Watching the movie might make it easier to understand this fic, it however is not required. This fic is finished so I expect to upload a new chapter every day.

Chapter 1

An arrow hits a shield with a loud 'thwack' as the target falls back, "He's out!" the trainer yells.

"Aw man." He complains. Catra laughs after landing a successful shot on her target. As he carefully leaves the field, several more shots are let loose. Leaving, eventually, only 2 more trainees, Adora and Catra. Due to the training ground being filled with obstacles, Adora is unable to locate Catra, who is much more agile. Eventually Catra jumps at her from behind a crate and uses her feet to knock away Adora's bow, immidiatly followed by a second kick that causes Adora to stumble. Catra didn't leave her a chance to get up as she pounced onto her.

"Hey Adora, how's it hanging?" Catra says with a mischievous expression on her face. Her tail swooshes back and forth in amusement.

"Catra..." Adora sighs as Catra helps her back to her feet. "Do you always feel the need to do that?"

"You know I do." Catra laughs. After that, they both leave the training area and go help in the stables.

Catra giggles as she continues kneading dough. "You should've seen your face, you were like, 'Arghh, nooo betrayal!'" While Adora just smiles at her, focused on the task at hand.

"Catra." Shadow Weaver enters the room. "I thought I told you to hide those monstrous features better." Pointing at her ears and tail.

"Geez, Shadow Weaver, afraid of some fur?" Catra grumbles.

"SILENCE!" she spits out. Shadow Weaver always hated her for having them, because they mark her as something wild and untamed.

Feeling the situation get more tense, Catra tries to settle things. "Okay , okay, Im sorry ."She says as she covers up her ears and tucks her tail away.

"Adora, walk with me."She signs with her finger . Adora obediently follows her at that.

"Do you need to be so hard on Catra?"Adora says as they enter a hallway, walls decorated with torches and paintings of men conquering nature by killing various animals.

"Adora, youve been working so hard lately ."Ignoring her previous question. "W ord has reached Hordak of your efforts, and soon you may join his missions to tame this land."

"Im getting promoted? I can finally go see the outside world?" Freedom is something the children dont have, and even for adults who arent farmers or hunters, it is rare to leave these walls.

"Y es, my child, you will meet your new squad nextweek."

"A new squad? What about the others, about Catra?"She starts to worry.

Shadow Weaver visibly gets irritated hearing her name. "Catra is disobedient and not ready."She sneers.

"Catra is just eager to get out there, she wants to prove herself!"

"W ell, she shouldve proved herself on the training field, then."They stop in front of a window. "Besides, isnt this what youve wanted all your life, what youve worked so hard for?"Adora feels a hand on her shoulder. "Look outside, you can make a change now , dont waste your chance."Shadow W eaver says as she hands her a wooden badge. A sword carved into it.

"Catra, are you up there?" She calls out, Catra drops down from the roof.

"Hey Adora, finally done listening to Shadow Weaver's praises?"

"You know it's not really like that."

Catra yanks the badge from Adora's jacket. "Ohh what's this? You got promoted!" She yells with sparkles in her eyes.

"Yeah, but-"

"When is our first mission?"

"Catra, we - we are being separated;you haven't been promoted." Adora frowns.

"What?.. Ugh I can't believe that hag." Catra jumps back up.

"Catra wait!" But she's already back on the roof. Adora chooses to chase after her and climb up. It takes a couple of minutes, but she manages to reach Catra.

"Take your stupid badge back." She mumbles as she throws it at Adora, who barely catches it.

"Catra.."

"Look, I don't want your pity! You'll always be her favorite anyway." She tightens her tail around herself.

"Catra, let's sneak out."

Less than an hour later, they are running through the Whispering Woods on horseback, following the pathway running through the explored area, starting to slow down as the forest gets denser. "It is said many people from the town disappeared here, lost in these treacherous woods and eaten by wolves." Adora starts. "I heard they watch you and strike when you sleep."

"Sounds like someone's scareddd." Catra mocks.

"Whattt? That's ridiculous. Im not-" her horse gets spooked when a tree falls and runs off.

