Adora roared as she slashed down with her sword against Catra, the felid dodging it expertly. Today she wasn't going to hold anything back, knowing that she was easily going to defeat her girlfriend. After all, Adora had the full power of She-Ra on her side, giving herself more than enough of an advantage over Catra.

However, despite She-Ra's size and strength, Catra was nimble and agile, easily flipping and darting out of the way of Adora's sword strikes. She had to smirk as she effortlessly leapt off Adora's own sword blade and onto a nearby ledge above the small rocky canyon near Brightmoon where they were sparring.

While Etheria was obviously at peace, Adora and Catra still loved to spar and train together, bringing back some of the few good memories they had as kids growing up in the Horde. Plus, Adora was dying to test out the limits of her new She-Ra powers, especially after absorbing the Heart of Etheria.

But even with her new power boost, it seemed that Catra was still able to keep up with her and land the most blows. Was Adora that surprised? Not really. Catra could practically read her like a book.

"C'mon, Adora, at least try to make this hard for me!" Catra teased. “You’re still very predictable.”

"Not my fault you know me like the back of your hand!" Adora snarked back, slashing her sword at Catra again, cleaving a nearby boulder in two.

Catra just leapt back, a cocky smirk on her face. "Yeah, meaning I know the precise way to kick your butt... but I hate things being easy for me, so at least try to give me a challenge!" She then leapt up the nearby rockface, clinging to it with her claws, giving herself the high ground.

"Oh, I've got a few things in mind!" Adora boasted, as she then punched the rock wall with so much force, the whole thing cracked and shook. A massive shockwave went up the rock wall, sending parts of it falling to the ground… along with Catra, who quickly lost her grip, yelping as she plummeted to the earth.

Fortunately, like all cats, Catra landed on her feet, but she was caught off guard as Adora managed to bash her with her elbow, knocking her backwards. Catra grunted in pain, finally standing up straight. She dodged another slash from Adora's sword, grabbing onto the blade and then leaping up and trying to kick her girlfriend in the face.

But Adora had now gotten the upper hand, as she grabbed Catra and tossed her into the opposite wall, transforming her sword into a golden cage that sealed itself around Catra.As Adora pinned Catra to the wall in the cage, she let out a haughty, smug laugh. Catra just growled, grabbing the bars of the cage, unable to free herself.

"Hah!" Adora declared. "Wow, Catra, I can't believe you fell for that a second time!"

"Ugh, not fair," Catra groaned, before her ears pricked up and she gave Adora a look of confusion. "Wait what? The heck do you mean a second time?"

"Don't you remember? We fought in the Crimson Waste and I pinned you in a cage just like this to distract you while Perfuma and Bow stole Mara's ship from you and the Horde. It was like... one of our best fights! You gotta remember that one!"

Catra blinked before it finally clicked in her head. "Ohhhhhhh oh that fight!" Then, the felid suddenly burst out laughing. "BAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA.... oh my stars, I can't believe it... you are such an idiot! A grade-A dumb idiot!

"Uh what's so funny?" It was now Adora's turn to be confused.

"You thought... you were fighting me... when you were actually.... AHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!" Catra kept laughing, as Adora retracted the cage and Catra slipped to the floor... and was soon rolling on her back still laughing her head off. Clearly, this was the funniest thing in the entire world to her.

Adora started to laugh as well, slightly nervously at first but soon just as much as Catra was. "Okay, I don't know what's so funny, but honestly, this is kinda funny!"

Catra eventually calmed down and caught her breath. "Okay, to be honest, maybe I shouldn't tell you. Maybe it's better if you don't know the truth!"

The blonde smirked. "Oh really now?"

"Yeah, because honestly, it's fun to mess with you."

"Come on, Catra, you can tell me!" Adora insisted.

"Nahhhh… I don't wanna."

"Not even for this cute face?" Adora replied, pulling the most adorable face she possibly could, eyes wide with awe and love. But even that wasn't enough to phase her girlfriend.

"Okay, maybe I will tell you... if you can catch me first!" Catra declared, before leaping back onto her feet and sprinting down the canyon path, climbing to the side of the opposite rock face and scaling it with her claws. As she climbed to the top, Adora leapt the tall cliff in a single bound, chasing her along the grassy plain at the top.

Catra headed towards some nearby trees, leaping into their tall branches. She sprinted between them, doing her best to keep ahead of Adora. She climbed to the top of the tallest tree, hoping that even Adora wouldn't be able to get to her from this height. She smirked. It looked like the secret was going to stay hers.

But Catra had spoken too soon, as suddenly, a golden lasso, formerly Adora's sword, wrapped around her leg. Catra yelped, as the lasso was then yanked from below, pulling Catra down from her great height. She let out a cry, before she was then safely caught in Adora's muscular arms.

The felid blushed, feeling embarrassed. "That was cheating."

"You know you like it here," Adora said with her signature smug face, making Catra turn even redder.

Looking away, Catra sighed, giving in. "Okay, okay, dummy, you wanna know what I found so funny? Well, that fight you were going on about... you never actually fought me in the Crimson Waste."

"What... But that had to be you!" Adora exclaimed. "Like it was totally you. It acted like you, fought like you, talked like you."

"Yeah, Double Trouble is a hell of an actress aren't they?" Catra said with a smirk. "That was their little audition. I can't believe how easily they fooled you."

" That was Double Trouble?!" Adora's jaw dropped. "I… woah… I…" Adora put Catra down, before she groaned and facepalmed in frustration. "Oh, that makes so much sense now! I knew they had joined you at some point but… oh for crying out loud, I am so, so, stupid! I even used your 'it was fun distracting you line' back at them… and it wasn't even the real you!"

Her girlfriend laughed. "Yeahhhh... sorry to burst your bubble there, Princess."

"Man, this sucks," Adora grumbled. "I was honestly kinda proud about that fight."

Catra just chuckled, walking away. "Well, Princess, if it'll cheer you up, next time we're in the Crimson Waste.... how about I break out my old outfit and we can have a proper rematch there. That way, we'll see if you really can beat me."

"Oh I can always beat you!" Adora argued in her usual teasing way, transforming back to her regular self. "I could beat you blindfolded, both hands tied behind my back, hopping on one foot.”

“So could a lot of people, you aren’t special,” Catra snarked. “And besides, when we fight I have to go easy on you don't I?”

"You? Go easy on me? The most powerful woman in the universe? Get real."

"I mean, let's face it, my girlfriend is the hero of the whole universe! I can't exactly have her going around every day covered in bruises and scars now can I? People would start talking!”

"Oh we'll see who gets bruised up next time we spar," Adora said with a cocky smirk.

"Yeah we'll see, won't we," Catra teased back, before she and Adora kissed, before she grabbed Adora’s hand again. “Race you back home?”

“You’re on!” Adora agreed, before Catra sprinted off and she chased after her.
