Love Is Truth

by LesbianSimp, Princess_Cyra

Summary

When you want information to take down She-Ra, who better to kidnap other than her partner? Surely giving her a truth potion will ensure you get all the answers you want. The only problem is that she'll say the truth, but it may not be the answers you want.

(OR)

All it takes is Catra getting kidnapped for everyone to find out that she's a massive simp.

Notes

Michaela's POV is written by Cyra, and Catra's POV is written by Kiki (LesbianSimp)!

Michaela's footsteps echoed in the halls of their dining room as she sauntered into the room, oozing confidence and power. Her subordinates were gathered around a chair, laughing and teasing the woman sitting on it when she pushed past them.

"Come on boys! Be nicer to our guest." Michaela grinned down at the guest in question. "She's royalty after all."

"Ugh, I'm not royalty just because I'm dating a princess." Catra scoffed, crossing one leg over the other as though she somehow had power in this situation.

"You are close to someone who's royalty, which is why you're here."

"You want to hold me for ransom? Honey, even a cooking vessel is worth more than me." Catra responded casually, leaning back against the chair while watching Michaela closely. It was almost like she was picking apart every one of her flaws, every worried thought, every small weakness. She was the Bright Moon Strategist for a reason, but Michaela knew how to work around her.

"You are worth nothing, I know, but the information you have about She-Ra is worth a lot. Do you know how much that would sell in the underground? People who want to take down your girlfriend will do anything for it."

Michaela saw it, the moment Catra's cool facade faltered at the mention of her girlfriend's possibility of danger. Try as she might, the feline wasn't as unreadable as she thought she was.

"Honestly, you're insane if you think I'll give up anything about Adora." The feline snarled, her voice bordering on dangerous. Michaela wasn't worried. The restraints they'd gotten Catra into completely covered up her palms, and it would be near impossible for Catra's claws to shred through them given the position she was in.

"Is that so? Francis!" She turned around to face her brother's husband. "Go fetch the potion."

As Francis scurried away to find the potion, Michaela turned to face Catra's confused expression.

"It's a truth potion darling. I came prepared." She promised with a dark grin as the feline's face fell at the realisation.

Francis returned with the potion gripped in his hand. "We'll need to hold her in place and have someone force feed it to her, or else it'll just spill everywhere." He reminded her.

"Ram! Kurt! Hold her down!" Michaela ordered, the two boys immediately grabbing Catra's hair and shoulders to hold her in place. Francis stepped over to the feline, forcing her mouth open and shoving the potion down her throat despite her protests.

The three of them pulled away from the feline once she'd consumed the potion, letting her gasp for air as the potion slowly did its work on her. Catra's eyes glazed over as she whined and shook her head, but Michaela was a patient person. She was ready to wait however long it took until this potion worked on Catra.

"She really does look like a cat…" Sven observed from the side. "I thought people were exaggerating all that."

"Yeah no shit she looks like a cat, she's called a magi*cat* for a reason Sven." Honestly, I work with idiots.

Michaela hadn't wanted this group, but when Mike married Francis, Ram, Kurt and Sven came as a package deal, which was great because they quite literally jacked, there was no eloquent way Michaela could say this. Unfortunately that came with the added bonus that they were so, so very stupid. Every day Michaela felt like she was losing more brain cells around them.

"Do you think she actually purrs like a cat?" Mike asked, wide eyed and curious as he eyed the dazed feline.

"I do, only for Adora though…" Catra slurred, eyes wide and cheeks lighting up with a blush when she realised what she just admitted.

"I-It's not in a weird way! Adora scratches my ears and I… I love it too even though I act like I don't. Wait no no, that still sounds weird. It helps me sleep- Oh goddamn it. She brushes through my hair, and it's so comforting, especially when she slightly scratches my scalp." The feline just kept on going, apparently lost in her own world, even her tail started to wag eagerly at the thought of her girlfriend.

"Well, well. Someone's being more honest than usual." Michaela teased, the rest of her crew laughing along as Catra rambled on about her girlfriend and her amazing ear scratches.

"Wait, let's ask one more thing, just to be sure." Francis added in, glancing suspiciously over at Catra. "What's something you hide from Adora?"

"Ugh… When we first started dating I- I would rub myself all over her clothes while she was in the shower… It's this thing called scent marking, I wanted everyone to know she was mine even when I wasn't around." Catra admitted, sounding like the words were being ripped out of her chest, ears drooping as her cheeks turned crimson to match her bodysuit.

