Welcome to Brightmoon's Favorite precinct!

Notes

PLEASE READ THE TAGS FIRST

okay you guys, this is my first fic EVER... pls tell me everything you think of this!
(you don't really need to watch B99 to read this, but if you did, you're going to be more familiar with things and that's great)

ENGLISH IS NOT MY MOTHER LANGUAGE, EXCUSE ANY ERRORS PLEASE!

I might make this a series, bcuz i absolutely love brooklyn 99 and SPOP, and i wanted to combine my two comfort shows!

Everyone here is kind of out of character, due to them being inspired by B99! Also, Adora is not latina, unlike Amy Santiago.

See the end of the work for more notes

introductions - pilot

Catra had a lot of hobbies, that totally includes drawing at the meeting room's table while Sergeant Ash talks about something, something, new captain, yada yada…

"Dismissed" As soon as the magic words fell out of Scorpia's mouth, Catra was out of that boring thing.

When she sat down at the table and suddenly, the light reflecting in her snow globe from some place in Northern Reach was obscured by something. She looked up and saw…

"Hey Adora" she said with an automatic smug tone and smirk.

"Hey, you heard anything about the new captain?" Catra could sense the woman was kinda nervous, but she decided to ignore that.

"Uh, no, and I don't care" she gave Adora a tight smile.

Adora raised an eyebrow at her, with a not-so-surprised look and Catra took that as a hint to explain why.

"I just wish Captain Greene never left, he was the best." she said kinda sad, Joe Greene was awesome…

"He was terrible. You just liked him because he let you do anything you wanted." Adora crossed her arms in her chest, obviously annoyed.

"Yeah, he was super dope, he let us do a fire extinguisher roller chair derby" Catra remembered her and Glimmer sitting on roller chairs with fire extinguishers pointing to the floor in front of them while everyone at the precinct watched them race, rolling backwards. She won, obviously.
"What's your point?"

“I need a good mentor, I need my rabbi, that’s why I couldn’t stand that old doofus.” Adora rolled her eyes, gesticulating with her hands, something she does whenever she’s anxious or distressed. Catra knows because they’ve been working together for 4 years, nothing else.

“Sorry, princess… But this new Captain is going to be another washed-up pencil pusher who is only concerned with” she inhaled “Following every rule in the patrol guide. Meep Morp Zeep. Robot Captain engage” she said with her best robot voice and hands.

“Is that what you think?” came an unfamiliar voice from behind her, she’s screwed…

“He-hey! New Captain alert hahah” She forced a laugh, hoping someone would join her “You must be the new C.O. I’m detective Catra Lima, great to meet you.” she opened her mouth in a super exaggerated smile, her cheeks hurt.

“No, no, don’t let me interrupt. You were describing what kind of person I am going to be, please proceed.” the captain requested her to finish… If only a sniper would finish her life right now…

“That’s not necessary…” Captain robot wasn’t going to let her go that easily, so… “Alright, let me do a quick recap, I think I said something about you being a washed-up pencil pusher-”

“Now do the robot voice.” Damn, they weren't backing down…

Catra wanted to die, someone please end her. She looked around the precinct and everyone (even the perps) were staring at her. “Meep Morp… Zarp.” she even did the robot hands, it’s gotta be over!

“The next time I see you I’d like you to ditch the sweater” They started to walk away.

“Actually, the other captain didn’t care if we wore sweaters, so…” that’s right, #TEAMGREENE4EVER. Period.

“Well, you new Captain does, so…” they said with a mocking tone. “And more importantly, she cares that you follow her direct orders.” she turned to everybody.

“Everyone, I'm your new Captain, Netossa Jones.” Netossa said with her usual poker face.

“Speech!” Adora said enthusiastically, poor thing, always wanting to be the teacher’s pet.

“That was my speech” Captain Jones said like it was the most obvious thing in history.

“Short and Sweet.” Adora said, nodding her head slowly, wanting to applaud, but she knew limits and wanted to be cautious. Catra just rolled her eyes.

Adora turned to Catra, sighing but smiling, not anxious anymore “I love that guy” Catra’s eyes went wide, is she serious right now?