"Adora!" Catra goes after her .

Adora's horse bucks, causing Adora to fall of f and down a hill, hitting her head on a rock at the bottom. The last thing she sees before she passes out is a wolf.

"Adora!" A voice reaches out to her , she slowly opens her eyes. "Adora, are you okay?"

"Catra! There's a wolf we need to report this to-" She immediately gets back up even though she still feels diz z .

"W ow wow wow, princess, if you saw a wolf I doubt you'd still be alive. Are you brain damaged?" Catra begins inspecting her . "Please dont be brain damaged, Shadow W eaver will kill me."

"Catra, Im serious!" Adora steps back.

"Whatever , let's go back before anyone notices we're gone. I got your horse too, so be thankful." They climb back up the hill and ride back into town. By the time they get back, it's almost time to sleep, so they end the day getting some reading done before heading to the bed they share in secret.

A few hours go by, and Adora can't leave the day behind. She carefully slips out of bed and sneaks out. Catra tries to stop her, but she tells her to keep watch and that she will be back soon. She manages to get herself a horse and rides back out into the forest, now filled with the sounds of owls hooting and crickets chirping. As the forest gets denser, it gets darker due to the moon losing access to the forest floor. When she gets to where she was the day before, she ties up her horse and carefully descends the slope. As she moves onwards, she discovers footprints that are way too big to belong to a fox, and she catches a glimpse of something moving through the bushes.

"Who's there?" She pulls out a pocket knife. "Reveal yourself." She takes on a fighting stance for the potential threat. Carefully moving herself forward to reveal whatever is hiding. As she moves away, a branch, a small wolf jumps at her, growling and showing its fangs. "There you are," Adora says as she runs forward.

She starts slashing with her knife at the beast, determined to get this over quickly. But the wolf is more agile and intelligent than she expected, and it manages to pounce on her and land a bite. She cries out in pain as she lands a slash on the wolf's face. Causing it to jump back and retreat into the trees.

She won... for now.

Chapter 2

The next day , Adora acted differently. Catra asked her what had happened when she returned, but she didn't say much other than that she was right and there was no wolf. The day mostly went on as it normally would: eating, training, cooking, cleaning, and then heading to sleep in their shared room with all the other senior trainees, their last week together before Adora officially left, and Catra would be alone. Something she didn't want to think about.

When night fell, Adora felt miserable;her sense of smell and hearing felt too overwhelming, and she couldn't stop sweating. Her forearm where she got bitten felt like it was burning;she felt her hair stand on end and her teeth were aching. At some point she told Catra she needed to use the bathroom and hid there for a while;whatever was happening was bad, and she was unable to decide whether to ignore it or go to the infirmary, even if she knew that would get her punished. At some point she must have passed out on the floor, because when she next opened her eyes, something was dif ferent. She couldn't get back up on her feet, and her hands looked wrong. Nasty claws had replaced her fingernails, and fur covered what should be her fingers. When she finally managed to find her balance and look into the mirror, she began to truly panic.

"No, no no no."She couldn't stop herself from spiraling;she had woken up into a nightmare. She didn't know what to do;she couldn't let herself be seen like this. So she stumbled and ran;she escaped the Fright Zone in the dead of the night and ran into the woods where she couldn't hurt anyone, where she couldn't hurt Catra. There were rumors that wolves could turn people, but never had she imagined them to be true. She never thought it was possible for her to turn into a violent predator. She couldn't go back, not like this, so she decided to keep moving until she reached a clearing under the moon and sat down, exhausted from how she freaked out.

"Come on, Bow ... I heard something nearby;there's been a lot of humans near this part of the forest, we gotta check it out!"Someone in the distance says. Adora quickly stands up.

"You're supposed to be on house arrest. Are you sure this is a good idea?"A young man speaks. Closing in on the spot Adora is at. She starts steadily backing up. But before she can sneak away, she gets spotted.

"There you are!"The smallest wolf says as she pounces.

"You!"Adora growls. "What did you do to me!?"She's now baring her teeth.

