Summary

It's the big number ten as far as anniversaries go and Catra and Adora are looking to break away from parenthood long enough to enjoy their weekend getaway at Plumeria Resort.

Little did they know they end up getting more than they bargained for.

Story by vagician, artwork by Batatadeuces.

Notes

Hey, vagician here. So just a bit of world building before we hop into it.

-Catra and Adora have three kittens and are well into their early thirties. Finn is ten, Felix is 8, and Faye is 5.

-They live in a modern suburban version of Bright Moon and while hybrids do exist, magic does not.

-They're both biological parents to their kittens despite neither possesing a penis in the AU. Normally I would have remedied that by giving one of them one but since the artwork that started this whole story was created before the story, I wanted to stay true to the prompt while still having them both be biological parents so we're just going to cover up this plothole by making it possible for magicats to be impregnated by both genders. A/B/O fics do it all the time. Why can't we? 😂

-Scorpia and Perfuma are godparents to Catra and Adora's children but they're both referred to as their aunt's. Scorpia and Perfuma's child Flora is also the goddaughter to Catra and Adora.

And lastly, this entire fic wouldn't have happened if it weren't for the co creator of this fic being the great friend she is and convincing me that sometimes it's okay to break away from writing daily and just learn to give yourself a break every once in a while.

I know there will be people reading this asking and wondering what happened to my other ongoing fic Blonde Is The New Black and while I won't leave your questions unanswered, I'm afraid it'll be answers most of you won't want to hear.

To quit stringing you along I'll just say it outright and announce that it's on hiatus until I'm able to bring myself into the headspace of writing for that AU again. You can only do so much before the burnout eventually catches up with you and your creativity gets replaced with writer's block.

So while it isn't abandoned entirely, I'm unable to provide you with an ETA at this time. I don't want to start up another series without finishing that one though so in the meantime I plan on taking it easy and working on some catradora oneshots I still have in progress and conjuring up any more AU's that Bata's next level art inspires me to create.

Chapter 1

"Did you pack all of your stuff?" Catra looks down at the young magicat, eyeing the bag they have slumped over their shoulder. She doesn't miss the quiet huff Finn makes beneath their breath, nor the signature eye roll that follows.

"All of my stuff? No. Pretty sure I'd need a bigger backpack for that, Mom." Finn snarks back, shaping a cheeky grin at her when Catra doesn't look nearly as amused with their humor. Leave it to the universe to have one of her kits inherit her next-level sass. While Felix inherited Adora's clumsiness and Faye got passed down the blonde's good-hearted nature, Finn had to be Catra's doppelganger in all sense of the word, the young felid just as cunning and crass as herself.

"Well if it's as half as big as your mouth, I'm sure you'll have no issues there, kiddo." the older feline counters, seating a hand on their head to ruffle up their mane. Finn hisses in protest, play-swiping at her before they weasel their way out of her grasp. "Hey, watch the claws, will you? I just got this shirt." Catra reprimands them, rubbing at her sleeve.

Finn throws her a questioning look of amusement. "Righttt, I getcha. Gotta look all snazzy for your hot date with mom, right?"

The young magicat snickers at the way Catra's ears flatten sheepishly, prompting her to gently flick their nose in retaliation. "It's not a hot date, it's our anniversary weekend, you furball. Now instead of slandering me and my wardrobe, how about you focus on your own. Did you pack everything you need for Auntie Scorpia's?"

"I was ready over an hour ago, so yeah." Finn enlightens her, gesturing to their backpack for good measure.

"And what about the other two rugrats? Are they all set?" Catra asks, reaching for the coat rack to help assist them with their jacket. Catra knows their fur would likely be enough to keep her kits safe and warm for the winter weather, but as a mother, she could never be too safe.

"Dunno. Last I checked they were massacring a jar of cake frosting in the kitchen with mom." Finn offers up, and Catra honestly wasn't too surprised, snorting humorously at the reveal.

"Why does that not surprise me." Catra comments with a hopeless shake of her head, walking off towards her pack of gluttons to get the rest of their bunch herded together. "Wait in the car and make sure the heater's running. I'm sure we're going to need it," she advises Finn before disappearing down the hall to backtrack towards the kitchen.

Soon enough, Finn's intel turns out to be accurate, observing in silence as she watches her wife and other two kittens taking turns passing around a tub of frosting, none the wiser to Catra's arrival. Felix frowns when Faye hands him the jar, the insides of it seemingly empty.

"You ate it all!" he whines, scooping out what little frosting is left with his finger. Faye furrows her brows while her blonde tail gives an irritable twitch, offended by the accusation.

"I did not, you liar!" Faye shoots back defensively, crossing her arms against her chest.

"Actually, that one might have been my bad, guys." Adora speaks up, leftover frosting dotting her cheek before she finally notices Catra standing in the doorway, looking well over entertained at the spectacle.

"Might? We both know who passed down that bottomless pit you call an appetite, and it surely wasn't me." Catra corrects her spouse, pulling up beside her to give both her kits a scrutinizing look. "Have you two packed your stuff yet?"

Faye looks at Felix. Felix looks at Faye. "Uh…" they both mutter in unison.

Catra sighs, pointing down the hall towards their rooms. "Hurry it up and when you're done get your butts in the car. The heater's running so make it snappy."

Catra snatches the empty jar of frosting Felix tries darting off with, waiting until the kitchen was fully cleared of kittens before she throws her wife a pointed look. "Really, Adora? Giving them sweets before a two-hour car drive? Are you trying to send us to an early grave?"

"Oh, come on. I didn't give them that much! I made sure to eat most of it before giving it to them!" Adora insists, absently licking the leftover mustache of frosting still coating her upper lip.

"Clearly that much is obvious.* Catra comments, handing the blonde a paper towel to clean the rest of her mouth with. With Adora around, sometimes Catra felt like she was taking care of four kids instead of three. "Are you ready to go? I'd like to get to the Fright Zone before Whispering Road gets plagued with after-work traffic."

"Pretty sure it's called the Fun Zone, not the Fright Zone." Adora amusedly corrects her, wiping at her face before she balls up the paper towel, tossing it in the trash.

"Agree to disagree there." Catra counters, knowing all too well how many families flock to the recreation center during the weekends. That many people bunched together in a single establishment sounded far more frightful than it did fun to the magicat. Adora raises a brow but doesn't comment any further much to the feline's relief. Catra quickly steers the conversation forward while she still can.

"You all packed up, princess? Scorp and Flowergirl are already over there so the sooner we drop off the runts, the better."

"Yeah, let me grab my bag. Meet you in the car?" Adora offers, tugging her forward by the sleeve for a chaste kiss to the lips. Catra grins into the kiss, eager to finally get her wife all to herself for the weekend.

"I told you this was going to happen." Catra groans when about halfway through their trip, the traffic condensed so badly that 55mph had gradually lowered to about 5mph at best, their SUV moving through the line of stalled cars at a snail's pace.

"We'll just tell them we're taking the scenic route." Adora compromises, struggling to maintain her optimism as she impatiently drums her fingers along the car door, her frown only lengthening when the car in front of them slows even more before creeping to a stop altogether.

"You two seem awfully eager to get rid of us. What do you have planned, anyway?" Finn asks from the backseat, not bothering to look up from their phone as they mindlessly swipe away at a game of Fruit Ninja.

"Wait, aren't they coming with us to Auntie Scorpia's?" Faye questions beside them, looking up from the book she has in her lap.

"No, they're pawning us off at the Fun Zone, remember?" Finn reminds her, the news having Felix look away from the window, twisting his head with an intrigued 'mrrrp!'

"We're going to the Fun Zone?!" he excitedly asks, his ears perking up in interest as Finn rolls their eyes at him.

"Geeze, were either of you even paying attention? It's their anniversary so they're having us stay at Auntie Scorp's until Sunday." they inform their siblings just as the jumbled line of traffic on the highway finally begins to pick up some.

"But why? Can't we go with them?" whines Faye, still too young to understand the significance behind one's anniversary.

"Why, so we can watch them make out with each other all weekend like all grown-ups do? Blech. Count me out." Finn snarks with a grimace, causing the other two kittens to scrunch their noses up in disgust.

"Eww is that really what you're going to do?" Felix asks, unsure if he even wants to know the answer. Adora becomes flustered enough to choke on the air itself, dramatically clearing her throat. It was pretty obvious she was using the convenient coughing fit as a scapegoat to get out of answering them. Catra huffs beneath her breath, showing her spazz of a spouse some mercy by taking over the conversation.

"Your mom and I are staying at a resort in Plumeria for the weekend to celebrate our tenth anniversary. That's all you need to know." Catra scolds them through the rearview mirror as Adora looks out the window at nothing in particular, trying to make her embarrassed blush less obvious.

"Yup, they're totally going to make out." Felix sniggers to himself, prompting Finn to join him in the snickering.

"Alright, that's enough out of you two. Keep it up and we're not stopping for Moonbucks," warns Catra, and that little threat only has all three kittens as well as Adora protesting at once.

"But mom!" Faye yells.

"That's not fair!" Finn whines.

"Finn started it!" Felix chimes in, immediately pinning it all on Finn.

"You couldn't find something better to threaten them with? Skipping Moonbucks kinda feels like you're punishing me at this point." Adora theatrically whispers at her wife, chewing her lip as they pass a road sign listing all the restaurants coming up at the next exit, the Moonbucks logo posted on the sign as clear as day.

The car grows quiet enough to hear a pin drop as the exit in question grows nearer, each one of them waiting with bated breath to see what Catra would do. She cuts it pretty close just to worry them further before finally giving in with a huff, veering off towards the exit ramp as a chorus of triumphant yesses can be heard sounding from the kittens behind her. Adora just hums delightedly, leaning over the center console to give her grumpy wife a grateful peck to the cheek.

Fortunately, the line at this drive-thru seems to be moving much more quickly than the line of traffic clogging up the freeway, each of them ordering something for the road. The kits seem to quiet down some after finishing their meal, with Felix and Faye even dozing off next to each other midway through the drive, using the others shoulder as a pillow.

Finn gets lost in whatever game they're playing on their phone, and Catra breathes out a sigh at the relative peace and quiet she's being graced with. Don't get her wrong, she loves her kittens to pieces, and would obliterate anyone who laid so much as a finger on them, but more often than not they could be a pawful. Even more so now that they had a few years of age under their belts. Catra smiles when Adora reaches over towards the hand Catra has placed on the center divider, lacing their fingers together as Catra gently dusts her thumb along the back of her knuckles, keeping one of her hands on the wheel.

"Are you alright? You seem stressed." Adora murmurs quietly, giving her a fond look laced with a little concern. Catra exhales slowly, keeping her eyes on the road while nodding curtly.

"Yeah, I just feel claustrophobic with all these cars around us. You know how much I hate freeways." Catra mutters, stifling a curse when right after her complaint the car in the next lane over decides to cut her off before her SUV can advance forward. "See? It's ridiculous. People have no sense."