“Same!” Catra responded sarcastically.

“He’s so suave,” Mermista entered the chat “Does anyone gat a little bit of a gay vibe?” she narrowed her eyes, but no one said a thing. “No? Okay, but mind you my Gaydar never fails, never.” okay yeah, she was kinda scary sometimes, not that Catra was intimidated.

“Pfft, never?” now Glimmer is here!

“Nuh-uh baby girl, I can tell everyone’s sexuality here.” Mermista said smugly. "Let's see, Scorpia is a big ol’ lesbian, Catra is very much homosexual”

“Amen” Catra had already sat down by this point, she wasn’t getting younger.

“Bow, Sean, Glim and I are Bicons and Adora is 100% gay, if I had a mic now, I’d drop it.” Catra was… Well, shock is the best word for what she was feeling right now.

“You’re gay!?” she turned to Adora, which by the way, looked very confused by Catra’s reaction.

“Uh, yeah? I thought everyone knew, I’m not trying to hide at all, in fact I've been out since I was fifteen” Adora smiled.

“Oh okay, it’s just you seemed the Little Miss Perfect type, you know? With all that straight A’s, straight girl shit” she crossed her arms and leaned back in her chair.

“Yeah” Adora decided to go back to work on her computer.

Catra got up from her chair to go get some water, she filled her cup and sat at the little table that was in the area.

“You liked knowing that, didn’t you?” the next thing she knew, there was water coming out of her nose.

“Shit, Bow!” she said, coughing and tearing up. Adora must’ve heard it because she was looking right at her, smugly, because why not?

She gave Adora a thumbs up and the blonde girl raised both her eyebrows, lips in a thin line and got back to work.

Catra turned to Bow and glared at him “Literally why would you do that?”

“Come on Catra, you know what I’m talking about!” Bow pouted slightly.
“I see the way you look at Adora, you like her”.

“Are you out of your mind? Of course not.” Catra said furrowing her eyebrows and glaring daggers at her colleague.

“Don’t fool yourself, Catra” Bow said, walking away to his desk.

“How will I “Fool myself” if it’s not true?” she didn’t realize she was practically screaming when she saw Bow waving both of his hands down.

“So, Sergeant Ash, tell me about your squad.” Captain Jones said, leaning back in her chair, crossing her hands together in front of her.
“Alright.” Scorpia, cleared her throat.

“Sean Hawkings, or as everyone calls him: Sea Hawk, is a bit too much, but he’s fearless most of the time and we think he’s a pyromaniac.” She points to the man who is bothering Mermista with some shanty. He is 5 '11” , has purple hair and a ridiculously comic mustache.

“Glimmer Takahashi, although the pink and purple hair, pastel clothes and decorated desk, she is savage, she might even scare you a bit.” Glimmer has a short, fluffy pixie cut and is 5’1”.

“Bow Petersen, very kind, good detective, he’s scared of pretty much everything, makes dope food and is dating Glimmer for about 5 years now.” The said man is making coffee for himself, has a fresh afro taper fade cut and is about Sean’s height.”

“Adora Pritchett, she’s very competitive and a try-hard, due to her having a twin brother, Adam. Great detective.” Scorpia watched as Adora wrote something on her notepad and rested the tip of the pencil on her lips. Adora is 5’7”. “Her and Catra have this bet going on since last year, their numbers are getting higher and higher everyday.”

“Tell me about Catra” Netossa said, looking over at the detective.

“Catarina Lima, or Catra, is my best detective, she likes putting away bad guys and she loves solving puzzles… The only puzzle she hadn't solved was how to grow up.” The Sergeant looked at the 5'6" woman that was... Playing with some police toy.

"That'll be all, thank you" Netossa straightened in her chair.

"Oh God…" Adora's leg was shaking under the table. "I wonder if he said something about me"

"Dora, calm down, I bet he just wanted to know the squad better" Bow gave her a gentle smile, she felt a little better.

Adora heard a scoff coming from the desk that was built in with hers, and she saw Catra playing with some police action figure.

