The Head Sorceress dragged Shadow Weaver into the bedroom, casually closing the door with a spell, and promptly had her sit on the couch; only then did she stop mumbling angrily and notice where they were.

—Am I grounded now!?

—No…— Castaspella sighed, holding back a laugh.

—I am really trying, okay!? But it is not working!

—Bea…— she called, holding her wrists.

—I so wanted to surround that bitch in shadows and shut him up forever!

—Beatrix! I know! I saw Sahm's reaction, it wasn't just you— she pointed out. Her tone then turned softer as she pleaded —But you need to calm down and breathe…

—I don't breathe! And your damned psychological bullshit won't work!— she was yelling, furious, until a sudden kiss interrupted her. The sorceress pushed her against the couch and little by little she let go of all the tension. Once relaxed, Castaspella pulled back and smiled at her. —Is this your great plan to calm me down?

—This was more of an… emergency measure— she playfully replied, sitting on her lap. —You were so worked up and, again, I saw Sahm was just as angry, so I can only suppose you were provoked.

—You have no idea— Shadow Weaver muttered, glaring at the distance.

—Anyone would get angry in that situation. I'm sure Sahm would have punched him if Ari hadn't stopped him, but… the one struggling to control her anger and violent impulses is you, so I know you were about to explode— Castaspella gently explained. —Until you're more in control, I will distract you however I see fit…

—Is that a promise?

—Yes?

—Perfect.

Tilting her head while a smirk appeared on her lips, Shadow Weaver caught her in a kiss again and pushed her down on the couch. Her hands roamed free around Castaspella's body, stopping only to play with the rim of her dress.

As the woman slowly moved it down to tease her breasts, the sorceress took a deep breath and said —So you want me to distract you more?

—Yes— she admitted. —Because I still want to… manifest my anger, break something, or hurt someone— she went on, closing her hands out of rage and accidentally scratching

Castaspella's skin. Immediately letting go, she stammered —Fuck! So-sorry, that was…

—Hey— the sorceress stopped her, catching her hands. —I… don't mind if you do that to release your anger— she dared say, looking away shyly.

—No, no— Shadow Weaver refused. —I don't want to hurt you like that, out of anger; I don't want to… to hurt you because I got angry at someone else. I wouldn't want to hurt you, even if you angered me… Not again— she expressed, looking ashamed.

—And I'm proud of you for that— Castaspella smiled, cupping her face.

—Don't be. I'm just a coward— the woman denied, moving her face away from the sorceress' hand. —I'm just… afraid of being unable to stop if I take your offer… I know I'd be too blinded and deafened by rage to realize it if I'm hurting you too much…

—Why would that make you a coward?— she asked, disbelieving. —You're just recognizing your limits— she pointed out. Then, she got an idea. —Here…— she said, taking one of her hands and placing it on her naked chest. —What do you feel when you touch me? Do you feel lust?

—Usually… I don't feel lust for you— Shadow Weaver began, serious enough that it disheartened Castaspella. However, she quickly smirked as she explained —Because you're so nerdy and correct.

—There's a "but", right?

The woman nodded and leant closer to whisper in her ear —But, when I hear you moan, that arouses me and I do feel lust… Like that first time, here on this same couch, before my mask was shattered…

—That's more like it— Castaspella proudly stated, giggling a bit.

—Now, to answer your question…— Shadow Weaver went on, leaning back again and caressing the sorceress' skin. —When I touch you, but also when I see you smile at me, give me that soft look… I feel… Ugh… I feel love— she confessed, looking even more ashamed than before. —A part of me still hates feeling this, but I wholly refuse to hurt you, ever again.

—Oh, my… Bea— Castaspella sighed. —How can you call yourself a coward when you're actually being so brave? We've talked about what you think of love and, because you consider it a weakness, because it's something that has always made you feel vulnerable, the fact that now you allow yourself to… love me, and to admit it, represents great growth! It shows how brave you have been to get over your fear of love and care…

—But, don't you see!? I-I'm now mortified by the idea of hurting you! Even if accidentally… Be-because I, what!? Love you!? It is a weakness!— she exclaimed. —I-if, for any reason, we were to become enemies again, I'd be unable to face you! To fight you! Even if my life depended on it!

