Our Insides Red

by Crypfic

Summary

Adora just can't leave things alone, and purposefully allows herself to get captured to just see her enemy up close. Catra has changed so much, having brought the very Horde to their knees. She does the same to Adora.
Will things ever work out between them as Adora is taken prisoner, and Catra's heat is beginning to make itself known, or will they fall back to being at each other's throats?

Notes

Man, it's been forever since I've written a damn thing. Happy late Pride Month!
This has been in my drafts for forever, and after a rant about bad writing with a friend, I realized I wanted to get back into it.

Shoutout to my friend and girlfriend for beta reading, and extra shoutout to my girlfriend for basically helping with the rough draft!

See the end of the work for more notes

The Fright Zone has been changed more than Adora realized as she’s dragged along inside. It was not the walls of this place that made it newly like royalty with the fresh coat of black steel — but rather the new head ruler that sat inside upon the throne created from the labor curated by her own hands. The maroon of the place served as a reminder to Adora of whose heart and blood went into these dawning shadows, of the gutted sound of machines in the distance; the metal and banners were only beautiful when beside the king herself.

The doors of the great halls are opened, the tables filled with good bread and mead. Here, the red reminds Adora of the hearth of a home rather than what she knew, waved upon leveled grounds of war. There's laughter that rings, and she is surprised by how the aroma is sweet, a sense of warmth and pleasantries she’s never quite seen from the time she was a child here. The people here seem happy; with merriment and glowing smiles, telling tales of the battles worthy of the bards with voices that could break the world open. Yet Adora’s heart aches at how victorious they sound, how they find themselves talking about their cause as near heroic — as if justified.

Let them snicker , Adora reminds herself. She has been running this war on bleeding soles, yet still walks here with her head held high as her hands are bound tight in front of her with taut rope -- hard enough to bruise -- guards bordering her as they lead her further away from prying eyes of soldiers that stood with blank visors, from old friends that may even step in for her life. Do any of them even remember her? Or has the spoils of warfare tarnished what little cherished memories they had together?

Although if all the rumors she had heard were true of her once beloved friend, her life may as well be her deck of cards to play as forfeit. What eyes can see still linger on Adora; they are too slow to blink, irises too stationary. They shuffle in place, as if itching to watch, any lips she could see formed in a pensive frown.

She is slammed onto her knees in front of the throne after another set of great doors are opened, and she knows she should dread to see her, and yet there's relief that bullets through her. The seat of that chair, the give of the fabric, the dark, softened hues of red that told tales and years of her coming figure, of the foundations of what the Horde has accomplished in the time she has led, proved near breathtaking.

" Hey, Adora ." That voice proved the same effect.

"Catra."

"Come on, don't look at me like that."

Adora presses her teeth together. Red. Everything is always so red that it grew almost tiresome to even say. It was the red of wedding carnations, the only pop of color in the darkness of the palace. The chandelier above looks from a time of opulence; from a time of emotional indifference to the raids they accomplished of the villages nearby — of She-Ra's inability to save everyone. It highlighted Catra's sharp beauty in a room that invited Adora to keep her gaze upon her. The old emblem that once strangled the air, casually and willfully ignorant of its pollution, was changed; yet Catra almost hasn't. She's still the kind of handsome that remained in Adora's bones ever since she first left, still just as gorgeous from the depth of her eyes to the new hardened tone of her expressions. Her lips still stuck, tilted up in mischief.

Yet her outfit saw the most change: from those nylon stockings that hark to notions of romance — of a sort of feminine beauty that was yet wonderfully masculine -- to the cloak that silhouetted her as if she herself were carried upon a pillar. She was still elegant, studied, nothing like the brawler Adora is, excluding the new leathery scar that reached from the side of her lips to the line of her brow.

Adora has to swallow, moistening her lips.

"You know what you've done, Catra."

Such fake heroics that Catra has to roll her eyes before uncrossing her legs, standing. Her cloak breezes over the ground, similar to the way a dress catches in the wind as she steps down to Adora's level, circling her. Adora would say she felt like prey, but that would give into the notion of being fearful as if she was cornered, when she was anything but that.

Catra quietly hums, returning to stand in front of Adora as if she were infallible. She waves her hand. "Take her to my private chambers."

Adora can't help a rush down her spine even as she's roughly grabbed by her biceps and dragged away again, taken down a corridor that proved much dimmer than the main entrance. She is shoved inside a bedroom, one not familiar to Adora, Catra not far behind, before the door closes them in together. From what the immediate prospect appeared to be, Adora realizes soon enough that she would not get to raise her hands to touch Catra's tender flesh, but rather is to be shoved behind bars.

"And why exactly do you have a cage in here?"

"Is that really any of your business?"

"I mean, you are putting me in it."

Catra closes it with the flick of her wrist, locking it with a key that sits dainty on her collarbones with twine.

"It was meant for a different sort of pet if I were to be honest, but you will have to do."

Adora could not swallow her drool hard enough.

"I'm shocked your friends haven't arrived yet, princess."

“They will soon.”

Catra crouches to her level, scooting a tray of food in. A few of the buttered biscuits fall from their settled plate, but Adora doesn't mind, quick to swallow them, crumbs falling past her fingers to dirty the floor.

“Mm, sure, and if they don’t?”

Adora’s mind is fogged by Catra’s scent, a certain musk from nature and yet sugared with a fragrance that she has long forgotten. Suddenly it doesn't seem all too terrible if her friends had decided she was a lost cause, that her pure impetuous nature proved simply too difficult to juggle anymore. Catra eyes her for a moment, looking her over from below that it was clear she saw it too.

“You seem all too comfortable for a prisoner.”

“And for all intent and purposes, you’re pretty comfortable spoiling me with fresh food and your valuable time.”

Catra bristles, but only for a moment because then she’s sneering. Any moment of annoyance quickly washed away when she’s reminded of how the border between them couldn’t be anymore clear. “I deserve to be entertained as well.”