"Are you afraid you're going to lose that bet and embarrass yourself in front of Captain Jones?" Catra smiled smugly at her and rested her head in her left hand that was propped up on the table.

"It's pitiful seeing you think I'm gonna lose, prepare yourself honey" Adora said picking at her nails.

Catra just laughed, after all, Adora's hope is pretty adorable (no pun intended).

"We'll find that out tomorrow, princess" she looked at the clock on the wall and got up "Goodnight" and with that, she left the precinct, she had to go home to prepare herself for tomorrow

Date Night

“Detective.” Catra was standing about two feet away from Adora in the middle of the precinct. She was going to have some fun today.

“Detective.” Adora had a smirk forming at the corner of her mouth, looking pretty confident.

“The bet ends today, are you ready?” Catra put both hands in her pockets.

“I was born ready-” Adora didn’t even get to finish her sentence.

“To lose? The whole question was if you were ready to lose and you said you were born that way” Catra shrugged and grinned at the blonde girl.

“Twist my word all you want”

“Okay.”

“I am winning this bet” Catra just kept slowly shaking her head, Adora knew she was trying to get in her nerves.

“What bet? What are you guys talking about?” Sea Hawk asked with confused eyes. Seriously that guy only cares about fire and Mermista.

“Seriously? the bet? They’ve been keeping score all year. What are you doing all day?” Glimmer furrowed her eyebrows and stared at Sea Hawk with pure doubt.

“Fire. Why, wanna join?” Sea Hawk seemed satisfied with his answer and smiled proudly. At least he’s fearless..?

“A year ago today, Catra and I made a bet to prove who is the best detective” The latina pointed to herself from behind Adora.

Apparently, Adora sensed that and rolled her eyes, “Whoever makes more felony arrests, wins.” Adora remembered this day like it was last week.

Almost everybody at the precinct was in the meeting room, just to see what the fuss was all about.
“What are the stakes?” Adora said it out loud, staring Catra in the eye, her hands at her waist. “And don’t say money because I know you’re in debt.” Mermista raised her eyebrows as her lips formed an ‘o’ shape and her hands went to her mouth in a fist form.

“First, princess, if you really know anything about me, you would’ve said “crushing debt” and I’ll bet whatever, ‘cause there is now way I’m losing.” Catra was sitting at the top of a table and crossed her arms.

“What about your car?” Glimmer smirked at Catra. That pink glittery gnome really pisses her off…

“Oh!” Adora liked that suggestion, thanks Glim, remind me of buying you a corndog later. She turned to Catra, waiting for an answer.

“That thing is a date magnet. I mean, how many girls have you made out with in that car, wildcat?” Scorpia looked oddly worried for Catra. First, it's nonsense because no way in hell she’s gonna lose. And second, it’s kinda weird that Scorpia cared about her love life...Anyways.

“Well, I’m gonna win, so sure.” Catra looked at the blonde girl. “Let’s bet the car.” Everyone oohs at Catra’s agreement.

“Yes!” Adora smiled, with teeth and everything, shaking her head slowly at her. Catra grinned.

“No! Wildcat, no!” Catra was extremely confused. “That car is your superpower.” Scorpia had eyes as wide as saucers right now. “Thor would never wager his hammer! Losing that car will be the worst thing in the world to you.”

Mermista looked at Adora, “Well what’s the worst thing in the world for you, Schmidt?” Adora cringed.

“Ugh, being one of those girls in Catra’s car.” Excuse me? That girl is just lying to herself, every single girl in that had a magical evening, thank you very much.

“Okay, okay, okay” Bow intervened. “Then it is settled. If Catra loses, Adora gets his car. And if Adora loses, she goes on a ate in said car.”
“Game on.” Catra got up from the desk and shook Adora’s hand. She had soft hands.

“Game on.” Adora took Catra’s hand.

“Wow, your handshake is quite firm.” Catra muses.

“I took a seminar.” What..?

And now the score is all tied up.” Adora said in a kinda sultry voice, and went to her desk.

“But not for long. For in eight hours I will win the bet and take Adora on the worst date ever.” Adora just smiled at Catra.