"Looks like it works." Francis gave the feline a massive grin, walking over to stand beside Michaela so that the interrogation could really begin.

"So, during the war, you were She-Ra's archenemy right?" Francis asked, eyeing the feline closely for any changes in body language.

"I guess you could call us that, yeah." Catra responded with a shrug, tail swaying behind her leisurely.

“You were the one facing her most of the time?”

“I would actively seek her out, I liked the rush of fighting against her, it was so fun. She’d get so annoyed, and then she’d chase after me and I loved it, I love when her attention is all on me-”

“How did you hold your own against her?” Michaela cut in, too impatient for the snail’s pace Francis was going in.

“It wasn’t that hard. Adora always lets herself be swayed by her emotions, I just had to distract her to gain the upper hand. You won’t believe how easy it is to distract her. Yesterday we were wandering through the gardens and she-” Michaela groaned, covering Catra’s mouth with her hand.

“I don’t need the details of your relationship, as riveting as they may be.” Michaela deadpanned. “How did you distract her? Adora is a ridiculously focused person.” She asked before pulling her hand away.

“Adora’s very sensitive, the smallest things frustrate her. It was an endless source of joy when we were kids, she used to turn as red as a tomato when she was upset-” Michaela’s hand met the feline’s mouth again.

“Emotions, got it.” Is this worth it? She’s so whipped it's annoying. Michaela wanted to back out, but the information they were getting was good. Come on Michaela, you can pull through.

"Okay, what about her sword? Does it have any powers we should know of?" Francis asked, hands on his hips while Mike moved over to cuddle up into him. With a sigh, Michaela pulled her hand off.

"Yeah, she can turn it into whatever she wants, used to wear it as an armband but now she can call on it at will. She always gets so proud when she learns some new trick with her powers and her sword, its so stupid, but so cute every time, she's like a puppy-"

"Okay we're getting off topic. How does her magic work?"

"It lets her turn into an eight foot tall warrior princess, gives her insane looking muscles that have been part of my fantasies for years, and her hair turns into spun gold, so pretty, so soft, I want to knead it all the time. Don't get me started on her eyes, they're like jewels, so shiny, I swear I get hypnotised every time I see them-"

Catra squeaked when a piece of cloth was shoved into her mouth, Michaela groaning at some fucking peace.

"She sure can talk 'bout her lover." Ram added helpfully from the kitchen.

"Oh really? I had no fucking idea." She shot back, rubbing her forehead as she tried to calm down.

"Okay, maybe we should ask specific questions so that she won't go off on unrelated tangents." Mike suggested like the awesome brother he was.

"Good idea babe." Francis leaned forward to give him a quick forehead kiss, before turning to Catra and pulling out the cloth.

"Okay, where does her magic come from?" Michaela asked in a no nonsense tone.

"Her love for me, apparently."

"Fucking-"

"I'm not kidding! I went with her to the heart of Etheria, and she started dying there because of Prime's virus, and then I told her I loved her, and then she came back to life and then we made out and it was so amazing I felt like I was going to burst with joy. She was so pretty with her glowing hair and eyes, I wanted to watch her like that for the rest of my life-"

"God fucking damn it! I don't want to hear another word about your girlfriend's hair, or her eyes." She ordered the feline, but clearly, she wasn't catching a break today.

"But they're the best parts of her! Did you know they shine in the moonlight? Ugh, I want to write songs about her, she deserves nothing less than that."

Even though Catra's poetry was beautiful (it was not), Michaela shoved the cloth back into her mouth before turning around to bang her head into the wall.

"Here I thought Adora was the simp, you learn something new everyday." Sven chuckled, taking a seat on the dining table while grinning at Michaela.

"She needs to shut up." She declared, turning around to glare at Catra pointedly. The feline simply shrugged in response. Michaela stormed up to Catra, ripping the cloth out of her mouth before hissing, "I'm going to ask you a question, and you are going to give me a straight answer."

"Hm… That's going to be hard, I'm super gay for my girlfriend." Catra responded with a smug grin. Clearly, everyone in Michaela's crew were traitors, because they started to laugh at the feline's joke. She rounded on them, shooting the boys death glares until they either shrunk under her gaze or looked away.

"You know that's not what I meant."

"What a pity that you didn't specify."

"Okay look, I have a few more embarrassing questions laying around, so either you answer my questions or we'll be learning some fascinating things about you. Do you understand?"

