Luna's Worries

by Midnight_Owl2

Summary

On her arrival back in Halfmoon, Adora, or rather Swift Wind, bumps into Luna. Luna mentions that Catra has gone off on a little adventure and will be back soon. In the meantime, Adora and Luna get to know each other better and Luna speaks some of her worries to Adora. Hopefully, Adora will be able to put some of Luna's worries to rest.

Notes

This fic is an extra chapter to my original fic: Finding Halfmoon. To understand this fic, I highly advise reading Finding Halfmoon first.

Finding Halfmoon Readers - This chapter occurs at the same time as chapter 11 (Never Ending Worries). This extra chapter explores what was discussed between Luna and Adora before Adora headed back to her room to surprise Catra with her early return. Hope you enjoy. 😊

See the end of the work for more notes

“Wow this place really is a lot bigger inside.”

“Told you. Now remember, I can back early to surprise Catra so try and not draw to much attention to yourself.”

“Roger that Adora. You can count on me.” Swift Wind says whilst allowing three small Magicat kittens to play with his tail and wings. A small giggle escapes me at the adorable sight.

After talking to Catra last night I could sense that something was troubling her. What exactly I’m not sure but I have noticed the subtle change in the way she spoke and the little changes of her body language. The meeting back at Brightmoon concluded earlier than expected so I had Swift Wind bring me back early to surprise Catra. Besides, Swift Wind has never seen Halfmoon properly before so I thought it would be nice to bring him and show him around.

We were on our way to Halfmoon castle when we were stopped by three very cute and curious Magicat kittens on their way to daily lessons. They’ve never seen a horse before, although Swift Wind is technically now an alicorn, so you can imagine what their reactions were like. Swift Wind isn’t the greatest with kids compared to Melog. He’s gets a bit nervous with kids accidentally pull, poke and scratch out of curiosity and excitement but he seems to be taking to these Magicat kittens very well. They’re being extremely gentle with his wings and tail which I can tell he is grateful for. It's an adorable sight to see, little Magicat kittens, no bigger than the size of Catra when I first found her, taking an interest in wanting to learn and play with a rather unusual looking creature. After a few minutes of the kittens and Swift Wind getting acquainted, one of the older Magicats calls in the distance, altering the kids that playtime is over. They pout at first but then the smallest of the trio ask if Swift Wind can come and play sometime later. Their high pitched voice and beaming green eyes are incredibly difficult to say no to. Swift Wind doesn’t make any promises but says that he’ll try to find some time later… if they bring apples that is.

When the kittens leave, Swift Wind turns to face me. His cheeks glow red when I give him a teasing look…

"We getting a soft spot for little Magicat kids Swift Wind?"

"Urgh come on Adora. Even you couldn't have said no to those eyes if they asked you. They're adorable and they're the first kids who have not scratched my wing feathers to pieces."

Okay so Swift Wind may have a point. They were incredibly cute. I blame Catra as my weakness for caving to Magicat's eyes. She sometimes gives me a certain look and she knows that I'll do anything for her after that.

We continue our walk through the dense overgrowth and towards Halfmoon castle. We discuss various topics from last night's diplomatic meeting to new flying techniques that Swift Wind wants to show me, and what type of apples taste better. We conclude that the red ones taste best, specifically the ones that grow in Plumeria.

Lost in conversation, for a moment or too we forget to look where we are going…

OOF

Swift Wind wanders back slightly when he realise who he has accidentally walked into someone. Acting quickly, I offer them a hand out to them before I even realise who they are…

"I'm so sorry about that. Swift Wind look where you're going next time. Here let me… Luna?"

Luna takes my hand and I help her up. She smiles and chuckles to herself as she brushes the dust off her clothes…

"It's okay Adora. No need to apologies. It was me who wasn't looking where I was going. I've been a little distracted lately."

Hmm. I wonder if Luna has noticed anything unusual about Catra yesterday. I know Catra said that she had nice time getting to connect with Luna but I get the feeling that Luna might be worried about something.

Luna looks to Swift Wind in curiosity. Whereas Swift Wind looks shy and embarrassed about knocking over a complete stranger.

Oh that's right I forgot, these two haven't properly met each other yet.

"Oh where are my manners. Luna this is Swift Wind, my noble steed. Swift Wind this is Luna, queen of Halfmoon and Catra's mom."