“ After today’s shift, I’d like everyone to join me at the bar for drinks in honor of detective Sean Hawkings’ medal of valor.” Sea Hawk visibly cringed at the use of his full name.

“Captain, you can call me Sea Hawk!” He smiled and puffed his chest out.

Last week, Sea Hawk got several burns during a mission and received a medal of valor. In his lower regions… He got first to second degree burns in his tooshie and Mini Hawk (yes, that’s what he calls his thing).

Netossa entered her office again. Catra and Adora looked at eachother. They both got up as fast as they could to run to the Captain’s office, obviously with the same request in mind.

“Pen!” Catra threw her pen at the girl and ran. “You- Ow!” Adora cringed and got up, but Catra was faster.

“Rolly chair!” Catra threw a freaking rolling chair at her. Oops. “Mermista’s Desk!” Now Mermista is included in this, “Oh, Catra.” Mermista whined and furrowed her brows.

“No!” Adora couldn’t get to Netossa first. Stupid Catra.

Catra closed the door and the blinds with a mocking pout at Adora. It feels so good to win.

“Captain, hey!” Catra was panting, “You’re looking stoic today, like a wise old oak.” Netossa saw Adora shaking her head at the sight. She already knew what this race was all about.

“I’m not gonna give you more cases so you can beat Adora.” Always expressionless… Catra wasn’t wrong about the robot thing.

“What? Oh, right, the bet.” She chuckles, trying to convince Netossa. “Totally forgot about that.” Netossa looked unimpressed.

“Well, it’s true that the bet led you and Schmidt to put in more hours and arrest more perps. Especially last week.” Catra remembered Adora walking past her desk, on the phone with 311 asking what’s the safest way to set a car on fire. Her car.

“I appreciate your hard work, detective” Netossa leaned back in her chair.

“Yes, and I can see by the way your face is showing no signs of emotion.” Catra grinned. “However, you are colleagues, and this bet might risk your professional relationship.” Netossa explained.

“Only if I lose.” Catra rested her hands on her hips. Really? That woman is made of stone…

“You are dismissed.” Netossa opened the drawer and got her reading glasses out.

Yeah, there’s no chance. Catra opened the door for Adora and gesticulated with her hand for her to enter.Adora glared at her.

“Hey, captain-” Adora said entering the office.

“No.” Alright.

Adora entered the precinct with a cuffed, confused looking perp and out of breath.

“People, I present to you Tung Lashor, who stole $3,000. Adora takes the lead with one minute left!” She glances at the clock on the wall. “Suck it, Catra.” She smiles and points aggressively at said detective.

“Oh, no.” Catra says, bemused.

“That’s Right, “Oh, no.” … Oh, no. You don’t seem worried” Adora’s eyes went wide, “Why aren’t you worried?”

“Bring in the Johns!” Catra turned her head to the right. Adora looked gobsmacked as a bunch of men entered the precinct.

“I ran a prostitution sting through vice and arrested thirty guys for soliciting.” Catra smiled.

“That’s not a felony!” Adora pointed at her, clearly desperate. Poor, sweet Adora.

“It is when it’s your second offense, which is the case of ten of these gentlemen.” Catra looked smug, “Fun fact: four of them are actually named John.” Catra looked around. “Anyhoo, ten more for mama here. Accept your fate” She looked at the watch on her wrist.

“Never” Adora’s hair was messy at this point.

“Five…” Catra looked around to make sure everyone was paying attention.

“No.” Adora wanted to cry.

“Four, three, two, one.” Adora was shaking her head. Why did she have to bet her dignity?

“Catra wins, Adora looses.” She walked over to her desk and pressed a button on a little radio that was there and it started to play ‘Celebration - Kool & the Gang’.

Sea Hawk popped a colorful confetti popper and Catra turned the whiteboard where the score was written and there it was… ‘CATRA WINS’, written on the board in gigantic letters and in red marker. “Look!” Catra pointed to the board and Adora just stood there, contemplating her life choices.

Catra walked- danced over to where Adora was standing and got on one knee.

