Kindred Hearts

by EloyGray

Summary

Adora knows full well what Catra is doing. They get through meetings by trying to do something productive, or at least artistic, but Catra? She survives on teasing them relentlessly. Catra gets off on needling Adora in more ways than one, and trying to get them to snap during a meeting is one of her favorites. No one is going to make a comment about She-Ra seeming bored or distant, at least no one who doesn't want Glimmer or Catra to jump down their throats about their lack of tact and respect. This lets Adora get away with a lot, but pinning their girlfriend to the table and fucking her so hard the supports break probably isn't on that list.

Still, it is a nice thought.

Notes

Adora uses they/them & Catra and Adora use a few traditionally "male" titles in this fic for each other (prince and boy, specifically) becuase gender is fake and a preformence and what you call someone in bed doesn't Have to reflect on their gender identity :fingerguns:

See the end of the work for more notes

There are a lot of things Adora has gotten used to since the war ended; they're spending less time as She-Ra, for starters. They have also started opening up about how they and Catra were raised to Bow and Glimmer, and even started to go to therapy. The obvious one, of course, is having to reacclimate to Catra being in every part of their life again, not that it was a hard adjustment to make. Adora has had to get used to waking up with Catra in their arms, or the comforting weight of Catra on their back while they do push ups, to a million other little things that, honestly, they don't know how they lived without during the war. These are all things they have learned to love, in time. There is one thing they don't think they'll ever learn to love, though; the diplomacy that comes with maintaining peace.

When the war ended, Etheria, and Brightmoon in particular, were thrust onto the galactic stage, with thousands of diplomats from hundreds of worlds all wanting to meet the people who ended Prime's 'eternal' reign. Sure, at first it was fun to meet people from distant planets, and the praise they get for ending the war is nice, but after a while the events got boring. Often, these meetings drag on for hours, if not days, and Adora just can't handle it. Adora is the greatest warrior the galaxy has seen in one thousand years, and they're always defeated by a few hours of negotiation and political posturing. They're better at cutting through defenses with their sword and leading from the front of a charge, even if they wished they weren't; political maneuvering has always been Glimmer's game, though Catra has surprisingly taken to it like a forest to fire.

More than once Catra has caught them biting their nails down to stubs out of boredom, or transforming the Sword of Protection into something small they can fidget with just to make it through a meeting without cracking whatever table they are sitting at from gripping it too hard, which has only happened twice! They've even gotten into writing and drawing just so they can do something with their hands, even if their pieces always end up focusing on Catra.

Their meandering train of thought is rudely interrupted by Catra wiggling further into their lap, their girlfriend doing everything in her power to distract them from the probably very important meeting about crop rotations or trade routes or… something. Adora honestly hasn't been paying attention but they are at least trying to look like they are. But then, Catra started tracing thin lines into their legs with her claws, and all hope of looking interested vanished without a trace. She's applying just enough pressure behind the gestures to leave marks that their dress will hopefully cover whenever Adora has to stand up.

They know full well what Catra is doing. Adora gets through meetings by trying to do something productive, or at least artistic, but Catra? She survives on teasing them relentlessly. Catra gets off on needling Adora in more ways than one, and trying to get them to snap during a meeting is one of her favorites. No one is going to make a comment about She-Ra seeming bored or distant, at least no one who doesn't want Glimmer or Catra to jump down their throats about their lack of tact and respect. This lets Adora get away with a lot, but pinning their girlfriend to the table and fucking her so hard the supports break probably isn't on that list.

Still, it is a nice thought.

Catra's claws trace just a little bit higher up their thigh than normal, less than an inch away from the hem of Adora's boyshorts. Adora's hands bear down on the armrests of the chair, and they swear they can hear the wood grain cracking and splitting under the onslaught. They have already bitten the inside of their cheek so hard it bled twice during this meeting alone to keep themself from moaning, and while it's nothing a little magic can't fix, Adora has no intention of giving Catra more ammunition to use against them. So they just have to live with the familiar, tantalizing taste of copper swimming between their teeth.