Swift Wind does his best to smile and speak without sounding to nervous. He's never met Luna before and first impressions are important to him. Knocking over the queen of Halfmoon is probably not a good start in his eyes…

"It's a pleasure to meet you Queen Luna. Please accept my apologies for accidentally walking into you."

Luna's jaw completely drops when Swift Wind speaks. She's look completely lost for words. After a minute of two with no response from her, Swift Wind quietly whisper in my ear…

"Is she okay? Is this another talking horse situation that I have been through with all your friends?"

"HE CAN TALK!" Luna suddenly says out of nowhere. Amazement and wonder shown clear in her eyes.

I can't help but laugh as I respond to Swift Wind… "Yep. It's another talking horse moment."

Swift Wind rolls his eyes having gone through this so many times before. First it was me, then Bow and Glimmer, then the princesses, followed by Micah and now Luna. I think the only person who wasn't overly surprised was Catra. She said that I can turn into a eight foot tall blonde lady at the call of a word so a talking horse wasn't much of a shock. She learned to expect anything. Nevertheless its funny. It’s like a never ending cycle.

“How is he talking?”

“Let’s just say that I accidentally used She-Ra’s powers to change him when I was first getting the hang of using the sword. At the time I just called him Horsey, but he chose Swift Wind later on.”

“And I stick by it. Horsey was a stupid name.” Swift Wind grunts as the mention of his past name.

Laughing slightly, I somehow recall that I could have sworn that I told Luna that Swifty can talk just incase something like this ever happened...

“I thought I mentioned to you that Swift Wind could talk before now?”

“You did but I thought it was like how Melog and Catra communicate. When you said he can talk I didn’t think you meant that he actually form words and speak. This is… I’m lost for words. I’ve never seen anything like it. You really are fascinating.”

Swift Wind's mood instantly changes at Luna’s words. He repositions himself, standing tall and proud as his mane flows in the winds… “Well I wouldn’t go as far as fascinating but I do try my best to make a good first impression.”

Luna spends the next few minutes admiring Swift Wind and getting to know him better before looking back to address me…

“I’m surprised to see you here back so early Adora. Catra said not to expect you until later tonight?”

“That was the initial arrangement but the meeting ended earlier than expected last night so I thought I’d come back early to show Swift Wind around and to surprise Catra.”

Taking a deep sigh I speak my other reason for coming back early…

"Can I ask... have you noticed anything different about Catra yesterday? She said she has an amazing day with you but I got the sense that something was bothering her."

Luna's face falls slightly and her tail moves to wrap around her leg loosely. This is something I've noticed Catra do when she feels unsure about something or when something is playing on her mind. After a few seconds Luna looks back to me and speaks…

"I'm glad I'm not the only one who noticed it. Do you mind if we go somewhere private to talk?"

Luna has never asked if she could speak to me in private before so I guess whatever this is must be serious. Swift Wind asks Luna if he is okay to explore Halfmoon on his own for a while, which she agrees to. He reminds me that all I have to do is call him should I need him. If not he'll be heading back to Brightmoon later tonight but he'll be sure to say his goodbyes first. When he leaves, Luna and I walk into Halfmoons castle and enter Luna's room were we discuss what's on her mind.

"Please make yourself comfortable. Catra's out at the moment so feel free to stay here as long as you'd like."

Taking a seat on the balcony lounge I look out towards the rising sun. I'm incredibly surprised that Catra was up earlier than usual going off Luna's words. Something really must be on her mind, not to mention Luna's mind as well.

Whilst I wait for Luna, I look behind me and notice that Dusk is absent. I wonder where she is? After a few minutes, Luna comes to my side and offers me a warm brew and offer my thanks. I take a few sips and wait for her to speak.

"I'm worried about Catra. We seemed to be having a great time together yesterday. I showed her how to make blueberry pie, had a session in the training simulations and I showed her how to transform into Halfmoons guardian, which I imagine she told you about. Everything seemed to be going well, perfect even, we had some nice quality time together. However, there were some things that she said and mentioned that caused me to worry about her."

Taking a drink of my brew I place it to the side of me and try to understand what Luna means…

"What kind of stuff was she saying?"