Adora presses her lips together, looking up her long legs from where she still remained on her knees. For all it’s worth, the kid that was once a small speck on a bumblebee’s back, a dirty cheeked juvenile herded around like an animal was now a sovereign over more soldiers than she knows what to do with.

She knows it’s teasing when Catra’s fingers toy at the edge of the bars, just bordering on sticking her hand right through, ghosting a claw under Adora’s chin. Crouched in front of her, Adora could grab for the key, could grab and twist her wrist, make her be the one to beg for once; she could do so many things and walk out.

Yet she doesn't.

Even disappointing herself, Adora doesn't do what any sane creature would, no intention for snark nor bite. She simply allows her thoughts to whittle away what little defiance she had against Catra, realizing just how much she can feel her pants strain.

“Commander, report.”

“We awaited the arrival of the troops from the Special Weapons Squad, and we began firing at Salineas’ walls at dawn, damaging it, but unable to get in. I then assumed command of the ship from there. The station at this point then consisted of nine field majors, two battalions of infantry, four companions of artillery, and about 30 recruits. Several regiments without accouterments, and with an entirely inadequate supply of ammunition. The position is untenable as of now, and while defensible, for adequate occupation, we require double our numbers, and more ammunition.”

Catra sighs, waving a hand. “Fine, I’ll send another squadron and more supplies by tomorrow.”
Lonnie bows her head, stating her thanks.

Shuffling documents, ink blurs in her eyes that sting with exhaustion. Amongst the requests, the demands, and the digs at her confidence, she realizes that Lonnie hasn’t left when she doesn't hear any footsteps move away.

“When are you going to do something about her?”

“Whom?”
A grunt. “You know who I’m talking about.”

Catra thinks of her rosy cheeks just below her blue eyes. “Ah, yes, the prisoner. What of her?”

“With all due respect is she really a prisoner?”

Catra now turns to look at her, papers rustling between her hands. What the hell are some of these requests? "And with all due respect, Commander, what I do with her is none of your business."

"I have seen Adora out of her containment more than once!" When the name leaves Lonnie's mouth it nearly makes Catra jump -- as if Adora was her own little secret. "She can be seen just walking around, looking through things, clearly searching for information on our army!"

"And she is just as quickly returned to her containment."
"Then how is she getting out over and over again? She does this and yet you refuse to have any guard watch the room."

With teeth gritted, she manages to delicately set the documents back into a folder rolling her shoulders. "As I've stated, Commander, what I am doing with her is none of your concern."

A labored pause, nothing but the distant clank of machinery ebbing the silence away.

"You don't have any idea what you're doing with her, do you?'

"Lonnie--"

"Why are we not being told what is going on? She has been here for nearly a week! She gets fresh food, and some of our resources we worked for!"

Catra holds up a hand at how Lonnie's fists shakes. "She's an easy ploy; I thought you would have realized; her little friends are desperately trying to rescue her, but they are completely impulsive, reckless fools without Adora as their leader," she waves her hands in a broad gesture, "their last attempt was a complete failure. We now have two of their beloved princesses. Do I need to explain the rest?"

Her nose wrinkles. "That doesn't explain her lenient punishments and the almost gentle care she's receiving."

Catra grins, a smile filled with sharp teeth. “Well, our guest has to be fully comfortable so she can lower her guard a little, right?”

The confusion is palpable on Lonnie’s face. “So, what? You treat her all sweet, so then she doesn't go as hard against us?”

“Close,” she passes the reports over to her, “Just get these to Scorpia, I have work to attend to elsewhere.”

She steps past her commander with not a glance behind her, treading with brazen confidence of fire that could burn others, yet will touch her companion as fine silk; she will return to her bedroom with her mattress against her back, the delicate form of feathers and cloth pressing against her flesh, and in the slivers of moonlight Catra will have the phantom of her best friend on top of her, just as she’s always dreamed of.

Another day where the door swings open on rustic hinges just as before, and as before Adora crawls out still on hands and knees, Catra sitting on her mattress as her companions settle in front of her. There were no restrictions, no bounds to keep her there like a scolded mutt, yet she remains still.

She allows Catra to take her head between her calloused palms -- palms scarred and rough with stories -- that she now uses to gently guide Adora to lay her head on her lap. There’s a faraway look in Adora’s eyes, that Catra wonders if such a thought of simply leaving this place has appeared in her mind yet. Is the war so cruel to her that being here and captive is better than the freedom of a brisk cold breeze in her hair? Perhaps so. Here at least, Adora is just Adora. No golden-loined fool that yelled with a blade above her head, but instead of a smaller yet better woman.

Catra wonders vaguely what's going on outside of her walls that Adora takes orders from Catra with barely ever a fight. Is it her usual instinct of survival, or something more she is missing? As secluded as the Horde has become from the rest of the world she usually gets her news whenever she can’t be out there in the carnage. Yet here she sits ignorant to Adora’s exhaustion.

But opportunity is not a matter one can spit at. Her friends will attempt rescuing Adora again, whether it proves fatal for themselves, it’s to be expected. As of now though, Adora can sit here and be whoever she wants; whatever she wants. Catra may be considered vicious, but she's not pure evil.

Not when Adora looks up to her, smiling with her eyes even as her lips are still.

The flames in Catra’s gut release the brightest of honeyed flustered cheeks. She's taught herself how to better handle the heats, the aching desperation, the ravages of unhealthy impulse that weaken her mind. She has slain alphas that have pushed their luck to get to her when that damn smell comes from her pores, but now that she has an alpha in her quarters, her patience ebbs away quicker than the week can end.

Did Adora always have that nostalgic scent of a blend of wood and flowers clinging to her? Did Adora always look at her as if she were night and day; as if she were the sunlight that enters as a storm exits and emerges as a rainbow at the end?

