited for her kid to come out of the school. She listened to the radio and watched the clock. Her car was parked on the curb in front of the school, waiting semi- impatient.

Then, like always, she heard a knock at her window, but was disappointed to see it wasn't her Adora or Finn. It was one of the PTO moms. Ugh.

She rolled the window down and smiled as sweetly as she could.

"Hi, Catra." The red haired woman crooned, obviously faking her kindness.

"Hi, Kourtney." She said, her tone peachy. The woman was joined by three others, as if by magic. It was her entourage.

"Hello." She greeted the other woman, not knowing their names, and not caring. They waved at her, small smiles on their faces. They all had the different variations of the same outfit on, with Kourtney wearing red to match her hair.

“So, we haven’t seen you at any of the meetings lately?” Kourtney said, tilting her head impishly. Catra’s ears twitched and she gripped her steering wheel. Obviously she hadn’t, she hadn’t even been invited to the damn thing.

“Oh, I must’ve missed the memo.” She retorted, her grin friendly. She knew how to play this game, they weren’t going to win.

Kourtney put a hand on her chest and fake gasped. “Oh! Well, you have got to come to the next meeting, it would be nice to hear your input. You know, there’s a bake sale going on soon.” She supplied, looking down at Catra from her place outside of her car.

“How do I sign up?” She asked, raising an eyebrow. And the group shot her crazy looks, then they laughed. In her face.

“No, silly! There’s not a sign up sheet. This isn’t theatre auditions. Just come to room 307 tomorrow at 5.” The rest of the group snickered and covered their mouths at Kourtney’s comment.

Catra’s ears went flat on her head and her face screwed up. She wasn’t used to getting berated by grown ass adults, as an adult. This was humiliating. Then, she sighed and leaned outside of her window.

"Okay, yeah. I'll be there." Catra announced, confidence growing again. She could do it.

"Great! And there's a smaaall $40 fee when you join, but that's okay with you?" She said, exaggerating on the word small, stretching it out.

Catra shook her head. "No, not a problem."

Kourtney smirked and clapped her hands. "Perfect! I'll see you there…" Her words trailed off and her eyes went somewhere above her car. She turned around and saw Adora and Finn walk up to her car.

"Hi, Principal Grayskull! How are you doing today?" The redhead asked, chipper and fully focused. Adora, on the other side of the car, opened the front seat for Finn to sit in and then the back for the backpack.

"I'm good, how are you?" She asked, shutting the door and walking over to where they were standing. Catra eyed the interaction with curiosity, her eyebrows raised. The conversation continued, and dragged on, Adora looking like she was bored out of her mind.

"... so we ended up having to get new cleats in the first place! Isn't that crazy?" She laughed, placing a hand on Adora's shoulder as she did. The blonde woman glanced at Catra from her spot and shot her a “help me” look.

“Um, Kourtney? I think Principal Grayskull had something to tell me about my kid.” She said, trying to get the woman away from Adora.

She widened her eyes and giggled, a way too fake giggle, and swept her hair off her shoulder. “Oh, ok. I’ll leave you to it!” Kourtney said, shoving Adora playfully and walking away, her minions following her.

“That was horrible.” Adora said, sighing and leaning into the window, after silencing her radio. She smiled sweetly at Catra and to Finn. “Yeah, she basically coerced me into joining the PTO.” She said, watching the woman chat with her “friends”. Where were their kids?

“She what.” Adora said flatly, face serious.

Catra held her wrist and smiled. “No, not like that. I wanted to join. I need to be more active in the school.” Adora was so quick to fight for her honor, she was like a sexy knight.

“Oh, okay. That’s fine. But are you sure?” Adora asked, making sure.

Catra nodded. “Yes, and I want to prove to her that I’m not immature or poor.” Adora looked over her, somehow assessing her. “Okay, I trust you. I’ll see you later?”

“Yeah, I’ll see you.” The magicat said, and Adora patted the inside of the car window, leaving the two magicats together.

“Well, Finn. You’re about to have a PTO mom.” She said, facing her child, a grin on her face. Finn chuckled, “ you’re so embarrassing.”

Catra D’riluth was scared. She was scared and afraid, it was the only time since meeting Adora and giving birth to Finn. She stood in front of room 307 and held her breath. It was fine. She was fine. This was just the moms accepting her as one of them, she was making it.

When Finn first went to school, she was often mistaken as their sister or aunt, and not as a mom. It was frustrating. She blamed it on her short haircut at the time, it made her look younger and henceforth making her seem unlike a mother. But, it stuck with her. Now, she just wanted to be seen as a valid mother. She didn’t carry her child and raise them, just to be seen as a sister.

She let out her breath and flattened the fur on her tail, it was frizzy due to her fear. The magicat raised her fist and brought it to the wood, knocking soundly. She held down, and waited for the door to open. Footsteps approached and she stepped back, facing a very purple woman.

She waved slightly and walked into the classroom, seeing the group of women, and some people who weren't women. Cool.

It looked like it hadn't started yet because they were standing up, eating muffins and talking amongst themselves. The class was arranged in a u-shape, the teacher's desk at the top of it.

"Hi, I'm Glimmer Moon. Nice to meet you." The woman who opened the door said, reaching her hand out to shake. Catra looked at the hand and up to the woman, not expecting this. She gripped the hand and gave a firm shake. "Catra D'riluth."

The woman was around her height and had bright purple and pink hair, she really stood out in the group. Not like Catra didn't, she was the only of her kind.

"Is this your first meeting? I've never seen you around." Glimmer said, walking away from the door and to the snack table. Catra nodded. "Yeah, I've never been to one of these before. Have you?" They got to the table and Catra picked up a muffin, so did Glimmer.

"Yes, I was actually the president last year." She said, shrugging. Catra's eyes widened and looked over her appearance. Someone like her was the President?

She chuckled and looked at the ground, “I know. My hair is something me and my kid did. Apparently, nobody likes it around here.” She touched the ends of her short cut. It was actually kind of cute.

“So, they didn’t vote for you again because of your hair color?” Catra asked, taking a bite of the muffin. It was delicious. Glimmer nodded and leaned on the table.

“My husband says it was a coincidence, but c’mon. Nobody is interesting here! They like boring over fun.” Catra listened and nodded along. That was just crazy, what kind of people vote out someone just because of hair color.

Then, a chime rang through the room and her attention went to the front of the class, there was a woman with a tiny bell, ringing it. What the hell, was this Pavlov’s dog?

As if in a trance, everyone suddenly stopped talking and made their way to the seats. Glimmer whispered in her ear. “It’s time. Sit with me.” Catra nodded and followed Glimmer to the seats.

“Good afternoon Parents! And thank you for coming to today’s PTO meeting.” Kourtney said, sitting at the largest desk at the top of the “U”.

“Meeting called to order at 5:10 p.m.”

"Okay, old business. Last meeting, we talked about the different types of fundraisers we will be holding throughout the school year, for the different sport programs. We will start with a bake sale for the basketball team."

Catra looked around as the woman spoke. Everyone else was paying rapt attention and she noticed how uniformed they looked. She and Glimmer definitely stood out.

"... okay, on to new business. But before that we'd like to welcome our newest member, please stand and introduce yourself." The woman said, smiling at her.

Glimmer turned to her and widened her eyes. Catra looked around the room and stood up slowly, her tail swayed nervously. She cleared her throat and greeting the room.

"Hey, I'm Catra D'riluth. I have a kid who goes here named Finn, they're in the 8th grade." She said, her eyes looking around, landing on Kourtney.

When she finished speaking she sat down and some parent came up to her with an open envelope and a rolled up t-shirt.

She put her money into the envelope and grabbed the shirt. It was light blue with white wording.

“Okay! Now that that’s out of the way…

When the meeting was over, Catra was drained. It was absolute hell, she felt like she didn’t understand anything that was going on, and Kourtney kept shooting her glances through its entirety.

“Hi, Catra isn’t it? I’m Scorpia.” A tall woman said, standing next to her and holding a pincer out. Wait, a pincer. She was different too.

Catra smirked and shook the claw. Scorpia was nice, she had twins in the school who were apparently in the same grade as Finn.

“Yeah, they look just like my wife though, my genes aren’t strong.” She chuckled, rubbing the back of her neck. Catra couldn’t relate, Finn was all hers.

“Does Finn look like their other mom?” Catra stared at the woman and gave her a “ what the fuck?” face. If she’s talking about Adora, maybe she could give this conversation a chance, but it was obvious she wasn’t talking about the blonde.

Besides, it looked like nobody knew of her and Adora’s relationship. Or at least they were good at hiding it. They never kissed at school, and frankly it wasn't even any of their fucking business.

"Oh, sore spot? I'm sorry." The scorpioni woman apologized, hiding her face behind the huge claws. Catra sighed and looked at Glimmer, who was still behind her for a reason.

"No, it's fine. Just… don't bring it up. She's not really in the picture." Catra admitted nervously, would her new friends not like it.

"Oh! That's okay, yeah I won't bring it up."

"I know you weren't talking to me, but I won't either." Glimmer said from beside her.

The magicat woman's ear swiveled when she heard someone talk boisterously loud, she saw Kourtney waving her hands around and flipping her fire red hair around. She was talking to her minions—friends.

"Ugh, can I be honest? I hate her." Glimmer said, turning to look at the woman. The uniquely haired woman's face was in a scowl and her arms were crossed.

"I don't want to be mean, but yeah I agree." Scorpia said, and that surprised Catra. She didn't take the woman to be the "hate" type. That was more expected from Glitter.

Catra hummed. “Yeah, she basically forced me to come to this. And she was flirting with my girlfriend.” Catra wanted to ignore it, but it was really obvious. The long talk, the shoulder touching, just signs of flirting. And wasn’t she like five years older than her?

Adora wasn’t that much older than Catra, to her surprise. When she found out Catra literally gasped.

“Wait, so you’re not 40 something?” Catra had asked, looking into pools of blue eyes. Those eyes widened and looked frantically around.

“No, I’m only 34, barely older than you. Do I look that old?” She said, touching her forehead. She was very insecure about it. Catra shook her head and stroked the blonde’s cheek. “No, Babe, you do not. You’re smoking hot.” She smirked.

Adora’s eyes went half lidded and she moved to lay on top of Catra. “Oh really?”

She nodded, and was met with tons of kisses on her face and neck. “Ah, that tickles. Stop!” She laughed.

“You’re girlfriend?” Scorpia said, her face paler than it was before. Catra shook her head, not knowing what was going on. “Don’t tell me you’re dating the principal.” Glimmer said, putting a hand on Catra’s shoulder.

Catra nodded slowly, looking from Scorpia and Glimmer for a reaction. They both sucked air in quickly and held it. Then, Glimmer turned her around, so their backs were facing Kourtney.

“Catra, Kourtney has been obsessing over the principal for years now, since she was just teaching at the school.” Glimmer whispered. Catra furrowed her eyebrows, “What?”

Scorpia nodded furiously and her face was scared. “Why are you guys so afraid? She has no power.” Catra said, chuckling her fear off. Her fur and hair were starting to rise.

“Oh yes she does. Catra, she is the president of the PTO, she can start one rumor, and you’ll have to move Finn to a new school.” Glimmer elaborated. Catra didn’t want that. But couldn’t Adora help?

“Well, if that happens, I’ll just tell Ms. Grayskull.” She said, thinking she found a simple solution. Glimmer and Scorpia shot worried looks at each other.

“That’s not how it works. You see, Catra, if a rumor spreads throughout the parents, it goes to the staff, then the kids, it would be too late at that point.” Glimmer said, worry evident in her purple eyes.

This could not happen. She didn't want to move Finn from this school. She gave both of them a determined look. "Well you both have to help me. Let's change the PTO for good. And use it for those like us, for those who are different. And not for people like that." Scorpia smiled and engulfed Catra in a hug, making her run out of breath.

"That's so great. Let's make this the best last year!" Scorpia said, not loud enough for Kourtney to hear fortunately. Glimmer nodded and put a hand on her hip. "That sounds like a great plan."

So, the three of them met up. At Glimmer's house the first time. It was a little awkward, but she liked these people.

"Bow! Come here. Come meet my new gal pals!" Glimmer shouted, from where she sat. Catra took that time to look around her house. She had money. Like money money. This was good, they couldn't all be barely making it. But, that wasn't Catra anymore was it? Adora helped her a lot, that went with slipping a little hundred dollar bill in her wallet from time to time.

She sat in a chair at her kitchen island and saw the cool, useless appliances and knickknacks that the woman had. Then, her eyes wandered over to the wall, there was a wedding photo of Glimmer and her husband, then a family picture with Glimmer, Bow, and their daughter. So cute.

"Sorry, I was putting a new load of laundry in the washing machine." He apologized as he came up to them. He was a pretty man, his hair was neatly cut and he had a… crop top on?

"No, it's alright. I just wanted to introduce you to my new friends, Catra and Scorpia. They're in the PTO." Glimmer said, proudly showing them to Bow.

The black man laughed and held his hand out. Catra shook it and then Scorpia.

"Good to meet you." Catra said, smiling. Glimmer had given them mimosas, since it was only 11 am.

She kind of missed her kid. This was the most mommy shit she had ever done, but it was kind of fun. She needed to hang with some other adults other than her coworkers and Adora. And sweet Adora let her go this morning and promised an eventful day for her and Finn. That probably meant the Switch, but it was good enough.

The magicat sipped her drink and felt the bubbles pop in her throat. Scorpia held the man longer than he needed to, going on and on about how nice the house was and how pretty their daughter was. She was so nice it hurt.

When Scorpia finally let the man go back to doing his chores, Glimmer popped up. "Okay, so we need a plan. To take back the PTO... for good.” She slurred, was she drunk?

Scorpia patted her on the back, “Hey, Glimmer. You alright buddy? Glimmmerr?” She said, trying to make her come out of the haze.

“I’m fine, I’m fine! Just drank a little too much. Anyways, we have to defeat Kourtney before she tries to steal Catra’s woman!” She said, and they cheered with her, maybe they were drunk too.

“Totally. She can’t have my Adora, she can’t get her filthy hands on her.” She said, confidently looking at her friends, who had wide smiles on their faces. They all laughed until their cheeks were hurting.

“This is a mess. I’m going to have to move.” She said, slowly put her face on the counter of the table, feeling the cold surface on her cheek.

“No, that’s not going to happen because we’re going to show out for the bake sale, that’s what’s next. Then, everyone will love us, and not vote for Kourtney again.” Glimmer said, all of a sudden sober and standing up.

Scorpia stands up too, and has a determined look on her face. “Yeah, okay. We can do this. Glimmer, drive us to the grocery store.”

“Hey, Catra, how’s it going? Me and Finn miss you!” Adora says over the phone, Catra rolls her eyes. “I saw you this morning, dummy.”

In the background, there’s sounds of Finn yelling and grunting about whatever game they’re playing. Adora sighs wistfully, “But that was six and a half hours ago!” She whined. Adora was so clingy, Catra loved it. She soaked it all up.

“Well, I should be home at 8 so wait for me, okay? I love you.” She says into the phone and Finn screams it back, she must’ve been on speaker. And Adora croons it, “I love youuu.”

Catra laughed and hung up the phone, making her way over to the catastrophe happening in Glimmer’s kitchen. Flour was everywhere and cake batter leaked and dripped all over the place.

“Okay, what happened in the two minutes I was gone?” She asked, coming up to the mixing bowl and peering inside, only to see nothing.

She sighed and dropped her phone in the pockets of her apron and wiped her hands on it. “Glimmer, I want you working on mixing. Scorpia, pour the batter in the pans when it’s done. And I’ll mix everything together and put it in the oven.” She instructed, fixing the chaos.

Hours past, and they finished. They really finished. And everything looked great.

"Great job team." She said, patting them on their backs. "I'm bringing the two cakes and a dozen cupcakes on Monday, Glimmer you bring two cakes and Scorpia, you bring two dozen cupcakes." Catra said, getting what she was supposed to bring and taking home.

"I'll see you guys later." She waved and they waved back. Then, she went home.

"I'm back!" She said, coming into the apartment and dropping her things on the dining table. She really didn't feel like carrying the cakes up the stairs, so her plan was to get either Finn or Adora to do it.

"Hey Catra." Adora said, popping from out of nowhere and pulling Catra in for a kiss. It went on for an awfully long time and she started to feel arousal pool in her stomach. She pulled back, eyes wide and a grin on her face.

"What was that about?" Catra asked. She wasn't complaining, it was just really sudden. And where was her baby? They usually would've come to her by now.

She narrowed her eyes. “Where’s Finn?” She didn’t hear any game or shower, so where were they? Adora laughed nervously and leaned on the table, smiling tight.