"Well, what if instead of trying to ship your spice through that sector…" Catra's voice splits Adora's thoughts like an axe through a log, forcing them back to reality just for a moment before Catra wraps her tail around Adora's forearm in a very public display of ownership that Adora does nothing but encourage. If that encouragement takes the form of a tiny groan, just loud enough for Catra to hear, well, that's their business. Their girlfriend's sentence is gone, stolen from their mind, its whispers as unintelligible as something written in the clouds. Adora can hear Catra's smile surrounding and overpowering her words. Catra wiggles again, grinding her ass right into Adora. It takes all of their willpower to not throw Catra over a shoulder and carry her off then and there.

This is ridiculous, and they have to get payback because right now? They're losing.

Stealth is out of the window; even Adora will admit that they are terrible at being sneaky, which is something everyone makes sure to tell them over and over again. So instead, they wait until Glimmer is talking and the room is focused on her to slip a hand in one of Catra's pants pockets. A gesture that looks innocent to everyone else, just two of the most powerful women in the universe being deeply and openly in love, but to Catra? It is a sign that things have escalated from a skirmish to a full on engagement. With Adora's hand buried in Catra's pocket, they are more than able to tease Catra through her briefs with the tips of their fingers. Adora revels in the touch, feeling the silk of Catra's pants pocket rub up against the fabric of her taut underwear. No one else is able to notice the miniscule change in their girlfriend's posture as her spine goes straight, or feel the different cadence of her heart as it's pace picks up, but when Adora ghosts a finger over the growing wet spot in Catra's underwear, feeling the pressure of the head of her cock straining against the fabric, they feel it.

Now it's a competition, and Adora's going to win.

Adora and Catra both know the ground rules of things like this; nothing that will get them caught and reprimanded, nothing that can't be explained as idle, unintentional teasing, even if it's anything but. The meeting drags on, Catra's hand continuing to trace lazy patterns up and down the inside of Adora's forearms or their thighs as Adora's hands find purchase on Catra's hips or around her waist. Adora knows they are both fighting to keep it together, each one trying to make the other break during this delicate dance. They want to step on their partners toes, brush a hand somewhere it shouldn't be, not outright make them fall. Now that Adora thinks about it, they had both acted this way at Princess Prom.

Adora will never forget the way Catra dipped them, or the feeling of Catra grinding her hard cock into their thigh during that dip. Gods they still get off to that memory from time to time, the way that knowledge had haunted them during the war, wondering if it was just Catra putting on a show or if there was something more there. It wasn't until after the war that they realized that not only was there more there, but also that Catra had felt their own hardness grinding into her that night as well.

Adora is jolted from their thoughts by Catra standing up and gently kicking them in the shin to rouse them. Diplomats are gathering their things, and that's all the signal Adora needs to understand that finally, the meeting is over. Taking Catra's hand in theirs, they practically run out of the room, utilizing every ounce of their strength not to cause an intergalactic incident.

The bedroom door clicking closed behind Adora signals that they can finally let loose. Catra, however, beats them to the finish line, trapping them against the wall, a hand on either side of their head and her lips against theirs. Adora lets their fingers wander, running over the silk of Catra's maroon button down or black leather jacket, feeling the pressure straining against the zipper of her pants. They press deeper into the kiss, letting all of their love pour through their open mouth and into Catra's throat, their tongues tangled in tandem as muffled groans and swallowed words squeeze out between the seal their lips create. Adora makes sure to revel in the attention Catra is giving them as well, kissing their neck and their shoulders, pulling at the deep navy fabric of their backless, sleeveless dress in a desperate attempt to reach more of Adora. So what if it's one of Catra's favorites, that doesn’t mean Adora wore it intentionally. Maybe they just love knowing Catra’s eyes are glued to their biceps and back muscles, or that they get to show off the gold ink they’ve colored their scars in with.

Catra pushes a hand downwards, over the slight swell of Adora’s chest and then further, between their legs. Licking her lips, she presses, “So what’ll it be, Princess? Do you think you were a good enough girl for me to go down on you?” Her words are dripping with arousal, each once accentuated with the splay of her fingers against the swell of Adora’s boyshorts where their cock is trying to break free. Adora doesn’t try to suppress the shudder that jolts through their body or the whimper that escapes their barely parted lips when Catra nibbles at their neck, but that’s all a part of the plan.