Adora frowns, absently squeezing Catra's hand a little tighter as she eyes the available lanes on the road. "Maybe try the carpool lane?"

Catra snorts out a humorless laugh at her suggestion. "Hate to break it to you princess, but this is the carpool lane."

Adora's troubled frown grows more prominent at the news, contributing with a quiet "Oh.."

"Oh indeed. If this doesn't pick up, the weekend is going to be over before it can even start."

"It probably has something to do with the crash up the road." Finn butts into their conversation, pulling out one of their earbuds as they scroll through an article on their phone.

"The what?" Catra asks, mildly horrified for the wrong reasons. She should be horrified to hear that some innocent people were probably hurt in said crash, but all she can focus on now is just how far behind this would put them.

"It's about six miles up the road by what the article is saying. Two lanes are closed because of it." Finn continues, confirming Catra's worst fears. If they still had another six miles before they passed this thing and they were only limited to going five miles an hour at the most, they'd definitely end up missing that deadline.

"Well, this is just fantastic." Catra growls lowly to herself, tightening her fingers around the steering wheel as her other hand leaves Adora's before her frustration has her doing the same to the hand still tangled around her own. "Better let Scorp know we're going to be late." the feline adds regrettably.

"She already knows. I've been texting Flora this entire time." Finn confirms, holding up their phone and wiggling it for emphasis.

"Are we there yet?" Faye asks groggily when the conversation succeeds in waking her up, lifting her head away from Felix's sleeping shoulder to tiredly rub the sleep out of her eyes.

"Not yet, sweetheart. We still have a little ways to go." Adora informs her daughter, causing Faye to whine her disapproval of that answer, her head slumping back onto her slumbering brother's shoulder as she dozes right back off.

"What about the back streets? I mean there's red lights but it honestly can't be any slower than this. " Adora suggests a little later, their SUV predictably grinding to a slowing halt the closer they neared the crash.

Catra eyes the incoming off-ramp, taking her wife's words into account. "I guess it couldn't hurt." she finally concedes, veering off towards the next exit in the hopes that it would get them out of this fiasco. Sure enough, the advice actually ends up coming in handy, the rest of their trip rolling smoothly except for the handful of lights they get stuck at on the way. Evening is just about to hit when they finally roll into the parking lot of the Fun Zone, and Catra's appreciative they have later operating hours on the weekend because if they had tried this out on a weekday, Catra's certain they'd be closed by now.

"Alright, Squirts. Up and at em." Catra turns off the car, grateful for a chance to finally stretch her legs. Finn and Felix hop out of the car with no problems, but with Faye still half-asleep and notably cranky, Adora ends up plucking her daughter out of the vehicle. The blonde allows the dozing kitten to use her shoulder as a temporary pillow as she carries the young felid inside the rec center, the rest of the bunch following close behind her.

After paying their way in and getting their admission wristbands, they eventually spot Scorpia and Perfuma's table. Adora shepherds her litter of kits over to the table while Catra breaks away to head towards the prize counter, buying the kids some coins to be used for the games and rides they offered here.

Faye soon stirs when she hears Flora excitedly calling out to her, blonde ears perking up in interest as the sleepy kitten lifts her head away from Adora's shoulder.

"Flora! " Faye yells, squirming in her mother's grip before Adora sets her down with a chuckle, her smile beaming as she watches her daughter practically pummel into the fellow hybrid, squeezing her into a bear hug.

"You finally made it!" Flora exclaims, giggling when Faye begins purring, the young magicat nuzzling into her cheek to scent mark her best friend.

"It's good to see you, Adora. The traffic wasn't too bad I hope?" Perfuma greets her just as Adora nears their table, the fellow blonde getting up from her chair to give Adora a friendly hug.

"It was pretty brutal for a while there but we ended up opting for taking the back streets towards the end. There were a few red lights we got snagged at but it wasn't anything too bad." Adora informs the pair, getting pulled from the conversation when Felix insistently tugs at her sleeve, impatiently requesting her attention.

"Can we play whack-a-mouse now, mom?" he asks with hopeful heterochromatic eyes. Adora smiles fondly at him, gently patting his head.

"Your mom is at the prize counter already buying you guys your coins. I'm sure she'll be back any minute now." Adora informs him, though all that does is have both Felix and Finn to race over to the prize counter like two rambunctious kittens on a mission. Faye and Flora eventually split as well, their arms linked together as the two young hybrids dash off towards the indoor playground.

Adora shakes her head hopelessly at the feverish departure, pulling up a chair to join the other two parents. "Thanks again for doing this for us. I know the kittens can be a bit of a handful sometimes."

"And you sneaking them jars of cake frosting certainly isn't helping matters." Catra chimes in with a hint of teasing to her tone, joining the blonde as she takes a seat beside her.

"There's my Wildcat! How's it hangin', buddy?" Scorpia leans over towards Catra's chair, oversized pincers welcoming her in a sideways hug. Catra lets out a disgruntled 'oof!' as she's squeezed, straightening out her dress shirt when the fellow hybrid finally relents and releases her from the hug.

"Well, considering today officially marks a decade of being married to this pretty lug head next to me, I'd say I'm feeling pretty damn good right now," Catra answers, smiling slyly when Adora leans over to gift the side of her cheek with a chaste kiss

"Man, I know right? It feels like just yesterday we were watching you two walk down the aisle. It's crazy how much time flies." Scorpia reminisces, the other three parents chuckling in agreement.

"I gave Felix and Finn their coins already but I'm having trouble finding Faye. Any idea where she ran off to?" Catra asks her wife, holding up a styrofoam cup that was halfway filled with Fun Zone coins, the signature currency they used for games here.

"She bolted off with Flora towards the playground. You literally just missed her." Adora humorously enlightens her, causing the feline to sigh in tired resignation.

"I figured as much. We'll just drop them off to her on our way out then."

"You guys sure you can't stay for a slice? I swear this is the best pizza you'll ever find around here." Scorpia offers, opening up a box of some deliciously tempting pizza. Adora bites her lip in indecision, glancing at Catra for confirmation.

"What do you think?" she asks, the blonde clearly at an impasse here.

Catra gives her an amused, albeit sympathetic smile. "If you're hungry, go for it. But try to keep at least some of your appetite. I have reservations for us at Madam Razz's bakery after this."

"Wait, we do?!" Adora perks up considerably at the reveal, looking exactly like Faye did whenever she was really excited about something. It was no wonder where her daughter got it from.

"Yeah, I was going to keep it a surprise but if you're hungry now then I don't want to starve you out. Plus I promised Finn and Felix I'd play a game or two of laser tag with them before we go so if you want to snack in the meantime then have at it."

"You don't have to tell me twice." Adora jests, eagerly grabbing a slice from the box Scorpia offers to her.

"I'm gonna go see if I can find the other half of the bunch so I can give Faye her coins. I'll be in the laser tag area after if you need me." Catra notifies her wife, choosing to pass on a goodbye kiss since Adora was quite literally in the middle of stuffing her face with pizza.

"I'll meet you there as soon as I'm done. Don't start without me!" Adora requests through a mouthful of pizza, prompting Catra to raise an interested brow at her.

"Gonna get down with some laser tag, princess?" Catra asks, smirking when Adora serves her a challenging stare.

"More like I'm going to annihilate you in laser tag." Adora adamantly corrects her spouse, earning an unconvinced cackle from Catra.

"Riiiight. Keep telling yourself that, babe. See how far it gets you." Catra sing songs, sauntering away from the table to go and find her daughter. It didn't take her long, finding the young magicat soaring down the indoor slide and into the ball pit, with Flora not too far behind her. Faye's ears swivel when she takes note of her mother's arrival, darting over towards her with enough force to nearly knock Catra down.

"Mommy! Are you going to play save the princess with us? You can be the princess this time and the top of the slide can be your castle!" Faye points at the slide that is several sizes too small for someone of Catra's stature before she makes grabby hands at the feline, signaling she wants up. Catra scoops up her daughter, holding the young feline at her hip while Faye exchanges scents with her in traditional magicat greeting, nuzzling into her cheek with a purr that Catra instantly returns.

"As much as I'd love to play save the princess with you, I promised your siblings a game of laser tag before your mom and I head out." Catra gently tells her, hoping the news wouldn't upset her. But much to her surprise and delight, the news just has Faye growing more interested at the mention of laser tag.

"Ooh, can we come too?!" Flora beats her to the punch, her request followed up by a feverish nod from Faye. "Yeah mom, can we?!"

Catra chuckles at her enthusiasm. "I don't see why not. Your mom is playing as well so that'll at least make the teams even."

"I want to be on Auntie Adora's team!" Flora declares with a feverish giggle, both kids leaving Catra left in the dust before she could even give her daughter her coins. Shaking her head to herself and feeling mildly insulted over her niece favoring Adora's team over her own, Catra ends up following them over to the laser tag arena where Felix and Finn are already waiting.

Finn runs up to her, ears fully perked and tail swishing excitedly. "Faye said mom's playing too?"

Catra settles between a snort and a chuckle. "More like your mom is losing too."

Felix snickers along with Finn, the two young felines infected with Catra's competitive nature. "We're on your team, right?"

Catra smirks, drawing a hand downward to ruffle up both of their manes.

"Dam- err I mean darn straight." Catra quickly tries to cover up the slipped profanity, but her daughter picks up on it anyway.

"Oooh! Mommy said a bad word!" Faye giggles along with Flora while Catra's ears flatten defensively.

"You didn't hear that," Catra mutters, unaware of the arrival of her better half as Adora strolls up behind them, a half-eaten slice of pizza wrapped in a napkin in her hand.

"Hear what?" Adora asks, raising a brow when Catra startles at her arrival.

"Mommy said a swear word!" Faye outs her mother with no remorse, bursting into even more laughter at the disapproving look Adora serves her wife with.

"Guess that's another dollar in the swear jar for you," Adora states through a mouthful of pizza, finishing off the last of it before she chucks the napkin in a nearby trash can.

"Come on already! If we wait any longer there's going to be a line!" Finn whines impatiently, tugging at Catra's sleeve.

"Save us a spot then, kiddo. We'll catch up with you." Catra reassures them, barely able to get the words out before Felix and Finn dash towards the start of the line, with Flora and Faye hot on their tail.

Catra stiffens when Adora leans into her, smirking lips ghosting against her ear. "That jar is going to be full by the time the weekends over if I have anything to say about it." she quips in a whisper, causing Catra to suppress the pleasant shiver wanting to float up her spine. Nope, now was definitely not the time or place to have her mind strolling through the gutter. Adora was clearly playing dirty, stooping fairly low to make sure she has an advantage. It was pretty ironic that the revelation ended up turning her on just as much as the statement itself.

"Trying to psyche me out so you win the game? Dirty move, princess." Catra tuts, tail instinctively coiling around the blonde's wrist in a quest for contact as they make their way over to join their flock of hyperactive children.