"Well, at one point she mentioned that the Horde were sending her missions to the Crimson Waste. If I'm being honest the last I heard about that place was that it was a dead zone and was where soldiers were sent for treason and to suffer immensely. I also got increasingly concerned when she looked at her claws for a long period of time when I mention how painful it can be if they're used incorrectly in the training simulation. She seemed very dazed out, almost as if she was in a trance, reliving a memory where she had used her claws to defend herself and suffered immense pain. What concerned me most though was when we were at the place where Halfmoon's creature transformation takes place. Our runestone, the tiger's emerald, shone quite bright at one point, quite possibly due to its absence for so many years. The bright light startled her and she clung onto me. That didn't worry me but what happened after did. Her body became fear stricken and her only words were: 'Please not again. Not him. Not Again.'"

I knew something was wrong when Catra called me last night. I wanted to ask her what was on her mind but now I'm glad I didn't. This is something that needs to be discussed in person. This is something that needs to be resolved in person. It pains me to see that even now, the trauma from her past has this devastating effect on her. Catra has worked so hard to pull through it all, why can't her memories leave her in peace.

Luna continues to speak, worry written plain for all to see within her eyes…

"I want to help her Adora. I want Catra to know that she is safe with me and that she can tell me anything. I can tell from her words that her life after that fateful night hasn't been an easy one to live. I won't judge her for simply trying to survive. Despite all the years we were a part she is still my daughter. I'm still her mother. The instinct to protect her, to care for her, to love her unconditionally has never left me. I'm her mother. I was supposed to protect her from all of these bad things that happened and I failed her."

Sensing that Luna is on the verge of tears I try my best to comfort her. I let Catra's words guide me when I speak…

"Luna I can tell you now that you didn't fail her. Catra has told me herself that she doesn't see you as someone who has failed her. You found her like you said you would even though it took a few more years that what either would have liked. But that doesn't matter now because you found her. I know you want to help and as for Catra… I know she wants to open up to you. To tell you what needs to be said."

The sight of Luna's fur bristling is one that I recognise. I see this happen in Catra when she feels like no matter what she does, no matter how hard she tries, it's never good enough...

"Then why doesn't she? I want to help her. I want to help her in anyway I can but at the same time I don't want to force her to talk to me. I know she'll talk to me when she's ready but I growing increasingly concern."

Sensing Luna's frustration and sadness I think of the best way to choose my next set of words carefully…

"It's not as simple as it seems. Catra… she's been through a lot. She has put her trust in others before and they have let her down. Some even went as far as using it against her. It's difficult for her to open up to people because of the things she has gone through, the things she has experienced. It's taken her a long time and effort to get to where she is today. I know for a fact that she will open up and talk to you when she is ready, it's sometimes just more difficult than it appears to be. Believe me, I know. I've known her nearly all my life. On the outside Catra comes across as this tough, powerful Magicat that can't be moved when she has her mind set on something, but deep down inside she's soft, sensitive and vulnerable."

I'm not sure if that answers Luna or not but she seems to understand what I mean. Catra will open up to her when she's ready, but it takes a bit of time and work for her to get to that stage. However, I feel that the moment when Catra fully opens up to Luna will be sooner than she thinks. I hope its sooner rather than later, I can see it's eating the insides of both of them.

After a moments of silence, Luna wipes away her tears. She turns to me and smiles...

"You know I missed out on so much of Catra's life. I missed seeing my daughter grow up. I missed seeing her fall in love with her soulmate. I missed out on witnessing so many important chapters of her life, but I am grateful that I get to make up for lost time with her now. Moreover, I'm grateful that she had someone like you to look out for her when I couldn't."

Luna's smile is soft and gentle. Her smile pretty much reflects my own. However, unlike Luna, I'm secretly trying me best to hold back unshed tears. I can certainly say that life for Catra and I hasn't been easy but at least we had each other.

Luna's posture start to shift a bit and she starts fiddling her thumbs. I can tell she wants to ask something but she's not sure whether she should or shouldn't ask. After a minute or two, Luna sighs and decides to ask what's one her mind…

“Do you mind telling me a little bit about your childhood, about you and Catra growing up. Catra has told me little bits here and there like how you met and some of your little adventures, but I think it would be nice to hear your story from both sides.”

Luna’s quieter tone of voice tells me that she feels a bit unsure about asking this of me. I can understand why she feels uneasy asking this of me. Really she wants Catra to tell her more about her childhood but I know that Catra has some dark memories from that time. It can make it difficult to speak of the good times. However, I am more than happy to share some of my stories with Luna but I feel that some need to be told by Catra herself and that I will be making clear.