With grace that Adora can only seem to summon when they’re about to get laid, they grab both of Catra’s wrists in one hand and spin her around, pinning her to the wall, her hands held high above her head. With their other hand, Adora summons the Sword of Protection before quickly changing its shape to Catra’s favorite; a white collar with geometric, golden accents and trim, alongside a single, cerulean runestone sitting proud right in the middle. Golden light presses against the thin fur of Catra’s throat, and Adora watches in awe as her pupils are blown out as a familiar feeling hijacks Catra’s mind.

“Oh, that’s cute that you think you're in charge?” Adora says, using their now free hand to start pulling their own underwear, which is now completely soaked through, down before kicking it aside. “After everything you did in the meeting? Oh starlight, I’ve got bad news for you. You’re mine right now, aren’t you?” Even after all this time, Adora is still careful to phrase any talk of ownership as a question, a request for Catra to approve or deny. They cup Catra’s cheek, feeling the heat radiating from her face swarming and surrounding their fingers. The gesture pulls Catra back from her rapid plummet into subspace, her eyes locking onto Adora’s, pinning them in place. All it takes is a raise of their eyebrow and Catra whispering 'Green" for Adora to know that they can go all in.

Their heart blooms with pride, for just a moment. It took Catra so, so long to let herself be this vulnerable, even with Adora. There were dozens of hour-long conversations filled with talk of boundaries and safe words, highlighting mines to avoid and showering Catra in praise and affirmations of their love for her, but now? Adora knows that Catra can finally, truly let go and let herself be taken care of. She trusts Adora's control over her completely, just like how she trusts them to watch their strength and their blade when she spars against She-Ra. That's what this is, really; it may be framed as 'punishment', but they are both well aware that the last thing any of this is is that. This is a show of love and understanding and faith in each other, and in their relationship.

Adora is drawn back to reality as a desperate cry escapes her girlfriend, who is currently grinding her cock into the length of their thigh, begging for some kind of stimulation. The fabric of Adora's dress catches on the bulge in Catra's pants, letting them feel the warmth of Catra's slick as she soaks through both of her layers. Her hands still pinned above her head, Adora leans in close to one of Catra's ears and murmurs, "Oh? Do you want me to get you off love? Do you want me to touch your cock that badly?", every few words accentuated by them nibbling gently on catra's ear. If Adora wasn't holding Catra's hands, they're convinced that their girlfriend would've crumpled to the floor by now.

Adora loves hearing Catra's desperate cries and stolen pleas for 'More', but even they can't resist actually playing with her. Guiding Catra's wrists down to the collar, they morph the sword once again to form a matching pair of white and gold cuffs around her wrists, attaching her hands securely to her neck. It should be enough to keep Catra in place, and judging from the loud purring coming from her core, Catra more than likes being bound.

"Be a good girl and stay put for me, okay?" Adora can't help but add as they give Catra a deep kiss, letting their tongue explore the warmth of Catra's mouth, the rough texture of her tongue catching on Adora's. Pulling away, temptation strikes them; Adora pushes two fingers past Catra's lips and into her mouth, running them against the hardness of her incisors, while planting their other hand firmly around her throat.

Adora takes in the scene; Catra's mouth is spread wide, her tongue catching and pulling against the calloused skin on their fingers. They so desperately want to fill her mouth with something else, whether it be a toy or a gag or even their own cock. The sapphire and amber of Catra's eyes that Adora fell in love with are being suffocated by the black of her pupils, contrasting to the red rims of her eyelids. They run a finger across Catra's teeth, feeling them rise and fall before catching on the sharpness of one of her fangs. Her entire body weight is only being held up by the hand Adora has around her throat as Catra melts further into their grasp. Each of her breaths is coming hard and fast, the skin behind her thin layer of fur flushing that gorgeous deep crimson that only Adora is lucky enough to see. Catra is perfect like this, and Adora has to share that with her as their heart overflows and pours molten love down every one of their veins. "You're so beautiful like this, you know that? Already so needy and desperate for me and I've barely even touched you."