“Adora, I’m serious. Where is Finn?” She said, hand on hip and fangs blaring.

“I’m right here, mommy.” Finn said, coming from their room and up to Catra. The woman’s face was stripped of its aggravation when she heard their voice, but then her mouth fell open at the sight of them.

Catra blinked, rubbed her eyes, and looked again. She knew her eyes weren’t failing her. She breathed in deeply and turned slowly to Adora. “What happened?” Yes, she was using her ”mom voice”, but it was completely valid. She left seeing her kid one way, and now they looked completely different!

They’re previously brown mane and tail were now bright blonde. A prank. That’s what this was.

“Okay, haha. You got me. Now take it off.” She said to Finn, when they didn’t remove a wig or put some water on their hair, she knew it was real.

“Do you like it?” They asked, coming closer to Catra, their face apprehensive. Catra was hyperventilating and her vision blurred. This was not what she wanted to deal with today.

“Yeah, it’s great. You look so... great.” They didn’t look bad, per say, she was just shocked.

“Oh! That’s awesome. I thought you were going to be mad.” Finn said, sighing in relief and went back to their room. When they closed the door, Catra slowly turned to Adora. She was mad, just not at Finn.

“Catra… I—”

“Adora, room. Now.” She said, voice calm for the situation.

The original blonde walked to their bedroom. If she had a tail, it would be in between her legs. When they got in the privacy of their room, Adora sat on the bed, twiddling her thumbs.

Catra paced in front of Adora her tail whipping around in her haste. At this point, she was going to make a trail in the rug.

Adora tried to talk again and Catra stopped pacing to silence her. She shushed her and breathed in and out.

“Adora, why?” She asked, not knowing what to say.

The blonde sighed and looked up at Catra. Regret in her eyes. “They wanted it.”

Catra rolled her eyes and sat down, crossing her legs. “Just because they want something doesn’t mean you have to let them. That’s what parenting is about. Sometimes you can’t have everything.” She shrugged and looked into the blue eyes.

“I know. And I want to be a good Mama, it’s just… they said they wanted to look like me.” She said, picking up a piece of her blonde hair and smiling lightly at Catra.

She sighed and got closer to Adora, putting her legs into her lap. She held onto her chin and turned her, so that they were eye to eye.

“And that’s perfectly ok, it’s actually pretty cool. It means we’re getting closer as a family. But, families talk to each other about things. Like if we’re bleaching our kid’s hair, for example.” Catra said and Adora laughed.

“Okay, I’ll tell you things from now on. Oh, I got one… I love you.” Adora said, Catra rolled her eyes at the cheesiness.

“I love you too. Please never pull anything like this again.” She said sweetly, and kissed Adora on the lips.

“Ok, tell me the full story later. I need your help to get these cakes out of the car.” She patted Adora on the cheek and sat up.

“I knew you tasted sweet, I couldn’t place it.” Adora said, licking her lips.

Catra rolled her eyes, “Come on.”

Thanks for all the kudos and comments! It means a lot <3

The bake sale was in full swing, money was being exchanged quickly and the amount of earning was rising quickly. At her table, stood Scorpia and Glimmer, they were busy handing cupcakes and cakes out to those who wanted them. Catra's job was to receive the money and give back any change that was needed.

"Wow, our table is doing great!" Glimmer said, looking at everyone else's table and seeing it still full of cakes. Catra smirked and set the money down in the green metal box they put the earnings in.

There wasn't a competition explicitly stated at the PTO meeting, but with the way Kourtney was looking over at them, it was obvious there was some rivalry.

They only had 30 minutes left until the sale was over, and Catra had only two cupcakes left, a success in her book. Since they brought 36 of them and the sale was only two hours, they were on fire.

The tell tale sound of heels clicking and keys jingling came into earshot. She leaned on the table and smiled when she saw her lady love, Adora, and her baby.

"Hey, Catra. We would like two cupcakes please." Adora asked, and Finn nodded quickly, eyes unwavering from the desserts.

Catra looked to her friends and they were smiling hard watching her and Adora. This show of badassery would definitely make Kourtney back off. She saw Glimmer and Scorpia individually give the cupcakes to them, Adora handing the cash to them.

"Wow, I didn't know you could bake?" Adora said after taking a bite and looking surprised. Catra shrugged and looked at her friends. "I don't do it by myself. Adora, this is Scorpia and Glimmer." The woman waved politely and got waves back from her friends.

"And this is my kid, Finn." She said, but they were unable to answer or do anything at the moment, their face was covered in light blue frosting, the artificial sugar sticking to their fur. Catra chuckled and sighed. "Yeah, that's Finn for you." The younger magicat responded by sticking their tongue out at her, then trying to get the frosting off.

If this wasn't a public place, Catra would've licked their face clean, but that would embarrass them ten fold, and she didn't want that to happen. But, as soon as she thought about helping them, Adora grabbed some napkins off the table and wiped the kid's face. Even going as far as licking her thumb and wiping their face.

"Ugh, mama, you're so embarrassing!" Finn cried out, and walked out of the gym, to the bathrooms. Adora chuckled and looked at Catra, the two of them sharing a moment. Adora was quickly taking to this parent thing. She was great. There were some setbacks, like the bleaching, but other than that, she was doing pretty good.

After only being together for 3—almost 4 months, Catra was so in love. In love with everything Adora. She turned to her friends and nodded. "We only have one cake to sell and we'll be sold out."

She made the mistake of looking over to where Kourtney's booth was and was confused to see her missing, only her minions in her place. "Oh, shit."

Where did she go? When she thought that the red haired woman was completely gone, she showed up to their table, her light blue shirt tied to the side with a rubber band.

"Hey, Principal Grayskull," She said waving cheerily at Adora and then deadpanned at Catra and her friends.

"And others." Catra rolled her eyes and shifted her weight on her hip.

“Hey Kourtney.” She said, watching her give her group a look, before she turned to Adora.

“So, have you tried my cupcakes yet? They’re to die for.” She said, holding onto Adora’s shoulder and gently moving her away from Catra. But Adora didn’t budge, “No, I actually had Catra’s cupcakes, they were very good!”

The woman’s face fell for a second, but she soon recovered. “Oh, that’s no big deal! We’re just glad you came to support us.” She chuckled through her teeth and Catra wanted to pump her fist in victory.

“Well… I gotta go check on my kid…” Adora said awkwardly, when the conversation died down. Catra’s eyes widened and her heart soared, Adora really loved their kid.

“Oh, oh! Wait,” But, by the time she went to ask Adora, the principal was already gone in a flash. That’s her Adora.

Kourtney shifted her eyes to Catra then Glimmer and hummed, turning to head back to her table. At that, Glimmer squealed excitedly. “Wow, that was crazy. She really learned her place then!” Scorpia cheered beside her.

“Yeah, nobody messes with the mom trio.”

Catra quickly shot her a look. “No, we’re not calling ourselves that.”

“I was thinking, Glimmer group.”

“Or nothing!” Catra added.

They succeeded and no rumors were spread. Well, not ones she knew of anyway. Catra was at Scorpia’s house this time, having their weekly “Mom trio” meeting. This time, Catra told Adora one thing before she left her with Finn.

“I better not come home to see anything different with Finn. No tattoo, no piercing, nothing. Understand?” She said to Adora. The blonde nodded quickly and kissed her on the cheek.

“Understood!”

Not only was the blonde a hassle, Finn didn’t comb their damn hair. At all. Catra was guilty of it too, but she never chemically changed her hair. The only thing she did was cut it off in a dramatic fit of rage. She found out her girlfriend dumped her and left her with a kid and… snip snip. She remembered how the conversation went almost 15 years ago.

“You… what?” She said in disbelief, holding the phone to her ear. She was on the phone with her girlfriend at the time, Finn’s other biological mother.

“I can’t do this, Catra. I- I have plans, I have a future.” The woman stated. Catra stopped what she was doing and furrowed her eyebrows.

“What? And I don’t?” Her voice was shaking and she held onto the sink for support. She had a future, had goals, had hopes and dreams. And this kid was not going to stop her from achieving them.

Tears fell down her fuzzy face and she quickly wiped them away. Then, she bit her lip to hold back a sob. This was not happening.

“I never said that!” She cried. But it was heavily implied.

“So, you’re going to leave me because I don’t fit into your future? Hmm?” She asked aggressively. Her anger overtook her heartbreak, it was too much.

She started to hyperventilate and moved to sit on the toilet, putting the phone on speaker, and setting it on the counter. She huffed and she felt like she was going to die, her lungs not taking in enough air.

“Catra? Catra!” The woman said over the phone, but she ignored it. If she thought she had no future with Catra, fine. There was no future with her.

She regained her breath, her tears stinging her eyes, and leaned back. She grabbed the phone and spoke into it. “Fine. Leave me then. Go achieve your dreams, I don’t care.” Then, she hung up and cried.

Catra cried until she passed out, from exhaustion or dehydration, she didn’t know. Her hands went to her face, feeling dried tears and snot, then wiped it off disgustedly.

She carded her hands through her hair, feeling it’s long silky strands through her fingers.

“No future my ass.” She eyed the scissors sitting on her counter and sighed. Maybe it was time for a change.

“Do you want tea? You look… not present.” Scorpia’s wife, Perfuma said, coming up to her and shocking her out of her reverie.

Catra blinked out of her stupor and nodded. “Yeah, it doesn't matter what kind.” She smiled at the blonde woman and she smiled back, rubbing Catra in her back.

“So, we beat Kourtney at the bake sale. That’s a start.” Glimmer said, leaning back on the couch and smirking.

“Yeah! Her face was so funny, when she heard the principal say she ate our cupcakes instead of hers, I wanted to burst out laughing.” Scorpia said, waving her pincers excitedly.

Catra nodded along minutely, she was out of it a little. She thought about Kourtney and how she had been pursuing Adora for years, and took pity on her. Adora seemed to know what was going on, but Kourtney… she didn’t. Sure, she was a bitch and her fake kindness was a pain in the ass, her attraction to Adora was valid, and nobody deserves to be led astray.

“Hey, buddy. Are you okay?” Scorpia asked, turning around to face the magicat woman, her face concerned. Catra nodded again, she was fine, just not in the mood for excitement. Thinking about her ex led to this state of mind.

“Here you go, Catra.” Perfuma said, putting a kind hand on her shoulder and handing her a cup of tea. Catra smiled at her in gratitude and took a sip, that was better.

She sighed and looked at her friends. “I’m just thinking about Kourtney.”

Glimmer held up an eyebrow. “Uh, why?” She asked.

“I was thinking of how she’s a single mom like me, and maybe she needs some help.” Catra explained.

Her friends hummed and thought about it. Then, Glimmer spoke again. “You feel bad for her, even though she’s been borderline harassing your girlfriend and parents.”

“Yeah, I don’t know about that, Cat.” Scorpia added.

Catra put her cup down and leaned back onto the couch, relaxing. “She’s probably hurting and taking it out on every one.” She shrugged.

Her friends couldn’t relate to it, they were married, then had their kids, it wasn’t something they struggled with.

“Oh,” they weakly said.

“I think we should still fight for you to be the president, Glim, but maybe we can go a little softer on her. The elections are coming up soon, but we should attack with kindness, not with force.”

They nodded at her plan and Catra was glad for it. She knew Adora wouldn’t leave her. They loved each other, it was a waste of energy to fight like this. They were adults, ones who could converse.

That night, she got into her bed and groaned when her head hit the pillow. She was exhausted and thoughts of her ex girlfriend did not help. “What’s wrong, Catra?” Adora said, from behind her. This woman never went to her own house, but she didn’t need to go anywhere.

Catra rolled over to face her girlfriend, a small smile on her face. The blonde had her hair down, her face a light orange shade due to the lamps beside her bed. The magicat let her tail trail along her thigh, needing more touch.

“I’ve been thinking.” She said, bringing her hand up to smooth Adora’s hair out of her face, seeing more of her gray blue eyes. She was purring loudly, comfortable in her environment.

“About what?” She asked, her eyes searching Catra’s face.

“Finn’s ex-mom.” She answered simply. There was no use in lying. Adora flinched, her eyebrows furrowed. “Don’t worry, I was just thinking about how things ended.” She stated simply, and used her thumb to smooth out Adora’s worry lines.

“Oh,” Adora said.

“I think you need to tell Kourtney that you’re in a relationship, and that you’re not interested. I know you’re nice and all, but she doesn’t know.” Catra said, watching the blonde’s face.

Adora nodded and held Catra’s hand in hers, then brought it to her lips, kissing it. “Whatever you need. I’ll do it.” Catra smiled and kissed her lips. “I love you, Babe.” Adora put her hand on her shoulder and leaned to whisper in her ear and nibble in it. “I love you, too.”

The door slipped open and the two adults moved apart, Catra had her back to the door, so she just looked at Adora. “Hey Finn, what’s up?”

“I just wanted to sleep in here. That’s it.” They said and closed the door behind them. If the door was already closed, there was no saying no.

“Yeah, okay, get in here.” Adora said, laughing a little. The younger magicat got into the bed and carefully climbed over Catra and into the middle. Catra got closer to her kitten breathed in their smell, what she always did when they were this close.

She glanced up at her girlfriend and put an arm out, then Adora wrapped into their embraces.

“I told her.” Adora said, rubbing her face with a hand. Catra sighed and kissed her in the cheek. “It had to be done, don’t feel bad. Now she can stop flirting with my woman.” She said, kissing the blonde’s cheek. She really wanted more, but she was in the school parking lot and Finn was right beside them.

“The meeting is going to be rough on Friday.” Catra said, it would certainly be a surprise as to what happens.

“But you’ll be fine, my love. Oh! I gotta go, someone’s calling me over, I’ll see you later?” She asked, raising an eyebrow.

“Adora, you have a house, you have to go home at some point.” Catra said, shaking her head at her girlfriend’s ridiculousness.

“Maybe I won’t.” Adora said, looking straight into Catra’s blue and yellow eyes. Catra was shocked.

“Huh?”

“We’ll talk about it later, ok? Love you guys!” And she power walked towards the entrance of the school, talking to a man.

Finn was staring at her. They always did this.

“Mama is going to move in with us?” They asked, moving their head so it was close to Catra’s face, their eyes sparkling. “You want her to?” Catra asked, smirking at the question.

She wanted her to. More Adora the better. Finn started bouncing in their seat. “Uh yeah! She’s great. Oh Stars! That means we can play more Switch, she can cook more, wow!” The magicat said, practically squealing.

Catra shifted into drive and pulled out of the school. “Woah, hold up. So, you want Mama to live with us? Like forever?” She asked, looking over at Finn and seeing them repeatedly nod their head. Wow.

“Ok, I’ll-uh, think about that, baby.” She smiled and looked back at the road.

On Friday, there was another meeting and Kourtney didn’t look good, at all. She was taking the rejection hard. “So, I’m guessing Adora told her?” Glimmer asked, leaning over to whisper in her ear. Catra nodded, her eyes not moving from the visibly tired redhead.

“It needed to happen.” She said, trying to convince her friends, but it was mostly to convince herself. And took a bite of muffin, the blueberry taste hitting her tongue. “Damn these are so good.” She said, and ate the whole thing in another bite. Then, she slyly got another one from the table and ate it.

“Woah, um slow down there, Wildcat.” Scorpia said, holding a pincer out. Catra shook her head and continued to eat. She was stress eating, it happened from time to time, and now was one of those times.

What had Catra done? She didn’t need to meddle with this woman, now she wasn’t doing well.

“I-I need to get some air.” She said, feeling sick. And she quickly got out of the classroom and to the nearest exit. When there, she sat on the curb and pulled her knees to her chest, breathing in the afternoon air. This was a mistake. She didn’t need to come in this club, the only thing this woman had, and ruin it.

She heard the door crack open behind her, her ear flicking at the sound. It was Glimmer, Scorpia must’ve stayed in the class. The purple-y woman sat down beside her and bumped their shoulders. “Hey,” she greeted. Catra chuckled and looked over to the woman and sighed.

“I’m sorry Glimmer but…”

“You don’t think I should run again.” She said, and Catra quickly shot her eyes open.

“I… yeah. I’m sorry, Glimmer.” Catra said, her eyes full of remorse.

“Catra! Don’t beat yourself up about it. Besides, I don’t think I should run either.”

“Why?” She tilted her head, confused.

“Because this place is not meant for us, we’re different, and so is Scorpia.” Glimmer said, putting a hand on Catra’s knee.

“You’re right, we don’t need this dumb ass thing. C’mon let’s get Scorpia and ditch these people.” She got up and went back into the school, Glimmer following behind her. They opened the door to room 307 and waved at Scorpia to get her to come out. It took a while, but she managed to come out.