"Just stating facts." Adora pensively hums, confidence bleeding over into borderline arrogance. Catra's never wanted to knock her down a peg or two so much in her life. If her team didn't win this game, she's sure she'd never hear the end of it. That was something that wasn't going to happen tonight. She'd sooner jump in the ocean before allowing Adora those bragging rights.

Before Catra can rebuke that slander, a glimpse over towards the laser-tag arena has Catra pausing in her tracks, her brow furrowing in rising confusion when she takes in the employee handing out the equipment to the kids.

"Uh, is that Kyle?" she asks Adora, resulting in the blonde looking over as well. Though Adora didn't appear nearly as baffled as Catra must have looked right now.

"You didn't know he worked here?" Adora questions her with a hint of amusement that only grows more noticeable when Catra redirects her look of total confusion onto her instead.

"You're telling me you did?" Catra interrogates, the top of her ear twitching when Finn gripes at her from afar, urging both parents to hurry it up already.

"You'd know that already if you actually bothered coming in here from time to time." Adora lovingly tuts at her, smiling knowingly at the feline's sheepish expression.

"Well, I'm here now so that has to count towards something." Catra grunts, speed walking towards the start of the line to join her children before Adora can question her further. She gets a good look at Kyle, waiting to see how long it'd take him to notice her unexpected attendance. It's not like Catra purposely condemned the Fun Zone itself, it's just with adept ears like hers, crowded places stuffed with excitable and more often than not yelling, children was enough of a sensory overload to typically have her heading literally anywhere else.

"Alright, guys. You know the rules, right?" Kyle asks as he passes out the equipment to each kid, as if they couldn't read the gigantic wall of rules located right behind the entrance to the arena.

Impatient, Finn lets out a clipped breath, eager to get things rolling. "Keep our helmets on at all times and no climbing on the walls or anything else that isn't a part of the floor." they recite before equipping said helmet, slotting it into place as the rest of the kids promptly do the same.

"Why the helmets?" Catra leans into Adora's space to ask, not particularly fond of messing up her mane when she worked so hard to style it earlier.

"It's to make it fair. Without them, the hybrids would just be able to scent all the other human opponents out so this way it makes sure both teams are on even ground." Adora informs her, wearing a challenging smirk before the blonde equips her own helmet.

"Well, you're a sight for sore eyes. Didn't think I'd see you here, Catra." Kyle hands off her helmet and armor as Catra carefully maneuvers it onto her head.

"Crowds really aren't my thing. I'm just here to wipe the floor with this blonde dummy next to me." Catra clarifies, missing the slight eye roll and smile her wife throws at her.

"Keep telling yourself that, love." Adora quips with a confident flip of her hair, sliding her own helmet into place. Flora and Faye eagerly put on their helmets before joining the blonde, with Finn and Felix shortly following suit, though Finn takes it upon themself to goad their little sister further by sticking their tongue out at her before their helmet goes on. Catra catches the challenging gesture, chiding them with a flick of her tail.

"Play nice out there and remember no climbing on the walls." Kyle reminds the bunch, though it suspiciously sounds like more of a plea if anything.

"We don't play to be nice, we play to win." Finn confidently declares, shoulders and head held high as if they were posing for a photo.

Felix immediately mimics his older sibling's confident posture, quick to agree with them. "Yeah! Right, mom?"

"No, we play to have fun. Winning is just an extra incentive." Catra corrects her kits in a paternal fashion, though her lecture goes in through one ear and right out the other, the kits' attention now fully on the arena as Kyle allows them entry.

"Ready, Kitten?" Adora croons at her, deliberately bumping her with her shoulder as she saunters ahead of the magicat.

Catra smirks. "You're on."

"Give it up, princess! It ends here!" Catra calls out, laser gun cocked and ready to shoot as she finds relative cover behind one of the many maze-like walls. They've been playing cat and mouse with each other for the better half of an hour by now, both the only ones left on their respective teams as their kids cheer them on from outside the arena. As stated earlier, the helmet was very effective in dampening the feline's typically adept sense of smell, the accompanying strobe lights in the arena just disorientating the magicat even further.

"As if I'd ever let you win! I have this one in the bag!" Adora taunts back, and Catra quickly utilizes the opening to pinpoint the location Adora's voice was coming from. She felt like she was sixteen again, adrenaline pumping wildly through her veins from the thrill of the hunt. The nostalgia it brought up in her was priceless, feeling like they were both back in gym class again, their competitive drives always having them compete and outdo the other in every sport they partook in.

Catra admits that taking away her ability to track the scent of her wife was making this hunt a bit problematic, but she was in too deep to be calling it quits now. Her only clear path to victory now is to keep Adora talking long enough for her to single out the location her voice is originating from.

Surely a little goading wouldn't hurt her cause?

"This is starting to feel like a game of hide and seek. What's the matter, Adora? Too chicken to come out and accept defeat?" Catra sings, eyes honed and focused on her immediate surroundings. She pokes her head down the hallway to her left to make sure it's empty, hugging the wall for cover while slowing her step.

By the silence that follows, Adora either doesn't hear her, or is deliberately choosing not to answer her. Catra grits her teeth beneath her helmet in annoyance, the maze of hallways difficult for her to navigate. Adora had likely wised up and realized Catra's game plan, much to the feline's dismay. For every bit of ditzy, Adora was also every bit of witty. Admittingly more than Catra wanted to give her credit for, lest she go tooting her own horn. As much as the thought of antagonizing her better half on their anniversary could potentially be morally frowned upon, Catra honestly didn't see any other way of winning this.

"You know, for being the only one here without a tail, you sure are being a scaredy cat right now, princess." Catra raises her voice to taunt her further, looking to have her words get under the blonde's skin. She strains her ears as she listens for a response, her fingers trigger-happy as she keeps the toy gun drawn, tail-tip anxiously twitching behind her.

Unbeknownst to Catra, the hunter was about to become the hunted.

In hindsight, Catra can easily see where she might have screwed up. While being so dead set on getting Adora to talk, she'd completely forgotten that every time she spoke up herself, it was conveniently broadcasting her own location to Adora as well. When the hallway she's blindly navigating eventually turns into a dead end, Catra meets her inevitable downfall the moment she turns back around.

There in the middle of the hallway blocking the only route out was none other than the woman she's been hunting this entire time. Prey soon levels up to predator, Adora giving Catra absolutely no time to process the startling sight before she ruthlessly unloads her weapon into her, the light at the center of her chest piece flaring red to signal she'd been eliminated.

Although the plastic toy gun in her hand yielded no smoke, Adora brings it up to her lips and blows on it anyway to add dramatic effect, as well as insult to injury. Catra would have been insulted if she hadn't been so proud of the fact Adora used her very own strategy against her.

"You were saying?" Adora quips, confidently breaking the silence as Catra blinks at her before she rolls her eyes, struggling to downplay her defeat.

"Clearly I was going easy on you." Catra lies straight through her teeth, though it's clear Adora can see right through it, the blonde providing a dismissive "Uh huh.." when she's done.

"Mommy, you won! I knew you could do it!" Faye cheers from afar, bolting across the arena and nearly knocking Adora down with the force of her hug. Catra may have felt a little miffed about losing, but she couldn't deny the swell of love she felt from seeing her daughter so happy. Catra turns over towards Felix and Finn, witnessing the mean mugging she expected from the two as they scowl at her, none too pleased about being on the losing team.

"I want a rematch!" Finn declares, tail lashing angrily as their ears slant back against their mane. Catra pats both their heads, playfully tussling up their manes as they squirm to get away from her.

"Next time, kiddo. Your mom and I have to head out before traffic gets too bad." Catra compromises, receiving two grumbles from her grumpy kittens.

"Do you really have to go?" Faye whines at them both, easily tugging at the two parents' heartstrings. Adora leans down to pull her daughter against her side, giving the top of her head a loving kiss.

"We'll be back before you know it, I promise. And if you're all good for auntie Scorpia and auntie Perfuma while we're gone, I'll get us all ice cream when we're back. How does that sound?" Adora offers as Catra suppresses a snort beneath her smile as she watches her partner bribe their offspring with the promise of sweets.

"Deal!" All three of them shout in unison, perking up considerably at the mention of ice cream.

"And just because we aren't around doesn't mean you can skirt past the rules. Since it's winter vacation I'll let you get by on your 8 pm bedtime but I want you all in bed by no later than 9:30, is that clear?" Catra adds just as Scorpia and Perfuma arrive on the scene to wish them farewell.

"But that's lame!" Finn complains, glowering at their mother and the amount of herself Catra witnessed in that expression never ceased to amaze her. It felt like staring at a younger version of herself.

"Why do you even care so much? You always fall asleep by 9 anyway." Felix points out, resulting in Finn's glare redirecting onto their brother.

"9:30 or no ice cream. That's the bottom line. Now give me my hug, you twerp." Catra reasserts, pulling a grumbling Finn in for a half hug that they eventually reciprocate. Felix and Faye follow suit, joining in on the hug as a chorus of purrs can be heard sounding out of the four felines.

"Thanks again for these reservations, Perfuma." Adora adds as they say their goodbyes, both couples exchanging friendly hugs.

"And for watching the gremlins for the weekend." Catra chimes in, their herd of kittens quickly dispersing to go and spend their tokens.

"It's our pleasure. You two are celebrating a decade of love and union. You deserve some time for yourselves." Perfuma insists, with Scorpia quickly agreeing with the blonde.

"Don't worry, Wildcat. They're in good hands. Or.. pincers I guess if you want to split hairs but heh, you know what I mean!"

"I getcha, Scorp. We'll text you when we get there." Catra reassures her, arm looping around Adora's as they say their final goodbyes. Catra takes one last look at her rambunctious herd of kittens playing on the slide on their way out, wearing a wistful smile on her face.

"You're smirking." Adora points out as they walk into Razz's bakery hand in hand, the nostalgia felt in the air almost palpable to them. This was the place of their very first date, after all.

"Am I not allowed to smirk now?" Catra plays it coy, pausing at the end of the line as they wait to be seated by the hostess.

"No, it just means you're up to something." Adora enlightens her, the giddy smile she wears only causing Catra's smirk to grow more prominent.

"You should know by now that I'm always up to something, princess." Catra drawls, her attention getting pulled away when the waitress greets them.

"Well, would you look who it is. I haven't seen either of you in ages!" Mara exclaims, her apron partially covered in flour.

"Trust me, if I had it my way I'd be living here. Razz's blackberry cobbler is an otherworldly treat none of us on Etheria deserve." Adora jests, her enthusiasm leaving the feline beside her mildly amused.

"You two should really try the lemon cakes. Sometimes I'm convinced Razz is a sorceress of sweets." Mara says with a chuckle, pulling up her notepad. "So, table for two then?"

"Yes please." Adora politely requests, the pair following behind the waitress to be escorted to one of the booths in the back.

Mara tilts her head over her shoulder while walking ahead of them. "So, where are the little ones?"