Finally, Catra rolled her eyes, pouting at Michaela. “Yes ma’am.” She responded mockingly.

“Good. Now, tell me about her strengths.”

“Ugh, where do I start? Those muscles aren’t for show. This one time I was joking around about she should do push ups with me on her back and she fucking did it! Went on till like 100 I think, I don’t know I wasn’t counting, her back looked so good-”

“I was not talking about her physical strengths-”

“I could watch her work out all day and not get bored, she’s so hot, I used to get caught during the war just so that she’d slam me against a wall.”

“I can’t blame you honestly, I’d do it too.” Mike relented, nodding knowingly at Catra.

“See? He gets it! It’s only gotten better since she got that new transformation outfit. God I hope she never hears me saying this I’d never live it down.”

I’m considering telling her just so that you’d shut up!

“Okay, other than her physical strengths, what else does she have?” Francis asked, somehow calm despite the mountain of emotions festering in Michaela right now.

“Oh she’s so smart, an amazing strategist. The way she can come up with a plan leaves me breathless, I just want to make out with her every time, but we're in the meeting room and everyone gets annoyed whenever I do that because we're working. She's so brilliant, I can't focus around her and it's not fair that she gets to do that to me, her soft blonde hair and shiny blue eyes-"

"Honestly! Just shut up, no one is that perfect." Michaela yelled, utterly pissed off by how much this woman could talk about her lover.

"Hey! Adora is the most brilliant woman on Etheria, she's more than her stupid role as She-Ra, and I want to make sure everyone knows it!"

"Oh my god…" Francis mumbled to himself, walking out of the room. God if only Michaela could do that too.

"How can someone be so whipped?" She mumbled, mostly to herself, but nothing was lost to Catra's enhanced hearing.

"Have you seen her? Adora looks like a Greek goddess, and has a golden retriever personality to match. If I wasn't dating her, I would be so jealous of everyone who got that honor, because it is an honor. I honestly don't deserve her but she lets me in every day and I feel like I am being blessed by some higher power. She's my goddess, my angel and I love her so much."

"That love must be the reason why you stole her clothes back when you were cadets?" Michaela asked innocently.

"It was- Wait what?"

"Adora lost a few of her clothes. Shirts, socks, underwear. That was you, wasn't it?"

Catra seemed so torn, stuck between saving her dignity and spilling everything, but Michaela knew she'd admit it. "Y-Yeah… I was just starting off on my periods and I was feeling awful and I-I just needed some comfort…"

Michaela leaned down and grinned at the feline. "I told you, I could make you spill every depraved little thought in that head of yours Catra, so either you cooperate, or your beloved girlfriend finds out just how much of a freak you really are."

"Yeah no. This is ending right here."

Michaela whipped her head around, heart sinking when she realised who exactly spoke. Adora stood in the front, her sword glittering in her hands while the rest of the princess alliance took on battle positions.

"You take on the boys, the girl's mine." The blonde declared to her friends, glowing as she grew to eight feet tall. Behind her, Catra whimpered quietly.

It had not even been two minutes since the alliance had entered the home when it became clear to Michaela that she was completely unprepared to take on She-Ra. The blonde was fighting with the rage of a thousand dragons as though Michaela had cursed her entire bloodline. Just when She-Ra was about to smash her entire face, though, a voice caught everyone's attention.

"Oh stars above. This is something straight out of my teenage fantasies."

Everyone in the room turned to see Catra blushing worse than her crimson bodysuit, eyes wide as she processed the words that just left her mouth.

"That's it I want that cloth back in my mouth. No one needs to know about how pretty I think my girlfriend is with her shiny blonde hair and pretty blue eyes which look like oceans- I said that out loud didn't I." Scorpia nodded sympathetically while Catra just groaned in irritation.

That small distraction was enough for Adora to land a punch right on Michaela's face, enough to send her straight to the floor while the blonde ran to her lover, immediately removing her handcuffs.

"Okay guys I got her! Let's get out of here." She yelled to the rest of the alliance, who immediately dropped whatever they were doing and gathered together so that Glimmer could teleport them away.

By the time Michaela pushed herself up, she was utterly disoriented like the rest of her friends, head and body pounding.

God fucking damn it Catra!

A pair of blue eyes filled with worry locked hers, neither of them daring to look away or move. “Cat, are you alright?” Finally she stepped closer to her girlfriend, taking Adora’s hands into her own.

