We are hosting a party! Or are we not?

by Series_Shipper

Summary

The end of the year was approaching and Mystacor had decided to host the New Year's Eve party, or had they not? Either way chaos ensues.

Notes

Hello hello. So motivation is back and while going through my docs of fics I noticed that I never actually posted my fic that was my entry for the Spop Icebreaker Zine that happened in the Spop Creative Flex server for 2025's end of the year so why not post it now I guess lol.

Enjoy

"No,no,no." Castaspella sighed. "The garlands were supposed to be red not pink." She exclaimed with an another sigh accompanied by a quick massage to her temples. "No,no,no. Hang them, we don't have time to finds new ones!" Castaspella explained to the already tired acolytes. Everyone living in Mystacor knew the place was going overboard in decorations every New Year's Eve however this year with the new year's eve's party taking place in Mystacor everything was two times overboard than last year. "A little bit to the left. No the right. Wait..." Castaspella was saying before a voice spoke.

"What exactly are you doing?"

"Ah Light Spinner! I need your opinion, to the left or to the right?" Castaspella asked rushing to Light Spinner's side who just raised her eyebrow.

"What if I said, I couldn't care less." She deadpanned making Castaspella roll her eyes.

"This is your kingdom!" Castaspella scoffed.

"Yes and I think we already have more than enough decorations already." Light Spinner announced looking around the hall for good measurement. "Who even declared you the manager of the decorations? Because I certainly didn't." Light Spinner challenged with a hidden smirk under her veil but Castaspella didn't need to see it to know it was there.

"Technically I did…" She started, earning a hum from Light Spinner. "However, come on everyone has to do their part so this whole thing doesn't flop so it was only natural I took the deal for the decorations don't you think?" Castaspella explained yet the only thing she managed was to make Light Spinner even more confused. What was she talking about?

"Wh-"

"First Ones! Where are the fairy lights? We don't have all day!" The younger sorcerer continued frustrated.

"They will be delivered in a few hours." The acolyte relied tired.

"Hours!? Then what am I doing here!? Norwyn said- I can't believe this!" Castaspella sighed.

"What did he do now?"

"Well he- Actually I will tell you later. I am already late-"

"Late to what?" Light Spinner asked still confused and by now a bit indignant too. This was her kingdom as Castaspella claimed yet she could get no answer and what was happening here.

"Will explain later." Castaspella exclaimed, practically ignoring Light Spinner and running down to hall.

"Get back here!" She demanded yet was once again ignored.

"Light Spinner." Or so she thought…

"Norwyn." Light Spinner greeted turning her back to face him.

"Morning. The decorations are fantastic don't you think? Castaspella has done an excellent job. She overdid herself once again." Norwyn started praising Castaspella which earned a roll of Light Spinner's eyes.

"Yes, yes, whatever, they are great." She dismissed with a wave of her hand. Yet before she could continue and try to figure out what was happening, another acolyte showed up with a huge box on his arms.

"Where shall we deliver this?"

"Ohhhh, are those the new cookbooks we ordered?" Norwyn asked happily making Light Spinner even more confused who could do nothing but raise her eyebrow at him.

"Yes"

"Fantastic, put them in the kitchen. Thank you." Norwyn smiled at the acolyte who immediately got to work.

"You are finally trying to learn how to cook?" Light Spinner teased him with a smirk.

"Are you insulting my cooking skills Light Spinner?" Norwyn scoffed while crossing his arms.

"I would never." Light Spinner exclaimed placing a hand on her heart as if offended at the accusing before continuing. "Seriously what is happening?"

"What's happening?" Norwyn mimicked her question clearly confused.

"What is all this?" and for emphasis she pointed around the hall.

"Decorations?…" Norwyn asked looking more confused than ever which in that moment only angered Light Spinner.

"Oh, really? That's so helpful and here I thought they were dogs!" Light Spinner exclaimed trying to sound shocked before glaring at Norwyn.

"Hilarious…" Norwyn muttered under his breath before spotting another acolyte. "Are those the fireworks?" Norwyn yelled from across the room, gesturing at the boxes the acolyte was carrying who just nabbed at Norwyn making him bead. "Magnificent!" He let out, giving a small clap for good measurement. "Leave them outside and will take care of them, thank you." He continued, the acolyte nodding in return.

"Fireworks?" Light Spinner raised her eyebrow at him.

"Well, of course. They are very eye catching you see."

"Fireworks? Eye catching? Who would have thought?!" She continued in the same mocking tone earning a quick chuckle from Norwyn.

"While it's truly a pleasure to talk to you," He said with a tone that made him sound anything but pleased at the moment. "I have matters to attend. I am sure Castaspella must have filled you in with the details so I will see you around." Norwyn concluded and immediately made a leave with urgently ignoring once again Light Spinner.

"Actually she hasn't!" She yelled after him yet that did nothing to stop him and she continued mostly to herself than anyone else. "The disrespect! In my own kingdom nonetheless!" And she huffed.

"Castaspella!" Norwyn exclaimed when he spotted the young woman who immediately turned to him from across the gardens after being addressed.

"Norwyn." She acknowledged with a nob, standing now in front of him.

"Why is the Christmas tree undecorated?" He asked and gestured to the 'naked' tree.

"Oh, that's Light Spinner responsibility remember?"

"Still doesn't answer my question on why it's undecorated."

"Well, how am I supposed to know? I have been running around all day!"

"Can you find her?"

"Light Spinner?"

"Obviously"

"Can't you see I am busy?" Castaspella asked trying to sound as polite as someone who has drank three cups of coffee by noon trying to set the decorations can.