She can feel her stare at the back of her head whenever Catra just happens to pass her. She swears Adora reaches out of her cage a lot more now, noticing Adora running her fingers over the trim of her cloak. It's a death wish whenever Catra brings Adora her food and they linger together, Adora’s voice lower, darker even. Catra likes it.

An infinite of lifetimes and they would always claw their way to each other. They want this, they both want the teeth and the hunger of it; they want the feeling of brilliant pieces colliding together. The sheer thrill brings Catra's knees to buckle. She couldn't think of doing such a thing as a Lord with her prisoner, the consequence that could come from it . . . but the way Adora's staring at her behind those bars, starving with a tray of untouched food at her knees.

She lets her gaze wander to the tightly pursed tent between her legs.

It wouldn't kill her to just let her out for a little bit. Catra steps back as the door opens, and just as clockwork Adora shuffles out on hands and knees.

"Hold me, pet," Catra murmurs, her voice thin.

She knows Adora hears it, but thankfully, makes no comment nor other move to do anything except get to her feet and bring Catra into her arms.

Catra can feel her trembling slightly. The heat is nothing short of exhausting. She shuffles closer and she can feel herself being poked by Adora’s arousal, but she can't help but love how this all feels, the sheer warmth of it igniting that fire inside her gut to lick at her throat, effortlessly making her speechless. Deep purrs rumble in her chest as she rubs her cheek against Adora's sternum, the gnawing crave determined to mark what’s her — what her body truly believes to be hers. Adora's pounding heart thumps clear, and Catra wonders if that same heart is bound still in the same false wires of morality -- even as her very flesh and bones fall into rut, does she still demand justice against Catra’s crimes?

Without warning to either of them, that hero lets out the softest whimper.

Only sheer spandex hides Catra’s sex and just that alone makes Adora's pants feel like a second layer of skin, dotting wetness at the tip. They take steps together -- arms still tied around the other -- then another step, and Adora is certain Catra can feel her cock twitching through her pants. Another brief whine that Adora chokes up.

"It's okay," Catra's soothing voice caresses her ear, breaking the sheer heat burning between them.

Adora isn't sure what to do with herself as Catra steps back once more and the back of her legs hit her bedpost, fingers clawing at the other's back, clothes being yanked at; Adora swears she can hear threads being torn.

"Kneel, pet."

The humiliation is strong for being brought to her knees with words alone, yet chills spike up her spine as Catra rests her hand on her head, carding her fingers through her hair.

"Such obedience. Aren't you at least a little embarrassed?"

Adora parts her lips, but Catra's pheromones fill her mouth and she's forced to swallow when she feels herself near hiccup; she smells like the burn of cinnamon and pepper, yet the docile tenderness of a sweet meadow.

"Is it too much for you. . . ?"

Adora doesn't even have to elaborate on what "it" is - it's all either of them can think about - once they are intimate, it'll be the closest thing to love they can feel before they will raise blades to one another's throats. Catra shakes her head as Adora rests her cheek against her inner thigh, inhaling just a little more in spite of the indignity in her gut.

She will take this to her grave. It will die with her like it was a cherished memory.

Catra keeps petting her, bordering on cooing under her breath. Adora remains there with her eyes closed, reveling in a moment to shed the fights from her brain, to allow the visions of the night to give way to a day without war; her entire body feeling as though it's filled with a steady drone like the machines outside before she can hear cloth shuffling and then a sudden tear that breaks the silence.

Adora near jolts, but finds her face in front of Catra's bare sex, the tatters of Catra's tights clearly created by her very own claws.

Adora's first instinct is to look away, unable to come to terms that this is real - that the Rebellions' last hope is on her knees, here drooling over the very leader she swore to throw into the dungeons - but then Catra lightly parts her folds that are puffy and red from her heat. She's close enough to see the slick slide around her opening. Adora can't help but stare. She's almost angry at how gorgeous she is.

"Do you want this?"

Adora opens her mouth, closes it before she can croak, "Yes, ma'am."

Catra purrs, grinning. "Go on then. I'm not asking for you to hesitate anymore. It's time to forget your decency for once, princess."

Adora will not be told twice, almost immediately drawing forward and darting her tongue out for a taste. There's a brief sound in Catra's throat before she murmurs, "Come on, a little more. You're better than that."

Debating on whether to hide her rolling eyes, she laps more and more at Catra's slit, sliding her tongue in, between, and around. Through the corner of her eye she can see Catra's thighs trembling and soft, strangled moans sounding above her. She huffs when claws dig into her hair and push her deeper into the sweet scent and taste of the Horde's Red King.

Gods, Adora didn't realize how much she needed this. She may be a valiant hero, her deeds always done by the most selfless of desires - her entire existence anchored by a sword birthed from duty and magic so pure it blinds - but what she would give to be used like this again and again.

Catra grinds up against her mouth, her breath stuck in her throat as she murmurs, “That’s right, you’re being such a good girl.”

Catra can feel herself getting close by this alone, Adora’s reddening lips a beautiful contrast against her sun-kissed and scarred thighs, and there is nothing more in her brain than Adora’s strong image below her that makes her simply ravenous . She thinks she has it together until Adora takes her clit into her mouth to suckle. Catra's entire body is filled with jitters before she completely buckles forward, curling around Adora desperately, wrapping arms and thighs around her head as that damn mouth is more skilled than she ever dared to presume, digging into Catra like her life depended on it. Catra has to take a mouthful of her own fist to keep herself from screaming and alerting her guards or court. Her room is meant to be in almost its own sector entirely, but that does not mean Catra’s vocals are anything to scoff at.

She stays in that position for a moment, an ear perked for any sounds of her guards becoming alerted before slowly opening her thighs to peek down, just to find the airhead staring up at her with half lidded eyes, something near affectionate in those glazed blues.

“You okay?” she asks, nearly mute.

Catra shakes her head, trying to hide her amusement. “I just came. What do you think?”