Her thumb drew small circles on her hand as she spoke. “I’m fine, Princess, at least… now that you’re here.”

The worry that had been consuming Adora finally seemed to slip away, even if only ever so slightly. A gentle smile made its way to her lips, a smile that was worth more than any information she could have ever given Michaela.

“It was worth it though, maybe I should get kidnapped more often. Especially if it means getting to see you kick ass like that, it was pretty hot.”

Adora chuckled at that, averting her eyes and looking at the beautiful sky above them that was being consumed by millions of tiny lights. “Stars, you had me worried, honey.”

“Yeah, maybe. But wouldn’t you say I’m worth it?”

“Absolutely.” She answered without hesitation. “I’m never letting you go again, though.”

“Two steps ahead of you, babe. Already found something to fix that.”

Fuck. Fucking fucks. Fucking truth postion.

The picnic near the old blossom tree, the song she had been practising on Bow’s lyre, the whole entire speech she had been practising in front of her mirror for weeks now. All of it for nothing, because she had been stupid enough to get kidnapped. Fucking Michaela.

If the bitch hadn’t gotten her ass handed to her already, she would have definitely found out Catra’s claws weren’t just for aesthetics.

“Cat… what do you mean by that?” Adora gently squeezed, frowning in a way that always created that cute furrow in between them.

“I was planning on proposing, bought a ring, practised a speech, planned a date. Everything.” This was not how she had wanted this to go.

Adora was staring at her with a shellshocked expression. For a moment they were completely silent, frozen in time, not a single person on Etheria but the two of them. Catra’s eyes followed Adora’s as they flickered down to her lips, and against her better judgement her own did the same. Those gorgeous peach coloured lips that she loved to kiss so much. The taste, the feeling of them on her own, and the way it would make her feel even more connected to Adora.

Catra hated the ocean, but she wouldn’t mind drowning in the blue of Adora’s eyes and the feeling of her lips on her own. “Are you serious?” It was said so softly that she doubted a human would be able to understand it.

“Yeah, dummy, can’t exactly lie with this truth potion in my system.”

She didn’t know how she had expected Adora to react, but it most certainly wasn’t by reaching into her pocket to fish a small box out of it. Even more surprising was that when she opened the box there was a beautiful ring inside it, small rubies adorning the top of it.

“Me too.”

All of Catra's world consisted of their hands touching, the way Adora was looking down at her, and soon after the way they both surged forward and their lips met in the middle. It wasn't urgent, or as intimate as the late night ones, but it was soft. Loving. As if they were both savouring every second of it.

When their lips did finally part, their hands still met in the middle. "I love you," She breathed softly against Adora's lips, eyes closed and mind still lost in the moment.

"I love you too, so much."

She let go of her lover's hands, only to move her arms around her waist to pull her body flush against her own. "So, will you marry me?"

"Yes, of course." She rested her forehead against Catra's, both of them closing their eyes in content.

"Aaaaw, aren't they just the cutest!" A high pitched voice said from behind them, the sentence filled with voicecracks.

Catra whipped her head around, looking at the two people that should know better than to call her that horrible word. "Shut up, Sparkles. Can't you see we're busy?"

Sparkles had the nerve to stick out her tongue at her as she crossed her arms over her chest. "Just get a room next time then."

"Sparkles." She warned with a slight hiss to her tone.

"Honestly it was about time one of you proposed. Especially considering how much Catra apparently loves Adora. I mean seriously, I didn't think someone could talk that much about their partner. I'm surprised they didn't rip their ears off."

"I'm gonna kill your friend." She said to Adora before looking back over to Sparkles, who was looking at her with a smug grin. But then she realised, "How did you know about that?!"

A few feet away from them Scorpia suddenly joined in on this embarrassing conversation. "Remember those spybots we had back in The Horde? Entrapta used one of those to get intel and spy on those dudes." Her whole demeanor suddenly shifted, turning from her usual happy self to an awkward variant of it. "So we heard most of the questions… and answers."

Fucking truth potion.

She groaned as she buried her face into Adora's neck. "I'm never going to live that down, am I?"

An amused chuckle escaped Adora, as she combed through Catra's hair with her fingertips. "No, probably not. But it was pretty cute."

"I'm not-" She scratched ever so slightly behind Catra's ears, resulting in the little protest Catra was about to give her washing away completely. "Whatever…" She mumbled into her soon to be wife's neck.