Catra mewls in response, pressing herself against Adora's grip. She bucks harder against the thigh pressed between her legs, and Adora knows they have to give Catra some relief. With an exaggerated sigh, Adora removes their hand from Catra's mouth and traces it hand down her body, before starting to undo her belt. "Gods, you're such a needy little kitty, you know that? So demanding of me." They can't help but shower Catra in a torrent of love and desire, each word filled to the brim with praise, Adora pushes her pants to the floor, their eyes drawn to the massive wet spot that has turned Catra's boxers from light red to a shade of maroon that matches her button down. They make quick work of the underwear as well, though instead of letting Catra kick them off and away, Adora picks them up and runs their thumb over the damp patch. Deciding to be extra cruel, Adora gently holds the patch up against Catra's mouth, their fingers prodding at her lips through the fabric. Catra obeys, her lips parting, allowing Adora to place the soaked part of the fabric into her mouth.

“That’s my good girl,” they coo, wiping away a little of the spit on Catra’s chin with their thumb before kissing her forehead. Adora, suddenly aware of their own straining arousal, hikes up their dress and takes both of their cocks in their hand, pressing them together. The feeling is electric, white-hot and burning as it runs through their core and coils around their spine, threatening to short circuit their brain. They let out a moan that would be matched by Catra’s, if not for her impromptu gag, and starts to pump their hand.

Adora always loves the feeling of them pressed together like this, their pre-come mixing together in their hand, the head of Catra’s cock pressed up against the base of their own. When they first started exploring intimacy, this is what they did most nights. Together, they created a map of each other's bodies in a way that guaranteed pleasure, finding the places where landmasses of pleasure came together, and others where oceans kept them separate. Adora’s knees go weak at the feeling, muscle and sinew sundered by molten arousal, each thrust forcing the feeling deeper and deeper into their core. They don't want to come, not yet, so instead they pace themself, carrying them and Catra right to the edge of the abyss before backing off. It’s so tempting to finish them both off right there, to jump into the blissful nothingness in each other’s arms, but Adora has plans and promises they intend to make good on.

Adora slows and then stops their hand, only to be greeted by Catra bucking into their grip. Adora backs away a step or two from Catra and she cries out in response, a desperate, needy noise that makes Adora want to fuck her right now. Catra forces her eyes open, a movement that looks like it takes monumental effort, only to freeze in place when she notices where Adora’s hands are.

With the flick of a simple, golden clasp, Adora’s navy dress crumples around their ankles, it’s golden highlights dancing in the daymoon’s light. Adora wasn’t sure Catra’s eyes could go any wider but somehow they do, taking on that distinct sparkle when she sees something she needs to have. Her eyes trace up and down Adora's body in a flurry, taking in every soft muscle and golden scar, before finally landing back on Adora's own steel-blue eyes, the fire of arousal burning brightly behind them.

Adora takes their time with Catra, hands tracing up and down her shirt, each button undone with careful want as they unwrap their present. Adora can't take off Catra's shirt and jacket, not when her hands are bound, but that doesn't bother them, not as long as they can access their girlfriend's entire body. With the last button free, the jacket parts like the clouds and Adora lets their hands roam free. Warm, thin fur and the soft skin it's guarding fills the space between their fingers as their palms press further into Catra's flanks. They let the pads of their fingers run over the swell of Catra's hips, the fullness of her breasts, the firm plush of her stomach. Each movement elicits another noise from Catra, higher pitched than the last as she feels her body worshipped by a literal demi-goddess.

When Adora's hands find Catra's heart, they look at Catra and ask a simple question. "Magic?" Catra studies them, her eyes deadly seriously as the glaze washes away, and nods yes. Smiling, Adora opens the floodgates just enough to let a tiny flow of warmth through. Radiant light clings to their skin like water as it surges through their body, motes of pure power building behind her fingertips, desperate for release. They push a small burst of warm magic through their fingers and into Catra, feeling her fur stand on edge as Catra shudders again. Like this, their hearts are connected, binary stars lighting up their own little world.

They've talked about this in the past, and experimented with using magic for stimulation. It was something they were both, but Catra especially, nervous about, but in the end Catra wanted to try it. Adora knows it makes everything more intense, each ember of love transformed into an inferno, a flick of a wrist or lap of a tongue equivalent to a supernova. Adora doesn't push the feeling for long, a few seconds at most, before backing off. Catra's entire neck and clavicle are flushed red now, her cock hard enough to look almost painful, and Adora feels nothing but pride demanding release from the walls of their heart.

"You've been such a good girl for me, Catra. Is my prince ready to come yet?"