Castaspella's expression gave away her shock and, for a moment, the women just stared at each other in silence. She had to admit that Shadow Weaver was right.

She couldn't imagine having to fight her now…

On the contrary, she had decided that if Shadow Weaver ever did anything punish-worthy, she'd take the fall with her, precisely because she couldn't fathom the idea of hurting her either.

But that was exactly it, wasn't it?

—Well then, it's a good thing that you won't ever become my enemy again…

—You can't know that.

—In any case, Bea, that same logic would apply to me— Castaspella quickly argued. —It wouldn't be a weakness of either of us, it would just be our… particular situation! We'd both have the same… uh… handicap, so to speak— she explained.

That much was… true?

She had never thought about it that way…

But when had she ever allowed herself to think this much about the subject?

Perhaps… it was time to let go?

After a moment, the woman let out half a smirk and asked —Is that so?

Shadow Weaver's tone was suggestive enough to let the sorceress know she had managed to ease her worries, and was finally ready for the promised distraction…

—Absolutely… I wouldn't stop thinking about your touch, that I like so much— Castaspella replied, smiling as she sat up. —And now… I'd like to show you a bit of that… if you allow me— she proposed, caressing down Shadow Weaver's sides with both hands.

—I suppose I could take a naked form to humor you… But if you don't put enough pressure and it feels like a tease, I'm out— the woman negotiated.

—Sounds fair— the sorceress agreed, giggling. Standing up and pulling Shadow Weaver towards the bed, she asked —Will you show me your body this time?

—What is that supposed to mean? This magical body only lets me take my form as it was…

—But you always take the form you had before the corruption, and I feel like… you're not showing me the real you— she argued, sitting on the mattress and looking down.

—Why would you prefer a scarred and decrepit body?

—I just want to see you as you were when I met you…

—You're so stubborn…— Shadow Weaver sighed, sitting next to her. After a moment, she let out a small smile and said —Once. I'll decide in the future whether I want to show myself like that again. Deal?

—Deal— Castaspella agreed, smiling brightly.

Trying and failing to hide a faint blush, the woman made herself comfortable on the bed and willed her magical body to change into how she would look without her robes. She could feel the sorceress' sight on her and refused to look her way, still fighting the shyness.

—I'm warning you now… if you say anything stupid like my scars are "beautiful", I'm never doing this again.

But Castaspella was stunned, speechless, and hesitant to touch her while itching to do so. She knew the woman was scarred all over, but actually seeing it was completely different.

Carefully crawling over her, she noticed the texture of her skin, how different it was from the perfect skin Light Spinner had, and how much her muscles had reduced; Shadow Weaver could feel her just watching, and it was driving her crazy.

Yet before she could say anything, Castaspella finally dared touch her: she brushed her fingers down the scars, following them towards the woman's heart, pressing hard enough that Shadow Weaver could feel it.

—Thank you— she muttered, before leaning down to kiss and bite around her chest.

The woman wanted to ask what she was thanking her for, but the sorceress' hands finally found their way to her legs, and she had to focus intently to hold back a moan.

As Castaspella's hands squeezed her legs, scratched her inner thighs, and finally penetrated her, the sorceress made a mental note of how different it all felt; much less firm, there was hardly anything to grab now, and she could have sworn her legs were just bone and skin when she was still alive.

Yet it didn't make her any less thirsty, it didn't appall her. It worried her for a second, and ultimately fed her desire to show her love even more…

Shadow Weaver gripped the sheets as she could actually feel Castaspella's fingers inside her.

How did that work? She didn't know nor did she care.

She could feel it, and she could, perhaps, allow herself to enjoy it.

At least this once…

Initially, she wasn't sure whether she wanted this. Shadow Weaver preferred pleasing the sorceress without letting her touch her, but now, feeling Castaspella's firm grasp on her thigh while her fingers reached deep inside her, her hungry kisses on her chest… she just wanted more.

As if reading her mind, the sorceress pushed deeper and her kisses turned into bites that, although they felt light, she knew they had to be quite hard. It made the woman finally gasp in pleasure and grip the sheets tighter as her whole body tensed.

After a few, pleasurable minutes, Castaspella withdrew her hand and stopped biting her chest. Before Shadow Weaver could complain, she moved forward and kissed her, while squeezing her breasts. Once again, she noticed they felt smaller, having lost body mass too…

Just what had happened to her!?