Adora’s smile is gentle and she rubs deep circles into Catra's hip, humming as her King eases her weight back. "Just making sure, My Lady."

Catra's brow quirks and her smirk is settling to be something permanent on her lips at this rate. "Oh? Never called me that before," she comments.

"Don't you think it's warranted after how I've been nowhere but below you?" Adora kisses all over the Magicat's thighs, nipping here and there, muttering something into the peach fuzz.

Catra nearly wants to squish her fat head between her legs again. "Perhaps. But you still have more to do."

"And that is . . . ?"

"You know well enough already. Come on, pet, up on the bed and lay back."

Adora almost wants to disobey, remain down on the cushiony carpet and do nothing but eat Catra out until her jaw aches, until it's all she ever knows. Yet she gets to her feet and switches places, the satin almost itchy with unfamiliarity against her back as she gazes at the woman loosening her binder, breasts spilling free, small and tipped with puffy nipples; before then her cloak is gone and then her tights are pooling down at her ankles, and even as Adora burns up from the inside, her very heart kindle to the flame inside while trapped in her horrible clothes, she starts to sit up.

"Ah-ah-ah, lay back down."

Adora obeys, even if the sight above was meant to be grabbed and melt into, mold like warm clay in her hands.

"Such a desperate bitch, huh?"

Adora's eyes roll to the back of her head. "Yes," she groans. She'd be anything for Catra, the hot ardor casting a fog over her brain; she would drop everything for Catra to just let her kiss her feet.

Catra leans down and crawls close, the bed quietly groaning with their weight combined. "You'll get a taste when I think you've earned it."

Adora swallows a mewl that presses against her tongue. What has she become? "Yes, ma'am."

Catra grins. “Mm, I can think of something much better to be called.”

Adora nods with bated breath.

“How about Mistress, yes?” she offers, voice dark and gravelly.

Adora, a glutten for orders and even punishment, working away at her lower lip before breathing out, "Yes, Mistress."

Catra finally straddles her lap, inching her slit toward Adora's clothed cock, an evident way in teasing her when something close to a whine escapes Adora. "Good girl . . . tell Mistress what you want.”

“Fuck . . . please . . .” she drifts off.

Catra grasps onto her by the jaw, claws just pushing in enough to make a point. “I don’t think I could hear you.”

Adora shivers. “. . . I really want you to ride me. Please, Mistress, I need to feel you.”

“Yeah?”

“Yes, I just want whatever you will give me.”

Catra's purrs grow louder, the sound blossoming in her chest until it’s all that surrounds Adora. “Oh, that’s my girl, using her words," she praises. "Just what I wanna hear." With her claws and a decisive and careful swipe, she cuts free Adora’s cock, and the sheer relief has Adora leaning her head back and sighing loudly.

Catra actually appears to pause though, faltering. “You are . . .”

Even without looking at her, she can picture the wrinkled brow. Adora can’t help the smug grin that crosses her lips. “Yeah?”

Catra grips Adora's shaft tightly, pushing away her hesitance. A strangled croak from Adora revives her to tip her chin up, eyeing her. "I'll admit: you're bigger than I thought," she replies, a mocking edge in her voice, "but that means nothing."

Adora nods, yet a certain worry weakens her stomach into tensing as Catra begins her attempt to take her. Adora tries resting a hand on her hip, wanting to soothe her into being kind with herself, but she's met with a snappish "I'm fine!" but her voice is far too feeble to mean she's not hurting. As little experience Catra has, she knew it would be uncomfortable, but she didn't think it would cause this much trouble. Nevertheless, she forces herself down further, little spots of wetness on her lashes now brimming into full tears.

"Mistress--"

"No! I'm good!" Annoyed, she flicks away Adora's hand.

Much to her dismay, perhaps admittedly with some relief mixed in, Adora grasps onto her hips and makes her halt.

"How dare—"

" Catra ," Adora starts firmly, "you need to stop. Please, just give yourself a moment. I'm not asking you to hurt yourself. We have time."

Hearing her actual name leave Adora's mouth humbles her, her ears lowering a touch. "But . . ." There is no argument she can manage, now feeling embarrassed at having been lectured by someone who was meant to be nothing more than a distraction.

Adora sighs, gingerly stroking Catra's hair.

"How about you lay on your back instead? That way your, uh," her cheeks redden more, "your pet can properly treat you without too much pain."

Catra squirms. "No, I can do this . . ."

“You can, but it might be too much like this. Let’s try something slower.”

Catra doesn't move for a while, stubborn and feeling scratched open and raw like a fresh wound, but Adora's giving her a look she would cut anyone else for giving her. She averts her gaze.

"Come on. I want you to enjoy this, too.”

Catra’s ears flatten completely, pouting as she begrudgingly lifts herself off of Adora. She’s adjusted then, gently moved by Adora as she’s settled back onto the mattress.

“I think this is better.”

“Is this your way of being on top?”

Adora's huffs out a sound of amusement. "Not exactly my intention, but you do seem to be enjoying yourself.”

Catra's fur prickles at how Adora's voice drops, throaty and loud in intention. "Shut up.”

"Okay okay," Adora giggles, settling. " Okay . . . Just let me know when you're ready. Really ready, I mean.”

"Yeah, fine, I hear you . . .”

Catra nods then, tugging Adora close by her shirt, and Adora shuffles closer, bringing Catra’s legs to rest up on her thighs before just barely pushing herself inside. Catra twists her head, neck bare to Adora’s awaiting teeth if so desired; she was ready, her throat still so assailable, flexing as Catra pushes down drool. Yet Adora isn’t certain what to think. She's impatient when Adora stops, a growl tearing out from her chest; Catra’s neck clearly filled with an inferno as she bares her teeth, the low thundering of a rumble bringing Adora to want to see what the red of Catra’s blood looks on her own flesh. Adora could be awfully patient when she had something in mind though, willing to sit there on her knees to take in the sight of the grand Horde's leader under her, her chest flushed and heaving with breaths.