"It's our anniversary night so we have them staying over at a friend's for the weekend," Adora tells her, sliding into her side of the booth as Catra sits opposite from her.

"No kidding? No wonder you two look dressed to the nines." Mara remarks, pulling her notepad back out before flipping to a fresh page. "Are you ready to order or do you need some time?"

"Blackberry cobbler and a side of milk for me please," Adora answers, grinning sheepishly when Catra snorts at her predictability.

"I think I'll try those lemon cakes you've been hyping up so much." Catra decides, and Adora almost looks scandalized that she didn't opt for the cobbler.

"One blackberry cobbler and one lemon cake coming right up." Mara recites, taking down their order for them. "I'll have those ready in a jiffy."

As Mara backtracks towards the kitchen to relay their order, Catra notices Adora looking at her with that same dopey and fond smile that even after ten years, still has her tummy doing somersaults.

"Got a staring problem there, princess?" she teases, basking in the flustered tint of a blush that makes itself known on the blonde's cheeks.

"You can't come out dressed like that and expect me not to ogle you." Adora counters, the statement ironically pulling the same degree of blush out of the feline, though fortunately her fur masked the majority of it. Catra needed to keep her cool, lest Adora catches on to the true surprise Catra had in store for her this evening.

"Ogling me, huh? How embarrassing for you." the feline states in a playful taunt, smirk growing at Adora's amused roll of her eyes.

"You're not looking so bad either, you know," Catra adds, her tail wandering off beneath the table to coyly brush along her wife's leg. Adora startles at the contact, stiffening considerably while her blush only grows more severe.

"You're doing that on purpose." Adora accuses in a mutter, but there's no real heat behind her words, absently chewing her lip when Catra's tail passes by her leg again, nearer to the knee this time.

"I have no clue what you're talking about, princess." goads the feline, barely suppressing her fit of laughter when Adora hurriedly bats her tail away, inconspicuously looking around to ensure no nearby table had seen the exchange. She relaxes some when Catra finally relents, enough to even form a challenging smirk that has the feline almost squirming in her seat at the intensity of it.

"What?" Catra questions, the leer she's returned with kickstarting about a thousand different fires below the waist.

"Oh, I'm just thinking about how I pretty much decimated you in laser tag. A victory like that is clearly in need of some type of reward, don't you think?" Adora muses, almost deviously and this time Catra does laugh. She couldn't help the swell of pride that crawled up her either at how Adora finally found a healthy balance between selfless and selfish. The girl she knew ten years ago wouldn't even think to ask for a reward since that would involve admitting she had wants, which at the time Adora genuinely felt like she didn't deserve. It took quite a lot to get them here, and to this day Catra will never fail to be mesmerized by the growth her wife has exhibited.

"Decimated? That's a bit of overkill don't you think? You only won because I couldn't keep my big mouth shut and you sniped me out before I could ambush you." Catra corrects her, purring at the annoyed glare she's served by minimizing Adora's victory.

Catra continues. "But I suppose you're entitled to at least some kind of reward for your miraculous win. So what's it going to be, princess?"

"Let me take care of you tonight?" Adora asks without missing a beat, the both of them knowing that was pretty much Adora's way of implying she wanted to top.

Catra smirks. "That depends. Think you can handle me, princess?"

"I've been handling you just fine for over a decade, Kitten. So I think I'll manage." Adora returns just as confidently, a devilish curve to her lips. Little did Adora know that Catra wholeheartedly couldn't care less about who was topping who tonight. While motherhood in itself was undeniably rewarding, their roles as parents to a litter of hyperactive kits gave them little time to spare for indulging in each other in the way they were used to. Top or bottom, left or right, Catra would gladly roll with any direction that resulted in getting her wife alone and all to herself.

"I guess we'll just have to play it by ear then." Catra concedes with a nonchalant shrug of her shoulders, the statement meant to be taken as a challenge. But before their wandering minds could get too carried away with wading through the gutter, there was one more thing Catra needed to take care of first.

"I'm going to take a leak. I'll be right back." Catra announces, quietly excusing herself from the table. She waits until she's no longer in Adora's line of sight, veering down the hallway that led to the diner's restrooms. Sure enough, Mara was already there waiting for her.

"Does she suspect anything yet?" Mara asks almost worriedly, but Catra simply shakes her head in reassurance.

"Doesn't have a clue but I still don't want to push my luck. Is it ready yet?" the feline asks, continuing to glance behind her to make sure they were alone.

Mara nods. "It's all set. Go ahead and head on up and I'll get her for you."

Catra breathes a sigh of relief. "Okay. Thanks again for doing this, Mara. I owe you."

"You don't owe me anything. But if you're feeling inclined, the tip jar is out front." the waitress jests with a laugh, turning on her heel to leave Catra to herself. The magicat hopelessly shakes her head, rolling her head and shoulders to psyche herself up before entering the door that contains a stairway leading to the top of the diner.

"Hey, Adora?"

Adora looks up from one of the menus left on the table, expecting it to be her wife but she knows that definitely isn't her voice. "Yes, Mara?"

"Catra's having stomach issues in the bathroom. She sent me to come fetch you." Mara explains, which is all the explanation Adora needs to bolt into an upright position, about to take off in a dash when Mara gently grabs her shoulder. "Woah there, cowgirl. Hold on a sec. Both bathrooms are out of order for a routine cleaning so I'll show you to the one upstairs."

Adora's brows furrow, confusedly following behind the waitress as she processes this new tidbit of information. "This place has a second floor? I could have sworn it was a one-story building."

"We usually don't let folks have access to the second floor since it's more of a studio than part of the restaurant. But you guys are like family to us so consider this our blessing." Mara enlightens her, pausing at the end of the hallway in front of a stairway that was usually concealed behind a door.

"She's just up the stairs. I need to go back and bring table nine their order so I assume you can handle it from here?" Mara inquires, heading back down the hallway with a chuckle when Adora merely nods. Worry twists her gut, the blonde clinging to the banisters as she hikes the journey up to the second floor, surprised to see that unlike the hallway downstairs, this stairway only had one single door at the end of it. Adora pauses for the moment when she feels the breeze of what can only be the night air waft inside from beneath the space between the door and floor.

"Have fun, girls!" Mara's fading laughter only confuses Adora further, twisting the knob and expecting Catra to be hunched over the toilet bowl on the other side but that's not what she saw, confusion fading for surprise at the sight she sees. The array of stars above her signal that she's indeed on the roof now, but that impressive sight isn't the cause for her breath catching in her throat. It's the sight she sees in front of her that does.

Laying on a blanket in the center of the roof was none other than her wife, a sly smile painting her lips when she sees the blonde. A neighborhood of candles surrounds the blanket she's lounging on, as well as the meals they had ordered earlier, the steam from freshly baked cobbler flowing upward to mix with the night air. Adora blinks several times to ensure she isn't seeing things, a move that earns a laugh out of the magicat.

"You coming over or what? Food's getting cold, princess." teases the feline as Adora finally finds it in her to move her legs, crossing the threshold of space between them until she's standing just at the edge of the blanket.

"You did all of this yourself?" Adora asks in wonder, already feeling tears pricking the sides of her eyes as she kicks off her shoes before lowering herself onto the blanket. Catra shrugs, handing over a plate of cobbler she'd already prepared for her.

"Eh, more or less. Mara was an astronomical help though." Catra answers, casually dipping a fork into a slice of lemon cake before bringing it to her lips for a bite.

Adora looks down at her own plate, conflicted. "And your stomach?"

"I'm as healthy as a horse, horse girl," Catra informs her, the words like liquid relief straight to Adora's ears. Concern finally subsided, Adora indulges in her own meal as well.

"Who are you and what have you done with my grump of a wife?" Adora counters, grin heavy as she takes another generous bite of cobbler.

"What can I say? I guess your inner sap has rubbed off on me after all these years." Catra defends herself, taking another modest bite of cake. "Besides, it's the big number ten, right? Gotta make this one extra special, after all." Catra pulls out an elongated velvet jewelry box from out of her pocket, casually offering it to the wide-eyed blonde. Still shell-shocked and unsure of what to do with herself, Adora stares stupidly at the box in her hands.

"Well, princess? You gonna open it or are you just going to keep staring?" teases the feline, prompting Adora to blush as she reaches for the top of the box to pull it back with shaky hands. Inside was a golden heart-shaped locket connected to a necklace, the craftsmanship put behind it immediately having her gasp.

"The heart can be opened. I left something in there for you." Catra explains just as Adora lifts the necklace from the box, maneuvering it in her hands to appreciate it from all angles.

"Catra, I don't even know what to say.. I-I.." Adora stops short when she finally opens up the golden locket, the picture residing inside enough to stump her into total silence as her tears return full force. It was a picture of them together as kids at the orphanage the day they stole an abandoned camera, one Adora previously deemed lost to the passage of time when their separate adopted families forced them to split.

"How did you even get this? I thought Weaver destroyed that camera?" Adora asks, her voice thick with emotion.

"Nah. She threw it in the contraband room and I snuck in to steal it back later so I could keep the photo. I figured you were getting a new family in a week and I wanted something to remember you by so I've held onto it ever since."

Adora blinks away the tears already spilling down her cheeks, completely stupefied by the gift. It was like glimpsing a part of her past she thought she'd never get back. Granted she and Catra eventually did reunite when they were both old enough to go to public school, but this photo had to be the last good day they had together before fate forced them apart.

"I love you." the words spill out autonomously, like a reflex that comes so naturally to her. Catra's smile splits wider when Adora cups both sides of her face, hauling her in for a profound kiss that had both of their heads spinning by the time it's done.

"I take it you like it?" Catra questions when they break apart, her grin suggesting she already knew Adora's answer.

"I don't even have the words to express how much I love it. Put it on me?" she asks, unclasping the chain before handing it over to her. Catra chuckles, brushing Adora's hair out of the way before draping the chain around her neck, fastening it in the back.

"Beautiful." Catra murmurs, almost reverent as she grants a single kiss to the center of Adora's nape.

"I know you are, but what am I?" Adora teases in a childlike manner, readjusting her position on the blanket so they were side by side once more.

"You're such a dork, Grayskull." Catra counters, dipping the spoon beside her in the plate of cobbler before bringing it to the blonde's lips. A generous gesture that Adora immediately woofs down, humming happily around the spoon in her mouth.

"Hey, you're a Grayskull now, too. So what's that say about you, hm?" Adora returns playfully, blushing just a tad when Catra uses her thumb to wipe away some of the leftover cobbler at the corner of Adora's mouth before bringing it to her own lips for a lick.

"That I have excellent taste, obviously." Catra states smugly, raising a brow when Adora blatantly sets the cobbler aside. "That's gonna get cold if you don't finish it soon, princess."

The mischievous glint in Adora's eyes is downright predatory, closing in on her wife like a predator would their prey. "It's not the cobbler I want a taste of right now."