Dropping to their knees, Adora takes Catra in their hand, licking her length from base to tip. They take the bead of pre-come resting on the tip of Catra's cock onto their tongue, making as much of a show of this as they can before swallowing. The salty-sweet taste fills their mouth, and Adora can't help but smile before they take Catra entirely, one smooth motion before their nose is pressed to Catra's pubic bone, their throat wrapped around her cock. The shudder that runs through Catra's body almost makes Adora gag, but they're able to hold their ground. They pull their head back, dragging their tongue down her length, pressing into Catra's hardness and reveling in the warmth that's pouring off of her.

They start going down on their prince in earnest, adoring the feeling of their throat swelling each time Catra hilts in them. Adora uses what fortitude they have left to fight back against their heightened arousal; they need to concentrate on keeping the Sword in this form since it isn't one that's locked in their mind. Each time Catra groans out their name, each time they feel a wave of pre-come flow down their throat or fill their mouth, they can feel the Sword flicker. Adora tries to focus, but it's like trying to hold onto sand, the magic keeping the Sword in this form fuzzy and distant as it brushes against their fingertips. If they can just get Catra off before that, though, it'll be worth it.

"Fu- uck, Adora I- I'm so clo-" Catra stutters out, her words interrupted by moans and high pitched whines that carve their way into Adora's mind. They can feel how close Catra is, her heartbeat pulsing through her cock as Adora pushes down one last time. They let the Sword fade back to just the collar and an instant later, Catra is pushing them even further into her, one hand wrapped entirely around their ponytail, using it as a lifeline as she doubles over and spills, filling Adora's mouth entirely.

Broken moans tear through the room as Catra is completely enveloped by her orgasm. Adora's vision goes white from the pressure as they focus on breathing, careful not to let a single drop fall from their mouth.

Soon, Catra finds her footing again as the last of her orgasm laps at the shores of her mind, a far cry from the overwhelming waves that threatened to drown her a few moments ago. The vice grip that was strangling Adora's ponytail fades to nothingness, and they watch as Catra slumps entirely against the wall. They pull off of her cock, doing their best to avoid any of the overstimulated, livewire nerves, before standing back up and kissing Catra, her come still in their mouth. Catra presses into the kiss, but doesn't let Adora follow through with the gesture. Instead, she takes Adora's chin and tilts it upwards, easing them into swallowing everything she gave them. Adora's mind goes completely blank, the only thought they're capable of thinking being how fucking desperate they are to get off as they feel a drop of their own pre-come trail down their length. Catra pinches their chin between two fingers and brings Adora back in for another kiss, her hands carding through their hair, pulling loose platinum locks.

Catra's other hand brushes against the base of Adora's length, and she breaks the connection just for a moment. "You did such a good job eating me out, I think you deserve a reward, don't you? Do you want to get off, Princess?" she mewls, a smirk breaking across her face as Adora looks back at her, desperation coating their whole upper body in a deep crimson. Adora knows they're blushing, but they can't form words right now, so they just nod back at her. "Tch tch tch, we talked about this starlight. Use your words, Handsome."

Adora can't suppress the whimper that escapes their lips at Catra's order. Just like that, she's back in charge, forcing Adora to ask for what they want. Even with the collar around her throat, Catra's confidence and control arcs off of her like discharging electricity. They know their voice is going to be ragged, catching on all the sore parts of their throat and the jagged edges of their arousal, but they don't care, not when Catra's the one who asked. "Stars, please Sir, I want to come so badly.” It’s practically a whimper, but they hope it’s enough.

“Gods you’re so hot when you’re all fucked out like this Adora,” is all the answer Catra gives before wrapping her hand around Adora and jacking them off. In an instant they bracket her head with their forearms, desperate to hold themself upright as Catra continues to play with their cock. The smoldering coals of their arousal flare and burn bright, growing into a wildfire that’s going to raze Adora’s entire being to the ground if they don’t get off soon. Tension wraps around and up their spine, coils of steel cord pulled taught and threatening to snap. Adora is always easy to get off, but after so much teasing and feeling Catra come in their mouth, they know they aren’t going to last very long.

Adora presses their forehead into Catra’s shoulder only for her to pull their head back upright by their ponytail. The slight tug that wraps around their head from where their hair is being used as a handhold only acts as an accelerant to their rapidly approaching orgasm. Catra speeds up her hand as she stares into Adora’s eyes, fangs dominating the smirk that’s plastered across her face. “I want you to look me in the eye when you come, so be a good handsome girl and cover my chest, Princess.”