"You bit a human, Glimmer!?"Bow asks with a high-pitched voice. Adora kicks the smallest wolf off her and bounces back.

"What do you mean?What did I do to you?You attacked me!You threatened my family!"Glimmer growls.

"And you viciously attack people!"Adora bites back.

Bow gets in between them. "Okay , okay, how about we all just calm down?

"Fine, let's leave then."Glimmer turns away . Bow looks back once more at Adora before turning back to Glimmer's side. Starting to slowly walk off.

"Wait!I can't go back home like this!Isn't there a cure?

"Ugh."Glimmer turns around. "Fine, come with us if you wanna learn more."She reluctantly says. And Adora follows them deep into the forest, where no men ever set foot.

"Here it is, Bright Moon."Glimmer says. Letting Adora take in the view with adoration, there is a small clearing in front of a cliff. There's several tents around and there's a cave entrance in the cliffside. It is much more colorful than the city.

"It's pretty amazing, isn't it?" Bow smiles.

"Amazing? Are you kidding me? The air has never smelled this fresh." I bet Catra would love it, Adora thinks to herself.

Glimmer guides them into a tent. "Mom told me to never bite anyone, and she's not gonna like you, so how about you wait here with Bow while I go talk to her? And don't do anything stupid." She warns as she turns around to leave.

"Come on in, Glimmer," Angella says. "I thought I told you not to sneak out at night. You're in a whole lot of trouble, young lady." A majestic, large wolf appears in Glimmer's view.

"Good to see you too, mom." Glimmer nervously laughs as Angella starts circling her.

"Go on then, what do you have to say? I can hear you thinking."

"Please don't be mad." Glimmer starts. "I might have uhh... taken a bite of a human." Angella gasps.

"Glimmer! I can't believe you-" Taking a deep breath, Angella regains her composure. "Okay, and where is the human now?"

Glimmer turns around, signing with her paw for Angella to follow back to the tent where Adora and Bow are.

Angella steps forward. "So you're the human." She speaks with suspicion in her voice.

"Yes, ma'am." Adora makes herself look smaller. "Please tell me there's a cure." Adora almost begs.

Angella scoffs. "I'm afraid there is not. And even if there was, why would I give it to a human who swore to hunt my kind?" As she walks away, Adora and the other 2 young wolves follow her. "When I was younger, there were a lot more of us. Alas, human settlements have grown. And their greed has led your kind to start hunting us to make sure they have more food."Adora starts to get a bitter taste in her mouth. "But you are no longer one of them, child. If you go back, youll die."

"I want to help."A meek voice says.

"What now?"Angella says, turning to Adora, she doesnt know if she heard that right.

"What Ive been taught is wrong. I want to help make things right."

"V ery well then, welcome to my pack."

When Catra woke up, she noticed Adora was gone, and that didnt go unnoticed long.

"Where is she!?"Shadow W eaver demanded, who was mad that her favorite toy had seemingly run off. "There was a wolf sighted close by last night, what do you know?"

"I know nothing!Its not my fault Adora got tired of you!"Probably not the smartest thing Catra ever said, but at this point she was out of shits to give.

"Y ou will hunt down the wolf who did this tomorrow and bring Adora back dead or alive, and if you fail, there will be conseqences. D you understand?"

"Y es, Weaver."Catra looks away .

And thats how she found herself getting ready to hunt down wolves for the first time, not knowing if shed ever see Adora again. Freedom, but at what cost?

The next day , she went out with a squad deep into the Whispering Woods, where, after several hours, she found her first targets and ambushed them, directing two of the wolves into traps. Ending her face-to-face the only one who outsmarted her until then. The wolf, seemingly hesitant to attack and focusing on dodging instead as it growled and whined at her, became an easy target.

After firing several arrows, she managed to strike, drawing out a pained wail of the beast. It stumbled and passed out. Reverting and revealing an oddly familiar humanoid figure.

"Adora? Adora, is that you!? Oh no, I didn't, didn't know . Im so sorry . Please, stay..."