“What’s going on guys?” She asked, looking to both of them.

“We’re leaving.” She smirked.

“Oh! Ok, um- let me get my purse.” Scorpia said and walked back in there to get her things and came back out.

“Where to?” Glimmer said, her face ready to cause some mischief. Catra chuckled and rolled her eyes. “Out.”

“It was so fun, Adora! We went out to eat and got some wings and beer. So cool.” She reminisced to her girlfriend. She was laying her head in the blonde’s lap, looking up at her. Her tail moved around rapidly because of her excitement.

“So, what about Kourtney?” Adora asked, scratching at Catra’s scalp with her blunt nails. Catra exhaled, thinking of her answer, she twirled a piece of Adora’s hair around her finger.

“I just wanted her to leave you alone. And that’s done. I don’t want to deal with her anymore, it’s not my business. And fuck the PTO. It’s stupid.” She said, looking at the woman above her. Adora nodded and scratched behind her ears, making her squirm around. “You like that?” The blonde asked, smirking.

“Yeah, it feels nice.” She said, shuddering. Her legs twisting and shuffling, groaned at the feeling. But she held onto the blonde’s wrist before it could excite her too much. “Rain check please. I just want to talk right now...and we’re in the living room.” She chuckled and used Adora’s wrist to rub her neck and face, marking her.

“Ok, Babe. Whatever you need.” Said the blonde, her eyes shining with love. “You’re a sap.” Catra said.

“Your sap.”

“Ugh, you really are.” Catra groaned exaggeratedly.

Then, she spoke again. “I really want you to move in, Adora. I love you and I want to see you all the time.” Their hands interlaced and she rested them on her chest.

“I do too. I want to live with my girlfriend and our kid.” The blonde spoke, a smile planted on her lips.

“Ok, I need to cash in that rain check. When you talk about lovey stuff, it riles me up.” Catra admitted, her cheeks blazing. She got off of Adora’s lap and held onto her hand, rushing them into their room.

“Hurry up and get undressed, Adora. I want all of you.” Catra said, eager to love her girl. Adora was balancing on one leg, trying to get her sock off, and pulling her pants down hurriedly. Catra removed her shirt and bra, sitting on the bed already, waiting for Adora.

“Okay, I got it. What do you want, Babe?” She said, getting on the bed and beside Catra, a grin on her face.

“You.” Catra said, teasingly, her lip quirked up when she saw Adora’s face. Like she was desperate.

“I know that! But, you know, what?” The blonde asked, desperation evident.

Catra smirked and tapped her chin. “I want you to fuck me, like really hard.” Adora’s eyebrows shot up, her mouth gaping. “Yeah, I can definitely do that. Don’t worry.” She said, trying to fake confidence.

Adora stood up and walked over to the closet, her legs were shaky and she looked like she was going to fall over. It was hilarious. She saw the blonde retrieve the box and take it into the bathroom, washing it diligently.

It’s not like they hadn’t before, Adora was like this every time, but she nailed it. Catra had no idea where this nervousness came from. She tingled just thinking of what Adora could do. And she picked the big one, yeah she wasn’t going to walk soon. That was okay.

The blonde made it out of the bathroom and put the strap on, she adjusted it, making sure it didn’t fall apart. It happened twice, to both of them, and it was awkward.

“Adora, come kiss me.” The blonde nodded and got closer, out of breath. Catra breathed in all that Adora gave her. Her smells, her love, everything. She took it all. Catra kissed Adora's mouth, then to her neck, sucking at it and making the blonde groan. She pulled her girlfriend as close to her as she could, and felt her tits in her hands, while still sucking at her neck.

"Mhmm, Catra. Yeah." Adora encouraged, and the magicat continued.

"You like when I touch you, Babe? I can feel how wet you are on my thigh." She could, Adora was soaked and it was making her leg drenched.

The blonde moved her head back and started to bounce and grind on Catra's thigh, then Catra got an idea. "It's okay if you don't want to fuck me. You don't have to." The brunette said, grabbing Adora's hips and helping her move.

Adora gasped out, "really? Are you sure?" She looked down at Catra, her gaze uncertain. She nodded.

"Okay, because I really want you to fuck me." Adora said, quickly getting out of the bed and slipping the strap off. Catra was confused, why didn't Adora say anything?

"Adora, you know you can tell me anything, right? I want you to feel good too." Catra needed to make sure Adora knew this, how many times was Catra the one fully satisfied?

“Yeah, I’ll tell you next time, please hurry and put that on.” Adora asked impatiently.

“Adora, do you promise to tell me when you want something?” She asked, wanting to be perfectly clear.

“Yes, I promise, Catra.”

“Okay, good.” The magicat leaned in to kiss Adora, a passionate kiss that almost made Adora fall off the bed.

“I want you to fuck me, hard. Like you wanted.” Adora admitted bashfully, her cheeks growing red at her words.

“I can do that, mi amor. Wait a sec.” she put the strap on and was surprised how they fit her and Adora, but tossed the realization away when her mind got back on track.

“You want to cowgirl it or?” She asked, hands on her hips and staring at Adora. The blonde thought about it, her face scrunching. “Yeah, lay down, Babe.”

Catra made her way to the bed and rested her back in the pillows there. She shot Adora a smug look and watched as the blonde got to her and swung a leg over her lap.

Once she was settled into her lap, Catra could feel Adora's pussy dampening her fur. She looked up and saw Adora grinning hard. "You're gonna feel so good inside me, Catra. Are you ready?" She said, chuckling. Catra slowly nodded and watched Adora reach behind her to grab the strap. She got on her knees and hovered above the silicone, her other hand on Catra's stomach.

Catra watched Adora's face as she sunk down onto the strap, seeing it go inside of her centimeters at a time. The blonde stopped about half way, her eyes were closed and her mouth was open, panting loudly. Then, after a few more moments, she slid further down, her ass on Catra's thighs.

"Oh, fuck, it's so deep. I picked the bigger one." Adora panted out, hair stuck to her forehead because of her sweating. And her skin tacking because of the air cooling it.

"Do...you want me to pull out?" Catra asked, looking over Adora's face to make sure she was okay.

"No, it's fine. It feels good." She said, beginning to roll her hips around, laying both of her hands flat against Catra's shoulders, picking up her necklace for a second and looking at it.

"Ah, Stars, fuck, it feels so—" she was interrupted when Catra thrusted up into her, making her go still and go down to rest her head on Catra's shoulder, arms splayed out.

She kept rolling, then she bounced on it, making her mouth open even wider. She made sounds like she wanted to speak, but nothing came. Adora panted and leaned back, giving Catra a good view of her tits and stomach. She rested her hands on Catra's thighs and grinded that way.

"I'm already close, fuck." She said, breathily laughing and continued. When she hit a particularly good spot, her legs quivered and she slowly laid on Catra, their breasts touching.

"I'm going to fuck you like you asked me, okay?" Catra asked, her hands going to wrap around the blonde woman's back, holding her in place.

"Okay, yeah. Do it." She huffed out.

The magicat moved her legs in so that her knees were up and her feet were planted into the bed, giving her more force to work with.

She put her hands at Adora's ass and rapidly sifted her hips up, earning groans from Adora.

"Catra, right there, oh," she cried out into Catra's ear.

The magicat continued to thrust until Adora started tensing her thighs and gasping in her ear. Then, she rolled her hips in a circle, getting little hiccups of moans from the blonde. She rolled off of Catra and to her side, curled into a ball.

Catra came up to her and spooned her from behind. The blonde shook and moved her head to look at her girlfriend. “You never fail, Babe.” She chuckled and exhaled roughly. Catra smiled and kissed her on the lips.

“Did you like it?” Catra teased, moved her hands to tickle at her girlfriend’s sides.

Winter Break!!

Chapter Notes

Part one lol

See the end of the chapter for more notes

A month passed by in a flash, and suddenly all the leaves were dead and people started to layer their clothes. All the drama from Kourtney and the mom trio died down. Actually, from what it seemed like, the president of the PTO, found a girlfriend. So, everything worked out just fine.

It was the last day before Winter Break started, and Catra was pumped, to say the least. Adora was fully moved in at this point, all house details were squared away and Catra talked to her Landlord about it. She was a woman in her early 50s who seemed to be annoying and caring at the same time.

"So, Castaspella, I came in to talk to you about my girlfriend moving in? She would obviously be paying rent and—"

She interrupted Catra, putting a finger to her lips. "Girlfriend! Well, just for you sweet cheeks, she can move in. From one lesbian to another." She said, winking and patting her on the shoulder.

“Now, leave. I have a sweater to make in time for my niece’s birthday. She’s a Sagittarius and you know how they are… wait what sign are you?” She asked, raising a black eyebrow.

“Scorpio.” She answered, unsure what she would do with the information.

“Yep! Scorpio’s always know their signs. And what’s your girlfriend’s?” She asked, digging through her drawer and producing two crochet needles.

“Uh, Capricorn?”

“Hmm, okay. And what about that kid of yours?” She looked through her drawer again and pulled out a giant spool of yarn.

“Aries.”

Castaspella looked up and smiled widely. “Aw, your signs all fit well in your little family. Ok, now go. I have to finish this, Glimmer deserves the best!”

“Wait, Glimmer? Glimmer Moon—oh.” She asked, this was so crazy.

“Yes! You know my niece?” Her eyes lit up and she set her materials down. Catra nodded at the question, her tail picking up a pace behind her. “Yeah, she's my friend.”

Castaspella grinned and squeezed Catra’s shoulder. “That’s great. Please tell her to come visit the next time you see her. She’s bad at that.”

“Sure will. And thank you so much.” Catra thanked her. Casta waved her off. “Oh, don’t worry about it. Just make your family happy, ok? And pay your rent on time.” Her face went serious at the end and she pointed a needle at her.

“Yes, thank you.”

Adora moved in the next week and Finn was ecstatic, showing her around the apartment as if she didn’t halfway live there already. It was perfect

And now they were leaving the apartment. Quite ironic, but they were on break, she definitely needed one. The family of three rented a car and took a trip to Bright Moon. The city.

It was only a 4 hour drive from their little town, so it just seemed perfect. Sure, Thaymor was great, but it was boring and not an ideal place for vacation.

Catra felt her long hair fly through the wind as Adora sped down the highway. She dropped the top of her convertible, the cool winter air biting at the magicat's skin.

The great thing about Bright Moon was that it stayed the same weather year round. Maybe it had something to do with a climate crisis or something, but that wasn't on Catra's mind. She had her mind on break. On spending time sleeping and resting.

"So, what are we doing first when we get there?" Finn asked, popping in between the front seats, looking from Catra to Adora. Adora smiled and glanced at them, " well, I was thinking of going to the beach first or, we can go to the winter fair—that's a thing they do here. It's like the Halloween fair in Thaymor, but with more budget."

Catra rolled her eyes and put sunglasses over her eyes. Why did she not expect this? Adora and Finn had the most exuberant personalities she had ever seen—besides Scorpia, of course they would be all over the place.

"Ooo, let's go to the beach! That's so cool, I've never been to the beach before!" Finn yelled, the wind too loud to use their normal voice. Catra winced at that, they had never been to the beach and it made Catra said to hear that Finn was deprived of these memories.

“Oh really? That’s great! Your first beach experience will be with your best mommies!” Adora said, smiling widely. And that made the guilt go away from Catra’s heart. Their first time at a beach would be with two parents who loved them, who could be mad at that?

“When we get to the hotel, Finn, make sure you get everything you need out of your suitcase because we’re not coming back to the room until tonight, ok?” She said, her “mom voice” in full force.

They nodded and leaned back in their seat, blonde hair whipping around.

When they arrived at the hotel, Catra checked in for them, telling the nice clerk her information and receiving two key cards. The family made their way to the elevators, but Catra was held back. She saw someone in her peripheral vision, she whipped her head around quickly to see them, but she was met with an empty lobby.

That was weird. She laughed it off and followed Adora and Finn into the elevator. She pressed the five button and they went up to their room.

“Ok, Finn, go put on your swimsuit.” Catra said, pointing to the en-suite bathroom. They got off the bed excitedly and went through their things to get the pieces of clothing. Catra watched them sprint in there and held in a giggle.

“Are you alright?” Adora asked, coming up to Catra and holding her hands. She nodded and looked into her blue eyes. “I can’t wait to see you in a bathing suit.” Adora said, smirking. Catra tutted and shook her head. “Too bad, I don’t wear bikinis.”

Adora sighed and fell back on the bed. “Damn, that’s the only reason I came.” She said sarcastically, looking up at the ceiling.

“Get dressed, dummy. You can maybe sneak a peek later.” She threw Adora’s swimsuit onto her face, making her sputter and pull it off quickly.

The sun felt so good on her fur, like it was wrapping her in a large blanket and telling her everything was okay. But, she couldn’t fully relax. It was like someone was watching her, following her every move. Catra cleared her throat and sat up on the beach chair, she pulled her sunglasses down and searched the area for her silly family.

Catra hated the water. They were enemies. Ever since her—no, no bad memories at the beach. She watched Finn and Adora splash each other and Adora picking them up and taking them into the water, their laughter loud enough to be heard from Thaymor.

The magicat smiled and put her glasses back down on her face, then her ear twitched. There really was someone around her. A stupid person too. Could they not tell she was a magicat? They could hear anything and everything.

She sat up completely and looked around the beach, a glare in her eyes. Who the hell would creep up on her like this?

"Mommy! Come look!" Finn yelled, from where they were, now they were on the ground, playing in the sand and making a castle. She got up and walked over to it. "Wow, you already got that far? That's pretty good." She said earnestly, smiling sweetly at her kid.

"Thanks," And they went back to work. Catra looked over to where her lady love was. She was floating serenely on her back, letting the wave move her around. But, she saw the tide approach and knew she couldn't go any further.

She walked back to their spot and laid down on her beach chair, covering her face with her hat. Then, she took a nap, the sun was relaxing her a little too much.

"Catra? Catra!"

She shot awake at the words and tore the hat off of her face, baring her fangs and hissing.

"Woah, Babe, what's up? I just came to tell you we were thinking about grabbing something to eat." Adora said, concerned. The blonde held her hands up in surrender. Catra shook her head and looked at Finn, they looked scared. Their ears were flat on their head and their eyes were wide.

"I'm fine, I must have had a nightmare." She laughed it off and got up, facing away from her family. She was embarrassed, not only did she bare her fangs at Adora, Finn saw it too.

Adora's tone just reminded her of… that woman.

"Maybe we should just go back to the room, then we can let Catra nap some more, and bring her food!" Adora planned. Her and Finn turned and high fived each other.

"Yeah, that sounds good." She said, distantly looking at the waves sloshing. Catra got her things and wrapped an arm around Finn's shoulder, her kid leading her in the right direction.

While they were walking, Catra caught a whiff of a familiar smell. What could be familiar in a city she hadn't been to in years?

Finn tried their hardest to pull more of their weight as they walked, because Catra was seriously lagging behind. Her senses were on high alert and her heart rate sped up. She feared that someone was coming to hurt her family.

“Mom, what is wrong? Your heart is beating so fast. Are you dying?” Finn asked, peering at their mother from the corner of their eye.

“No, I’m not… dying.” She convinced the magicat. Or, tried to convince, they weren’t buying it. “Mama! I’ll hold what you have, come help mommy.” They said, moving Catra’s arm off of their neck and shoulder, and holding her shoulders.

Adora stopped moving in front of them and placed the things in her hand onto the sand. “Ok, baby. I’ll help.” And they switched, Adora holding Catra at her waist. “Hey Catra, we’re gonna get to the room soon, and then you can rest.”

“I’m not tired, just worried.” She admitted quietly so Finn couldn’t hear. They maybe could, but decided to ignore it. Either way, Catra needed to tell Adora.

“Why?” She asked. Putting a hand on her chest. Catra sighed and stopped searching her eyes. “I think someone is following me.”

“Huh? Really?” Adora asked, eyebrows furrowing. They finally made it to their car and Adora handed Finn the keys. “Open the trunk and start the car for me?” She asked, and they nodded quickly.

Catra leaned on the side of the car and rubbed at her temples. She wasn’t able to relax, someone was following her, and her girlfriend and kid thought she was crazy. Great.

"Catra, I believe you. I trust your senses better than mine. I'll do whatever you need." Adora said, coming next to her and squeezing her shoulder.

"Yeah, thank you. I love you." Catra leaned up and gave Adora a quick kiss. Then, she felt the presence go away, relieving her worry temporarily.

"They're gone." She said, eyes wide. Adora packed a few more things and walked to the driver's door, where Finn was mock steering. "That means it's time to go. Get in the back, tire burner." At that, the little magicat jumped to the backseat and put their seatbelt on.