“Adora Pritchett, you have made me the happiest woman alive.” She opened a little heart shaped red box “I’ve spent one whole dollar on this ring. Will you go on the worst date ever with me?” Catra smiled, “You have to say yes.”

Adora wanted to run and throw herself off a window. “Yes…”

Everyone cheered and applauded. “She said yes!” Catra tossed the box with the ring inside to Adora.

Catra honked her car’s horn and exited it. “Adora Pritchett, date time!” She saw the door to Adora’s house open and the girl put her head out.

“Catra, this outfit is ridiculous.” She said, maybe hoping Catra would have pity on her. “Chop Chop.” She was wrong.

“There’s plenty of embarrassing to do in only a few hours to do it in.” She smiled.

Adora sighed and got out of her apartment, closed the door and looked over to Catra. “Happy?” She was wearing a ridiculous red dress that felt like it was made with plastic wrapping and a gigantic bow at the back.

“Oh, yeah. You look like every girl at every sweet fifteen party I ever had a crush on.” It wasn’t that bad… Well, Adora couldn’t look bad at almost anything, just saying… “Let’s see the bow!” She couldn’t help but chuckle. “Just like Bianca Alves. Why do I wish you had braces? Should we get you braces? ”Adora’s eyes go wide. Oh, no. This was the end. “Nah, that’s too much.” Phew…

“Here I come.” Catra walks over to the other side of the car to open the door for her date. “Nice shorts.” Catra looked at herself and sees a suit top with an undone tie but instead of the bottom of the outfit, khaki shorts.

“Thanks,believe it or not, they weren’t expensive.” Catra crosses her hands behind her back.

“Do I really have to wear this all night?” Adora was very uncomfortable.

“You know the rules, darling. The date starts now and ends at midnight, I decide what you wear, what you eat and where we go.” This is a nightmare, someone help Adora.

“Oh, and there is one more rule.” Catra inhales and puts her arm at the top of the car in a cool way.

“No matter what happens, you’re not allowed to fall in love with me” Catra looks at Adora in the eyes.

“Won’t be a problem.” Adora says, nodding her head and raising her eyebrows

They took off and went to the Crimson Waste for drinks with Captain Netossa and when Adora exited the car she saw a paper that read “JUST LOST A BET” and metal cans hanging from the bottom of the car.

“Hey, attention, everyone!” Catra speaks into the megaphone she bought last week, waving her hands and Adora coming behind her.

They entered the bar and there was pretty much everyone that worked in the precinct and a few people who just wanted to have fun, or get laid, or drink their troubles away… Adora did like the last possibility.

“Now.. I know that tonight is Sea Hawk’s big night.” Everyone who knew Sea Hawk cheered and some drunk people) at Catra’s words and the man got up slightly. “But let’s forget about that for a second,” Adora turned to catra and glared in disbelief, obviously knowing her intentions. “And admire and comment on every terrible aspect of this.” She pointed to the blonde girl that was dressed like a christmas present and there were a few cat-calls and applause from her friends.

“Flattered.” Adora did an exaggerated curtsey and smiled. “Permission to use the bathroom?” She turned to her date, who was already looking at her, she could see some faint red hues on her cheeks; Catra smirked.

“First of three, use them wisely.” She warned Adora and the girl rolled her eyes and left.

Catra spotted Bow and went to sit by the bar next to him, “So,what do you think?” She ordered a soda, after all, she wouldn’t want her date night to go tragically wrong.

“Of what? Sea Hawk’s celebration or your romantic date with Adora?” Bow smirked as he took a sip of his drink. It was non-alcoholic, he isn’t much of a drinker, the exact opposite of his lover, who is speaking a little too loud for an actual chill bar. “I am fond of both of them.”

“C’mon, arrow boy. This nonsense again?” Catra exhaled. “You know this was all because of the bet.”

“I’m serious”

“Mhmm” Another sip. “So tell me Catarina, what do you have planned for Adora tonight?” How is he so annoying?