Catra's stomach tense up as Adora pushes in more. She hates to admit that stopping for a bit each time helped her get used to it, but every bit she moved caused the burning to return. Adora's finger tips are electric - it must be something with She-Ra inside her - for wherever their skin touches it's a sheer frenzy of static. As her hands move over Catra's skin her body has an evanescent paralysis. She's certain she is dreaming.

Only when she's halfway does the burn become something better, something of pleasure and she greedily bucks when Adora starts moving further in, just bottoming out before Catra mews. She cannot imagine how such a picture looks. A king broken on an alpha's cock; how she would slaughter any to keep this secret.

She feels her slick sticking to the knot pressed against her and swallows, squeezing her eyes tight, trying to just breathe deep. Adora grunts as she pulls out and Catra shivers at the wet sounds that follow, the pull of her walls almost forlorn in trying to suck Adora back in. Gods, was she that eager? Yes, she did just cum, but there seems to be so much and she hardly felt it other than a tremble that crossed her thighs.

Adora even notes this with how she stares between their bodies, watching with rapture as she pushes in again, sopping sounds of filth squelching between them before pulling out and then repeating. The start of steady thrusts is what drives Catra to wrap her arms back around Adora's neck, letting out breathy sighs and hums.

Adora feels every ounce of herself slipping the way the longer she stares down at Catra coming undone. The way her breasts bounce slightly with each thrust, the flushed cheeks and neck, the half-lidded eyes that silently beseech. It's all so much that she worries she'd do something she'd regret. Even if Catra was now pleading, urging her to go faster, her knot numbingly slapping against her cunt pushing away worries that desperately claw to remain in her brain, refusing to simply stop obeying Catra. There is something primitive driving her, urging her lowly pants to become fully heated grunts and growls as she starts pounding into her King.

"Catra, fuck, you're incredible," she praises, her voice scrapping its way from her sore throat.

"Just fuck me," is the brutish response she receives, Catra's jaws open wide like a trap with such sharp, wonderful fangs, and Adora crumples Catra's body close to her - caging her in with tensing arms as she rams into her with little grace. She not only stopped thinking about Catra's guards and court a long time ago - or her close companions like that scorpian woman with arms the size of fish barrels. Deep down in a pit that has opened in her stomach filled with nothing but molten want, she hoped one of those guards would come in and see how hard and fast she was plowing their King - her King. She's sure they can hear the wet slapping echoing off the walls. She wants them to in fact.

More than anything, she wants every other alpha that has been rejected to see a prisoner - a princess to add - able to bend their King and pour every inch she has inside. The absolute riveting feeling of claiming such a woman was almost too much to bear, and she's sure her gut is about to burst. With how the bedpost hits the walls and the springs letting out creaking wails, the tears in the sheets and pillows she is starting to notice, she can't imagine Catra lasting long either.

"Adora!"

Instead of the roaring cry of a finish, it sounds like Catra trying to grab her attention. She slows even as her brain bellows to continue, bite and just seal the deal. Catra is hers , it's screaming, She will ruin Catra for any other alpha if she tries to find another.

She manages, "Yeah, are you okay?" in what she thinks is a steady voice.

Catra presses a hand to her chest to gently push her back, clearly needing some breathing room from the tears in her eyes and the labored pants matching Adora's. "Yeah, just . . . I want to switch this up."

Switch it up? "Okay . . . how?"

Even with wet eyes and cheeks, she manages to look sly as she grins. "I might explain if you decide you can detach yourself from me."

Adora actually wonders if she's in any place to simply say "no." She doesn't, but she debated and weighed the repercussions.

The cold greeting her cock as she slips out nearly has her chasing after Catra as she manages her way off her bed; Adora can at least find pride in how Catra's legs tremble as she stands and walks out of Adora's view.

"Catra-"

"Not my name now, princess."

Sighing, Adora goes with, " Mistress , may I ask what you're doing?"

"Better, but no. Face in the sheets, ass up, I'll be back."

Seriously? Adora wants to be annoyed, her stupid barbaric alpha inside refusing to settle in her chest as they rage at being commanded, threatened at an omega not yet even claimed by her trying to decide what will happen to her. Choking back the ego, Adora listens, the cold still a perpetual reminder that Catra just left her just as she was there to a climax — she's never felt one so intense before and there Catra goes and stops her as if she has any control-

There's footsteps and then cooing. "That's what I like to see. Do me a favor: arms behind your back."

Adora grumbles before asking loud enough to hear, "I could, but I'd like to know what you think you're doing."

"You know, I don't appreciate the attitude I'm hearing. I'll lock you back in that cage, pet."

"You wouldn't."

"You want to test that theory?"

Adora does, jeering, "Not when you're still desperate for my d-" before her head hits the mattress with a hand against the back of her head.

"So this is what me being merciful towards you gets; ungrateful bitch," Catra rolls her shoulders back taking in the view she is rewarded having her very enemy bent by a single palm before she decides, "I think you'll be gagged for your poor manners. Thought those princesses would teach you better; was the shiny clothing and expensive treats distracting enough to not learn anything from your stay?"

No witty remark can make it clear past the sheets, Adora just muffled and irritated.

"Oh, perhaps those princesses were too busy actually trying to get your attention for themselves," Catra snorts, "You first came here stinking of that sparkly one."

Adora's brows furrow, Glimmer never saw her like that; she's an alpha herself - and while not unheard of for two alphas to mate - Glimmer very much seemed to be after Bow's lithe little tail. Attempting to defend herself earns her nothing except Catra grabbing her by her ponytail and yanking her up to force some sort of metal into her mouth.

"I trust my own nose more than I'd trust what you'd say, pet." Adora's face is back into the mattress, 'but what better way to send you back to your shimmering little princess than dripping wet and reeking of me ?"