"Well, so am I." Norwyn returned in a similar tone making Castaspella sigh.

"Norwyn, really, if I could I would. Why don't we check again in a little while I am sure she is on her way here." Castaspella tried to reason with a very obvious forced smile that surprisingly worked.

"Alright, but if it looks the same in a few hours you get her."

"Sure." Castaspella agreed relieved to go back to her own problems.

Unfortunately for both of them, Light Spinner completely oblivious never showed up and the tree stayed the same…

"Light Spinner!!!" Castaspella yelled furious from across the greenhouse where Light Spinner was sitting, not a single worry in her mind if her expression was anything to go by and it took everything from Castaspella not to start screaming right then and there. First Ones, she has been running around all day just for Light Spinner to be sitting here!?

"No need to yell." Light Spinner shot back clearly interested and continuing to tend to her flowers and that's what made Castaspella actively lose composure for the first time today.

"No need to yell!? No need to yell!? Yes I will yell!!! I HAVE BEEN RUNNING AROUND SINCE FUCKING MORNING FOR THIS STUPID PARTY AND YOU HAVE JUST BEEN SITTING HERE DOING NOTHING?!" Castaspella let out, indignant as ever.

"I am sorry?" Light Spinner asked, confused on what exactly she meant by all that.

"Oh yes you better be!"

"Sorry?"

"Yes, what else!?"

"I really don't understand-"

"What is there you don't understand!? Norwyn gave you a list of responsibilities and you have done nothing while I-"

"Norwyn has what?" Light Spinner raised her eyebrow again.

"Given you a list." Castaspella said slowly as if Light Spinner was a toddler of some sorts and couldn't understand simple sentences.

"I can assure you he gave me no list." Light Spinner concluded and finally looked up at Castaspella, leaving her flowers behind and focusing all her attention to Castaspella who widened her eyes and looked even more indignant than before yet thank First Ones this time it wasn't addressed to her.

"He didn't?" Castaspella asked trying to sound calm even though she was sure her voice and stance had already betrayed her.

"No. And what party are you talking about?"

"Is this a messed up joke?" She asked her eyes widened as she finally started catching up with what might actually have happened and why Light Spinner had looked so confused this morning.

"No?…"

"You know about the party." She stated rather than asked.

"Do I?" Light Spinner asked trying to be humorous and failing if Castaspella's expression was anything to go by.

"The party." Castaspella repeated. "The New Year's Eve-"

"The WHAT-"

"The New Year's Eve party that Norwyn asked if we could host." Castaspella concluded and this time Light Spinner was the shocked one, eyes widened and all.

"He never asked me anything!?" Light Spinner exclaimed furious while quickly standing up.

"So, you don't know about the party?"

"Oh, I don't know what do you think!?" Light Spinner hissed while starting to walk away in search of Norwyn. Oh he had SO MUCH explaining to do.

"Seriously you don't know?" Castaspella asked again, following behind her, trying to catch up.

"No! I was with your brother in Bright Moon. I literally came back yesterday night, you know that!"

"I do… I just assumed you knew…" Castaspella murmured finally caught up with Light Spinner who just hummed before finally spotting Norwyn just getting out of the buildings and in the gardens where he was greeted by a screaming Light Spinner.

"PARTY!? YOU ARE HOSTING A FULL BLOWN PARTY IN MY KINGDOM WITHOUT MY FUCKING PERMISSION!?" Light Spinner yelled and Castaspella could swear that the whole of the island must have heard her…

"I am what now?" Norwyn asked confused and slightly frightened yet refusing to actually show it.

"You fucking heard me Norwyn."

"I- I have done no such thing."

"Oh really!?" Light Spinner snapped her patience running short.

"You… You mean to tell me you had no idea about the party?." Norwyn asked shocked and confused at the same time making him look like a deer caught in headlights.

"No I am just joking- Why is everyone asking me stupid questions today!?"

"I thought you knew!" Norwyn exclaimed after coming to his senses again.

"How!?"

"By Castaspella?"

"You were the one you claimed we are hosting a party!?" Castaspella asked confused and annoyed at Norwyn.

"Yes but I thought-"

"Well apparently you think too much yet too little at the same time." Light Spinner let out and after a second concluded "Both of you."

"No, you don't get to blame-" Castaspella started yet was interrupted by Light Spinner.

"No, I am not doing this right now. We have a party to host after all so better to finally finish up with the preparations, don't you agree?" She asked, with fake sweetness in her voice. "So, glad we all agree." She concluded before anyone had the actual change to answer and teleported away not letting them argue.

"I think we did a pretty good job, right?" Castaspella asked hours completely drained of all strength. Who knew decorating could be that hard…

"More than a good job. Honestly we could have gotten away with less stuff." Light Spinner said rolling her eyes and on the sight of seeing Castaspella open her mouth she concluded. "Everything does look pretty though." And hearing that Castaspella smiled.

"Yeah…" Castaspella let out with a sigh and after a few moments of silence Light Spinner let out.

"Let's never host a party ever again."

"Light Spinner!" Castaspella laughed.

"Actually, no, we will not for a fact host ever again."

"Spin…" Castaspella chuckled

"I am not discussing this."

"But-"

"No" Light Spinner let out and started walking away Castaspella immediately following.

"First Ones Light Spinner!"

"No-"

"Spin!"

"I am not changing my mind!"

"Ugh!"

Fortunately or unfortunately, to some people's dismay, Mystacor hosted the next year's party too.