"Yeah, you're right. Let's go."

As soon as Catra got to the hotel, she fell asleep. It was restless and full of nightmares.

"Catra, you've got to calm down." A nurse said, holding onto her shoulder.

She jerked away and shot her a confused look. “What do you mean, call down? I’m literally having a baby and all of you are telling me I’m overreacting.” She said, looking at the people in her hospital room.

That was her mistake, she went to a hospital for humans, definitely was not a good idea. They had no idea what to do for her and thought she was acting crazy whenever she wanted to stand up instead of laying down. Why the hell would she lay down? How would they come out if she was on her back?

So, not only was it painful, she was treated like dirt. She was alone and had no support system, this was bound to happen.

After 7 hours of arguing back and forth with the nurses and doctors, she had Finn. By herself. She could have done it in her bathroom if that was the support she was given.

“Catra we have to take them to clean them.” She deadpanned the nurse and continued to lick her child clean. They knew absolutely nothing and honestly, she wanted to just be alone more than ever.

Catra turned in her hotel bed, her previous sleeping position uncomfortable. She laid on her side and went back to sleep.

“What do you want to do when you finish school?” Catra asked, laying on her stomach and peering up at her girlfriend. Her blue eyes looked into hers, a smile on her face. “Hmm, I want to be an actor. You know, be on the big screen one day.” She said, her hand on Catra’s chin.

“I like that. I want to own a business. It doesn't matter what kind, but I want to be a business owner.” Catra said, purring at the touch of the woman. She laughed at what she said, “Really? You owning a business? Nah, I don’t think it’ll happen.”

She always said things like that. “Aw, Kitty, you know I was joking.” She lifted her chin and kissed her on the mouth.

“Yeah, I know.” Catra chuckled dryly after the kiss. And she went to get off the bed, but her wrist was grabbed. “Kitty, where are you going?” She asked, her voice dripping in seductiveness. Catra looked at her and smiled. “Nowhere.” And climbed to be next to her.

“Good, now what are we doing today?” She asked, but it wasn’t a question. They weren’t going to do what Catra wanted. But that was okay.

“I actually have a test I have to study for today…” she said, looking up at the black haired woman. She tightened her jaw and looked at Catra. “But, you can just do that tomorrow? Why not just hang out with your girlfriend?” Her voice left no room for objections.

“Yeah, I can just do it tomorrow.” She couldn’t, the test was tomorrow.

“Great, let’s watch that new movie on my laptop.” She said, putting her arm around the magicat’s waist and pulling her in tightly.

She felt something rouse her out of her dream/memory thing and she opened her eyes to see Finn in front of her face. “We’re back. And we brought food!” Catra held a hand out and Finn held it and pulled her up.

Then, she stroked the kid’s hair back, feeling at the shaved part they insisted they needed when they got it dyed blonde. She smiled a little and patted her baby’s cheek. She saw Adora place the takeout bag on the hotel table and make her way over.

“It’s salmon. Your favorite.” Adora said. And Catra’s eyes widened and she reached her hands out to get the container.

She opened the box and ate it with her hands, immediately enraptured with it. “Thank you guys.” She said when she swallowed her bite.

After eating and showering, the family got into bed, Finn got their own even though they didn’t really need it, and Catra and Adora shared one. Catra looked over to see Finn spread wide like a starfish and their mouth leaking drool. “The beach wore them out.” She said, whispering to Adora. The blonde giggled quietly and spoke, “If it’s safe tomorrow, can we go to the Winter Festival?”

Catra nodded. “We’ll see.”

That afternoon, after they ate breakfast, they went to the Winter Festival held in Bright Moon. Catra was a wreck after the previous day, but she didn’t want to ruin this vacation.

“What? Ok, let’s go.” Adora said beside her, Finn whispering in her ear. “We’re gonna go to the restroom, can you wait in line for us?” Adora asked and Catra nodded.

Then, she was alone, standing in line for ice skates. It’s what Finn wanted to do, so she agreed. The line was ridiculously long and Catra feared they would run out of skates to give to everyone. Her ear twitched as unfamiliar footsteps came up to her.

When she turned her head, she was met with a stranger. “Uh?” She stuttered out, not knowing what they were doing.

“You’re Catra D’riluth, correct?” They asked, pointy teeth showing as they mischievously smiled. Catra looked them up and down. They were some kind of lizard and they had a long green tail.

“That depends, who’s asking?” She said, moving up when the line had progressed forward. The lizard walked with her, moving when she moved. “Aw, darling, you don’t need to know that. Just be here at 7 tonight.” The reptile handed her a small white card with an address on it. She looked up from the card and to them, raising a brow.

“Can you at least tell me who I’m seeing?” She asked, wanting more information.

They hummed and tapped a heeled boot on the pavement. “You know her, if that’s what you’re wondering.” Catra huffed, that didn’t make things easier.

“Don’t worry, Kitty , you’ll be fine.” And with that, they left. “Wait!” Catra said, trying to get them to come back, but they were gone.

Catra looked at the card in her hand and shoved it into her pocket. Who the hell wanted to see her, and why couldn’t they come to her themselves? Just when she was about to hyperventilate, her family came back and stood next to her.

“Catra, you don’t look so good.”

“Of course I don’t! A pr-private investigator just came up to me and handed me this fucking card,” she pulled it out and gave it to Adora. “And I have to meet some woman at seven…” she got the words out, but she shut down while speaking. She was sweating and out of breathe, she just needed to calm down.

“She is dying, I knew it!” Finn wailed.

“No, she’s not dying, she’s stressed. Let’s take a break from this, we’re going to be here for three more days, we don’t have to do everything at once.” Adora explained, her authoritative voice coming out.

Finn nodded and they got out of line. Catra couldn’t speak, her anxiety taking over. They walked to the car and she slumped in the front seat. “I’m sorry guys.” She said, feeling bad for ruining two days of vacation.

“No, honey, don’t be sorry. This is some worrisome stuff, okay? I’d be the same way.” Catra nodded, her eyes closing.

“It’s six fifty, Babe.” Catra said, tapping the radio clock. Adora kissed her teeth and bit at her lip. “Yeah, are you going?” Adora asked.

She had to, didn't she? Or this woman would harass her forever.

“Finn, cover your ears.” She said, turning around and looking at the magicat. They put their hands over the ears and Catra spoke. “I think it’s their biological mother.”

The blonde's eyes widened, her expression unreadable. "Why?"

"I don't know. And I don't want to see her again, but who knows what she can do."

Adora put the address into her phone and drove them there. They pulled up to a fancy restaurant and Catra shot Adora a confused look. "Come in here with me, if she tries anything I'm kicking her ass."

She was confident now, but when they were dating, Catra would've never uttered those words out of her mouth.

"Name please?" The hostess said, looking down at a list.

"Catra." She said, her arms crossed.

"Oh, follow me." The woman said, taking them to a spot in the back of the restaurant. They were severely underdressed, but it didn't matter. She didn't want to be here.

"Kitty, it's nice to see you again." She heard as she approached the table, seeing her ex girlfriend smirking and leaning back, her arms spread across the booth seat.

Catra gasped and stepped back. Not her. She couldn't deal with this. She considered it, but to see it in person was a whole other thing.

"Come here, Kitty."

"Don't call me Kitty, we're not together anymore." Catra said, shaking her head and stepping back, running into Adora behind her.

"Yeah, I know. You're with blondie over here." She pointed a nail at her, disinterested. The black haired woman rolled her eyes and spoke. "Catra, I searched you down, brought you to this fancy restaurant, and this is how you treat me?"

Catra rolled her eyes. “I don’t owe you anything.”

Maybe they were causing a display in this fancy restaurant, but who cares? She didn't want to be here.

“Oh, yeah? You don’t think I deserve to see my kid?” She said, squinting her eyes, the same thing she always did.

“C’mon, Finn isn’t it? Come sit down next to your Mom.” she said, waving a hand and gesturing for the magicat to come over next to her. They looked conflicted glancing back and forth between the stranger and Adora. But, they didn’t budge.

“That’s alright. You don’t know me, you can’t trust me, right?” Finn nodded at her words and sunk further behind the couple, hiding behind Adora.

She continued to speak, swirling her wine glass. “It’s just us. I rented the whole restaurant out, so we’re alone.” She said, raising an eyebrow and shrugging her shoulders in nonchalance.

“What do you want, Tanya?” Catra asked, hands on her hips, her face determined to get them out of this situation.

“Ah, nothing bad, Kitty. I just wanted to talk, see how you are after 15 years. You sure look the same.” Her eyes raked over Catra, her tongue licking her lips.

“I don’t want you. You treated me like shit.” Catra said, satisfied with the shocked expression in the woman’s face.

She recovered and guffawed. “That’s not how I remember it. Why are you making up things in front of your little family? Trying to make me look bad?” She said, feigning the victim.

“You were the one who sent a P.I. after me. Who does that?” Catra asked, not going back on the fact that Tanya was lying.

“Yes, only to find my girlfriend who suddenly ran off with my kid.” Tanya said, shaking her head and putting on a hurt expression.

“I left you because you were going to leave me first!” Catra shouted.

Tanya smirked and looked at Finn. “Finn, is your Mommy good to you? You obviously still call her mommy, do you still sleep in the same bed as her?”

Finn came from behind Adora and looked at Tanya, a confused face. “W-what’s wrong with that?”

The black haired woman tutted and checked her nails. “It’s not normal, kid. You shouldn’t be doing anything of that. Your “mommy”, smothers you. You’re behind developmentally, and it’s all her fault.” Tanya said, pointing a finger at Catra.

Finn slowly turned to look at Catra. “Momm-Mom, don’t tell me it’s true. Because you said that there’s not one way to love your parents. And if that’s not true that means you were lying.” Catra bit her lip and glanced at Tanya, then to Adora and Finn. She cleared her throat, it was closing up because of the tears coming.

“Wow, I-maybe I will sit with her. You lied to me, you probably did run away from my real Mama.” Adora gasped at that and covered her mouth.

The blonde haired child moved from them and into the seat with Tanya. She ruffled their hair and patted them on the head. “Catra, just accept it. You ran from me, and chose the hard route. You had to make life difficult, when it could’ve been just us.”

Adora faced Catra and furrowed her eyebrows. “Catra, you chose this? I tell you I see my hardworking, dead mother in you, and this whole time, you chose this? I… don’t know about this.” The blonde said, running a hand through her hair.

“Adora, no! She’s lying. I only left her because she didn’t see a future with me and Finn.” Catra held onto Adora’s shoulders as she tried to regain her trust.

Adora turned head and looked into her eyes, she must have seen something because she started nodding. “Catra... I trust you, but this looks bad. But I love you, so I’ll be here.” That was good, one out of two was on her side.

“Catra, Finn wants to have some time with their real Mama, you’re both welcome to stay.” Tanya said, ordering Finn something to drink.

The blonde looked at Catra, distrust in their eyes. “I’m not leaving you with my kid. And you’re not their Mama, you haven’t earned that title.” Catra said, looking at Tanya. She chuckled and leaned back. “Whatever. And how has she earned it?” She asked.

“I’m there for Finn, I took care of them when they were sick, I listen to their wants and needs, and even though I haven’t been in their life long, it’s been longer than you.” Adora shot back, her grey blue eyes staring down at Tanya’s.

She smirked at Adora. “Hmm, blondie you got some bite. But, that still doesn’t excuse Catra.” She flicked her gaze to Catra, deadpanning.

“Finn, I’m telling the truth! You barely know her. Yes, I said that it was normal to call me that and do those things, but it’s because you’re my only baby. And what I said then still stands. I’ll stop, we can stop.”

Finn seemed to consider this, putting a hand on their chin. Then they lit up. “Okay, I’ll consider you if you answer this question.” They addressed Tanya and the woman nodded and looked at the kid.

Finn turned around in their seat and looked at the black haired woman. “Okay, when is my birthday?” They asked, and it seemed to catch her.

She looked at Catra and Adora and down to her lap, where she was counting on her fingers.

“March 12.” She said confidently. Looking at Finn with a smug grin. The blonde magicat frowned and shook their head.

“No, not even close. H-how can you question my mom’s parenting, but not even know my birthday? Mama, when’s my birthday?” They turned and looked at Adora. The blonde answered quickly and confidently. “April 13.”

Catra sighed with relief, it wasn’t like she thought Adora didn’t know, but she had some doubts.

“I don’t want to stay with you. You question my mom’s parenting and mock my Mama in her face, and expect me to want to be in a family with you! Ugh, you suck!”

Finn got out of the seat and pointed a finger in her face. “And you called me behind developmentally. I’m making straight A’s and have lots of friends, you know nothing about me!” Finn huffed out, their fur puffing up.

“Well, your kid and your ex-don’t want you. So, what’s the point in trying anymore?” Adora said, raising an eyebrow and smirking at the woman.

Tanya’s eyes widened and she looked around to see the table glaring at her. “You’ll see how she really is. She said, her eyes dark with rage.

“Yeah, we’ll get there when we get there, right Babe?” Adora said, getting out the booth and side hugging Finn.

“You’re right, my love. I don’t ever want you talking to my family again, I was weak then, but I’m not anymore.” Catra told the woman, making unwavering eye contact.

“You’ll hear from my lawyer!” Tanya yelled, as they all walked away.

Catra turned and raised an eyebrow,“you’re not even on their birth certificate.” Then she laughed and walked out the door.

When they got into the car, Catra felt like a weight was lifted off her shoulders, like she could fly. It was liberating.

Finn came up in between the front seats and looked at Catra. “I’m sorry, Mom, For what I said to you.” Catra smiled and swiped her finger through the bleach blonde hair. “It’s okay, I still love you. That’s what she does. She twists words and doesn’t let you think for yourself. That’s partly why I left her too.”

Then they turned to Adora and hugged her tightly. “I’m so sorry Mama. I can’t believe I said those things and didn’t think about how you would feel about it.” Adora tightened the hug and kissed their forehead.

“It was a mistake, all that matters is that you’re sorry now.” Adora said, leaning back and smiling gently at the magicat.

Finn sat down in the seat correctly and leaned on the door, resting their eyes. It had to be heartbreaking, seeing your own mother act that way in front of you, and not knowing what to think.

Adora started the car and drove off, leaving the restaurant in the dust. It was past evening now, so the city lights shined brightly above them, sparkling their eyes with their fluorescent hues. Catra breathed in and enjoyed the stress free breaths she took.

Soon, the silence between them was thick enough to cut with a knife. Catra glanced over at Adora and saw the purple and blue reflect over her face as she drove, her lips in a tight line.

Catra moved her hand over, wanting to have some kind of contact, but not sure if Adora wanted to. The blonde glanced down and took a hand off the wheel to hold Catra's. At the action, the magicat smiled and looked out the window.

Then, Adora spoke. It had been a while since she had, so her voice was scratchy. "I don't even know what to say. I believed her so quickly—I'm sorry, Catra." She whipped her head around quickly to look at Catra. Her grip grew tighter around the blonde's hand.

"I didn't know Mara died." Catra said, genuinely unaware of Adora's maternal circumstances. The blonde nodded, but didn't look away from the road. Then, she kissed her teeth. "I shouldn't have said that. Not only was it out of line, it was unfair to say that when you didn't know."

Catra hummed and put her head on Adora's shoulder. "How did she pass?" She asked. Adora flicked her eyes down at the magicat and spoke.

" Cancer. She couldn't afford the treatment and only could afford one round… then you know. I was only about 16 or so." Adora lamented, slowing down for a red light. When the car stopped, Catra got her head off of her shoulder and leaned in for a chaste kiss.

They parted and she spoke, "I'm sorry, Adora. You shouldn't have had to see that. Finn shouldn't have seen it. Tanya… she treated me like absolute garbage when we were together. I had to work extra hard in school, because she would monopolize my time and make me miss assignments…" Catra trailed off, her mind a big jumble of thoughts she couldn't place.

"Catra, I love you. And I'll stick with you no matter what. You're an amazing mother and you deserve the world. You came from a rough past, but so what? I know that you've grown from that, and it doesn't define you." Adora said, speeding up when the light turned green.

Two months after the incident passed, and Catra could tell that Finn was still affected by it. They rarely hugged her, or accepted her acts of love. But, with valentines approaching Catra knew what to do.

Catra knocked on their door, and she heard them say she could come in, so she did. And there Adora was, playing on the Switch with them. It stung, but she had to suck it up and do what was comfortable for them. The blonde turned to look at her and smiled widely, setting her controller down on the bed. It was completely dark, so Catra flipped a light on.

"Ugh! My eyes!" Finn said, covering their eyes and falling backwards on the bed, groaning. Catra cringed and worriedly looked to Adora, who shot her a sympathetic look.