Catra shivers visibly when Adora boards her hips, straddling her lap before two sets of hungry lips inevitably merge into a singular entity, the blonde kissing her for all that she's worth.

"Is this my present? Because I'm definitely not complaining." Catra jests between kisses, her back gently hitting the blanket with a thud as Adora follows her down, her lips never leaving the feline's once.

"I still have your gift in the car but you'll have to wait until the sun is up to truly appreciate it. So consider this an extra incentive for the wait." Adora whispers as parted lips paint a line down the square of the feline's jaw, singling out the tender expanse of flesh that connected neck to shoulder.

"H-Heh.. You should know by now I'm not much of a morning person.." Catra falters in a stammer, the attention Adora's lips were devoting to her neck starting to elicit a reaction out of her, suppressing a moan when those very same lips curve a salacious smirk against her pulse point.

"Oh trust me, you'll be wanting to wake up for this one, Kitten." Adora murmurs, tactfully repositioning herself so one of her knees wedges itself between the tempting gap between Catra's legs, pressing firmly against her core while boarding one of the magicat's thighs. Catra does moan after that move, but the both of them seem too lost in the moment to find it in them to care.

Catra's arms find their way to her shoulders, draping them around her neck as unsheathed claws grab a good handful of blonde locks, tugging in just the way that never failed to have Adora coming undone at the seams. Perhaps as full-time parents, they were just that degree of sex-starved, but every minor roll of hips exchanged between each other felt amplified to the max, the blonde abandoning her hovered stance in favor of simply grinding her apex against Catra's thigh, already feeling herself growing wet.

"S-Should we really be doing this here?" Catra's voice of reason is just enough to pierce the cloud of hormones fogging up the rational part of her mind, but it isn't enough to want to stop.

"I won't tell if you won't." Adora offers between breathy gasps, already working herself up into a fever pitch despite the fact they were both still fully clothed. Catra growls out a strained expletive, hands moving away from her hair to migrate down to Adora's hips, shamelessly encouraging her wife to grind down harder.

A muffled ring from the phone in Catra's pocket effectively snaps them out of their mutual trance, breathless when they finally pull apart. Huffing, Catra pulls out her phone, frowning at the name of the incoming call.

"Shit, it's Scorp. We better get this." Catra announces, whatever sexual tension between them immediately dispersing as they both go into full-on parent mode. Catra accepts the call, putting it on speaker for Adora to hear as well.

"Hey, Scorp. Everything okay?" asks the feline, building worry cutting through them both.

"Hey, Wildcat! Sorry to bug ya but Faye had a nightmare and she said only you two can make her feel better so I figured I'd call ya up." Scorpia apologetically explains, the news calming them some now that they knew there was no physical danger.

"We're glad you did. Put her on for us?" Adora requests, a bit of muffled noises commencing on the other end of the line before the voice of their daughter speaks up.

"Mommies is that you?" Faye asks, the young magicat's voice groggy with sleep.

"We're both here, sweetheart. Are you doing okay? Auntie Scorp says you had a bad dream."

"I was in the ocean and a big scary shark tried eating me.." Faye mumbles into the receiver, softly sniffling. Adora serves Catra a disapproving look, the scary movie she permitted Finn to watch earlier in the week likely the catalyst to Faye's nightmare. They assumed she'd gone to bed that night, but their daughter had been caught sneaking from her room and down the stairs before to peek at the TV in the living room, so that likely had been the case.

"That must have been really scary, kiddo. But I can tell you that shark won't be coming back anytime soon, otherwise it's going to have to deal with me." Catra vows, earning a humorous eye roll from Adora as Faye giggles on the other end of the line.

"You'll kick the shark's butt if it comes back?" Faye asks, the question bringing a fond smile to both parents.

"That shark won't have any butt left by the time I'm done with it. I promise you that." Catra continues, and her promise seems to set the young one at ease as Faye makes a tired yawn.

"Are you feeling better now, honey?" Adora asks, causing an affirmative "mhm!" sound on the other end of the line.

"Auntie Perfuma said I can use one of her dream catchers to keep the shark and other monsters away from my dreams. She also gave me a warm glass of milk! It's making me sleepy so I'm gonna go now. Love you mommies!" Faye hands the phone back to Scorpia once 'I love yous' had been exchanged on both ends, the pincered hybrid taking over.

"Thanks for that, guys. I think she's feeling a lot better now. I'll let you get back to your date." Scorpia informs them.

"Okay. Don't be afraid to give us a ring if anything else comes up, okay?" Adora leans closer to the receiver to request.

"You got it! Have fun you two!"

"Take it easy, Scorp." Catra hangs up the line, the sudden interruption unfortunately killing whatever primal mood they had been sucked into moments prior.

"Guess I should have read a little more into that synopsis before letting them watch Jaws." Catra says with an apologetic grin, rubbing the back of her neck nervously.

"I told you not to let them watch it. But since it's our anniversary, I'm letting you off the hook this time." Adora states, snorting with her next breath when Catra turns visibly relieved.

"We should probably head out before we violate Mara's roof any more than we already have." Catra reasons, straightening out the displaced collar to her shirt.

Adora shapes a knowing smirk. "More like you just want a valid excuse to get me alone."

Catra perfectly mirrors her wife's smirk. "That too, princess. That too."

The ride from the diner to the resort in Plumeria cost them about another hour of driving, making it nearly midnight by the time the entrance came into view. They could have arrived a little earlier had it not been for Scorpia accidentally texting them the wrong directions, causing both fatigued partners to grow even more tiresome.

"Remind me to do some fact-checking the next time Scorpia tries to spring the wrong directions on us." Catra mutters irritably, their SUV rolling to a stop as they wait for the car ahead of them to be ushered through the pay booth. The lack of moon in the sky makes it hard to decipher their surroundings, their headlights the only saving grace that gives them a workable sense of direction. The exhaust fumes from the car to their front has Catra wrinkling her oversensitive nose in protest, the magicat halfway through rolling up the window before the smog-heavy vehicle finally pulls away.

"Welcome to Plumeria Resort you two! May I have your admission passes please?" a woman with brunette shoulder-length dreadlocks cheerily greets them when they roll up to the booth, the parking attendant looking like she definitely comes from the same band of hippies always showing up for Perfuma's drum circles.

Catra hands over the passes to her, waiting patiently while she examines their passes. The woman's focused look shifts back to friendly once she deems the tickets to be authentic, handing both passes back once she's done. "Alright, ladies. You're all set! Just keep heading straight and the first left turn you see will be the parking lot." she starts, offering up the key to them.

"This key will give you both access to the cabin assigned to your tickets. I hope you enjoy your stay and the wondrous opportunity to fully reconnect with our cherished mother earth!"

Catra and Adora share a perplexed look, the feline feigning an awkward smile. "Uh, thanks. You too." Catra politely ends the conversation, slowly cruising up the road to look out for the designated parking lot.

"Why do I feel like Perfuma just shipped us off to a park-wide hippie circle?" the feline tuts out her inquiry, successfully locating the parking area as she unhurriedly makes a left, pulling up to the first single lot they find.

"Aw, c'mon. It isn't that bad. And besides, if anyone knows how to throw a party, it's the hippies." reasons Adora, hopping out of the car with the hybrid once they were properly parked.

"I'm pretty sure we both outgrew our partying days years ago, princess." Catra counters, her hand instinctively seeking out her wife's to lace their fingers through one another, making the walk over to their cabin. Several distant bonfires were seen glowing as they neared their temporary humble abode, solidifying Catra's suspicions that this was clearly a hippie fest.

"All the more reason to let loose and exploit this opportunity," Adora adds, her following yawn betraying her diminishing energy levels.

"The only thing I'm exploiting right now is the bed on the other side of this door so that 'letting loose' is getting postponed until tomorrow." Catra responds, inserting the key into their door before pushing it open.

"Whatever you say, grandma." teases the blonde once they step inside, only to get a playful shove to her side in retaliation over the jab.

"You've been yawning nonstop the entire walk over here, princess. So you're just as much of a grandma. A highly hypocritical grandma might I add."

"I guess destroying you in laser tag took a lot more out of me than I realized." Adora quips, wasting no time before shucking off her shoes to make a beeline straight towards the bed, practically melting into the soft surface as she seizes the right side for herself.

"You're never going to let me live that one down, are you?" Catra complains, sounding a smidge exasperated while claiming her half of the mattress.

"I think you already know the answer to that." Adora sing songs, wasting no time looping an arm around the magicat's waist the moment she's finally settled, turning Catra into the little spoon.

Grumbling, Catra uses her tail to bat Adora's nose in retaliation, though she makes no attempts to wiggle out of her embrace, a guilty purr soon betraying her contentment. "Save the insufferable gloating for later, will you? It's bedtime."

"Oh, don't worry. There'll be plenty more where that came from." Adora assures her, squeezing her waist to haul her even closer as if she wouldn't be satisfied till there wasn't a single molecule of space left between them.

"Goodnight, Adora." Catra grits out, earning a quiet snicker from the woman embracing her from behind. It's the last sound Catra registers before sleep claims her for the night.

Chapter End Notes

And if your fluff meter hasn't been filled yet, here's some adorable artwork by Bata of a much younger Faye, Finn and Felix having a race with their parents. Finn is the one Adora's carrying while Faye's in the front of the bike with Felix sitting behind Catra. It doesn't have much to do with the story itself but it is canon to this AU and is a piece of art I hold very dearly to me.

Chapter Summary

> And we reach the final chapter of this little story. While there's still plenty of fluff, this was the eventual smut labeled in the tags. It's about as explicit as the artwork accompanying it so if you were simply here for fluff and no smut, here's your warning to turn back now.

It's not the intrusive sunlight that stirs Catra from her slumber, but the delicious smell of a full-course breakfast that wafts into the air. She pulls her arms above her for a satisfying stretch, parting ways with a yawn as her eyes eventually open to see Adora's side of the bed already vacant.

Figures.. Even on vacation that loaf has to go and be a morning person. she thinks to herself, blinking the sleep out of her eyes before she pulls the comforter off of herself. She was admittingly more curious now than she was grumpy, the smell of good food in the air just leaving her with more questions. She knows Adora didn't make it, because had that been her wife prepping any degree of meal out there, she would have been halfway through with burning the entire cabin down by now. Making her way towards the kitchen, and against all odds, Adora indeed seems to be the culprit to all the pleasing smells of breakfast invading the air.

Adora wearing nothing but a pair of red boy shorts and an apron is predictably as attractive as it is amusing to the feline, remaining posted in the doorway behind her wife as Adora flips the pancake she has cooking in the pan in her hand. She seems so adorably dedicated and focused in her efforts that Catra almost doesn't want to disturb her.

"My wife's near a stove and nothing's caught on fire yet? Surely I must be dreaming." Catra teases in a friendly jab, bracketing her arms around Adora's waist to embrace her from behind. Adora startles for a minute before her brain catches up with her, lips pulling into a crooked smirk while tossing the pancake for the second time once the batter had browned.