Chapter 3

Chapter Notes

You reached the midway point!Concrats if you are still here!

"Adora!" Shit, shit shit. Catra didnt keep Adora close enough;this is where it got her. Her dearest friend was injured but also no longer human enough to take her back to the Fright Zone. Unable to stay where she was now, she grabbed onto Adora and ran away before the other wolves would come after her.

Once she found a small cave, she laid Adora down and covered her body with her furred jacket to keep her warm. She still had that arrow lodged into her side, which slowed the bleeding, but it still wasnt good, as it wasnt even remotely clean. Weary of her own claws, she gently started pulling the arrow out. Adora let out an unconscious whimper as she removed it. After she got it out, she cleaned the wound with water and started stitching it, hoping for the best. When she was satisfied with her work, all she could do was wait for her to wake up and pray she isnt found. She didnt have any tools for starting a fire, and it was raining outside;all Catra could do was huddle closer to Adora.

The first thing that came back to Adora was her hearing;she could hear the steady pour of the rain.

The second thing that came back to her was the pain, the soreness of her muscles all over and a throbbing sensation in her side.

The third and final thing to come back was her sight, and the realization that someone else was with her .

"Catra...?" She asked as the darkness from her eyes faded away . Her vision slowly became clearer and more focused.

"Hey , Adora," Catra said with relief in her voice. "How are you feeling? Y ou shouldn't get up too soon." Despite looking the same, Adora smelled so different. Her scent was now more like that of soil and wet fur.

"Why?" Adora slowly sat up.

"Because you're injured, duh."

"No, why did you let me live?"

Catra scoffs. "W ell, why didn't you tell me what happened, you idiot?" Adora flinches at that.

"I got scared and ran." She admits, avoiding eye contact.

"So you left me?" Catra almost yells, tail swooshing back and forth in frustration. Her life as a hybrid had been hell, but she always stayed. Yet Adora wasn't willing to do the same.

"I didn't mean to - you could come with me-"

The sheer audacity and desperation Adora had broken something in Catra.

"No way ." Catra interrupts. "No way am I going to follow you and your pack of mutts when you left me first."

"Catra-" Adora pleads.

"No, I am not running after you like your pet." She declares with rage in her voice. "Y ou know what? I'm done, goodbye, Adora." Catra leaves, too blinded by rage to listen to reason.

"Catra!" Adora tries to get up, but hisses in pain as she tries and fails to follow after her feline friend. Who, after mere seconds, fully disappeared from her sight.

With Catra now gone, Adora had to start finding her way back to camp, so she started walking, clutching her aching side. She had no idea where she was, and she was too tired to transform, so she was just guessing where she was going.

After a while (thirty minutes? Three hours? She didn't know), she heard footsteps coming towards her.

"Catra?"

"Adora!" Two figures said simultaneously, with happiness in their voices, gently embracing Adora in a hug.

"Bow, Glimmer." She acknowledged with sadness in her eyes.

"Are you okay? We found a trail of your blood at the site of the battle-"

"Who's Catra?" Glimmer interrupts.

"I'm alright; Catra was just someone I knew. Are you two okay? I was so worried."

"We're fine. We should go back to Bright Moon; let's go." Bow says, walking beside Adora while Glimmer leads the way. On the way back, Adora learns that the pack of wolves living together in the area of the battle unfortunately had to evacuate, as fighting the Horde was too dangerous. Fortunately no one died.

After a long walk, the three of them got back; they immediately were summoned and questioned by Angella. By the time nightfall came, Adora was exhausted, nearly collapsing onto her bed. But instead of instantly falling asleep, she cried. She mourned the loss of Catra, and cried herself to sleep.

Chapter 4

Sha "You useless rat!" Shadow W eaver yelled as Catra struggled to maintain her balance. "That thing killed Adora, and you couldn't even avenge her by bringing back its head!"

"How could I, Adora's still in there! W olfwalkers are real!" Catra yells back when she gets interrupted by a knee in her stomach.