“Alright, we’re going to the Mall photo studio to take our official date picture. The picture will be the two of us playing one saxophone. Then, we’re eating broccoli pizza sitting on the sidewalk of a random street. And then I’ve contracted some Mariachis to serenade her by singing how I am a better detective than her. Satisfied?” Catra propped her arm on top of the table and rested her head in her hands.

Bow inhaled, “Catra, do you know why little girls love to mess with their female classmates?” Catra was puzzled, what does this have to do with Bow’s previous question?

“Because they’re losers.” Score. Easy peasy lemon squeezy.

“What are you implying here?” Catra raised a single eyebrow and lifted her head. Bow chuckled.

“All of this teasing, this elaborate date, somewhere down deep, you like Adora. Like, LIKE HER, like her.” He said in a kind of giddy tone. All smiles and eyes widened. Is he high?

“Are you on drugs right now? Are you sure that’s not non-alcoholic?” Catra took his cup in her hand and smelled it, just to be sure he was sane.

“How much did you spend for tonight?” Catra did spend some good money on it, but it was for her entertainment only.

“$1,400,” Bow raised his eyebrows and smiled like he was saying ‘I told you so’. “But it’s all on credit cards, so it’s like five dollars a month for the next 2,000 years and I’m not even going to be alive by then, so that’s a bonus.” Catra crossed her arms like she’s proved a point. “I do not like Adora!”

“You’re putting a lot of effort into a joke, Sit down and talk to her.” Catra chuckled at that, like he was in any position to give her advice.

“Okay, Bow, you’ve been dating Glimmer for 4 years now and you’re giving me advice on my love life? Shitty advice by the way, and you are in no place to do that. See you tomorrow.” And with that she left the bar and Bow with a head filled with questions.

“Uh, excuse me everyone.” Adora was scared of what was going to happen and already braced herself mentally. Catra was gone for a while when she got back from the bathroom and she decided not to look for the woman, since she could have a moment of peace just once today.

“Adora and I will perform the steerage jig from ‘Titanic’.” Adora’s jaw fell, she wanted to go home so bad. She needed to binge Rapunzel’s Tangled Adventure… What? She only watches for Cassunzel.

“Which we had prepared for no way, shape or form.” Catra clasped her hands on one another.

“Romantic.” When did Bow get here?

“No, embarrassing.” Catra turned to Adora and offered her hand when she heard the music play, smiling. “Milady.” She put her left hand on Adora’s waist while the other took the blonde’s hand in her own.

Adora wanted to strangle Catra. They danced aggressively at some fiddle music, Catra taking the lead and bringing them up and down various times and then spinning.

“You look pretty!” Catra said that automatically, she prayed to whoever was listening that Bow didn’t hear that. But it was true, Adora was ridiculously pretty, anyone could admit that. She was having a good time, Adora on the other side, not so much.

“I hate your guts!” Adora was being spinned by Catra and blushed a little from Catra’s words.

“Channel that passion into the dance!” Adora didn’t mean that.

“Catra” Netossa called her over, damn it. “Scorpia, tag in. Keep spinning” She left Adora spinning with Scorpia and went over to the Captain.

“Yes Captain?” Catra wanted to know what ruined her moment, but was still smiling.

“One of our informants just called. We’ve been tracking this crew that lifts cargo out of Arxia. The C.I. knows where the trucks unload, so I need you to stake out the drop site.” Catra’s smile faltered, her plans were ruined.
“Oh, ma’am I’m right in the middle of this date and I can’t reschedule.” She glanced at Adora who was staring weirdly at Scorpia, dancing by herself) like her life depended on it. “I have far too many non-refundable deposits. I even rented a tiger cub for an hour!” Netossa looked at her with pure confusion, “I don’t even know why.” Actually, she did it because she wanted to see how Adora would react.

“Yeah, well, this isn’t a negotiation so, go.” Why do bad things happen to good people?

“Fine, but I am taking Adora with me, because after that is back to the date.” She turned to Adora. “Darling!” Her stomach did a little somersault when Adora looked at her immediately with curious eyes. She bent her arm for Adora to grab it.