Adora nearly cums, the promise of humiliation that awaits for her brings a guilty pleasure that flees her thoughts when Catra's hand finds its way between her thighs, squeezing her cock, claws out for a delicious warning.

"Gods, you are pitiful," she thumbs her tip, collecting the white there before taking her fingers away, "I now wonder if you should even be released," rope is wound around Adora's wrists, "because do you think the princesses would want back such a desperate slut?"

A garbled response earns her a cruel laugh, amplifying the heat rolling in waves in the air, pulsing with their shared heartbeats. This one experience between them like a rare Crimson Waste flower that will blossom only once a year - and for them surely only once in a lifetime.

Adora is being removed from the sheets that she was just growing comfortable with before, what has become routine for what she assumes has been two weeks, she is placed on her knees in front of the bed.

"I should have done this from the start," Catra kicks her legs up and sets them on Adora's shoulders, "You think my court would like to see She-Ra like this, too?"

Adora shakes her head.

"Aw, why not? They've heard so much about you, you know," she eyes how Adora's gaze lower and stare into the carpet, "I thought you enjoyed attention?"

Adora gives up responding, nothing more than spit leaving past her lips. Catra almost wants to remove it, but her usual loud-mouth friend reduced to a slobbering toy proves to be much better eye candy.

"I think I could set something up, you know," a foot leaves Adora's shoulders to rest near her inner thigh, "Maybe I could leave you right next to my throne. You could still be bound and gagged, even blindfolded if you wanted; it could help deal with the embarrassment once your other friends come to get you out, and find you not even having tried to escape."

Adora gurgles as Catra's foot slinks closer to her aching cock, a wicked smile on her lips as Adora's hips buck uselessly.

"Yeah, you still don't want to go, isn't that right? You could, I know it, yet you still remain here, and act like you hate this," the bottom of her foot glides against the underside of Adora's cock, and a pitiful whine escapes her, "I almost feel sorry for you."

Finally, she removes her foot from Adora's body to stand, getting Adora to her feet, her poor companion a little wobbly in the knees. At least only to be pushed over, stomach greeting the mattress, legs uselessly laying over the edge. Catra's palms find her ass, claws digging in slightly as she squeezes and spreads them through what is left of her tattered pants. That is until Catra is tearing through them, the air greeting her exposed ass.

"How cute," Catra purrs, a finger grazing towards her opening, Adora tensing, "I'm shocked, you really act like you haven't done anything back here before."

Adora shakes her head.

"We can change that."

Cocoons in her stomach burst into giant winged butterflies realizing Catra has removed herself once again to retrieve a toy for her mentioned plans, Adora left to feel how empty her stomach is, how much it aches with what could be. A hand striking her backside has her jolting, near gagged with Catra's returning overwhelming scent.

"As much as I want to take you like any alpha can with an omega, it also just wouldn't be as fun if you weren't comfortable. I want sounds of pleasure, not sniffling. So," she climbs on top of Adora, straddling her back, "We're going to figure out some codes for when you need to fully stop or need a break, understood?"

Adora gets Catra to wrinkle her nose as Adora cranes her neck to look at her.

"Don't look at me like that, this isn't for you!"
She can't help it, she laughs. Through such a bloody and steely exterior, Catra was still filled with warmth that spread to her reddening cheeks. Her laugh is an ugly sound, slobbering over her gag as she hiccups.

"What is wrong with you?"
Adora only shuts up when Catra grabs her by the throat, pressure at the front having her croak, but she manages a few huffs and a gulp as something passes into her asshole.

A grumble leaves Catra, something like "That's what I thought" before Catra actively speaks properly:

"While I will be checking in anyways even as you enjoy making a mockery out of this, I still don't think you should suffer through this, so you will understand something: You can hum to get my attention, I'm sure you have a fine tune the princesses have taught you. You can also blink at me, if you can keep your stupid head rolled to the side. I will also ask if you can snap your fingers?"

Adora nods, doing so to prove it.

"Good, that will be another way. There, three ways to grab my attention if you need a breath. If all else somehow fails, I'm pretty sure you can break free with She-Ra, yes?"

The only thing that has her thinking of is if She-Ra could show up naked. She almost wants to try then and there. She's pulled out of her thoughts when Catra pushes more of her finger inside, and a breathy sigh escapes her. Catra starts a steady rhythm of purrs, a sound that almost has Adora forgetting the start of discomfort the further her digit sinks in. She's tensing, and Catra's hand finds itself between her shoulder blades.

"Easy, princess, it's not going to be as fun if you're not relaxed."

That feels near impossible even as Catra drizzles more lube on her ass, the clear liquid the perfect highlight to how red Adora's cheeks have gotten.

"Look at me," Adora manages to meet her eyes with a crane of her neck, "Good. Blink twice if you're okay."

Two consecutive blinks. Catra is back to filling Adora's asshole with another finger, Adora taking her down to her two knuckles. Her breath further deepens, groaning as Catra sets a slow pace. A pause leaves Catra before she brings her hand down against her skin, enjoying the shade of cherry that matches Adora's cheeks.

"You know, maybe red really is your color. In fact, it's not that stupid jacket I hate," she pauses, close to a rasp in her ear, "It's how you hide your body."

Indignant, Adora shakes her head.

"Doesn't matter what you think, that jacket doesn't do you any favors. Honestly," more fabric tearing, "I could easily dress you. In fact, I could cover you however I deem fit because you'd let me."

Adora presses her face deep into the mattress, trying to breathe in, anything other than the pheromones Catra is constantly releasing, but no matter where she places her nose, it's that same level of snug spice that won't let her forget where she is — where she belongs.

Catra's finger leaves her before the cold silicone touches her opening, and she jolts forward away from it. Catra grabs her by the hair.

"Snap your fingers for me."

A quick snap, almost muffled.

"There's hope for you just yet."

She scoffs.