“Sir, I- I want- fuck, Catra-” Each time Adora tries to say something, their words are clipped by the weight of their tongue, their core burning brighter than a star. They’re so close, right on the edge of slipping into that blissful sea of orgasm, but they need that final push—

“Come for me, Adora.”

Like white-hot metal dunked in water, euphoric release commandeers Adora’s mind as all the building tension flows out and through their cock. Their legs buckle, the only thing keeping them standing the hand pulling their ponytail taut as their moans shred the silence of the room. Adora doesn’t think they're going to survive as the inferno in their heart threatens to burn them up entirely, hollowing them out until nothing is left. Just like that, though, the fire is extinguished, the pressure is gone, and their vision recovers from the starfield that previously dominated it.

The first thing they see is the pride in Catra's eyes; it's an expression she wears so well, like something custom tailored, just for her. What they see next is the absolute mess they've made of Catra's chest. A single river of their come reached all the way to the hollow of Catra's throat, and their eyes follow the trail downwards, finding more and more tributaries spread out across her breasts and open shirt before finding the fucking drenched epicenter at the pit of her stomach. Catra lets go of their cock as a hiss forces it's way out from Adora, caused by the oversensitive nerves, only for it to be quieted by Catra's fingers pressing into their mouth. She feeds Adora some of her own come, and they can't help but lap at her fingers, desperate to find every last drop.

Catra pulls her hand from Adora's mouth, wiping down her fingers on one of the few dry parts of her now temporarily ruined shirt. "Gods, for someone so prim and proper, you're such a dirty boy Adora," Catra chuckles, and before Adora can protest, she adds, "And I fucking love it," topping the praise off with a gentle kiss that brings all the colors back into Adora's world. They push back into the kiss, though this one isn't hungry like the others they've shared today, no, this one is full of hope and ardor and promise that they will work together to try and make sure things are always like this, that they're never separated again. Adora feels the soft swell of Catra's lips pressing against them and tries to memorize the feeling and the safety it brings, the knowledge that after three long, brutal years of fighting they were able to carve their own little home in each other's hearts.

It can't last, though, and Catra pulls away, leaving behind a sentence fragment, a sketch without color, a sky without stars, things that only she can provide Adora. Their body is automatic, carrying them to the bathroom to recover a towel as Catra finishes stripping out of her clothes. It's not long before the two of them are clean enough to cuddle in bed, the promise of a shower something they can fulfill in an hour or two. Catra's purr finds its home in that familiar spot in Adora's heart, one that's reserved just for her girlfriend.

They want to say so many things to Catra, 'I'm so happy I get to spend the rest of my life with you', 'The universe only has meaning because you're in it', 'Your smile is more beautiful than every star in the sky, than every nebula and comet in the heavens', 'You are my entire world', 'Thank you. For everything.' Instead, though, Adora settles on something that can carry the message they want delivered better than anything else, the bottle that will carry their love safely to Catra's shoreline.

"I love you."

"I love you too."

Those four words are all Adora needs to hear to know that every mistake, every misstep, was worth it, because it brought Catra to them. Those four words are all Adora needs to know that they're safe, that they're loved, that no matter what they do or how often they fail, they're worth something.

And for the first time, they actually believe it.

End Notes

There are a few headcanons that I have for a post-canon Catra and Adora that showed up that I want to explore in later one-shots, but the big one is Adora's tattoos. Adora has never been given a choice in anything her whole life, so the idea of her choosing to permenantly mark her body in a specific way is fucking Amazing to me. She got the scars Catra (and Only Catra) gave her tattooed in gold, basically like the artform Kintsugi. Kintsugi is an artform that started with repairing broken potery and ceramics with lacquer that was then painted gold, to show that the broken parts and trauma of the breaking are something to be cherish and celebrated once they've healed, not shunned and hidden. I think that idea fucks really hard with how Adora would heal from her trauma, and also look fucking rad.

Also, an ENOURMOUS thank you to my ever present beta Ri for reading this over, as well Emilee for encouraging me while I was writing this!! If you haven't looked at their work, please go check it out!