“Brief pause, duty calls.” Adora exhaled in relief and intertwined her arm with Catra’s and ran for the exit.

Scorpia bowed to Glimmer and took her arm out, “Glimmer, tag in?” Glimmer eyed her up and down.

“No, not if it would cure cancer.” She took a sip from her drink and Mermista said she was super drunk. Scorpia resumed her dancing.

They were in Catra's car at the place Netossa told them to be. It was peaceful and enjoyable, but the silence was getting awkward.

"I'm so happy to be out of that dress." Adora was the one to break the silence. She was back with her work clothes and signature ponytail. "It was weirdly hot." She puts the binoculars over her eyes.

"Yeah, probably because it was a cotton and plastic blend. But don't worry, when we catch these guys we're going right back to the worst date of your life." Adora hummed, and looked at Catra with her mouth quirked to the side.

"Hmm, no. Nothing compares to the date I had with Glimmer's dentist." She says with a flat expression.

"That doesn't sound so bad.." Catra wanted to make sure this date was worse.

"She was going to feed me some Petit Gateau and started to examine my mouth with the spoon." Oh, yeah, that was bad. Catra felt bad for laughing and Adora noticed it.

"Don't feel bad, it's kind of funny" She chuckled. "What about you?" Catra looked over to her and found her already looking at her, no longer looking at the street.

"Hm… The last lady I went out with burst into tears when I told her I was a Scorpio." Adora seemed impressed.

"Wow." Catra was going to question the reaction when she saw a very suspicious scene.

“Hey, those people left that door open. we should go to that roof point to see better.” And so they went there.

Catra was standing on top of a platform on the roof while Adora sets up some improvised chairs using some plastic boxes.

“I don’t know how Batman does it, it’s super scary up here.” She jumps and lands with impressive swiftness. “Hey, will you grab the binoculars? They’re in my stakeout bag.”

Adora searches for said binoculars but can only find different types of nuts. “98% of your steakout bag is nuts.” She takes out a nut bagwith approximately one pound. Seriously?

“It’s not my fault I get snacky, besides, nuts are super healthy, they’re like 0% fat.” Adora comes and sit beside her and passes the binoculars while holding the bag of nuts.

“Uhm, Catra, that's not true at all. It’s the opposite.” Catra faltered.

“What? That nut vendor lied to me.” Catra seemed genuinely sad. Adora smiled, Catra felt better.

Adora was looking at the street “I think a pigeon just flew out of your car.” Catra was unbothered.

“Yeah, the windows don’t close.” Adora was puzzled.

“The car is a piece of crap, why do you love it so much?” Catra looked at Adora with nostalgic eyes.

“I arrested my first perp that day,he was clutching a bag full of money, straight out of a boteco.”Adora smiled at her accent coming out. “I chased him for eleven blocks until I finally got him. I cuffed him and threw him up against a car,” She looked at Adora and she was widening her eyes with a small smile. “Yes, that car. He was for sale and I bought him.” Catra finished the story with a soft smile.

“Him?” Adora asked and Catra turned to her with a questioning look before getting what Adora was asking.

“Ah yes, his name is Melog.” Catra puffed her chest out in a proud movement and Adora laughed.

“Really? Melog? Like, golem backwards?” Catra’s face went flat.

“I didn’t even think about it. You’re such a nerd.” Catra playfully rolled her eyes.

Adora had stop laughing and reached for a nut in the bag. “Nut?”

“Only if you throw it.” They turned to each other. Adora threw a nut to the air and Catra caught it with her mouth. Then, the brunette took a nut in her hand and prepared to throw it to Adora.

“Ready?” Adora prepared herself and looked confident.

“Yup” Catra threw it and… Adora failed. She bent completely forward, causing the nut to hit her nose and bounce off. They both laughed at each other.

“Were you trying to catch it with your nose?” Catra said between laughs. She looked over to Adora who was laughing and wow, she was absolutely beautiful, the moonlight shining at her face made the moment even more magical. Her phone started ringing. Damn, Netossa.

“I got it, I got it.” Adora said, referring to the challenge.