Catra pushes on forward, earning Adora's bucking down, the strange sound of a groan pushing past her gag. The sweetness is too much like ambrosia to a hero that already is praised to be a god. The more Catra pushes in the more she earns every sound out of the princess she knows no other has ever heard. Adora may be a god elsewhere, but here she is the more filthy commoner on stained knees, hands clasped while Catra as her beseeched Red King.

If only Catra could face the inside of Adora, grabbing her bound wrists in hand as her length starts slipping easier in and out, the disgusting sounds return between them. Did Adora ever wonder if this would happen if the two of them would find that as a new routine between them, how the two of them would see each other in the what was between. Would they ever see eye to eye when they sought out bedding each other?

"Catra!" Adora whines, a surprising clear call of her name through the gag.

Spurred on, Catra moves to dig her hands into Adora's lovely dipped hips, grabbing fistfuls of the tender, malleable flesh meant to be marked — a blank canvas to paint sickened desires on. An itch tickles the back of her jaw. Mark, claim maybe, appears in her mind. What's another regret to think about in the morning?

Another cry that expands from her chest so full of need, a sheer sound of primal urges that help permeate the stink that fills the room, heavy from their pores.

Catra coos at her, another push inside and she sees how swollen and red Adora's asshole is. "Do you enjoy feeling broken down?"

A sputtering cry that has Adora press back into Catra before she's buckling, thighs trembling and Catra reaches around to grab her cock, and gives it a firm stroke.

"No one will ever be able to do this for you," Catra purrs into the shell of Adora's ear, "You will forever be tainted by me, and you will come crawling back, knowing this is the only place where you can have such sick wishes be realized."

It's hardly any more pumps and a push and pull of her hips until Adora is finishing, a mess of see-through white spilling onto the King's mattress, soiling the satin sheets with a story of enemies ruining a future that could prove normal if such thoughts didn't spring turmoil.

"Pathetic." Catra nips her ear. "You actually got off. I almost wish I had it recorded, just to treasure it for myself. A reminder that being an alpha means nothing."

Adora growls before relenting, the hot heat of her orgasm having crossed trembles in her limbs. She whimpers when Catra continues milking her, rubbing life back into her aching cock.

"You're not done yet, princess, I've hardly had any fun yet."

A sheer river of desideratum washes over her, the urge to have Catra use her body however she saw fit; she wanted to be graced with time that woefully was stretching thin. Catra, perhaps even knowing that, works her jaw like she wants to say something more, maybe a small piece of affection or understanding; it could be assistance, or a chance for Adora to rest. It may be a simple expectation of reciprocity expressed. Instead, Catra cuts the ropes from her wrists, tugs the rest of her clothes away, handling Adora to get onto her back, and yanks the gag from her mouth before climbing on top of her. Just like how they started who knows how long ago, but now Catra has an air of proper command, Adora properly whittled into a loved doll.

Catra allows Adora's hands on her hips, guiding their halves together until Adora splits the loving King above her, the itch returning in her jaw as Catra hiccups. She's so tense, mirroring Adora's own muscles taut with careful work to lower her.

Bottoming out is pure intoxication. In the room of black twilight the red becomes Adora's favorite color: the red of rust, the red of bloodwood — she only ever wants the red that made her think of Catra. Adora's arms wrap around her in one precarious pull; Adora feels Catra's hands in her hair, watching it tumble as she releases it and her hips are moving down on her then. She is as consistent as a sunset arriving every night — as warmly colored and as comforting. Catra's hands are on her cheekbones and then to her lips, dragging her thumbs at the corners as if thoughtful.

The time the kissing starts, their bodies fit together being perfectly sticky and reeking of pheromones that bleed into one. It's a feeling of the natural rhythm like a rainstorm: powerful and abraded, and vulnerable to be left open in it. With a near mute laugh, Adora helps bring Catra up and down when Catra nips her nose before they're dragging their tongues against the other's. Toes curling, fingers searching and pressing into little divots, moans are closeted and private to their ears only.

Her hand alights from her face, moving down past her collar bones. Adora's brain is on fire, realizing Catra is a breathing angel with fingertips of flames, kneading at her breasts and pinching little squeaks and huffs from her companion.

For a moment — an honest moment with no wall between — Adora saw Catra's eyes looking down at her and believed there was love in there for her; loving her as much as a wounded woman could. The heat, the redness, the sheer musk of their creation is too much; Adora can't force the memory she's curating to last any longer and Catra is caught in a climax, Adora's name a whine in her throat that Adora silences with another kiss. Adora's hands rub along Catra's lower back and thighs, easing the trembles that almost wrack her entire frame. Adora wants to be medication for her, she wants Catra to easily apply her like balm whenever the wounds get too bad.

It's over before Adora can speak though, Catra sliding off of her, and Adora left to pump herself until she spills into her own palm. Something urges her to be outraged that she wastes a part of herself on the floor, instead of somewhere inside like Catra's womb, but the exhaustion creeps up on her swiftly, and she desires shelter in Catra's arms and on her pillows.

A humiliating thought when she finds Catra is wiping herself down, grabbing fresh clothes so she may shower. She finds Adora staring, and Adora expects a quip, perhaps telling her she shouldn't have expected anything to begin with; she helped Catra through her heat, that was all there needed to be.

Instead, she seems to consider her words, and through clearing her throat, states, "Don't make a mess while I bathe." Then she's gone into the room to the opposite of Adora, the door shut, the walls up higher than ever before.

Adora does manage to attempt sleep then after forgoing the shreds of what was left of her clothes, finding herself not at all disgusted to sleep in their leftover filth even as her mind has cleared from the haze that came with the King's heat. All she can feel is an ache that flares in her stomach, an intolerance to a confession left festering. Doubled over into herself, not touching a blanket to cover her shame, she dreams of the color red.

"I'd really prefer we don't make this a routine."