When they got their blue eyes adjusted to the light, they sat up and gave Catra a glare. "Mom, my eyes are going to burn off if you do that.” They said, still blinking a few more times to fix their eyes.

She felt like she was doing all the wrong things. Adora would do something and Finn would praise the ground she walked on, but her? She would get the bare minimum. And maybe Finn didn’t love her anymore, that was okay, she could deal with it, but they were still her responsibility and she couldn’t give up on it.

So, that’s where the Valentine’s Day plan came from. She would take Finn on a day out—just them, no Adora. And show them how much she could love them without physical affection or infantilism. It would work.

“Why are you in here? Do you want to play?” They asked, tilting their head. Catra shook her head and answered, “ Do you have a date for Valentine’s? If not—”

“I do.” They interrupted, going back to playing the game. When did that happen? “Adora, did you know this?” Catra asked, shifting her gaze to the blonde, who was tight lipped. “Answer.” She urged.

Adora sighed and nodded. “Yes I knew! But they said not to tell you. And I didn’t want to betray their trust—” The magicat held a hand out to silence the blonde, she didn’t need to hear anything else.

“That’s okay. You’re entitled to your secrets and whatnot. Um, I’m gonna go get some air, I’ll come back, later.” Catra said dejectedly, leaving the room and shutting it behind her.

That’s fine; her family didn’t fully trust her still. Even after all the conversations they had about the vacation, there was still an ounce of doubt in their hearts. Catra headed to her room and got dressed, not knowing where she was heading or when she would be back.

She decided to message her friends, they might’ve been with their families, soaking up the love they shared.

Catra: Does anyone want to hang??

Glimmer: ugh yes, not @ my house my hubby is getting on my nerves, he keeps asking to get pedicures together. I don’t let strangers touch my feet!

Scorpia: sure, the girls are with Perfuma at a zen workshop, so I’m free!!

Great. She could always count on them, even though their problems never compared to hers. When she got excited at the idea of drinking her heart out, she got another text.

Glimmer: No drinking though… bc guess what!!

Catra's mouth opened at what she knew that text implied. On one hand, she was happy for her, but on the other, it was cramping her style.

Scorpia: you're sober??

Catra: no, she's pregnant, aren't you?

Glimmer: YESS I AM!!

Scorpia: :0 WOW CONGRATS GLIMMER, YOURE GOING TO BE A GREAT MOM

Catra: she already has kids Scorpia

Scorpia: Oh yeah… WELL YOURE GONNA BE AN EVEN BETTER MOM

Glimmer: thanks!!

Catra knew Castaspella would be on her tail about making the baby everything she could produce with needles and yarn.

The conversation then went on about where they would go, not anything alcoholic because Glimmer would get jealous and want some. So, they agreed on an escape room.

At the place, Catra met with Glimmer and Scorpia. They talked and Glimmer proudly flaunted her non-existent baby bump, Scorpia tearing up and rubbing her stomach.

"Oh guys! This makes me want to be pregnant again!" She said, wiping her tears away. Catra raised an eyebrow. She sure didn't, that shit was torture and she wouldn't ever go through it again.

Glimmer chuckled and walked over to the bored teenager that was in charge of the room.

"We're all here and ready!" She said excitedly, but the boy's face wasn't meeting her energy, instead he looked uninterested in everything.

"Long ago there was a murder of a husband and his two kids in this mansion. There were plenty of detectives who tried to solve who did it, but none could. You all must figure out who did it, and escape the mansion in 2 hours." He said, voice monotone and not selling the story one bit. Catra rolled her eyes. If she wanted a moody teenager, she would've just stayed home.

“This is going to be so fun!!” Scorpia said, pulling her friends close to her by their shoulders. Catra squealed at the sudden squish, while Glimmer wheezed.

“Ok, your time begins… now.” He said, opening the door and letting the moms into the room.

“It sure is dark. Wait! Can't you see in the dark, Catra?” Glimmer asked, looking at Catra expectantly. She could, but not like she saw in the regular light. “Yeah.”

“Ha! Take that! We have an advantage!” Glimmer cheered to absolutely nobody, fist pumping.

Turns out, Catra sucked at escape rooms, and her mind was just on her family.

“Guys, we suck.” She said, sitting down on a bed in the room that they were in. It had been an hour, and they were still stuck in the first room. Scorpia was breaking everything, while Glimmer was yelling into the camera, trying to get the boy to tell them the answers.

“Catra, don’t say that. We’re the mom trio, we can do anything.” Scorpia reassured her, still managing to break everything in her sight. The employee must have been asleep or on the phone because this was ridiculous.

"Not this." Catra stated honestly, huffing and crossing her arms.

"Ma'am, don't touch that." The microphone blared out, hurting Catra's ears. So he was watching.

"I think we should forfeit." Glimmer said, glaring into the camera.

"Yeah," Scorpia finally relented.

"Open the door!" Catra yelled, waving her arms.

The entrance popped open and they were let out, the boy was on the phone and not paying them any mind.

"There's a photo booth over there, hold up the "we failed" sign and I'll get your pictures and email it to you all." The group sulked over to the area, but quickly got excited with costumes and props to use.

Glimmer immediately wrapped a pink feather boa around her neck and put a sparkly crown over her head, while Scorpia put on a cowboy hat and a mustache. Catra put on a biker jacket, but because of her ears, the helmet wouldn't fit. Then, she found some sunglasses and went with those.

"Say cheese." He said, snapping the picture with no enthusiasm whatsoever.

The trio erupted in laughs and took all of the costumes and props they had on.

"Ah, that was fun. What's next?" Catra said, stopping her walk to look at her friends.

They both made a cringe face and darted their eyes anywhere but on her. Catra knew what it was, they wanted to go home. Glimmer probably missed her "hubby" and Scorpia's wife and kids were most likely back from the workshop.

"That's ok. I'm tired anyways. I'll see you guys another time?" The magicat asked, playing it off as if she was tired. Her friends nodded and they hugged and made their ways to their cars.

When Catra got inside of her car, she cried. She genuinely cried her eyes out. Bawled, like a little baby. Because her baby wasn't her baby anymore, and she felt like a bad mother.

Adora was perfect. She had a good paying job and could bond with Finn in ways she wished she could. The only thing she had tying them together at this point, was the fact that she birthed them. And that held no weight.

And maybe this was a teenager thing, Finn was about to be 14. Was this what they did at that age? Catra was a pain in the ass at that age, did it run in the family? Would Finn inherit her poor decision skills, or Tanya's evilness?

At the crux of her despair, she got a phone call. She answered the call on her car and rested her forehead on the wheel, sighing.

"Hello?" Catra said, not wanting to be on the phone.

"Catra?" The voice of her girlfriend came from the speakers. She lifted her head up slowly and furrowed her eyebrows, she sounded… worried.

"Yes? Adora, what's wrong?" Catra asked, heart rate rising exponentially.

"It's Finn… they're gone. I-I don't know where they went. I was taking a nap and I woke up with them gone." Adora explained, breath panting rapidly on the phone, sounds of swishing of wind swishing in the background.

“Fuck. How long were you asleep? That’ll give us how long they’ve been gone.” Catra asked, starting to drive to her apartment.

Adora let out a bunch of “umms” and “uhhs”, not really saying what she wanted to hear. Then, she finally got some words out. “It’s 6 now, I think I went to sleep at about 5:30? It wasn’t that long, I promise!” Adora said over the phone, frantically trying to convince Catra she didn’t neglect Finn.

“I believe you, Adora. They haven’t been gone long, probably 20 minutes or so, you sleep like a log, they probably knew you wouldn’t budge.”

Finn was not the little baby she thought they were. They were… her. Oh Stars.

“I’ll be home in 10. Sit tight.” Catra instructed, Adora affirmed and hung up.

Chapter End Notes

Okay... don’t be mad at me lol

Next chapter is better (?)

Also... I have a hard time with angst, but I love a good story with some.

And if it sounded like Tanya was a villain, good. I based her off of some of my interpersonal relationships lol.

I never really solved things with them, so this was kinda like something I would do to them, a big “f you” moment.

When Catra walked through the door, Adora whipped her head around and ran to her, pulling her into a tight hug. The magicat closed her eyes and breathed her in, petting her ponytail and trying to console her. She pulled back from the hug and wrapped her arms around the woman's neck.

"What do we do?" Adora asked.

"You're a principal? You don't know what to do?" Catra asked, searching her face.

"I've only been one for two years! And nothing like this has happened at school," Adora said, mildly panicking. Catra stuck to what she said earlier. "Look, Adora. Finn left because they wanted to leave, we can't waste time searching Thaymor, hoping we miraculously find them. All that we can do is...wait." It was hard to come to that conclusion, but that's what was needed.

They couldn’t be in public searching for them because what would that say for Adora’s responsibility? She would surely be fired, and that would make matters worse.

Adora nodded and went back over to the couch, foot tapping on the floor and hands in her lap. The magicat sat next to her and put her hand over the blonde’s fidgeting ones.

Hours passed by after that, Adora made Catra dinner, but couldn’t eat herself. The blonde looked tired, she moved around sluggishly and worried Catra. “I’m just going to go to sleep, it’s better if I just sleep and be unaware of what’s going on.” Adora said, heading to the bedroom, glancing back at Catra, and closing the door.

Catra wanted to be mad, but she couldn’t. Finn was hurt, and this was their way of showing it. She spent so many years babying them, it never gave them real room to grow. At this point, they should’ve already spent the night alone, or slept in their own room the whole week.

The tv bursted with colors and sounds, but she wasn’t watching. It was 11, and Finn was yet to come home. Plenty of calls had been made to their phone, to no avail. When the clock hit 12, Catra was filing a missing person’s report.

Her ear twitched, then she knew. They came home. The door made clicking sounds and soon the room was filled with the light coming from outside the apartment door.

Catra moved around to see Finn walking in, a large coat on and a bag over their shoulder. “Mom.” Finn said, coming out small and distant.

To match the energy they were putting out, Catra replied. “Finn.”

A word was not spoken after The backpack was put on the kitchen table and they walked over to the couch and sat next to her, clicking the lamp next to them.

They were encompassed in soft yellow light, making the situation they were in more mellow than it was. Catra faced her kid and shrugged her shoulders, wanting them to speak.

Their eyes went down and back up, seemingly unsure. “I was angry.” They said simply, still not making eye contact with Catra.

“Okay, that’s valid.”

Blue eyes quickly looked into hers, “you’re not mad?”

Catra shook her head. “No, I’m not. In fact, I should’ve expected this sooner.”

Finn stared in confusion, their mouth twitching. “What does that mean?”

“It means that I did the same thing when I was your age, so I know.” Catra explained, looking at the tv, feigning nonchalance.

“Wha—I don’t understand?” They said, jaw tight.

Catra crossed her legs and folded her hands in her lap. “Finn, you did this because you were angry, right?”

“Yeah…”

The woman hummed and continued, “when you do this, it not only affects you, it affects other people. You get that?”

The younger magicat nodded and took their coat off, sliding it off their shoulders and placed it next to them.

“All I’m trying to say is that there are better ways to convey your emotions. Hell, even slamming a door and saying, “I hate you mom!” Would do the trick. It still tells me how you feel without running away from the situation.”

“I don’t hate you,” they said, reaching a hand out to Catra, but the brunette shook her head.

“Not the point. I’m also guilty of this. I run away from things that stress me out too. It’s a habit from childhood I never broke.” Then she smiled. “But, you only just did it today. You can stop now. Then, you won’t fail highschool partly and… that’s a story for another day.”

Finn huffed as they let tears fall from their eyes, hands planted firmly into their lap. “I’m mad at you for treating me like a baby. I’m mad at Adora for not babying me enough. I’m mad at Tanya for not caring about me.” They told her, face screwed up and conflicted.

“That’s fine. You’re entitled to what you feel. Let’s sleep on it and talk about what you did in the morning, alright Bud?” Catra said, getting up and patting her kid on the shoulder, making her way to the bedroom.

She tapped Adora’s shoulder lightly when she got in there, seeing her distressed expression. “Adora, wake up,” she said, when she didn’t budge, she had to shake harder.

“Is Finn back?” She mumbles, eyes slightly open. Catra nodded. “Yeah, they came back. Go back to sleep, we’ll talk about it in the morning.

“Adora, you always smell so good in the morning,” Catra noted, putting her nose in Adora’s neck, taking in the blonde’s natural smell. “Well, you’re super soft, like all the time.” The blonde remarked, stroking the fur on Catra’s arm.

Catra’s ear twitched back, that meant that Finn was about to come out of their room. She continued flirting with Adora, feeling up her biceps.

Then, Finn made it into the living room and looked at both of them, remorse in their eyes. Catra sat up and pointed to the armchair to the left of the couch.“Sit,” she ordered, and the kid did so, fidgeting with the ends of their hair, something they also got from their mom.

“Tell your Mama what you told me last night.” Catra said, looking at Finn and waiting for them to speak.

“I’m mad at you.” Finn stated, looking directly at Adora. The blonde woman sucked in a breath and swallowed quietly. “Why is that?”

“Because you don’t treat me like your kid, you treat me like someone else’s kid. I think of you as my Mama, I want you to treat me like your kid. That means being motherly, letting people know at school, and not just buying my affection.”

Catra was shocked at the requests, they must have practiced that because there was no way that they came up with that on the spot. Beside her, Adora nodded and her brow was set, she was taking note of it.

Then they turned to her, lip quivering. “I want you to treat me like I’m 13, okay? I can do some things by myself. And I’m not sleeping in your bed anymore.” Catra gave them a thumbs up, wanting to show her acknowledgment.

The teen slumped in the chair and crossed their arms, body language reading uncomfortable.

“We have to talk about your punishment.” Catra said, legs crossing. At those words, Finn looked like they would rather beat a jean jacket than be in this situation.

Catra would never hit her kid. It was utterly useless, and it did nothing for the situation. It only makes the child hate you for the rest of their life, so why do it? Not to mention it’s abuse. There was an obvious choice—

“No Switch or phone for three weeks, Finn. And you’re coming to school and back home with me. That’s not a punishment, but I felt I had to mention it.” Adora told them, and Catra smiled and peeked at her from the corner of her eye.

Adora was new to the whole parent thing, Catra had a head start, whilst she was thrusted into this. Catra put her hand on Adora's knee, the blonde flicking her eyes down at the action.

"Okay, that's fine." Finn said, looking between them.

But it wasn't over, where did they go?

"Finn, where did you go last night?" Catra asked, curious where her kid had gone for 5 hours.

They sighed and sat up, chuckling sheepishly. When they saw Catra's serious expression, they stopped. "I went to my girlfriend's house." They admitted, and Catra wanted to combust.

"Okay, let me get this straight. You left the apartment for 5 hours, while gone, you went to your girlfriend's house?" Adora reiterated, trying to get the full explanation.

"Yes, and we talked about what happened then, she convinced me to come back, I was willing to stay there."

Oh Stars, it really was that bad for them. And she was just getting the brunt of it.

“Don’t do that again—damn it’s hard to punish you, we’ve never done this before.” Catra broke, she couldn’t hold on to the “strong mom” facade for long, when she was just calling Finn her baby.

“I know, and it was really scary. I’m not doing that again.” Finn admitted, chuckling.

“Well, you learned your lesson, that’s what matters.” Adora said, motioning them over. “Come give us a hug, then we can go to IHOP.” She said, opening her arms, Catra doing the same, the young magicat getting up and enveloping them in a bone crushing hug.

Valentine’s was steadily approaching, and due to Finn not interested being hers anymore, she would have to devise a plan for Adora instead. Catra had managed to get out of the office building before someone else asked her to do something simple. She was on her way to Thaymor Middle, planning to eat lunch with Adora on the one day she was able to get out.

Since school started early, she only got a glimpse of Adora and Finn before they left in the mornings, leaving Catra with more time to get ready and eat. But the joy of sleeping in soon wore off when she missed dropping her kid off at school. Who knew she would miss that?

“She’s on lunch right now.” The woman said, her monotone voice ruining Catra’s mood.

“Yeah, I’m here for lunch with her.” Catra said, lifting up the bag that held both of their lunches in it.

The woman rolled her eyes and nodded her head to the office, with that, Catra went inside. She made sure to knock before she went in, giving the wood a sturdy two raps.

She heard nothing, then went inside, seeing the principal with her head in her computer, typing away at something. When she saw Catra, she did a double take and grinned.

“Yay, you came. Sit down. I'm so glad you got here just now, these emails are kicking my ass.” She said, slouching back and stretching her back, producing a few awfully loud cracks. Catra cringed and sat down slowly, taking in the woman’s office. She had been in there once, not for long though, so this was different. Adora had pictures of them she didn’t know existed, her diplomas and certificates lined the walls, along with pictures of her as a teacher and her homeroom classes.