Their kiss intensified as Castaspella's arousal overwhelmed her; she sat on top of the woman, gave her breasts a final squeeze, and Shadow Weaver felt her smile against her lips as her hands reached for her ears.

She almost broke the kiss with a moan, surprised that her ears remained so sensitive, yet also feeling ashamed of how much she liked the way the sorceress brushed the tips…

Minutes became hours, eventually, Castaspella's dress was discarded, and Shadow Weaver could return the favour.

It was the first time they were actually having sex.

The sorceress feared it would never happen, and now didn't want it to end; she pressed her body against Shadow Weaver's, moved her hips back and forth roughly, wanting to feel her between her legs, and kept kissing her.

Her jaw, her neck, her chest…

But she was quickly running out of stamina; it wouldn't be long before she lost her strength.

Breathless, she forced herself to go on, but Shadow Weaver stopped her.

—Cas… Aren't you tired already?

The sorceress managed to push herself up just enough to look at her and saw a hint of worry in the woman's unusually gentle expression.

—I… I'm fine— she breathed out.

—You're only human— Shadow Weaver reminded her, holding her shoulders to help her stay up. —You need rest… And a bath, I believe.

—But I…

—Don't want this to end, do you?

Castaspella looked away shyly and nodded.

—I've wanted… this for so long…

—And if I promise we'll repeat it?

—I don't want to force you to do this again if you're not comfortable— she explained, having recovered her breath.

—I think that won't be a problem— the woman smiled. —It wasn't as bad as I feared.

With a breathless laugh, the sorceress asked —Is that a compliment?

—Maybe— she mocked her. —Now, why don't you let me help you freshen up?

—Fine…— Castaspella groaned.

It made Shadow Weaver chuckle briefly; she could be so childish sometimes.

As she gave up at last, the woman picked her up in her arms, took her to the bathroom, and helped her stay on her feet; the sorceress let her brush the soap around her body, then scrub it off, and finally handle her hair.

Castaspella was a bit disappointed as Shadow Weaver didn't take the opportunity to touch her again when her hands passed between her legs. But she had to admit that would have made her lose what little strength she had left.

The woman took her time to meticulously dry the sorceress' body, surprising her with how gentle she was. She did it with great care, almost reverence…

Once finished, she wrapped the towel around Castaspella's head and offered to carry her back to the bed.

—It's already nighttime, you better stay here and rest— Shadow Weaver pointed out. —Although I believe I should perhaps order some dinner for you— she then added, pensive.

The sorceress hummed and replied —If you insist…

—Yes, I insist.

That way, half an hour later, Shadow Weaver was once again wearing her robes to receive the food. Castaspella had to move a bit closer to the door, careful to remain out of view, and that was when she noticed just how tired she was.

Once back in bed, she sighed —Thank you, Bea. For everything.

—No need… Just eat your dinner and go to sleep.

—I will, I will— she giggled, sitting up comfortably.

It didn't take the sorceress too long to finish her meal; soon enough, she was ready to sleep.

However…

—Is there something on your mind, Cas?— Shadow Weaver asked, noticing her hesitation.

—I don't mean to, erm, push you or anything, so it's alright if you refuse, but… do you think you could, eh- spend the night naked with me?

The woman's expression went from surprised to amused; she took a deep breath and joined her in bed, rolling her eyes a bit as she shifted her magical body's appearance once again.

—You're lucky I'm in quite a good mood right now— she smirked.

—I suppose I am— Castaspella said, visibly happy. She didn't hesitate to cuddle her, resting her head on Shadow Weaver's chest, and asked —Did you… like it?

—Very much— the woman admitted, letting out a sigh. —But, didn't you find it strange?

—Well, it's a bit weird that, um, it's all dry? There are no fluids, if you know what I mean. But, it's the same when I kiss you… I-I guess I got used to it, and it still arouses me.

—Interesting…

Shadow Weaver certainly didn't expect that answer, but it was rather satisfying.

It eased her fears, especially those related to being just a summoned entity, and further convinced her of how genuine are the feelings they share.

Her thoughts were interrupted by the sorceress letting out a yawn and making herself more comfortable.

—Good night?

—Good night, Cas— the woman replied, setting the usual illusions on the sorceress to help her sleep…