“Urm sure. I mean there’s somethings that I feel will be better coming from Catra but I’m more than happy to share some of our highlights with you. What exactly has she told you so I can catch up on where you're at.”

Luna smile and look out towards the rising sun for a minute or two as she carefully thinks…

“Well she mentioned that you found her in a box in the Fright Zone's corridors. She’s mentioned little bits about when you two used to climb up to the watch tower every night to have a break from days training and she’s mention about how you took care of each other when the other got sick. Apparently the tune that I used to sing to her when she was little is the same tune she sang to you to get you to sleep when you were unwell. I can tell there’s more she wants to say and there's more I want to know but I don’t want to push her. Like you said, Catra will tell me what she wants me to know when she’s ready.”

Okay so going off what Luna has said I figure that Luna doesn’t know anything about Shadow Weaver or the fact that at one point Catra and I were separated for three years due some stupid destiny that I thought meant leaving everything behind to save Etheria, including the one I loved most… I can work around all that.

Finishing the rest of my brew, I take a few extra minutes to collect all my most treasured memories of our time together before telling Luna about them. I won't be telling her everything as I know for fact Catra will tell Luna more about the fun times we had when she gets past the scary part... that is if all goes well.

"Did Catra happen to tell you that when I first found her she hissed at me?"

Luna doesn't answer. Instead she looks to me surprised. I'll take that as a no then. Luna face says it all an I start to laugh...

"Yeah she hissed at me. I think it was more of a 'stay back' hiss rather than a 'I'll attack you' hiss. She was scared that's all. I could see it in her eyes. It didn't take her long to warm up to me though. She took a sniff of my cheek and nuzzled up against me. It tickled a little but it felt nice. I had never seen anyone like her before."

For a moment or two I feel lost in thought, reliving the moment from many years ago. Catra was incredible, unique, and she certainly still is. She was this small lovable individual that I eventually grew up to fall in love with. Luna's gentle hum brings me out of my trance and I continue to speak…

"She didn't know her name when I ask. I wasn't even sure if she could talk at that point. She just mewled when I asked anything. So we listed some names off. I first tried suggesting Whiskers, to which she snorted in disapproval. Then I suggested Fluffy but she hissed at me. Put it this way it got the message of no typical or cute names and we eventually suggested Catra. She seemed to like it as she pounced on me and started to purr. However, Catra doesn't know the true reason why I suggested that name… I really just combined the ending on my name with her features."

Luna starts to laugh… "Oh my. Those are really original names Adora. But I will admit, Catra is a nice name. I'm glad you chose it for her. Besides, Fluffy does not suite her. I'm not surprised she hissed at you. Sounds very much like the time she hissed at my wife because she called her princess."

Unable to stop myself, a small giggle-snort escapes me. It makes Luna laugh even harder when she realises how red my cheeks are burning as a result of the stupid noise I make…

"She hissed at Dawn for calling her princess."

"Oh yeah. She hissed big time too. She was only tiny and I had no idea she could hiss at her young age. It was a surprise to us both. Dawn gave her the nickname furball after that, saying that it suited her far better. I on the other hand always called her kitten. Don't get me wrong she had a name other than furball and kitten but she was always our 'little kitten'."

Curiosity gets the better of me and I find myself having to ask… "What was Catra's original name that you gave her?"

Luna smiles when she answers...

"Cyra. Her full name was Cyra Elizabeth D'riluth of Halfmoon. Dawn picked her first name, I chose her middle name, D'riluth is our family name and the last part was just for tradition…"

Well that's certainly more professional that the full name I gave Catra. Stars can you imagine if we had to say our full names on our wedding day. I wonder how many people are aware of our full names that we gave to each other as kids? I wonder if Catra has told Luna her full name yet?

"But as I said before, Catra is a wonderful name for my daughter and I'm sure Dawn would approve too."

I can't help but smile ecstatically at Luna's words. Luna's smile reflects me own as she waits for me to continue…

"So after that Catra and I become really good friends. Best friends in fact. I was never great at making friends. There weren't many cadets my age in the Horde at the time and well... I was always looked at differently. I never really fit in but being with Catra made things easier. When we were six, maybe seven, we had a few new members join our team: Lonnie, Kyle and Rogelio. They were really nice, even though it took Catra a bit of time to warm up to them. She had a bit of trouble trusting people but I couldn't really blame her. The Fright Zone was a scary place for us, especially at night…"

Luna looks to me curiously but doesn't say a word. Instead she waits for me to allow my mind to replay the memory and speak what I saw…

"For a long time I remember seeing shadows in the night. Many thought they were just silhouettes of those passing by but every now and again I saw a patch of red within them. They moved to quick before Catra and I could get a look at them but they never failed to make me feel uneasy. It was like something, or rather someone, was watching us."