“That sucks, but I brought lunch?” Catra said, taking out her sandwich from the bag and placing Adora’s on her side of the desk. Her eyes lit up at the food, taking a glance at Catra every few seconds. “Aw, you got my order right.” Adora crooned, looking like she was about to cry.

Catra had a small smile and began to open up her sandwich, when she realized she forgot something. “I didn’t get anything to drink,” she admitted, frowning a little. Adora shook her head and leaned back in her chair, opening up a tiny fridge and getting two bottles of water. “There, problem solved.”

Silence spread through the room as they ate, tiny pings from Adora’s computer and the sounds of wrappers filling the void noise.

So, Catra spoke, not liking the dead air between them. “So, I like your outfit today.” She said, starting simple and light. The blonde looked down, as if she didn’t remember what she had on and smiled. “Thanks.”

She finished her sandwich and took time to really appreciate the outfit, outside of the compliment.

It really was a nice outfit. The light pink of the pantsuit complimenting her smooth skin.

“Do you think we could…” she started, quirking her lip up.

“Yes, come here.” Adora said breathlessly, reaching her arms out.

It was probably a bad idea, but Adora was looking so sexy with her professional outfit on. Seeing her working did something to Catra.

Catra climbed into Adora’s lap, and wrapped her arms around her neck, taking in her smells from his close they were. Adora grabbed her hips and whispered, “you feel so good. Do you want me to finger you?” And the warm tingles of her breath sent a shiver down her spine.

“Adora, is this ok?” Catra asked, bringing her hands down to her cheeks and gazing into her beautiful blue eyes. She got a nod, “yeah, we just have to hurry. I missed you like this.” She said hurriedly, nipping at her neck and sucking at it.

“Sit on my desk,” Adora said, making Catra’s fur stand up, in a good way. Catra chuckled and got off of her, backing up and hopping back on the desk. “Ok, Ms.Grayskull,” the magicat teased, smirking mischievously.

When she got up there, after finding a good spot to sit, and slipping her slacks down. She didn’t want her bare ass on the desk, so she compromised, leaving her underwear on.

Adora licked her lips and smiled, a grin on her face. She could never fully commit to the domineering act, it just wasn't in her nature. The blonde always found a way to slip her own self in the act.

With one hand, Adora gripped her tit, which was still in her blazer and the other one stroked at her hip. They locked eyes and Catra moved in for a kiss, tilting her head and meeting soft pink lips with her own. Adora did taste like sandwich, but it was alright. She laughed it off mentally in her head, but realized she probably did too.

The kiss was fast, both out of breath quickly, but neither stopping for oxygen; they didn't need it. Adora licked at her fangs, Catra letting her do it, because she was dead set on doing so every time they made out. Then, Adora pulled back her eyes wide. "Ouch." She poked her tongue on them.

Catra stifled a giggle and brought her back in, holding her wrist and bringing it down to where she needed it. Her panties were definitely ruined and she probably couldn't wear them back to the office, but it was alright.

"Rub my clit," Catra said, looking down at Adora's lips as she spoke. The blonde nodded quickly and put her hand in Catra's underwear. The magicat held onto her neck so that they were both as close as they could be.

Adora let out little gasps, feeling around Catra's pussy with her fingertips, marveling at it. "You're so wet for me, Cat." She nodded and swallowed, "Go faster." She urged, feeling the need to rake her nails down something.

"Mhmm."

Her eyes slipped closed and her mouth went wide, trying to suck in as much air as she could. Adora sped up indeed, so much so, Catra was sure she would finish in the next second.

"Are you close?" Adora whispered, and Catra nodded, feeling her muscles begin to tighten up.

"Uh, you're so good. Put them in." She pleaded, wantonly. And Adora complied, putting two of her fingers in her vagina, making them hit her sweet spots.

She groaned quietly, wanting to really let out a guttural sound. "Keep going, fuck," Adora furrowed her eyebrows and kept up a meticulous pace, taking Catra over that final hill.

Her toes curled in her shoes and she pulled her nails slightly down Adora's back, trying not to make it tear. Then, as her orgasm faded away, and her muscles relaxed, she fell slowly on her back, almost covering the whole desk.

Adora kissed up her stomach until she made it to her face. “Did you like it?” She grinned smugly and Catra rolled her eyes.

“Yes, I did. And now my underwear is ruined.” She looked down sadly at her panties, then up at Adora, who was smirking.

“Ugh, shut up and help me off the desk before Gladys comes in here.” Was that her name? Probably, Catra didn’t care.

“Mary. But yes let’s get you presentable—well, to other people. I would love for you to stay like this.” Adora held Catra’s hands and she got off the desk, legs wobbly.

“Aw, lunch is about over. I had something I wanted to ask you, but I’ll wait until you get home.” Adora kissed her on the lips and wiped Catra up with some tissues and opened a window.

“Okay, you’re set. I’ll see you later, okay?” Adora said, patting Catra’s fly when she pulled it back up.

“Yeah, have a good day, Babe.” Catra said, walking out of her office and out of the school.

Being at home without Finn and Adora was good sometimes, but it also was hard when you had something on your mind. She had completely forgotten to ask Adora to be her Valentine, too enraptured in her gorgeous body; and with the holiday approaching in two days, she feared that she would never get to tell her until it was too late.

Catra waited for her family to come home, and previously, when she was on the way to the apartment, she may or may not have stopped by the store and gotten some balloons and a card. She was going all cheesy. Because it was their first one together.

For Adora's birthday, it was still fairly awkward among them, with the whole Tanya situation. They made a cake and sang, but Finn was fairly distant and uninterested.

But now, everything was going back on track. And she had to make it special for her. So, she waited in the kitchen, the decor up and ready for Adora.

She heard keys jingle in the door and was met with Adora and Finn. The woman walking in first, following behind was her kid.

"Hi, guys." She said, making them turn to look at her.

"Is this for me?" Adora asked, eyes sparklingly. Catra was enveloped into a hug, her girlfriend picking her up off the ground a little.

After being set down, Catra giggled into her hand like a schoolgirl and nodded. “Yes, it's for you.”

“Ah, this is great! We probably won't be able to go out on the real Valentine's because of the dance, but—”

Catra stopped her, holding her hand up, needing to go back in the conversation because she said something she had no knowledge of.

“There’s a dance?” She asked, looking at Adora. The blonde woman nodded, and her eyes avoiding Catra’s.

Finn, looking disinterested with the conversation as a whole, walked out the kitchen and to their room, closing the door behind them. It was so crazy how much they grew up since December; long gone was the giggling kid she once knew, now replaced with a calm and aloof person.

And maybe they were like this the whole time, but Catra had a blindfold on, not wanting to see the truth. The fact that they’re going to move on without her. But, she’s accepted it now. And maybe it was just a teen thing.

“Yeah, there’s a dance. It’s not a big deal. We can find something to do after. It ends at 9.” Adora explained, walking over to her balloons and such, poking at them and punching a few, watching them rise back up.

“Well, I do want to do something. We haven’t had much alone time. Let alone sexy time. Do you know today was the first in three weeks?” And it wasn’t even mutual, she missed doing that with her girlfriend. Adora turned around and looked at her, shocked.

“Really?” She asked, her face confused. Catra nodded. “Yeah,” she affirmed.

Adora looked down, seemingly guilty. “I’m sorry—I’ve been so busy with school and Finn—you know.” She put her hands in her pockets and twisted her foot on the tile.

“It’s okay, that’s what Valentine’s is for.” Stepping closer to the blonde, Catra grabbed her hands and held them, peering into blue eyes and going up to peck at her lips.

“I still feel bad,” Adora noted, their foreheads now touching and Catra producing a tiny purr. “Shhh,” she urged, closing her eyes.

“Ok, I’ll stop talking.”

The dance came and went, Catra staying home. Finn didn't ask her to chaperone and it would've been weird for Adora to ask her to come with her, so it was just her. As she looked at the tv in front of her, she thought about how her family's integrity really was.

Finn was still weird around her, as if they suddenly went cold turkey with their affection. Their hugs and cuddles turned into slight nods and hums when she spoke to them. It hurt. And Adora's problem was so simple, just treat them like her kid? Catra had been doing that for 13 years!

She huffed and sunk further in the couch, pouting to herself. She had no idea how to fix it. Sheltering them and taking their love had it's issues, but they seemed perfectly fine with it. Finn grew up quickly in two months, it had to be unhealthy to act like that so quickly.

And of course, it was Tanya's fault. She was at fault for everything; ruining their first vacation, traumatizing Finn, and making them turn against Catra.

She just wanted it over with. She wanted Finn back the way they used to be, unashamed to love her. She wanted to be mommy again.

"Mommy, look what I drew!"

Catra looked up and to her kid, who was bounding over to her, a smile with a few teeth missing. They had a paper in their hand, it was red construction paper shaped into a heart. She moved her laptop away and held the paper in front of her.

"Aw! What is this baby?" Catra said, grinning at her child. They pointed a little finger and the pictures inside of the heart, explaining to her.

"Ok, mommy, this is you," they pointed to a drawing of what was supposed to be Catra. She was scribbled a dark orange color with her hair box shaped, resembling her bob haircut. "And this is me." They continued, showing Catra their depiction of themselves, a yellow blob with a short brown scribble at the top.

The title, clearly written by their teacher, said "Happy Valentine's Day, draw you and who you love the most!" Catra felt tears swell in her eyes and she sniffled, glancing back up at Finn, who was waiting for her response.

"Baby, this is amazing. I love you so much." She set the paper down and stretched her arms out, letting Finn accept her hug, snuggling in her hold. She tightened her arms around them and took in their scent.

“I love you too, mommy.”

They never went out that night, Catra too caught up in her thoughts… and Adora was just tired. They put a rain check on it and planned to have another date night, just not on that day.

The days went by quickly, but not really. It was more of an agonizing rollercoaster. Adora suggested to solve her problem with Finn with a day out. It could work, their birthday was coming up, so she could say it was for that.

She walked up to the kid, who was doing their homework at the kitchen table, cheek in their palm as they worked, tail lazily moving. As she walked up, their ears twitched and they looked up, expression bored.

“Can I sit next to you?” She asked leaning on the back of the chair next to where they sat. Finn nodded and she sat, glad she got this far. After that, they got back to work, writing on the graph paper they had. Catra really didn’t have a game plan.

“Uh, why don’t we go to the mall later? Your birthday is coming up soon and I thought we could pick something out.” She said, crossing her ankle over her knee and shaking it nervously.

They put the pencil down and looked up to her, blue eyes piercing. “Is Mama going?” They asked. Catra shook her head, “nope she has some training today. So just us, yay!” She cheered a little. At Finn’s non responsive expression, she deflated.

“Cool,” they said. Going back to the homework. Catra sighed and patted their shoulder, getting up and going to her room to cry a little. She couldn’t cry too much, but a tiny one couldn’t hurt.

Two hours later, Adora was leaving the apartment to go to her “training seminar”. Catra knew she was leaving to give her a reason to be with Finn alone, and she appreciated the sentiment.

“I love you,” she kissed Adora on the lips, holding her cheek. She pulled back and saw determination in Adora’s eyes, with a nod and a few more kisses, she left.

And then it was just her and Finn. The way it was for 13 years, until Adora came into their lives. Finn worriedly tugged at their hair, waiting for Catra to do something.

“You ready? She asked, getting her purse off the hook and around her shoulder. Turning to Finn, she saw they were texting on their phone.

“Yeah,” they said absentmindedly, pocketing their phone and heading out the front door, leaving Catra alone in the apartment. She sighed and walked behind them.

In the car, she let the radio play softly, peeking over at the kid every few seconds. “Mom, why do you keep looking at me?” Finn said, looking up at her.

Panicking a little, Catra decided to joke about it. “Well, I wanted to make sure you were still there. It’s so quiet I thought I forgot you at home.” She chuckled dryly, her joke not landing at all.

“So… what do you think you want?” She asked.

“Hmm, probably a new game for my Switch, or a case for it so I can take it places.” Finn said, putting their phone down and speaking. It was a start, better than before.

Catra nodded and continued to drive, she could get that, it was no problem. Maybe she could earn their love back.

Then they made it to the mall and walked around, Catra pointed to things and Finn agreed on some things, and some they didn’t. It had been two hours and Catra was tired. She felt the tiredness in her bones, her tail, her everything.

“Uh, kid, do you think we could take a break? Maybe go to the food court and eat something?” She asked, seeing them nod and follow her lead. Then, they stopped and stood still, their tail going fuzzy, something she hadn’t seen since the Tanya situation, even if it was a tiny second.

“Uhh, let’s go over here, I think I saw something on the way over.” They said, wrapping an arm around Catra’s and leading her over to a kiosk away from the food court. When they got there, their ears swiveled a bit and then they sighed, moving from Catra.

“What was that about?” She asked, not knowing what the hell was going on. Her kid just suddenly pulls her away and now they’re in a random ass book store. She was a little irritated, her feet hurt and she wanted a sandwich.

Finn sighed, walking away from her and heading over to a bookshelf, skimming the titles with their curious eyes. When Catra followed, they bit their lip worriedly, seeming nervous.

“Just say it, Finn.” Catra said, her patience wearing thin. Her face morphing into an irritated look, almost to her “mom look”, but not quite.

They look away and then glance back at her from the corner of their eye. Then they speak, “I saw some kids from school, it’s not a big deal.”

Catra huffs and rolls her eyes, she did not want to deal with this today. She wanted to spend some time with her kid without this drama shit.

"Okay, so why did you feel the need to hide me? That doesn't seem like "not a big deal" to me." Catra said, still following Finn in their descent into the book store.

"It's nothing."

And that was it. She really didn't want to go back and forth with someone she knew wouldn't tell her anything, it stung—it really did. Okay, it did more than just sting, it broke her heart. She felt her eyes start to burn and she stopped walking, stopped chasing after something that wouldn't be what it once was.

Catra picked up a random book from where she standing, reading through the pages. And of course, it was a parenting book.

"Ugh!" She grumbled to herself and snapped the book shut. Then, she went to find Finn, she wanted to go home.

"Finn! Come here," she said. The store was relatively small, so she didn't have to look far. She found them, curled into themselves, in a corner.

She slowly came up to them and she saw their ear twitch, hearing her walk up to them. The older magicat sat down next to them, wanting to comfort her kid despite her previous annoyance.

"What's wrong?" She asked getting close, only enough for them to touch elbows. The kid sniffed and brought their head up, looking at Catra.

"Don't be mad when I tell you…" they said, whispering.

"Hmm, just say it."

They sighed and lifted their head completely, making eye contact with their mom.

"I might've told the whole grade that I didn't live with you anymore and that I live with Mama." They admitted in a rush, wheezing after they got it out.

Catra's eyes widened and she gasped, pure shock on her face at the words. She had to blink—not believing what she just heard.

"Are you mad?" They asked, peeking.

“Of course I’m mad!” Catra said, standing up. Her fur was puffed and so was her tail, her eye twitching.

“Why?—Finn, I know I smothered you for most of your life, and I’m sorry for that, okay? But that’s not an exc—“

“Mom, can we move? You’re getting a little loud.”

“Finn, I was lenient with the whole “leaving the fucking house for 4 hours thing”, but this is something I won’t take lightly. Tanya left us, and I took care of you for 13 years, making sure we both had somewhere to stay, and this is how you treat me?” Catra spoke, whisper-yelling her thoughts.

Finn stood up and stared at their mom, eyes wide and afraid at what they’ve done.

“...And tell me how long you’ve been saying this.” Catra said, biting her cheek. She wanted to hear the answer, but not really. It just showed how broken they really were.

Catra hummed and clicked her tongue. “Let’s go home.”

The car ride home was the worst thing in her fucking life, besides giving birth, her ex popping up out of the blue, said ex leaving her with their unborn child, and her child leaving the fucking house. Ugh!

They sat next to her, their hands in their lap, tapping their foot lightly on the floor. Catra was mad, probably the most she had ever been to her kid. It was something to be angry at her for the helicoptering, but to disown her entirely? That was another thing.

And when they got home, Adora wouldn’t be in the conversation, because, honestly, she had no say in the matter. Obviously, Finn favored her over their rea— woah, okay not going there. That was way too far.

When they got home, Finn leaped up the stairs, taking two at a time, but it was futile, they had no keys and had to wait for Catra to climb the gruesome three flights.

She knew Adora had come home, her car was in the parking lot, but she would let her know what was happening.

"Catra! Finn! You're back!" The blonde said, bundling into the entryway, hugging Finn and kissing Catra on the cheek. But, then she saw they look on both of their faces and stepped back, her previous excitement gone.