Catra reluctantly got up to answer “Hey Cap, what’s good?”

“Oh, good news, Catra. I found someone from the nightshift to relieve you from your stakeout.”

“Um... “ She looked at Adora, still trying to get the nuts with her mouth. Dork. “You know, Captain, don’t bother, we’re fine. Plus, I’m curious to see what happens.”

“Oh, okay, your call.”

“Alright.” She hangs up to resume her game with Adora. When she walks over, the blonde immediately calls her to watch her get three nuts by throwing a handful. She said the key is volume.

Catra and Adora were talking about what Adora was going to do with Melog if she won the bet when the brunette saw a truck parked where the door was open.

“Hey,” They both crouched down on the floor “There's our guys.”

“What are we gonna do?” Catra thought of the perfect plan. “And give me the ring.”

“Alright, fine, darling. I’ll ask them. Will that make you happy?” They were walking close to the truck where the suspects were.

“Excuse me, sir.” The guy looked surprised but wanted to dismiss them. Sus…

“Oh we’re kinda busy here.” He looked at Adora whose arms were crossed and a pissed off face.

“Yeah, my girlfriend here thinks we’re lost.” Adora glared at Catra.

“I don’t think we’re lost, I know we’re lost. She’s an idiot.” She pointed to Catra with her thumb while looking at the guy.

“Idiot? You know why we’re out here in the middle of the night, Susan?” She took out the fake ring and Adora turned to her. “I was going to propose to you!” Adora gasps and the guy looks surprised. “On the Brightmoon bridge, where we met.”

“Brightmoon bridge? We met on the Arxia bridge!” Adora was doing this thing where she furrowed her eyebrows and her nose scrunched up, obviously she was pretending to be mad, but it was still cute.

“You know what? This is over!” She throws the ring and Adora and the suspect gasp.

“You son of a bitch!” Adora yelled and it was getting harder to hold the laugh.

“Hey, hey! Stop yelling!” He points to Adora.

“Hey, no one talks to Susan like that!” Catra knew it was all acting but she was getting protective of Adora for real. “And you know what else? On the ground! BMPD, you’re under arrest!” Adora shouted BMPD and pointed the gun to the other perp.

“Nice work.” Catra said to Adora still pointing the gun to the dude.

“You too.”

“I’m sad y’all arrested me, but I gotta say, I’m glad you’re back together, you make a cute couple.” Catra and Adora suddenly became tomatoes and looked at each other but turned quickly.

“Excellent job on the stakeout last night.” Adora was in the Captain’s office, smiling so hard that her cheeks were sore. “I gotta say, I appreciate you turning down the relief team.” What? But Catra told her Netossa was just checking in… Oh.

“Yeah, right, the relief team.” She looked back to Catra, who was filing some files at her desk.

She was dismissed by Netossa and walked over to her desk.

“Sorry you lost so much money last night… Guess you can add it to the bad date list.” Catra looked at her with a grin and some look in her eyes.

“Nah, it still goes on the good date list. You know, ‘cause we caught the bad guys.” Adora chose to ignore the sudden swarm of butterflies inside her stomach.

“That’s very mature of you”

“Well, I am a very mature woman.” She heard the elevator ding and a deliveryman enter.

“Package for Adora Pritchett?” Catra looked shocked and got up. "That's me.”

“No, no”

“Special delivery from Catra Lima to say thanks for last night.” He took a radio out of the box he was holding.

“I forgot to cancel.” Stupid Catra… Actually, no. Stupid Adora for making Catra spend the rest of the night thinking about her and forgetting to cancel.

Adora was looking at Catra when she was turned by the delivery dude, who was actually a stripper. Catra came to stand in between Adora and the guy.

“I’ll take this bullet for you.” Catra cringed at her own joke.

Adora put this date on the good list too.

End Notes

you may be confused why Bow is representing Charles, it's because they are really kind, and Charles is Jake's BFF, so I wanted to do that for Catra and Bow!

Again: They are just representing B99 Characters, this will not followthe exact events from the show (with some exceptions).

Thank you for reading! Kudos, comments and bookmarks are welcome!