"Remember a few months ago when I said I wanted to burn an extra two hours at the gym every Thursday?" Adora asks, keeping her eyes on the pan as Catra keeps her eyes on her. Her brows lift slightly, curiosity having her wanting to know where Adora was going with this.

"I remember." Catra answers, affectionately resting her chin atop the blonde's shoulder. She can see half of a smile form on Adora's face from her vantage point.

"Well, I might have stretched the truth a bit on that one," Adora informs her, her laugh a mixture of nervous and sheepish.

"Did you now?" Catra questions, seemingly entertained by her wife's sudden fibbing streak.

"I've been taking cooking classes instead," she admits, the news catching the feline by surprise.

"That was over three months ago. You're telling me you've been learning to cook this entire time?" Catra asks, her disbelief evident in her voice.

"Well, yeah.. Is it really that unbelievable that someone like me can learn to cook?" Adora shoots back defensively, prompting Catra to rewind and correct herself.

"No no, it's just you never really expressed any interest in it before. Why the sudden change of heart?" she rewords the question, and fortunately this time Adora doesn't seem as offended by it.

"It was supposed to be so I could wake you up with breakfast in bed, but since you're already up I guess that part of the plan's been sacked," Adora announces with a troubled frown, turning the knob on the burner to shut off the stove once the pancake was done.

"Well I mean, if it's that important to you I can always go down for a little catnap while you wrap things up here." Catra offers, startling some when Adora whirls around while still in her embrace, both women standing face to face now.

"You'd really do that for m-" Adora pauses with narrowed eyes, glancing at her suspiciously. "Wait a minute, you're not just saying that to tease me, are you?"

Catra smirks, nearing closer to deliberately invade her space. "I prefer to keep the teasing to the bedroom, princess."

Adora shudders pleasantly when Catra coyly noses her jawline, discreetly scent-marking her while she's at it.

"Well, you can keep your butt in the bedroom too while I finish this up then." Adora counters, refusing to get distracted by the feline's antics.

Though Catra was making it pretty damn difficult for her.

"And what if I want to sample something else on the menu right now?" the magicat murmurs against her ear while wandering hands find their way beneath the blonde's apron, claws delicately teasing at the contour of abs they find there.

The simple touch becomes Adora's own downfall, guiltily twitching her hips forward when Catra's hand moves to park itself between her legs, making her intentions for her wife awfully clear. Adora answers in a chopped stammer. "Um, what- ah!- w-what did you have in mind?"

Catra doesn't answer with words, blatantly leering at her wife before she drops to her knees in front of her, the feline's head now eye level with her waistline as she eyes the blonde like she would her own prey. Watching Adora's mind completely blank and fizz out at the action is just the extra icing on the cake, pulling Adora's ridiculous apron up just enough for Catra to slip her head beneath it. There was still the barrier of boyshorts in her way but she quickly remedies that by giving the offending garment an insistent tug downward, pulling it away into irrelevancy.

It was pretty spontaneous on Catra's part, since had they been home neither of them would have had the luxury to engage in something so risky with a household of kits to look after. That's why Catra wanted to use the time they had now to properly work this out of her system. She would say once and for all , but they both knew limiting themselves to strictly one time with each other was never really feasible for them.

If Catra had it her way, she'd make sure to squeeze in at least three rounds before even leaving the kitchen. I mean, a magicat can hope, right?

Her inner monologue gets interrupted when it's none other than Adora's hand seating itself on the back of her skull, gently urging with a gentle nudge for her to get a move on. Catra punishes her impatience with a gentle nip to her inner thigh, skirting awfully close to the place Adora desperately needed her mouth right now. As impressive as the smell of Adora's cooking was to Catra's nostrils, it pales in comparison to the undiluted scent of arousal she's experiencing firsthand down south of her wife, literally licking her chops at the sight.

"I thought you said you were saving the teasing for the bedroom. Last I checked, this is the kitch- Oh, fuck. Yes!" Catra ruthlessly interrupts her when she dives in without notice, taking her hips into custody before she singles out the bud of Adora's clit with her tongue. It was like sampling nectar itself, the taste just as deliciously pungent as the scent taking over her senses.

Hell, it's been so long since they had a moment like this that Catra almost forgot just how much she enjoys being down here.

"Gods, don't you dare stop.." Adora tries to growl out a warning, but it loses most of its heat when it comes out more like a pitiful whine instead. That's all the incentive Catra needs to double down on her efforts, pressing her back into the cabinet so she can hike one of Adora's legs up far enough to seat on her shoulder, the improved angle offering even more convenient access to her.

She's so invested in her task of picking Adora apart with her tongue that it's almost enough to ignore the dull throb of her own she's been neglecting between her legs, already growing wet enough to rival her partner despite having yet to be touched. It wasn't her fault though. Going down on Adora had always felt like indulging in a live aphrodisiac, and no amount of years together would ever seem to get anywhere close to taking that otherworldly taste for granted. It knocked the air out of her lungs every single time.

And speaking of pleasing tastes lingering on the palate, she could tell Adora was only growing wetter and sweeter by the second, and it was enough of a blissful distraction that Catra had to actively remind herself to remember to come up for air every now and then, breathing moving down significantly on her list of priorities.

Now Catra's not a linguistics expert or anything, but she knows enough to know Adora's babbling absolute incoherent nonsense right now, the louder source of decibels drowning out the low rumble of Catra's gratified purring. Adora's vocalized approval only serves as a motivator to increase the intensity of her efforts, improvising on the angle of her tongue to cover even more area of her than before, the displacement having a fresh flood of slick spilling onto her tongue to stain the thin coat of fur at her neck.

All signs pointed to Adora being dangerously close to climax but the brat in her was more in favor of drawing this out as much as she could get away with. Which in hindsight, wasn't much at all really because for every time she tried dying down the efforts on her end, Adora would always compensate for the loss of friction by making the returning roll of her hips more insistent. Clearly her wife was a woman on a mission and wasn't about to succumb to Catra's teasing nature so easily.

"Nggh. C-Catra.." Adora manages a partially legible sentence for once, one hand gripping the counter behind her hard enough for her knuckles to discolor as the other aimlessly tugs at Catra's mane, toiling to keep her head firmly in place. Catra growls approvingly at the show of force, tongue delving deeper with each calculated swipe. It wouldn't be long now.

But unfortunately for Adora, it seems she wouldn't get to achieve that sweet sought-after release. Not yet, at least. The breathless blonde immediately goes as stiff as a board, her hips halting to a total standstill. Confused, Catra lifts her head out from the apron, allowing Adora's leg to fall away from her shoulder.

"You see a ghost or something, princess? What gives?" she asks, though Adora's total attention seems to be preoccupied with staring wide-eyed out of the open window that had apparently been behind them this entire time. When Adora ignores her entirely, Catra's concern only doubles, standing upright once more to investigate for herself.

As soon as she glances out of the window, Adora's horrified expression suddenly makes perfect sense to her, considering Catra was harboring a similar look of her own now. Just outside their cabin was a flurry of activity, which would be seen as normal at a typical resort.

Except half of the people casually strolling about just happened to be stark naked.

Adora's horrified expression would have been hilariously priceless if Catra wasn't so perplexed by the situation herself. It takes a long moment for her brain to properly reboot, and when she finally comes to she sees Adora frantically doing a Google search on her smartphone.

"Oh gods, so that's what that means.." Adora whispers beneath her breath, the comment meant for her own ears but Catra catches it anyway.

Catra asks slowly and carefully, keeping her voice as leveled as possible. "Adora, what did you do?"

Adora quickly looks up from her phone, turning off the screen with a suspiciously guilty expression. Her forced nervous laughter only has her appearing guiltier by the second. "Psh, what? I didn't do anything.."

Catra gives her a flat look, waiting patiently for an opening before she makes a grab for the phone, suavely usurping it out of her wife's hands. While Adora chews her lip anxiously, Catra turns the screen back on, viewing the search results for the page Adora had been on.

Right in the search bar were the words What does tire optional mean?

Catra blinks at the screen, glancing down at the search suggestion below Adora's obviously misspelled question.

Did you mean to type: what does attire optional mean?

Catra's stuck between disbelief and wanting to laugh her furred ass off at the ridiculousness of it all.

"Adora, are you really telling me you don't know what attire means?" Catra deadpans, feeling her IQ diminishing some just from having this conversation.

"I thought Perfuma said something about tires and it confused me but I didn't want to look stupid so I rolled with it, okay?" Adora tries to justify her reasoning, forcing Catra to stifle the facepalm she's immensely tempted to make. How someone as well-spoken and intelligent as Adora could be so airheaded sometimes was beyond Catra's capacity to understand.

"What um.. What's it mean?" Adora dares to ask, and she genuinely looks so distraught and confused that Catra can't help but show her ditz of a wife some mercy.

"Attire optional, Adora. It means you're not required to wear clothes!" Catra explains, and that only has Adora's blush deepening to a much worse shade.

"Oh.. Heh, whoopsie ." Adora tries to laugh it off, putting all her efforts into not glancing out the window.

"I told you this place would be a hippie fest. Now not only is it a hippie fest, it's a naked hippie fest." Catra pinches the bridge of her nose with a lengthy sigh.

"Should um.. should we leave?" Adora offers, but Catra merely snorts at the suggestion.

"And risk Scorp and Flowergirl getting butthurt over not enjoying their gift? You know we'd never hear the end of it." Catra grits out, closing the curtains to the kitchen window just as another naked couple passes by their cabin.

"What should we do then?"

Catra thinks on it, playing out all of their options in her head. "It's only for the weekend, I guess. We'll just bunker down here until Sunday rolls up.'

Adora nods, but Catra can already tell her wife is struggling to hold back her tears.

Catra closes the distance between them, cupping her face in her hands to lean her forehead against the blonde's. "Hey, none of that. This is still our weekend, right? We're not going to let a bunch of nudists ruin that for us."

Adora sinks into her embrace, her head falling against the feline's shoulder as a shaky breath leaves her. "Okay.." she answers in a barely-there whisper.

Catra smiles, an instinctive purr blooming in her throat. "So what's this gift you've been raving about? Pretty sure the sun is out now, princess."

Her question immediately sparks excitement back into the blonde, pulling away with a mile-wide grin. "Wait here, I'll get it right now."

Before Catra can even answer, Adora dashes out of the kitchen to God knows where, leaving an amused Catra to herself. It takes a good couple of minutes for Adora to return, a bouquet of flowers in one hand with an elongated velvet box in the other. Adora places the vase of flowers on the table, looking up at the hybrid.

"Close your eyes for me?" Adora requests, and as much as Catra wants to protest she decides to hold it back, reluctantly closing her eyes with a sly smile shaping her lips.

"You know I'm not fond of surprises, princess. What gives?" Catra asks, tensing slightly when she feels Adora place something on the bridge of her nose.

"I think you're going to enjoy this one, kitten." Adora quips, kissing the corner of her lips before she finally pulls away. "You can open your eyes now."

