You & Me

by Midnight_Owl2

Summary

Catra and Adora often discuss aspects of their past life during the Horde: they share many good memories and some not so good. For Catra, growing up in the Horde with her best friend was also a confusing time for her, mainly because she started to have strong feelings for Adora and wasn't sure what they meant... turned out she was in love with Adora.

This series explores eight moments in Catra's and Adora past that lead up to the start of my fic: Together at the End of the World. All chapters are written from Catra's POV to match the theme of that these prequel chapters link with.

Notes

This fic is a eight chapter prequel story to my original fic: Together at the End of the World. The first chapter is a continuation of part 1 of this series (Catra's Past). The remaining chapters may not make sense if you haven't read my original fic (Together at the End of the World) so I'd advise reading it before continuing.

TATEOTW readers - Each chapter is relevant to something that occurred/was mentioned within certain chapters of Together at the End of the World. Catra and Adora are at different ages for each chapter. I will identify what age they are and identify what TATEOTW chapter conversation/action links to each chapter. Hope you enjoy reading.

This story updates everyday until all chapters are published. Please let me know what you think in the comments. Hope you enjoy :)

First Meeting

Chapter Summary

Adora finds a young Magicat in a cardboard box that had been left in the Fright Zone Corridors.

Adora gives the young Magicat a name.

Adora and the young Magicat become Best Friends and their Adventure begins.

Catra and Adora are around the ages 3/4
TATEOTW chapter connection is Chapter 4 (Alone) & Chapter 17 (Now or Never).

"Hi, I'm Adora. Do you want to be friends?"

This person, or Adora as I have come to learn her name, doesn't seem to be a threat. Obviously, I'm still on edge after the ordeal I've just been through. I'm in a strange place, with strange sounds, strange smells and strange people, but this person doesn't seem too bad. She's smiling at me, has bright blue eyes that sparkle and long blonde hair on the top of her head, it looks nothing my mane. Why isn't she covered in fur like me? I've never seen someone like her before.

I lean forwards cautiously and sniff her cheek. Adora smells like soap, I like her. I nuzzle my cheek against hers letting her know that I'm not a threat. She responds by giggling…

"Hehe that tickles."

Adora proceeds to scratch behind my ear, which causes me to let out a low purr. Adora instantly lights up at the sound I'm making and proceeds to scratch my ear more, causing me to purr even louder. This is the first sense of comfort I've felt since getting here. I wonder why isn't she purring?

"What's your name?"

My name? Well I have a name but I for some reason can't recall what it is. I only mewl in response to her questions, too scared and embarrassed to say anything.

"Do you not have a name?"

I want to respond but my attention is immediately directed elsewhere. My ear lie flat against my head and my tail puffs up, a looming dark shadow passes across the walls. Adora mustn't seem to notice it…

"I know, how about I give you one. Many of us in the Horde make up our own names."

The Horde? So that's where I am… what's the Horde?

"Okay let's see… I'll admit I'm not great with names. Urm okay… oh I think I've got it. How about Whiskers?"

My nose scrunches up at the name suggested. I don't like that one.

"Okay maybe not. How about... Fluffy?"

Fluffy? Really? Just because I'm covered in fur? I growl in disapproval. I refuse to be given a name that makes people think I'm cute… I'm not cute!

"Okay I get it, you don't like that name. No need to be grumpy at it. Okay let me think… my name ends in 'ra'. We're friends now so we want everyone to know that we're friends. You look like some sort of cat hybrid… I got it! How about Catra?"

Catra? I like it. Feels familiar and comfortable.

I meow at Adora before jumping out of the box and pushing her to the ground, rubbing my cheeks against her. I start to purr once more, letting her know that I approve. Adora starts to giggle and eventually sits up. Her arms wrap around my neck and pull me into… a hug? This feels nice, warm and safe."

"My Catra."

I move to snuggle into the embrace. For some reason it feels safe in Adora arms. Like nothing can harm me…

"ADORA WHAT DO YOU THINK YOU'RE DOING!?"

Something yanks me out of the embrace and dangles me off the ground from the scruff of my neck. Usually this doesn't hurt, but this creature is digging their nails into my skin.

"Shadow Weaver let her go please! She's my friend."

Shadow Weaver? Where have I heard that name before? I attempt to turn my head to see the red-masked creature that I was warned about earlier. She's scarier than I though. I attempt to break free from her grasp but I'm stunned by some form of red electricity.

"Stop please! You're hurting her!"

Adora's cries sound desperate, I wonder if she can feel my pain. Despite this new pain I'm experiencing, I manage to turn my crawls enough to scratch the creatures wrist before giving her a solid bite to her hand. The witch screams and releases me from her grasp. I fall to the ground and immediately hide behind the only thing that makes me feel safe, Adora.

"You little brat! How did you end up here? Your kind has been eliminated. Adora step aside so I can dispose of this creature immediately."