"I've kept a pest like you around for long enough! But I'm not so sure if I wish to do so any longer!" Shadow W eaver pulled out a dagger; Catra was in deep trouble now. Shadow Weaver started to raise her weapon, as Catra readied her claws. They were about to fight when they were suddenly interrupted.

"Shadow W eaver." A tall man in a fancy cloak said. Both Shadow Weaver and Catra backed down at that. It was Sir Hordak, leader of the village's Horde. He had 4 serving men behind him with spears and cuffs. Catra could feel her heartbeat drumming in her ears now.

"Sir Hordak, just in time. This hybrid child has been unbearable, it is time-"

"Silence." He commands. "Y ou have failed me more than a few times, Weaver. I will not let you make a fool of this order. You are going into the dungeon."

"Hordak-"

"And tonight, I shall put an end to these foul beasts and reclaim my land. If you behave, I might let you serve by cleaning after."

"Hordak-!"

"Enough, take her away ." His guards closed in on the older woman. "And this hybrid child, it shall be put down."

Catra's eyes widened, and her fight-or-flight response took over, and she fought back.

She didn't know what happened after. When she came to her senses, her claws were covered in blood, and she found herself in what was probably a deep part of the Whispering Woods. She had nowhere to go, so she just kept walking. Until eventually, she lay under an old tree, falling into a fitful sleep.

When Adora woke up, it was late in the morning. Her face was still stained with tears over what had happened the previous day. Still hungry, she got out of bed to eat, careful not to strain her injured side. Bow and Glimmer noticed her unusually quiet behaviour, but didn't speak up about it, instead opting to comment on how good the fruit tasted.

After eating, they had a meeting with the packs in the area. Discussing plans to strengthen defenses, how to aid each other, and so on. The noise all blurred into becoming part of the background to Adora.

"Adora!" Glimmer's voice snapped her out of it. Her head instantly shot up.

"Sorry, yes, Glimmer?"

"Are you alright?" Bow chimed in. "You've been sitting with your head in the clouds all day. You seem... distracted?"

"No, I'm fine, just had a bad night with all the bugs zooming near my ears. That's all."

Bow and Glimmer shared a suspicious glance with each other, but chose not to push further.

After the meeting, Spinnerella and Netossa were sent out to keep watch over the village. Adora was free alongside Bow and Glimmer, who offered to go berry plucking. But Adora politely declined, instead choosing to return to her tent and lie down. As the hours passed, the sun did too. When Adora was next disturbed, it was late in the afternoon.

"We have emergency news for Angella!" Spinnerella and Netossa yelled. This caused everyone to come outside, wondering what could be so important.

"What is it?" Angella appeared.

"We came as fast as we could, but we don't have much time. An army is on its way; at most, we have until sunset for them to arrive. We need to prepare for the worst."

"We don't have time to send word to nearby packs; we all meet the army head-on. All those who are able to fight come with me. We are heading out very soon."

"Mom."

"Glimmer, stay here, for your own good."

"No! I want to help!" She protests.

"Glimmer, please-"

"No way! I am not sitting back while you and everyone else go off to fight back, not when I can help."

Angella pauses for a moment. "Alright, but you will stay close by, and if I tell you to run, you run."

Glimmer lights up at that.

"All right, everyone, we leave now!" Angella orders.

When the wolfwalkers heard Hordak's army coming close, they got into position. Hiding behind the bushes to ambush.

"Stop!" The man on the horse said. "Something's not quite right."

As a soldier got too close, Adora lunged, knocking the man over. Not long after, they were all engaged in the chaos of battle. As time went on, the bitter taste of blood took over her mouth. It was sickening.

Another soldier approached, screaming, but Bow knocked them over with ease. "I got you!" He yelled, allowing Adora to continue.

"Mom!" Glimmer howls as she takes down a man holding a crossbow. She uses her shorter build to her advantage to sneak up and dodge fire.

"Careful Glimmer!" Angella reminds her as she continues.

Attracted by all the commotion, Catra found herself an audience to this battle. Oh no, Adora, she thought to herself, quickly running into the crowd to find her.