When Catra opens her eyes, she's in no way prepared for the sight she's hit with. The world around her didn't even look like her own, her vision suddenly bursting with hues of colors she's never witnessed before.

"W-what?" Catra stammers, taking in the world around her like she's seeing for the very first time. It was almost overwhelming, unable to process what exactly was taking place.

"They're glasses for the color blind. So you can finally see the world the way I see you. Beautiful, vibrant, and so full of life." Adora explains, and it finally clicks into place for Catra. She swallows, looking around her and taking in an array of colors she's never glimpsed in her short time on Etheria. Was this really the way the world looked to non-hybrids? Had she been missing out on this much the entire time? She zeroes in on the bouquet of flowers, the once red-tinted petals bursting with colors she couldn't even recognize.

It takes her longer than she would have liked to realize she's crying, staring dumbly at the vase. She was literally at a loss for words. Even Adora looked completely different to her, her brain finally able to witness and process the deep crystal blue to the eyes that stole her heart away so many years ago.

It was like falling hopelessly in love all over again.

"Adora.." Catra's words stumble out of her, the lenses of her glasses fogging over from the fresh wave of tears.

"Oh, gods. Do you not like them? I mean if you don't want to wear them, that's fine! I wasn't implying you needed them or anything I just wanted-"

Catra's incredulous laughter interrupts her ramblings, prompting Adora to pause.

"You really don't know how to read a room, do you, princess?" Catra asks through another laugh, blocking off Adora's reply with a kiss to the lips before she could get the words out.

Adora hums against her mouth, careful not to knock the glasses with her nose as she returns Catra's kiss in earnest, getting her fill before finally pulling back to look at her. "You like them, then? Cause you look really good in them, you know."

"How about I show you just how much I like them?" Catra proposes, hauling her back in so their lips can pick back up right where they left off.

"Mm, and how will you do that, exactly?"

"First I'm going to start off by finishing what you started earlier. And then I'm going to rinse and repeat, until I've fucked you on every available surface in this cabin."Catra states, loving the way her brazen declaration has Adora momentarily choking on empty air. "After we finish eating this for once edible-looking breakfast you put together for us, that is," she adds at the end, to which Adora vigorously nods in return, looking almost relieved that Catra had died down the intensity of her leering.

"Meet back in the bedroom? I think I'm going to cash in on that nap just to restore the reserves." Catra says with a yawn, coyly making a grab for her ass as she slips by the flustered blonde, slinking away back into the bedroom. Little did Adora know, breakfast had to be the last thing on her mind.

Against all odds, Catra does manage to squeeze in a quick nap before Adora returns. It was clearly the mattress's fault, the inviting surface effortlessly lulling her back to sleep the minute her head hits the pillow. A shift in weight on the unoccupied side of the mattress has Catra's ear flicking at the disturbance, her sleepy smile splitting wider at the generous tray of food in her wife's hands.

"Hey there, sleepy head. Breakfast is ready." Adora's voice is gentle, patiently allowing Catra the time she needed to properly wake up and register the world around her.

"I can see that." Catra answers, breaking for a sluggish yawn as she pulls herself upright, propping her back against the headboard. "How long was I out for?"

"Well, I had a little mishap with the bacon so I ended up scrapping it and starting over. That was about an hour ago." Adora sheepishly explains, and it's then that Catra can smell the remaining traces of burnt pork in the air. "You know what they say. Second times a charm, right?"

"I'm pretty sure it's third time's a charm, princess." Catra corrects her, actively trying not to salivate when Adora gently places the tray in her lap. An entire neighborhood of food greets her, everything from pancakes with fresh strawberries on top, all the way down to a cheese omelet with a side of bacon. It honestly looked like it could come right out of an IHOP advertisement, and even if it ended up tasting terrible, just the amount of effort Adora put into it has her chest swelling with love for her partner.

"Sheesh, you really know how to make a woman feel loved. This looks incredible, Adora." Catra praises her, seizing the fork and knife to begin working on the pancakes. She gets a generous chunk stuck through her fork, gathering it in the syrup on her plate before bringing it to her lips for a taste.

The approving moan that leaves her mouth surprises them both, slitted pupils dilating as one bite quickly becomes two, her taste buds screaming in silent approval. Adora cocks a brow at her, taking in the feline's dramatic reaction in silent amusement.

"That good, huh?" Adora drawls at her, wearing a triumphant grin when Catra decides to delay her reply just so she can guiltily sneak in another greedy bite.

"Fuck yes. Adora, this is amazing. You're amazing." Catra blurts out, eyeing the bacon to make the crispy meat her next target. If the pancakes had been amazing, the bacon was fucking out of this world, having a perfect tender-to-crunchy ratio. Catra can only groan in response, the incredible flavors gracing her mouth only reminding her of just how hungry she was.

"You must be confusing me with you." Adora corrects her, ending her sentence with a pensive hum. It doesn't take long before Catra spots Adora eyeing the plate enviously, and Catra suddenly realizes Adora didn't even make a plate for herself. This time and effort Adora put into this meal was truly and solely meant for Catra alone.

Deciding that to be bullshit, she quickly remedies that dilemma by cutting out another hefty slice of pancake, gathering a bit of the leftover strawberries on her fork as well before offering it to the blonde. Adora suddenly looks embarrassed, tearing her gaze away from the plate before shaking her head in polite refusal.

"I made it for you to enjoy." Adora insists, causing Catra to narrow her eyes into a pointed look.

"Adora, I can hear your stomach growling from here. Now open up." Catra words it in an order rather than a request, and that's all it really takes for Adora to cave in and indulge in a bite, humming around the fork in surprised delight as a stray dribble of syrup drips down her chin.

"Good girl." Catra affirms, knowing the effect the words would have on her wife. Adora fights off a whine, a blush taking over her cheeks as she fails to cover up the reaction with a strained cough.

"Now here's what's going to happen. We're going to share this meal together, and if you're a good girl and finish it all up I just might consider letting you have me for dessert. That sound good to you, princess?" Catra questions, picking up another slice of bacon before offering it to her.

Adora's eyes glaze over at the proposition, appearing almost ravenous as she takes the offered piece, tossing it into her mouth with a vigorous nod. The meal gets finished fairly quickly after that, with Catra occasionally tormenting Adora with her tail, deliberately letting the fluffy appendage brush up the length of her thigh.

When the tray is inevitably cleared, Adora clambers to get it off the bed and out of the way. Catra's out of the bed and on her feet before the blonde can even turn around, backing into her as she walks them both to the bathroom as a single entity.

"I thought you wanted me in bed." Adora questions when Catra's lips finally relent enough to let her speak, a territorial growl exiting her lips. The door to the bathroom hardly stands a chance, nearly toppling them both over when it swings open at the impact.

"And I thought I told you we're fucking on every single surface in this cabin." Catra counters, grunting at the dreaded apron still in her way. "Not gonna lie, the apron's pretty hot and all, but right now I need it gone."

Adora breathes a surprised laugh when Catra impatiently tears the garment off her, leaving the blonde in nothing but the red shorts that were still admittingly damp from their earlier escapades.

Adora's tugging on Catra's clothes as well, their lips breaking apart just enough to get them off of her. Catra had every intention of topping, but with Adora growing so handsy she can't help but groan when a set of arms snake their way down to her back, giving the sensitive base of her tail a torturous tug.

"There's my Kitten." Adora hums, effortlessly usurping control over the encounter until Catra's the one getting backed into the bathroom counter, a set of toned arms hoisting her legs so she can sit on the edge.

"Just know I'm the one topping after this." Catra pants out, worrying her lower lip with both fangs as Adora's lips descend ever lower, kissing and nipping at every inch of her stomach before she kneels low enough to hover just above her apex.

"I guess we'll just wait and see what happens then." Adora muses, serving her the very same quip Catra served her the previous night. Catra huffs in return, but it smoothly melts into a moan at the first swipe of Adora's tongue.

"A-Adora.." Catra exhales blissfully, leaning back against the mirror as a hand snakes down her torso, picking up a steady rhythm at her clit while Adora's tongue devotes its efforts towards her entrance, greedily licking into her to catch every precious drop of slick that spills from the disturbance.

Adora groans in sync with her the minute Catra starts rocking her hips against her tongue, grabbing a good handful of golden locks to keep her head firmly in place. It's damn near embarrassing how close Catra already is, regretfully blaming it on the fact that parenthood had left them a bit starved as far as bedroom matters meant. The coil in her core only tightens around itself with the ever invasive yet delicious drag of Adora's tongue, the enthusiasm the blonde was putting into servicing her only winding Catra's hormones ever higher.

"Close!" Catra warns, the back of her head hitting the mirror with an audible thud as her eyes lull back just as far, lips parting in a wordless yet telling scream.

"Give it to me, Kitten. I'm still hungry." Adora orders, and that's all it takes for Catra to fall apart at the seams. Her orgasm rolls through her like an electrical storm, surges of pleasure crackling throughout her body as the thunder of her moans fill every empty space in the room. It's all-encompassing, feeling Adora kissing her way back up to her lips by the time Catra's soul finally returns to her body.

"Fuh- F-Fuuuuuuck… " Catra slurs out, her limbs having the consistency of jello as she lazily returns the kiss to the best of her ability, tasting the remnants of her release on Adora's lips.

"Good start?" Adora teases, feeling awfully smug by how quickly her tongue brought Catra to a state this boneless.

"You're such an idiot." Catra laughs out, a purr igniting in her chest as clawed digits lightly tease Adora's sides, skating the boundary between gentle and firm. When they first got together, Catra expended all of her efforts into trying to keep them sheathed, up until the point Adora guiltily admitted that she actually had a bit of a thing for them. Now Catra just lets them out on instinct, and it drives Adora wild every time, knowing the danger they implied.

"An idiot who just got you cumming in less than three minutes." Adora gloats in return, with Catra immediately snorting at the slander.

"Of course you were timing it. That doesn't even surprise me." Catra tuts, deciding to hop off the counter the minute her legs would let her.

"If it makes you feel better, I'm sure you'll get me there in less. H-heh, I'm uh.. kinda reallllly worked up right now." Adora admits, her breath halting to a hitch when the claws at her hips anchor themselves a little deeper, biting into her skin.

"Had that much fun getting me off, huh?" Catra accuses her, walking them out of the bathroom as a pair.

"Always." whispers the blonde, the backs of her legs colliding with what she thought to be the bed, but was actually one of the love seats in the room. Catra's on her in an instant, straddling her hips before she's diving in for another indulgent trade of lips, unsheathed claws dragging down the center of her chest. The pressure put behind it wasn't enough to draw blood, but just enough to leave an array of red lines painted down her sides. Adora releases a strained groan after that stunt, the feline using the opportunity to deepen the kiss further, sneaking past her parted lips with intent.