Besides me I feel Luna's fur stand on end. A shiver makes its way down both our spines. I wonder if Luna knows more than she is letting on with regards to these shadows... has she seen them before? Does she know who they belong too? Anyway, I shove the thought aside and continue to speak…

"It took me a very long time to get over my fear of the dark. Even now I sometimes myself having to sleep with a small dull light on, especially after a bad nightmare or something like that. Unfortunately they didn't have those back in the Horde and if they did they probably never would have given me one even if I ask. I stayed awake most night, scared of what was lurking in the dark but Catra made it easier. Her eyes, I hadn't noticed that they glow in the dark. All it took was one look at her and my fears washed away. I knew I was safe with her beside me. Looking back at it now, I remember that the first thing I fell in love with was her eyes. There's just something so unique about them, about her in general that I can't quite explain. It's something that I can't quite explain expect for that it's a wonderful feeling that I only feel when I was with Catra."

Looking back it becomes clear that I started to fall in love with Catra long before I even knew what love was. The butterfly feeling in my stomach was because of her. The sudden urge to sneak a peek across the showers back in our confusing teens years was because I was falling for her. The want to feel her lips against mine but holding back afraid of how she'd react so you settled for kissing her on the cheek when helping with her bandages was because I wanted to protect her. I wanted to be around Catra all the time. I wanted to hold her close and tell her it would all be okay. All of these signs where because I was falling in love with her but I was too blind to see that I was in love.

Luna hums softly and a low purr can be hear. The purr is coming from Luna. It's slightly deeper compared to Catra's but it still has the same calming effect. Letting the soothing sound relax me I continue to speak. I tell Luna about how we came across our secret spot, the watch tower, back in the Fright Zone. I tell her how much I loved hearing Catra laugh when we played tricks on Kyle or when we pull pranks on Glimmer and Bow back in Brightmoon. We eventually get to the point were we discuss Madam Razz after she tells me how Razz used to take care of Catra back when she was little. It makes more sense now how Razz knew Catra before I first introduced them to each other. Eventually Luna and I get to discuss how I proposed to Catra, how I carefully thought out how I was going to make my proposal perfect and how magical it felt when she said yes, but then it hits me…

"Oh stars I've just realised something!"

"What?" Luna asks curiously, her smile never leaving her face.

"I never asked for your permission to marry Catra."

Luna at first looks a bit taken back but then she starts to laugh...

"Adora you don't need my permission to marry Catra."

"I know I initially didn't but now you've found each other I kind of have to ask you. After all she is your daughter. I mean Bow asked Micah a while ago if he could ask for Glimmer's hand in marriage and that's when I learned the whole 'ask the parents first thing' and I just released that I never asked you."

Luna starts to look slightly confused but also amused… "But you already proposed to Catra?"

"I know and now I feel guilty for not having asked you and what am I going to do if I ask and you say no?"

Sighing, my face falls into my hands. I literally researched a whole section of Etherian marriage and proposal and forgot about this. Well technically I didn't forget but how do I make up for this now?

The sound of Luna laughing forces me to look up. Her tail is swaying side to side, showing that she is calm and content. Her laughter starts to die down and she places her right hand on my shoulder before speaking directly to me…

"Adora, do you honestly think that stuff bothers me?"

"Well, no but… you were saying about how much you missed out on Catra's life and I started to worry that you missed out on having the opportunity to decide who she should chose to spend the rest of her life with."

My cheeks start to flush a bright red colour as I speak. Luna chuckles to herself as she rolls her eyes. She places her hand over the top of mine and I sit up straight, wondering what's so funny…

"Adora, whoever Catra chooses to spend the rest of her life with is not my decision. Only she can decide who she wants to spend her life with. Okay so it's tradition to ask the parents of your partner if they can marry them but that doesn't mean you have to do that. Do you think Dawn asked my parents for my hand in marriage? Of course she didn't. They didn't approve of her and she instantly knew what their answer would be but she didn't let that stop her. She loved me and I loved her. There was no changing our decision. Dawn and I often spoke of our hopes for Catra in the future. All we ever wanted for her was to be happy, to be loved and to enjoy her life to the fullest with her soulmate… she definitely found her person, her soulmate."