As Catra arrived, she noticed a soldier aiming his gun at Adora.

"Adora, no!" A familiar voice yelled. Followed by Catra jumping out of a bush and single-handedly knocking out a soldier whom she hadn't noticed prior.

Adora gasped in disbelief, unable to speak her name like this, but her eyes said enough.

Catra momentarily smiles before berating her. "Watch your back, you idiot!" At that instant, Adora turns around to knock over the next attacker.

They were reunited now, and they had each other's backs.

When a man got too close to Catra, Adora viciously dragged him down by his leg. Sending the soldier running for his life after she let go.

While some wolves got hurt, many more soldiers were forced to retreat.

As Catra took out some more hunters, Hordak aimed.

"In Prime's light I vanquish thee." Pointing his weapon at Adora, and she didn't see it coming.

"Adora!" Catra desperately ran in her direction, pushing herself as hard as she could.

As the shot was fired, she launched herself into the bullet's path.

"Catra!" Adora howled as she watched Catra collapse in front of her . Catra panting and the blood blossoming through her clothes was the only sign she was still alive, but that didn't quell Adora's rage. She turned to face Hordak as she growled.

"Lord, protect me." He whispered as he pulled out a sword, pointing it at the foul beast.

Adora jumped and danced as she tried to land a bite on him, dodging every path the sword took.

She pounced forward at the wrong time, as Hordak's blade sliced a clean cut on her cheek.

She winced.

"Adora!" Bow and Glimmer called in the distance.

Hordak ran forward, bringing his sword down. But Adora interrupted it, using the muscles in her back legs to hold her ground.

The piece of metal started to crack under the force of her jaws.

Adora thrashed.

While clinging to the sword, Hordak was thrown back, nearing the edge of a cliff.

"You wretched beast!"

Adora jumped again, shattering the sword completely, the steel shards making her gums bleed. She whimpered as the taste of blood entered her mouth.

Hordak was left without a weapon now. Despite that, his hatred pushed him to charge yet again, Adora biting into his arm as she pushed him further back near his end.

As the ground under them gave way, Adora stepped back.

Hordak punched her in the eye. She let go, causing him to fall into the raging rivers below.

He had no regrets.

The remaining soldiers flee the scene after witnessing the fall of their leader.

After everyone retreated, she quickly ran to Catra's side. Returned to her human form.

"Please, Catra, stay with me." She begged as she held her tight. "I need help!" She fears the worst as Catra's blood pools.

Glimmer, Bow, and a bunch of others joined her by her side, grabbing onto Catra's hands.

"We can heal her." Angella guides. "Hold each other's hands and concentrate."

As they started the ritual, all of them began glowing. Catra's wound slowly began to mend itself, eventually pushing the bullet back out. When the wound was healed, Angella made them let go.

"Please, Catra..." Adora was praying this would work.

A few moments went by...

Suddenly, Catra gasps as she starts coughing, Adora gently patting her back to comfort her.

"Adora.."

"Catra, you're okay!" Adora cradles her in her arms.

Catra starts sobbing. "I'm sorry ... for everything..."

"I missed you. Let's go home." Adora of fers. Catra nods as she walks with her. It starts raining as the sun goes down.

"Y our face- are you okay?" Referring to the cut on Adora's cheek.

Adora halts. "That doesn't matter right now ."

Catra turns around and makes eye contact. "It matters to me!" She declares.

"And you almost died!" Adora bites back as she starts to cry .

"Oh, Adora..." Catra hugs her . "Sh, sh, it's okay , I'm still here. I won't leave." She starts to purr .

Ah ae ...

Adora is running. "Catra, wait up!"

"Run faster , slowpoke!" Catra runs as their camp becomes visible.

"Catra, you're back! Where's Adora?" Glimmer and Bow ask.

"I'm here!" Adora pants as she finally catches up.

"I can't believe you're still this slow with your new powers." She teases. "Anyways, what are you two doing out here?" She turns and asks.

W e were about to gather apples from the trees further ahead, wanna join us?

Adora smiles. W ed love that."