While the idea of potentially bringing Adora to climax quicker than the blonde managed with her was awfully tempting, the urge to take her time and have her slowly unravel bit by delicious bit was swiftly overtaking her. Just like the movements of her hands, their kiss grows in intensity, the hybrid's rough tongue staking claim to every inch of her mouth. Whining audibly, Adora's grip slides down to the swell of her ass, tugging Catra impossibly further in her lap just for the sake of being as close to her as physically possible, immensely enjoying the fur-to-skin contact.

"Gods, I forgot how much I love your claws." she says through a moan, her voice pitching higher when Catra grows more interested in her neck, taking a shortcut down her jaw to graze her lips down the pale column of her throat.

"I can tell." Catra drawls, switching up her straddled stance to slink to even lower parts of her wife. Adora bites down a moan, fingers desperately fisting the top of the feline's mane when she arrives at her chest. Her left breast gets claimed with a burning set of lips while the right gets claimed by a territorial hand, the added stimuli prompting Adora's chest to pitifully arch into the touch.

"Catra, please.." Adora resorts to begging, thighs clamping shut to give herself at least a morsel of friction.

"Mm, please what, Adora?" Catra teasingly goads her, hoping to needle her into giving a voice to her needs. They've played this game quite often, mainly to coax Adora into being comfortable enough to acknowledge not just Catra's needs, but her own as well.

"Ruin me.." Adora croaks out, looking damn near possessed when Catra finally reaches her dripping center, her hips threatening to launch off the seat if it weren't for Catra's steady hold keeping her pinned in place.

"I love it when you get like this." Catra purrs, stopping Adora's impatient whine in its tracks when she finally shows her an ounce of mercy, licking a wet and harsh swipe straight up her core.

"Gods, yes!" Adora almost goes crosseyed at the second cruel flick of her tongue, trembling beneath Catra's hold. Catra's tail loops around her calve just to have that extra closeness with her. Her facial fur has to be a mess of slick by now, the scent of Adora's arousal easily reawakening her own stirring libido as a muffled groan breaks out of her, abandoning her hold on one of Adora's hips to sneak a hand between her own legs.

Adora appears immensely distressed that her hand isn't the one servicing Catra right now, but she's teetering too far over the edge to voice her complaints. Catra knows her body well enough by now to know Adora was fit to burst any second now, so to really send it all home she uses her unoccupied hand to slip two digits into her wife, confident she was wet enough to take her.

Her confidence is well placed since Adora's entrance all but swallow up her fingers, sucking them into a sleeve of molten heat as Catra's tongue migrates back over to her clit. She takes the sensitive bud of flesh gently between her teeth, sucking it right into her mouth before bending her fingers in a brutal curl to hit that one prime spot right against her front wall.

That stunt is essentially the straw that broke the camel's back, a domino effect taking place as each source of pleasure becomes too much for her body to bear, unable to stave off her climax any longer. Adora reaches her peak with Catra's name branded into her cries, toes curling back on themselves as the grip at her mane tightens enough to invoke a mild sting. Though Catra hardly minds the minor discomfort it brings her, happily pushing onward as her thrusts only turn more relentless in nature, easily bringing Adora out of her first peak only to pummel her right into a second release that's just as violent.

"That's it, princess. Don't fight it, just let it happen." Catra soothes her wife, gifting a chaste kiss to the inside of her thigh as her fingers work her body back down to the mortal realm where coherent speech is possible.

When Adora finally regains the gift of speech, the first thing she happily slurs out is a breathless "I love you."

Catra smiles smugly, returning her "I love you" before she gently disengages her fingers from her, Adora whining at the sudden loss.

"Bed?" Adora suggests, making grabby hands for her.

Catra happily complies, scooping the boneless blonde out of the seat to hold her bridal style, carefully carrying her to the one remaining surface they surprisingly hadn't defiled yet. "Tuckered out already?" Catra teases.

Adora snorts against her shoulder, reluctantly unwinding her arms from around her neck when Catra slowly lays her out on the mattress. She barely has a chance to get her bearings before Adora's tugging at her arm to join her. "Not a chance. But that chair wasn't doing any favors for my back either."

"Guess we're dropping the future Yelp review to three stars for that one." snarks the feline, instantly both bursting into childish snickering at the ridiculousness of it all. "You know, I can think of another place I want to turn into a seat right about now.." she adds slyly.

"And is this purely to get yourself off or do you really just want me to stop talking and you think sitting on my face will be the quickest way to shut me up?" Adora accuses in jest, gentle laughter letting loose when Catra flashes her a culpable grin, absently letting her tail drift down the length of her leg.

"Can't it be both?" Catra ponders, letting her bent leg drape itself over Adora's midsection while a wandering hand idly toys with one of the defenseless nipples within her reach, plucking an embarrassing moan out of the blonde.

"Is this your idea of buttering me up? Cause you're kinda terrible at it." Adora counters, amused rather than annoyed. When Catra abruptly boards her hips and straddles her midsection in one swift motion, her teeth find her lower lip, worrying it hard enough to discolor.

Catra's grin stretches from slight to insufferable at the favorable reaction, her swaying tail further illustrating her playful intentions. "Who says I need to butter you up? We both know how much you love when I demote you to nothing more than my own personal throne." Catra calls her out on her bullshit, giving a testing roll of her hips against the chiseled plane of abs her apex is rested against.

She was kinda still a sucker for Adora's abs, after all.

"I guess no secrets are safe from you, huh?" Adora drops the charade, her hands latching onto Catra's hips in a steady hold, striving to pull her away from her stomach and up to her mouth.

"Not when I can read you better than a book." Catra enlightens her, lifting her hips just enough to reposition herself on Adora's chest, her center resting mere inches away from her face. Adora's eyes shamelessly glaze over like she's been drugged, an unknowing whine sounding in her throat. She tries to lift her head up to close the distance prematurely, but the hand Catra tangles in her hair easily immobilizes her, leaving her left to stare at her exposed wife with a famished expression.

"Beg." Catra orders, allowing her free hand to toy with her own clit while she waits just to torment Adora further.

"P-Please.." Adora desperately rasps, addressing the view between her legs more than the devilish gaze resting above it.

"C'mon, sweetness. I know you can do better than that." Catra encourages her further, letting her tail tip sweep down the thigh behind her, dangerously close to Adora's center. Adora's eyes momentarily close at the cruel tease, biting into her lip hard enough to taste copper.

"Let me serve you?" Adora tries again, but much to her neverending misfortune, Catra doesn't seem satisfied with that request either.

"You know, serve is still a bit vague.. Think you might have to elaborate on tha-"

"Catra, if you don't fuck my face in the next few seconds, I swear to gods I'll do it myself." Adora threatens her, evidently being needled one too many times. Though the needling was purposeful, obviously. Catra's end goal here was to get Adora to a state so desperate she'll just take what she wants without a second thought. And by the heated glare the blonde was serving her, Catra knew she had to be close to successfully poking the repressed bear that is her wife.

"You're going to fuck your own face? How does that one work? Plus, I'm pretty sure you're in no position to start barking out demands, Ador- ah!"

In an impressive display of core strength, Adora manages to sit up despite the amount of pressure Catra's expending to keep her down, and it's then that Catra realizes maybe she didn't have as much power in this encounter as she realized. Sure she may have had Adora pinned, but little did she know, Catra was at the mercy of her all along. Two determined hands splay over her ass in an iron clasp grip, coming damn near close to yanking the feline onto her face.

Catra may have been on top, but damn if she didn't feel like the bottom right about now.

She wants to make a snide remark on how Adora has the gall to accuse her of having little patience after showcasing that stunt, but the teeth and tongue at her center give her little room left to form words. One hand gripping the headboard for dear life, Catra risks a glance down to the source of activity sending pleasure signals to each dormant nerve ending in her body, letting out a keening wail when one of Adora's hands slides up the flat of her stomach, harshly twisting one of her nipples in the way she knew she loved. It was clear neither had any room for more pleasantries, both invested in the roles they found themselves in.

Adora to serve and Catra to be served.

Every calculated swipe of tongue swept Catra up and away in a burning trail of bliss, wanting to throw her head back in a moan but that bottomless blue gaze effectively immobilized her from looking at anything else, snaring her in place and forcing her to witness the moment she'd eventually break. Adora's tongue may not have been a weapon in the traditional sense, but it still had no issues tearing Catra apart with ease, the time for foreplay long leaving the station by now.

Catra's so close to the edge that she barely even remembers that she wants to take Adora to that edge right along with her, relying on the one limb she still had some functionality over.

Her tail.

She brushes the tip over Adora's clit in a teasing swipe, shuddering pleasantly at the groan from Adora she feels vibrating against her core. One swipe turns into an amount that could no longer be properly counted, and before they know it they're hitting that same mutual peak side by side, falling into a seemingly endless freefall of bliss. Neither is exactly aware of who finished first, but by the time they both come to, Catra finds her boneless limbs sprawled out lazily over Adora's torso, a purr blooming in her chest when she acknowledges the tentative hands idly teasing the fur at her sides.

"Kinda glad we're in bed already 'cause I don't think I could move my legs even if I wanted to." Adora tiredly breathes through a smile that only grows when Catra nudges her head to the side with her own, nuzzling into her neck to scent her.

"Good thing I'm not letting you go anywhere then." Catra states almost grumpily, giving an affectionate nip to her jaw as the calming synchronized beat of their hearts gently lull them both back to the depths of slumber.

Maybe this weekend didn't have to be so bad, after all.

"Mommies! I missed you!" Faye's the first one to go bolting out of Scorpia's house the minute their SUV pulls into the driveway, bringing a warm smile to both returning parents. Sure their getaway had been nice, but having a litter of kits eagerly awaiting their return was the true present they were looking forward to.

Adora barely gets the door open and her seatbelt off before Faye's pummeling into her, her daughter's pink backpack hanging loosely on her shoulder.

"I missed you even more. Did you have fun at Auntie Scorpia's?" Adora scoops her daughter up in her arms as Faye enthusiastically nods, holding the young magicat in a loving hug that Faye immediately returns. Finn and Felix both being a little older than Faye, aren't nearly as elated to see their parents, shoving their backpacks in the trunk before hopping in the back seat.

"What, are you two suddenly too grown or something to give your moms a hello anymore?" Catra eyes her two other kits through the rearview mirror, narrowing her eyes at them both when neither Felix nor Finn utters a peep.

Faye pulls away from the hug she's giving Adora, guiltlessly snitching on her siblings. "They're scared you're gonna ground them 'cause they broke a vase playing tag even after Auntie Perfuma asked them not to run in the house."

"Faye, you said you wouldn't tell!" Felix erupts into a rant, with Finn eager to back their brother up. "That's not playing fair!"

Catra amusedly sighs as all three kits begin to argue amongst themselves, already making a mental note to reimburse Perfuma for the minor property damage later.

"Good to be home again, huh?" Adora teases from the driver's side, reaching across the center divider to give Catra's hand a gentle squeeze. The feline shapes half a smile, looking fondly at her litter of rugrats.

"Always."