And I certainly found my soulmate too.

Tears threaten to fall from my eyes as Luna pulls me into a soft embrace, sensing that I could do with a hug. Luna and I haven't been able to spend much time like this together. We haven't really been able to connect with one another as I've been giving her and Catra space to bond together as mother and daughter. It's nice that we can have this time together, time where we can get to know each other a little better. Catra is lucky to have Luna as her mom.

I hadn't noticed that a few of my tears have fallen from my eyes until I feel the brush of Luna's thumb wiping them away. She holds me close and whispers soft words of reassurance to me as I let them fall. They're more happy tears than sad tears, but once they start to fall they fall hard.

When my tears subside I move away from Luna slightly. I'm still held within her embrace but I'm able to look at her better now. Luna has a teasing smile on her face. It's like she can read my mind…

"You're still going to ask me aren't you?"

I start to laugh and Luna joins in. Am I really that predictable?

Wiping away my remaining tears, I look towards the now fully risen sun It's so bright and warm. I wonder if Catra is seeing the same sun as me?

I look back to Luna with a bright smile on my face… "Luna, can I please have your daughters hand in marriage?"

Luna looks to the sun just like I did before. Her hand softly moves to hold her sun necklace. I learned from Catra that this is Dawn proposal gift to Luna. Apparently Luna holds it in her hand when she think of Dawn.

Luna smiles and looks back to me…

"I think you already know my answer. I'd be honoured to have you as my daughter-in-law."

Hang on a second, what's a daughter-in-law?

Taking a mental note to ask Glimmer or Bow what 'daughter-in-law' means later, Luna and I finish our casual conversations and finish what's left of our morning brews. Life in the village is starting to fully awake and we can her the birds songs carried on the morning breeze.

"This… this was nice." I say as I finish the last sip of my morning brew.

"Yeah it was. We should do it more often." Luna suggests.

I'm certain that this won't be the last time Luna and I spend time together. I thank Luna for the brew and prepare to make my leave to go and find Catra. Knowing Catra, she'll probably be on her way back to our room by now, especially with Luna saying how early she was up the morning. No doubt about it she'll be on her way back for a midday nap, one which I will gladly join her for.

Luna does her best to smile but I can tell from the way her tail slows its movements and her ears slightly flatten at the mention of Catra's name when I make my goodbye that she is still worried about her. I do my best to reassure Luna…

"Hey. Try to not worry about Catra too much. She's stronger than anyone could ever guess. Besides, if I know Catra, and I do, I think she'll surprise you. You just have to give her time. She'll open up to you soon."

My words seem to push Luna's worries aside and she smiles more encouragingly. We say out goodbyes and I head down the corridor to mine and Catra's room.

When I enter our room Catra still isn't in sight. Our bed is freshly made and our curtains that lead onto the balcony as spread wide open, allowing a warm ray of sunlight to burst through. In that patch of said sunlight, lies our massive Krytian friend who perks up at the sound of my voice...

"Hi Melog. Did you miss me?"

Almost forgetting about their sleepy haze a moment ago, Melog starts jumping up and down on the bed, making all sorts of happy murps and chirps and mreows as I walk over to them. Stretching my arms out wide I envelope them into a massive hug. They start purring up a storm and they try their best to lick my cheek like they did when we first met.

"Haha. Aww I missed you too. I hope you've been good for Catra. By the way can I ask…"

The door swing open giving Melog and I quite the fright. I had been so distracted giving them a fuss that I hadn't notice the jiggling of our door handle. When I look up the most beautiful sight in all of Etheria is standing in front of me…

"Hey Catra… Surprise!"

End Notes

Hope you enjoyed reading this extra chapter for Finding Halfmoon. There's only one more extra content chapter to come. Are you ready for it. Thank you all for your continued support. It means the world to me.

I hoped you liked this little extra part where we get to see Adora and Luna communicating with each other. It may also give some hints as to how the next chapter in the main story will take place. This chapter was one I really enjoyed writing and I hope you all enjoyed reading it.

I hope to see you at the next Finding Halfmoon chapter release. 😊