On her knees was Adora, in the exact same position as she was weeks back; her hands bound in front of her with thick twine, the guards having slammed her down on her knees hard enough to bruise. It's like déjà vu — maybe like clockwork — if she was feeling humorous Catra would say maybe it was a higher power. Adora looks no different than the last she saw her: her hair tied back, and that damn uniform having been stitched and not a wrinkle to be seen. Only no red jacket is worn.

Not a hint on her of what they were before for a night.

Catra has simply never seen a fool more devoted. At first glance Adora’s actions appear scattered, her choices non-congruent with what the Rebellion wants, yet the key to her making sense to others was to see how Catra took her in, how her face changed in her presence. Catra knew what love was, what it was not, and so she bid the guards away to toss Adora back into her quarters once more. As much as she knew though, Adora had her feeling like she was fending for herself all over again.

She catches a scowl from Lonnie as she heads towards her half of the castle, and for once, she doesn't have the conviction to return her stare. She ducks her head as she quickly finds herself at her bedroom door, pushing inside to find Adora standing stiff. For someone that willingly throws herself into the winter den filled with snakes, she seems bothered being somewhere she had marked thoroughly with her odor.

It took at least three days for it to finally come out of Catra’s sheets, and even scrubbed from her clothes as well.

“You going to stand there and gape or are you going to explain why you're here?”

“Thought it was obvious.”

She wants to say it is, but no, it’s not. The princesses came eventually when Adora slept that night, only waking when Catra told her to go, and to take her little friends with her. For someone that cared so much for the downfall of the Horde, her eyebrows knitted together as if hurt. There were emotions fighting in her face, eyes taking in Catra like it would be the last, until she nodded and took the remains of that red jacket and what clothes could fit on her before she dipped out into the hallway that began blaring with sirens. Catra had watched the cameras later, the split confusion on the sparkly princess’ face when she saw the black Adora wore, but still brought her into a hug, speaking to one another before they were gone in a flash of pink magic that left shimmering spots in the air for a moment.

Catra had never snarled like that before watching different hands place themselves on Adora, enveloping her and wrinkling their noses at how she smelled; disgusted with Catra's work she left behind on their god. She had to get some air after that, far from her land.

Now here her idiot stands, awaiting something — anything perhaps.

"You shouldn't have come back." An easy statement to try and show disinterest.

Yet Adora is firm, taking a step forward, but not yet close to touch what she wants to. "Yet, here I am."

"You are . . ."

Another step forward, and then another until Catra can smell her clearly. There's a shift in her stature, anxiety peeking through, but there's something determined in those blue eyes, a color that hardly exists somewhere so filled with red.

"I came here for you." Catra turns her head away, but Adora continues, "You've been quiet as of late. I haven't even seen any of your army out and about."

"Shouldn't you be happy?" A snarky question, but still genuine.

"I would be if it wasn't for the fact that I know you. If something is wrong you can tell me, Catra, I . . . I want you to be okay."

Fuck Adora for always getting under her skin, for always making their conversation be so much more than the spoken words; she makes all her small smiles, her shrugs and the light in her eyes mean everything — she makes Catra want to savor it. Her concern so quick that it's natural, added with her attentiveness to what Catra does, what she can't say. She makes Catra want to willingly learn through the cycles of fire and ash, to not burn everything she touches.

“Catra-”

Catra’s hand snaps out to grab Adora by the collar, tearing her down from her stupid high horse to kiss her, to taste lips she’s thought of for at least two weeks. Adora makes a noise of surprise, but her hands fall to Catra’s hips, grasping skin that belongs to her. Catra opens her mouth, hot breath that Adora catches as her tongue glides inside, the ignited passion as palpable as a thousand quivering strings. It’s so real, a primal desire to remain huddled together, awake and connected by their red beating hearts.

When Catra takes a step back, Adora’s lips chase after, a dying whine in her throat.

“Hush, princess.” Adora is spun in white and gold, a watercolor painting. “You make everything so difficult.”

Catra makes her step back with a single finger, leading her with simple pressure on her chest until Adora steps back against her bed frame. She almost wants to watch how Adora stays rooted, how obedient she is, how she’s just eager to please. She still had that quirk when she was young when she would pick at her fingers, giving away her itch to move.

“Lay down.”

She does.

Adora was soft, a kind of warmth married to her near shyness. Adora was always honest whether she liked it or not, looking at her alone told Catra everything. She didn’t deserve her. For how reserved she appeared, they were anything but restrained for what came next.

Adora’s reticence had vanished like it was never there in the first place, like it was a visual joke. Adora ran her hands over Catra’s stomach, almost grabbing her to lift her up to the brilliant morning sun. There was no trace of black or even red on her. What had been before was fading from memory, as if it wasn't just erased from the silk, but from history all together. With the reminder the door is closed, that they are working each other up whether they touch or not, every pretense falls. The facade they show the world melts away and all they want is to fuck each other's brains out. Every kiss is raw intensity — they're breathing fast, heart rates faster. They're naked without another word shared, skin moving together like they're weaving a web. Catra feels her hand enter from below, their tongues entwined before Adora is then inside, changing her breathing with every thrust, her lungs seared from her forever. She tells Catra she's going to make her beg for it and she just moans, unable to articulate a response. In seconds she's on Catra again, fucking her harder. If it's begging she wants, she's gonna have to stop long enough for Catra's brain to start working again first.

When Catra does dream that night, she's sitting in a field of wheat, the stalks bending lazily in the wind. Each one is distinct and though different from the others, perfectly formed. She runs her hand along the edge to feel the combination of rough and smooth and then holds my face upward to feel the warm light of a typical mid summer day on Etheria. The air smells right and the birds fly in an almost cloudless sky. The field goes on forever it seems when she peaks above the sea of yellow, and she's okay with that. Her feet become roots, digging into the soil so she may also become wheat, happily waving in the wind.

As long as she isn't so red anymore.