The blonde woman looked to Catra and she shook her head, mouthing "not now". Adora then glanced over at Finn, whose ears were flat on her head and eyes downcast.

She took that as a sign to leave. "I'm just going to make some late lunch, so… yeah." And she left, leaving the magicats alone.

They went to sit on the couch and sat next to each other, Catra taking out her phone and wallet and putting it on the table, then she crossed her legs.

"Finn, why?" She asked.

They shrugged and looked away, picking at a string on their pants. Catra sighed and leaned back.

"It got out that you were dating the principal and around the same time I told my so called friends about how I used to be. And because of Mama bringing me to school and stuff, I just felt it was a good time to spread that around."

Catra shook her head, in disbelief. "That makes no fucking sense. And to be frank, your whole plan was trash." Catra said bluntly.

Then she continued, "Because I love you and will never stop loving you, despite how you've treated me the past few months. We don't have to go back to the babying, but damn, you're my kid, I pushed your fat head out for 6 hours, I deserve a hug or two every now and then."

Finn laughed and pulled Catra into a hug, the first in a while. And Catra soaked it up, breathing in her kid's smell. Then she pulled back, holding their shoulders. "You're still in trouble."

They nodded and got pulled back in for an even tighter hug, Catra didn't want to let go.

"So, no more Switch, or phone. Hmm, mom and Finn time is mandatory . And… what else Adora?" Catra said, turning around to see Adora visibly watching their interaction.

"Oh, uh…"

"Oh! That's right! You can still have a birthday, but not a party." Catra said, nodding.

Finn sighed and looked crestfallen, “Aw, don’t worry. Just don’t do anything like this again, okay?” They nodded and Catra patted their head.

She went over to Adora and kissed her on the cheek. The blonde was clearly not making anything, knife in her hand, but the tomato was left unsliced on the cutting board.

“Are you alright?” Adora asked, putting the utensil down and facing Catra, a supportive hand on her bicep. Catra sighed, “I’m the best I can be right now. That was some fucked up stuff.”

“What happened?”

“I’ll tell you later.”

Weeks went by since then, Finn was slowly becoming touchy-feely and lovey-dovey with Catra again. And their 14 birthday went without a hitch.

“Aw, Finny, you're 14, how do you feel?” Catra asked, putting a hand on Finn’s shoulder. They thought for a second, putting a finger on their chin. “Hmm, I feel the same.”

Catra rolled her eyes and patted their shoulder, giving them their presents from both parents.

And as April came, the school year was almost at it's end.

“Oh, my Stars! The field trip permission slip, I forgot to tell you!” Finn said, digging a paper from their backpack and waving it in Catra’s face. She took the paper and furrowed her brows. “Isn’t Adora working there? Why didn't you go to her for this?”

Finn groaned, a hand dragging down their face. “Mama isn't… You know,” they said pointedly to the woman on the couch.

“Ahh, okay. And...Mystacor? Really?”

“Hmm, Adora!”

“Yes, Babe?” Adora said from the couch, ipad in her hands and glasses perched on her nose.

“Are you going on Finn's field trip?”

Adora put the tablet down and turned to face her. “Yeah, are you planning on chaperoning?” Catra pursed her lips, she was going to be busy next week, but maybe she could take off.

“Maybe? Do you want me to come, Finn?” She asked, looking at her kid’s face and waiting for their decision.

“Of course!”

“Well, looks like I might be going!” Catra said, eyes moving from Finn to Adora.

“Ah, this place is cold.” Catra said, even though she had fur, it was still cold.

“That’s to make sure things don’t melt.” Finn corrected her, and she halted.

“Ok, then smarty pants. If you’re so smart, where’s your Mama, huh?” Catra taunted, looking around the front of the building. Finn came with the buses, while Catra drove. But they didn’t come out of the yellow vehicle with Adora, so where was she?

“Oh, I have to go get my group, come with me.” Finn said, walking back over to the buses, where their teacher stood with a clipboard.

“Oh, hello Ms. D’riluth. This is your group. Here is your group. This is Flora, Fauna, and Twinkle.”

Oh shit, these were her friends kids, nice.

“Hi guys, I’m Finn’s mom. And I’m also your mom’s friend so…”

“Oh! You’re Catra!” Flora said, whispering into her twin’s ear, the other girl laughing at what was said. And Twinkle, also know as Tiana, just smiled at her.

“Okay… well I—“

“Is it true you that you’re dating Ms. Grayskull?” Flora asked, a sneaky grin on her face. Catra inhaled roughly and spoke to her. “You’re just something aren’t you?”

“Yep! My mom says I’m an original specimen of nature.” She said proudly, and maybe it was a good she said it that way, because it was certainly not a compliment. Perfuma was like that—from what she’s seen, she was as nice as she could be. And considering this child was a gossiping little something, that was saying something.

“Yes, I am.”

“My mom is having a baby, are you?” Twinkle said, grinning at Flora impishly and chuckling behind her hand.

These kids are horrible. Their moms are so sweet, what happened to them?

“Let’s go inside.”

I think I like once a week for this fic, so that's what I'm doing.

Field trip and 8th-grade drama, oh no!

We're done with the mommy issues arc, gosh it was hard to do. I loved writing their relationship in the beginning, but kids grow up and things change...

Where was Adora? Catra knew it was a field trip, and that she was the principal and everything, but this was ridiculous. She had been on this trip for an hour now, hearing cheeky remarks from what she thought were her best friend's "sweet kids".

But on a brighter note, Finn was sticking to her, they had been ever since their little intervention; it was a part of their agreement, so they had to spend some time together.

As Catra walked behind the kids, she looked around the exhibit, but still saw no sign of Adora. And she definitely wouldn't answer her phone. She looked back up to see some more kids talking to her group, they were without an adult, so that was saying something and one of them seemed to be a little too close to Finn.

Catra walked up, her eyebrow quirked, taking in the scene before her. Putting a hand on her hip, she came up to the kids, who were chatting loudly.

The girl who was with Finn turned her head, giving her a look no 14-year old should ever give anyone ever.

“What’s it to you old lady?” She replied, snarky.

Catra flared her nostrils and held back what would’ve been the nastiest insult she could ever say to a child that didn’t belong to her. What the hell is wrong with these kids?

“ First of all, I’m not old. And second, watch what you say. I’m not your mama.” Catra retorted, pointing a finger at the girl.

The blue haired girl tutted and looked to Finn, giving them a stern look. Finn widened their eyes and held their hands up. “No, Nautica, I’m not defending that; you can’t talk to my mom like that.” They said, explaining to the girl.

She glanced at Catra when they finished talking and rolled her eyes, then she smirked. “I thought you were done with this mommy crap. You said you stopped. Did you lie? To me? Your girlfriend of all people?” Nautica accused.

Finn was gaping, eyebrows furrowed. “No! I didn’t lie to you. Why would I do that?”

“Well, it does seem like it. Who asks their mommy, who apparently doesn’t live with them, to come on a field trip?” She asked, voice sounding like she was taunting.

Catra felt helpless, she had no idea how to handle what was going on. And the steady group of kids surrounding Finn and Nautica didn’t help. In seconds, there was already twice the amount of kids in the small showing room. This couldn’t be safe.

She pulled out her phone and dialed Adora, making sure to keep her eyes on the arguing children. And as much as she wanted to fight the girl, she would surely go to jail.

“Adora? Hello?” Catra said, placing the phone on her ear, the noise in the room had reached an overwhelming level and it was hard to hear over the receiver.

“Catra? What—where are you?” Adora answered, already sounding frantic.

“Um, I think I’m in the jewel room. There’s an argument going on and I’m the only parent in here—just get here.” She answered, getting to the point quickly in order to save time.

“Okay, yeah—I’m on my way.”

Adora hung up and Catra was still left alone. The crowd grew larger and pushed her back, leaving her no room to see Finn, she could only hear their words.

"—okay? So what! Just because your mom doesn't love you, it doesn't mean you can tell me how to act with mine! You're always like this—telling me what to do...that's how I was stuck in that situation in the first place!" Finn yelled, hurt in their voice.

"You can't say stuff like that, it's not my fault and you know it."

"And you can't talk to my mom like that. It's disrespectful and she did nothing to you!" Finn continued.

Catra listened and watched the door, waiting for Adora to show up. It seemed like she couldn't catch a break, everything she looked forward to ended in drama.

Then, footsteps came from the door and Adora, a group of teachers, and a security guard came in.

Catra sighed and moved out of the way, letting them assess the situation. She couldn't handle it, this was too much for her to handle. And soon, the crowd dispersed, the kids letting out groans when their teachers escorted them out of the room, leaving just her group and Nautica.

Adora had her “serious, authoritative face on”, and if it wasn’t for the state they were in, she would be hot and bothered. She stood before the two, hands on her hip and her head tilted. Both Finn and Nautica had their heads tilted down, faces solemn.

“Who started it?” She asked, looking between the two of them, tapping her foot on the ground.

Finn picked their head up, eyes teary. “It was me. I started it.”

Adora sighed, “Why Finn…” she said, sounding like she didn’t want to hear it. Finn continued, lip quivering. “She insulted Mom, and I… didn’t like it. When my friends did it, I didn’t say anything, but I did. And then, everything else just came out.” They admitted blue eyes peering into Adora’s.

Adora nodded and looked at Nautica. “Would you like to tell your side of the story?” She nodded her head, wiping tears off her face.

“I’m breaking up with you Finn, that's all I have to say.” Nautica said, walking away from the magicat and out of the room, clearly in distress. A teacher followed her, catching up and wrapping an arm around her shoulder, comforting her.

Catra turned back to Finn, who was sniffling. She walked next to them and pulled them into a hug, squeezing tightly. “I’m sorry, buddy.” Finn tried to hold in their sob, but it didn’t work, instead they let out a garbled sound. “It’s okay, you don’t have to speak.”

Adora smiled, but stood awkwardly in place, hands at her sides. “I gotta go handle some things, there’s paperwork for this kind of thing, ” she admitted, looking guilty.

Catra nodded and shooed her away, “that’s alright, I'm taking them home; we'll be there.” She told her, watching the blonde come up to them and wrap her arms around the family.

“Okay, take them home. I'll let you know if there's anything you got to come to the school for.” Adora said, borderline rambling now.

“Yeah, we'll see you.”

Since it was only an hour into the trip when the fiasco happened, it left them with a lot of time left in the day. And Finn was not in the mood for anything, instead, they were shut in their room, the lights off and sadness creeping through the cracks.

Catra wanted to soothe them, but what could she do? She had no idea of the relationship until two months ago. And for it to last that long… It had to mean something or practically nothing at all.

So, to pass the time, she got some laundry done, along with some cleaning that really didn't need to be done, but she had to busy herself somehow. But, she ran out of stuff to do, and Finn had been in the room for a while now, maybe it was time to check on them.

She knocked at the door and heard a faint affirmative, so she came in. Twisting the knob and pushing. “Hey, Finn.” she greeted, closing the door behind her quickly, trying to sneak in fast.

Finn stayed in the saw position, making a lump shape on the bed. Catra sighed and sat on the edge of the bed, waiting for them to talk.

“What really happened Finn? Be honest.”

It took a while, but they rolled over, looking at Catra with tired eyes. Finn sat up on their pillows and folded their hand over their lap. “I don't know. I just…” they sighed, then clicked their lamp on, the room lighting up around them.

“I think I wanted to break up with her, but I couldn't say it. I've been thinking about it for weeks.” Finn admitted, plucking a string in the blanket.

“And today...you just...blew up?” Catra pushed, wanting to fully understand the situation.

“Yeah, and I hated the way she made me treat you. It just sucks.”

“I know. I know . But hey, look on the bright side… Uh.” Why did she say that, but couldn't think of a bright side?

“Go on…” Finn said, raising an eyebrow. Catra nodded and got closer to Finn, trying to think of something to say.

“To be honest, I have nothing to say, but I can say something else. I'm just happy you're talking to me again. I mean- I thought I'd lost you.” Catra stated, getting even closer to Finn, their shoulders touching.

“What! No. Maybe I was a little distanced, but I wasn't leaving.”

“Ehh, but you did run away. And disown me, and--”

“Okay!” Finn chuckled, turning to face Catra, a wide grin on their face. “I still love you, mom, and I always will.”

Catra felt tears in her eyes and reached over to his her kid, overwhelmed with joy. “Aw, you don't know how much that means to me, I love you too Kiddo.”

Then they hugged for a couple more minutes, it was a little awkward, considering the lack of hugging that had been happening in the past few months, but it was great.

“And Nautica went home right after you left, she was fine, a little sniffles.” Adora said, drinking her drink.

Catra nodded and turned to look at Finn, who was biting their lip worriedly. So, like the excellent mother she was, she checked in. “You alright?”

They nodded. “Yeah, I think so. I just want this school year to be over already.” They said, picking around their food. Catra chuckled. “Well, good thing there’s only a couple weeks left, right Adora?

“Yeah… there is. And graduation and the dance are in the last two weeks, then done! Well, for you that is. I still have a week after that.” Adora said, shrugging.

“Oh Stars, what are you wearing?” Catra asked, kind of excited. She did like to dress up every now and then.

“Uh, slacks and a shirt?”

“No, this is not a silly little dance, this is PROM! It’s supposed to be fancy.” Adora explained, peeking up. Finn seemed to take it into conversation, tapping their chin.

“We still have plenty of time, don’t stress it Finn.”

So, it turns out, three weeks was not a long time to plan anything, let alone get ready. Finn, Catra, and Adora all scrambled, Adora even more, considering she was the principal. Everytime Catra saw her, she was taking a nap or had dark circles under her eyes.

"Adora, sweetheart. I think you're overworking yourself." Catra said, concerned and wanting to help her girl. Adora laughed, shaking her head. "No, I'm fine! Just a little stressed, that's all. Don't worry about me." She tried to reassure Catra, but the magicat was not buying it at all.

"Babe, you have got to chill. How many times has this gone right? Why are you so freaked this year?" Catra asked, rubbing her girlfriend's shoulder lovingly.

“Well, my kid is in the graduating class this year. That’s different.” She stated simply.

Catra nodded, yeah that was a big factor. “I’m sure you’ll do fine...Hmm, how about we find something to help you relax? Does that sound nice?” She asked, whispering the question into Adora’s ear, the blonde turning around to face her, excitement in her blue eyes.

“Yeah?”

“Mhmm, let’s go. Right now.” Adora said eagerly, sitting up from her chair and holding Catra’s hand, leading her into their bedroom.

By some sort of miracle, they had the apartment to themselves. Finn was at a friend’s house, leaving her and Adora alone for the day. Catra had been hinting at it all day, subtle glances, touches...but in the end, all she had to do was say it.

“What do you want, Adora?” Catra asked, smiling up at her girl, fingertips tracing her collarbone. Adora bit her lip, “I just want to be yours.”

Catra laughed, hitting Adora’s shoulder. “That was so cheesy, ugh!” Adora laughed with her, “what! I meant it!”

Sliding her hands up Adora's neck and to the back of her head, tangling her fingers in her hair, Catra did what Adora told her. She was already hers, in every sense. They were one and they couldn't be separated.

Then, she moved her hands to cup her face, thumbs stroking her pink cheeks. She left a kiss on the woman's soft lips, reveling in the feeling. "Ah, I love you, Adora. You know that?" She asked, now kissing all over the blonde's face, her eyebrows, her neck—

"Yeah, I love you too Catra. You're amazing."

Catra smiled at that, now taking her kisses—if you could call them that—more like licks, down her collarbone and to her tits. "Mmm, keep going," Adora said, gripping her biceps.

"Okay," she agreed, pulling Adora's shirt over her head, tossing it on the bed. That left her with Adora's chest, which was too bare for her liking. Her skin was so easy to bruise; it was sort of fun, seeing the marks show up days later.

Adora raked her hands from her biceps, then to her shirt, wanting to take it off too. She let her, wanting to be on an even playing field. Once the shirt was off, she kissed Adora, missing the soft lips already in their brief separation. And, like always, Adora got a piece of her fang to lick on. It seemed to drive her wild, so she allowed it.

“Hmm, you’re gonna fuck me, Catra?” Adora asked, walking back towards the side of the bed, sitting when her knees stopped her. Catra smirked, wanting to seal the deal. “Yeah, I am—“

Then the door opened. Wide as fuck. Broadcasting everything that was happening to whoever was unlucky enough to witness it. Catra froze, her tail going stiff and the hairs on her back rising. Oh fuck, fuck, fuck, fuck.

“OH STARS, MY EYES!” Finn screamed, slamming the door closed behind them, leaving Catra and Adora paralyzed.

Catra wanted to scream too, she was about to have magnificent sex with her girlfriend, but no! She had to get interrupted by someone who wasn’t supposed to be there for two more hours. Adora looked like a sheet, all the color drained from her face.

“I can’t,” was all she said, breathing shallow. Catra shook her head and patted Adora’s cheeks. “It’s okay, don’t freak out. You’re fine. Just think about this: they’re more embarrassed than us.” Catra said, trying to make Adora feel better. She was more disappointed than embarrassed.

“Oh, yeah that sucks. But common, think about it. Worst case scenario: they run away. That’s not so bad.” Catra said, coming off of Adora and getting her shirt back on; whatever chances they had were thrown out of the window.

"I'll go talk to them, put your shirt on." Catra said, making sure she looked alright. They couldn't ignore it because that led to bigger problems that she didn't want to deal with. So, with a deep breath, she walked out of the bedroom to search for Finn.

She didn't want to do it, but she had to. She didn't want to do it, but she had to. She didn't want to do it, but she had to.

She came up to Finn, who was sitting on the couch, engaged in a game on their Switch, the whole console covering their face. She knew they heard her, the ears a telltale sign.

"Please no."

"Hey Finn I—"

"I actually have something to do right now, so I can't have this conversation. Bye!" Finn tried to say, but Catra gave them the "mom look", making them sit back down immediately.

"It has to be done. I don't like it either, I'm a little embarrassed to be honest with you. And I don't want this being up in the air in the future. So, here it is:" She started, seeing how nervous Finn was. Their game wasn't even on in the first place, she realized when glanced down.

"Okay, just get it over with."

"So, Uh when two people— or more! That's fine too! When they love each other a lot—"

Finn deadpanned. "Really? That's what you're doing?I know what sex is."

Catra gasped, a hand over her heart. She felt like her eyes were bugging out of her head. "You, you what?" She asked, thinking she misheard them.

"Yeah, I'm in the 8th grade, what did you expect?" They said, expression opening up.

"Hmm, well I have nothing to say. You know what you saw?"

"Yes."

"Okay… and why are you here so early? Not that I don't love you so very much, but...you know." Catra said, wanting to sugarcoat, but not feeling up to it.

“There was something that came up; a family emergency.” Finn said, shrugging.

“Well, that was averted, so I will go now. To take a nap of course.” Catra said, leaving Finn on the couch and heading back into her bedroom.

“How did it go?” Adora asked, turning to face Catra when she came into the room. But interrupted the woman, putting a finger on her lips, grinning wildly.

“Don’t wanna talk about it. Wanna have shower sex?” Catra asked, really needing to get her hands on Adora.

“Okay, um. Fuck it, let’s go.” She agreed, heading to the bathroom with Catra

Once inside, the magicat took her shirt off and threw it on the floor, coming back to Adora. She got the hint she was giving and picked Catra up by her hips and set her on the counter of the sink.

Catra reached behind her and unclasped her bra, throwing it with a smile, while Adora removed her top and pants.

Catra groaned when she pulled the blonde into a kiss, wrapping her legs around her waist, pulling her closer. Her hands held Adora's face, keeping her in place as they kissed.

But, they couldn't do it for long. Adora pulled back and pecked Catra's lips, then walked away from her and turned the shower on, flooding the bathroom in the sound of loud droplets hitting the tile.

Catra shucked her panties and shorts off, leaving her completely naked. And Adora took all her undergarments off, leaving them both in their birthday suits.

Adora stepped into the shower carefully and went to the back of it, waiting for Catra. The water hit her back as she stepped in the space and she realized that wasn't a good spot for her to go.

"Let's switch." Catra said, holding onto Adora's shoulders and carefully switching places with her.

Catra luckily had put a bath mat in there, just for the odd chance she and Adora would fuck in here. So, because of that, the chances of slipping were low.

Adora's hands gripped at her hips and brought them close together, slick bodies pressing against each other. Catra lightly scratched down her back and held onto her ass. Then, she licked a stripe up her neck and nibbled at her ear.

Adora, desperate to take in Catra as much as she could, whispered, “hold on to the handle.” And slivered down her body, arriving at her vulva.

“Oh, Adora.” Catra said, slipping her fingers in blonde hair and leaning forward, not wanting the spray of the shower in her eyes.

Adora widened her mouth and stuck her tongue out, licking her pussy. “Spread your legs wider.” She said, not able to get to anything with Catra’s squeezing her legs together.

They fell open and Adora got to work. She looked down at Adora as she used the muscle to swipe from her vagina to her clit, flicking side to side at the nerves. Her mouth fell open, wanting to moan and groan and whatever, but she was too afraid of the sound reverberating.

Adora sucked her clit and she groaned softly biting her lip as she went further down and tongued at her vagina, and slipped her tongue in.

“Adora, can I fuck your face?” Catra asked, out of breath.

The blonde put her hand on Catra’s wrist and nodded. Then, she moved her hips frantically, rubbing her clit on Adora’s tongue and nose.

Catra couldn’t breath, but she could feel. Feel all that Adora had to offer. It was amazing. The hot, suffocating heat of the shower enhanced the experience, making her drown in it.

“I’m coming,” she groaned out, slowing Adora’s head. Then, she gave small licks, taking her through the feeling. Fuck. Her legs trembled, the grip on the railing the only thing keeping her from falling. Then, she succumbed to it, going on her knees, mirroring Adora, and kissing her.

They were drenched, Adora even more so. Her hair stuck to her back and her forehead. The steam of the shower was making Catra’s fur matted, but that didn’t matter. Adora was all over her, consuming her every being.

Catra wiped some water out of her eyes and leaned back from the kiss, breathing hard. Adora held her arms and stood up with her, then once they were both up and stable, She flipped Adora around; chest to the wall and ass out.

She approached Adora slowly taking in the sight before her. Catra used one hand to hold her hip, and with the other, she squeezed Adora’s ass. “Are you gonna let me fuck you? Hmm?” She asked, whispering in Adora’s ear.

“Yes, please. I want it.”

“You better,” she said, her hand going down further and further, until she got to her pussy. She lightly rubbed at her vagina with one finger and slipped it in. She heard a groan and looked up to see Adora’s mouth agape. The blonde spread her legs and her finger went in further, feeling her sensitive parts out.

“Another.” Adora said, her voice borderline whining.

She did so, sliding another digit in. “Catra, move faster, we’re going too slow.” She wrapped an arm around Adora’s middle and thrusted harder, using her middle and ring finger.

Adora’s voice was just grunts and sighs at this point, Catra looking at her face intently. Her eyes were closed tightly and her fingers could barely move, Adora was squeezing onto them so tight.

“Catra… I can’t. It feels so good.” She panted.

Catra shook her head and kept going. “You can, just… hold on.” She grunted, slipping her fingers out of Adora and gripping her hip to turn her around, facing her.

The hot room was making her unfocused and dazed. “Adora, Adora . Are you okay?” She nodded quickly and brought her hand to Catra’s shoulder.

Catra sighed in relief, then she added a bit of cold water to the shower, making the temperature go down.

Catra stroked Adora's face, her own expression still showing a hint of concern. "What do you want?" she asked, blue and yellow eyes looking into Adora's.

"You," she answered, a dopey grin on her face.

Catra rolled her eyes, "I'm just going to finger you, alright?" Adora nodded and Catra got to it, dragging a hand down Adora's stomach and making it's way to her vulva, again. "Mmm, you're so wet. And not because we're in a shower."

She put in two fingers, Adora letting out a sigh and leaning her chin on her shoulder. "Fuck, you're going deep. Ah, more." Adora pleaded. Catra did so, hooking her fingers up, finding her g-spot.

"Ha, I'm coming, Catra."

"You are? Keep coming for me, Babe." She said, still stroking her through it. Adora was holding on to her so tight, her body shaking uncontrollably.

"Ah, Catra." Adora said, rubbing her back and kissing her neck.

“Was it good?” She asked, beating her to the punch. Adora petted her head. “Awesome.”

“Okay, how about me, do I look alright? Just kidding! I know I’m hot.”

“Ew, mom. Don’t call yourself hot, that’s weird.” Finn said, fake gagging and walking into the bathroom, slicking their blonde hair back into an elegant style.

“Why not? I am, so I’m calling myself that. Adora, do you think I’m hot?” Catra asked, calling out to Adora who was in the kitchen, eating some fruit.

“Of course. Is that even a question?” Adora responded, coming into Finn’s room and embracing Catra. “See, Mama thinks I am; you can’t live your life in denial of how hot your mom is.”

She heard, “ugh, it’s just gross. I know that you’re pretty, but hot? Bleh.” Finn said, coming out of the bathroom with nicely combed hair. “Ah, good job. You look so good! But, let me just…” Catra trailed off, bringing Finn closer and licking her thumb, wiping their face.

“No!”

“Would you rather I lick your face? I used to do that; it’s either this or that.” Catra said, giving Finn a choice.

“Neither! I can wash my own face; and it’s gross.” They said, moving their face away from Catra.

“Okay, suit yourself. Also, we’re about to leave in 10 minutes, be done by then.” Catra said, chuckling and leading Adora out of the room.

“I’m glad you two are back to “normal”.” Adora said, sporting a grin and holding Catra by her waist. Catra nodded, “yeah, I’m glad you said it like that; it’s not normal, and it will never be what it was before. But I think it’s okay, that’s what growing up is about.” She said, wiping imaginary dust off of Adora’s blazer.

Adora kissed her cheek and went to put her shoes on. Catra did not do the same, she was tired of shoes, and they hurt after a while.

As Adora led Catra into the venue, which was the school gym, she was all smiles. The gym was decorated really well, encompassing the “shining lights” they had going on. And yes, it was still cheesy, the decorations were cheap and had the budget of… well, a middle school prom, so it was right on track.

“Nice isn't it?” Adora asked, holding Catra’s hand and squeezing it. “Yeah, it's pretty nice; you did good.” Adora shook her head. “No, I didn't do this. It was the PTO, I just approved of everything.” She explained, leading them over to table of PTO moms.

“Tickets?” The woman at the table asked, smiling at the two. Adora laughed and Catra put on a polite smile. It was Kourtney, but she looked… better? Maybe it was the niceness that improved her overall looks.

“And Catra, you're dressed nicely.” Kourtney said, seeming actually genuine. Catra shrugged, feigning nonchalance. “Thanks, I always look like this.” Adora rolled her eyes and moved them from the table. “We’ll see you, Kourtney.” The red-haired woman nodded and tended to the next guest that appeared in line after them.

“Wasn’t that great? Ever since she got a girlfriend, she's been way better—well, she's been leaving me alone, that's all I can say.” Adora said, chuckling.

“That's great because you're mine,”Catra said, her tail wrapping on Adora’s ankle.

The couple sat down at a table, decorated with sparkles and blue table cloth, music thumping around them. “So, do you get to relax tonight?” Catra asked, tapping Adora’s ankle from under the table. “Yeah, until I need to speak and stuff. That's not for another- oh wait, that's right now. I'll be back.”

Adora quickly made her way up to the front of the gym, where there was a makeshift stage and crowns. It was so cute, Catra could cry. There were other people up there and Adora smiled at them as she got in front of the microphone.

“Good evening Thaymor Middle-school 8th graders! And welcome to Prom. I would like you all to please have a seat.” She announced, waiting for the rowdy kids to sit down and settle down. As they sat down, Catra looked around the room to find Finn. Then, she saw them. They were at a table of kids laughing silently. That was good.

“Okay, I hope everyone is having a good time so far.” The crowd cheered loudly, and Catra joined in, clapping. Adora chuckled into the mic, “That’s great! We have a lot planned. Dancing, food, Prom King and Queen!” The crowd cheered more for that. “So, be ready. Now a word from your vice principal.”

Catra had seen the woman around, but not that much, she mostly kept to herself and wasn’t as exuberant as Adora. Nonetheless, she gave a great speech that had the crowd cheering.

“Then, dinner will be served at 9:00, then the winners will be announced. And after that, we will be off schedule.”

After Vice Principal Hope’s energetic remarks, the kids went back on the dance floor, and Adora came back to the table. She looked sweaty, but Catra just blamed it on the cheap stage lights. The blonde came up to her, slightly shaking her blazer, circulating air through it.

“Care to dance?” She asked, holding a hand out. Catra rolled her eyes on the outside, but on the inside she was giggling like a schoolgirl. “Yes, lead the way.” Catra said, letting Adora take her to the dance floor. Maybe she was a little embarrassed, why wouldn’t she be? She was dancing in a middle school prom. But, she didn’t go to hers, this could be a make up of some kind.

“You’re a horrible dancer,” she said, after Adora had nearly stepped on her toes. Her date just scoffed. “I am not, I’m great. You’re the bad dancer.” She held on tightly to Catra’s waist, rocking them back and forth. “No way, I’m a natural. And this song doesn’t really fit how we’re dancing.” The song was funky pop, straight off the radio, not meant for slow dancing in any form.

“Yeah, but these are what the kids requested, can’t fight that.” Adora said, mid-spin as Catra twirled her around. “Hmm, I don’t think I mind actually; you’re pretty great.” She admitted, face heating up at her words.

“Okay, can I get a drum roll please…” sounds of hands hitting tables and thighs filled the room. “Our Prom Queen is…

“I didn’t know who anything of those kids were,” Catra noted, later on after the dance. Adora just laughed, her body shaking with the force. “Uh, you only know Finn and your friend’s kids that’s why.” She explained, hitting the wheel in amusement.

“Well yeah, I don’t need to know those other kids.” Catra said matter of factly, shrugging her shoulder. Finn popped up behind them, in between the seats. “I didn’t know them either. I mean, I did, just not in the “know you” kind of way?” They said, looking at Catra.

“Now all there’s left is graduation, you excited?” Adora asked, looking at Finn in her rear view mirror. They nodded and sighed, slumping back. “I’m tired of school.” They admitted.

“But, you get to go to high school next year! Yay!” Catra cheered from the front seat, hands going up. High School was not yay, nothing about it was yay. She just needed to hype them up because it didn’t get easier.

“That’s right! I hope my friends go to Thaymor high with me.” Finn said, bouncing in their seat. Catra smiled and looked over at Adora, they’ll get there when they get there.

“Fauna D’ream.”

Scorpia whopped, clapping her pincers together. And Perfuma, uncharacteristically, yelled joyously.

“Flora D’ream.”

They all did the same, both girls waving to their parents as they made it back to their seats.

“Finn D’riluth,” Adora announced, and Catra was full of tears. Scratch that. Everyone around her was full of tears. She sat next to Glimmer and Scorpia, along with their respective partners.

“Oh Stars, Catra. This is so… sad, but also not?” Glimmer said from beside her, her stomach full of baby. Catra wasn’t that emotional, that was just her. “Yeah,” she agreed, whooping some more as Finn walked across the stage.

“Ah, that’s my kid.” Catra sighed happily, seeing Adora wipe tears from her ears as well, but having to continue calling the names out.

“Twinkle Moon,” Adora said, and Glimmer screamed. “THAT’S MY BABY! Bow yell!” She said, tapping his shoulder hard, the man groaning in pain.

Their daughter heard them and waved over, a shy little smile. But Catra rolled her eyes, she was a mean little— she let out a breath, it wasn’t the time.

“She’s so cute in her little cap and gown. Ohh Bow!” Glimmer wailed, hugging her husband and sobbing into his shoulder. The row behind them staring them down at the loudness.

“Graduates, you have all come far, I hope you take what you have learned at Thaymor Middle and use it to move forward in all of your lives. Strive to do better—be better, and achieve greatness.

Now, for your valedictorian.” Adora said, stepping from the podium and allowing another kid— wait.

“Is that Finn?” Scorpia asked, and Catra was speechless, rubbing her eyes to make sure she was seeing things right.

It was.

“Hi class, I’m Finn D’riluth. Some of you may know me and some might not, but that’s okay. As your valedictorian, I have some wisdom to carry you on to wherever life may take you.” They flipped a page in the page they had sitting on the podium and adjusted the microphone, lifting their head up and smiling.

“Things aren’t always easy. Nothing is. And I’m not telling you this so you can give up— I’m asking you to not give up. Life gives us many challenges, and it’s our job to overcome them, and reign victorious, because this is our story to tell and we should make the most of it. So, I say, make the most out of your life! Thanks.”

The kids erupted in cheers and Catra was sobbing, from the speech or the surprise, who knew?

“I can’t believe it.”

Just months before, she was just going about her everyday life, her kid was nowhere near this independent, and she was alone.

Now, it was just the opposite. She was going to be just fine. No Tanya, or anything other bitch would get in the way.

And as the caps came raining down, she looked at her friends, ones she made on her own despite how old she was, or her past. And her girlfriend, who was clapping and wiping her eyes, she definitely knew. She would be alright.