My fur stands on end and I aggressively hiss at the witch. I can sense that she has access to evil power and my instincts tell me not to trust her one bit. She levitates forward but Adora blocks her path, arms out wide protecting me.

"Adora don't be foolish. Stand aside before this abomination hurts you."

"That abon… abon-i-nay-shon... has a name. Her name is Catra and she's my best friend."

Looks like I'm not the only one still learning to say certain words, but I have never heard of that one before.

"Adora don't be so stupid. Look at it. It can barely defend itself and Lord Hordak won't waste time training something that shows no signs of skill or intelligence."

"Then I'll teach her. I'll train her to be one of the Horde best soldiers, I promise. Please Shadow Weaver. She's… she's the only friend I have."

What does she mean, I'm her only friend? She's the nicest person I've met so far in this dump. Anyone would be lucky to have her as a friend.

The witch sighs and the white orbs of her mask look down in defeat.

"Very well Adora. I'm only agreeing to this as I know how difficult it has been for you to make friends, especially because everyone else is much older than you. However, this Catra is your responsibility. If she fails you are automatically letting down the Horde and we don't want that now do we?"

Adora looks down saddened by the remark. I mewl, a way of asking is she okay. Adora looks down at me as I'm currently on all fours trying to hide from the witch but I can tell Adora needs comforting. She strokes the top of my head and smiles.

"I understand. We won't let you down Shadow Weaver."

“See to it that you don’t.”

With that remark the witch slowly floats away and into the distance. Adora releases a breath that she hadn’t realize she was holding. She helps me stand and takes on of my hands in hers, guiding me down the dark corridor...

“Don’t worry too much about Shadow Weaver. She can be scary at times but she just wants what’s best for us. Come on, I’ll show you around. You can borrow some of my uniform until we get yours’ sorted. It may be a bit big for you but it will do. You can have the bunk above mine if you’d like. I think you’ll fit in here in no time.”

Chapter End Notes

Hope you enjoyed reading the first official prequel chapter about Catra and Adora growing up in the Horde. This one specifically links to conversations that occurred between Catra and Adora in TATEOTW Chapter 4 (Alone) and briefly in Chapter 17 (Now or Never). I can't wait to share the remaining chapters with you. Please comment and let me know what you think. The next chapter will be uploaded tomorrow and we'll get to see how the original squadron first meeting went. See you then.

Drawings & The Squadron

Chapter Summary

Adora and Catra get ready to meet their new Squadron Members.

Catra and Adora decide to draw whilst they wait.

Meeting their new friends doesn't quite go according to plan.

Catra and Adora are around the ages 6/7
TATEOTW chapter connection doesn't apply to this part - I wanted to add it in for the fun of it :)

Chapter Notes

“Shadow Weaver says we’ve got some new recruits joining us today with the others being promoted to another squadron. She says that they’ll be our team for the rest of our lives. I just hope they’re nice. What do you think Catra?”

Adora’s been an anxious mess since getting up this morning. We’ve only just back to the barracks from breakfast, well lunch, and she still hasn’t calmed down. We have some new members joining our team today, or at least what’s left of it. We shared the barracks with a few soldiers a little older than us but they’ve all be moved to a new team with people more their age. Shadow Weaver has said that for Adora to become a future force captain she should lead her own squadron. Thankfully, Adora managed to persuade Shadow Weaver to keep me on her team. I don’t see why we have to meet these new people though. Adora and I are a team, we only need each other. I'm glad everyone else is gone though. I didn’t like or trust them one bit. They try and pull on my tail in the night. One of them went too far and I scratched their eye out. She deserved it too, she's a stupid dumb face. Adora and

I still have a few years to go before we progress to elite team level.

“Who cares what Shadow Weaver says. You know I don’t like her Adora. Knowing her, she might have given us the weakest members to ensure we fail. You need to relax.”

“I can’t relax Catra, I’m excited to meet new people but I’m also nervous about meeting them. What if… what if they don’t like me? What if I’m a terrible future force captain? I don’t want to fail Catra.”

Sensing Adora's distress I jump down from my bunk and land besides her. She flinches when I land, she clearly wasn’t expecting me to do that.

“Adora you’re my best friend. Who cares if they don’t like you, you’ve still got me. Anyone in the entire Fight Zone would be lucky to have you as their future force captain. Really I think we could rule this place as just you and me. Besides, you’re not going to fail Adora, you're too stubborn to fail. What’s the worst that could happen?”

Adora smiles at me and I instantly start to purr. That’s when I get an idea, something that will distract and relax her.

“Hey, do you want to do something whilst we wait?”

“What do you have in mind?”

I reach into my back pocket and pull out two sharp coloured pens, one blue and one red. I found them when routing through some of the older cadets stuff that they left behind.

“Do you want to see who has the better artistic skills?”

“Catra we don’t even have anything to draw on.”

“Sure we do, we could draw it right here on your bunk wall.” I respond giving the metal wall and bang.

“I didn’t think of that.”

"That's why I'm the smart one and your the pretty one. So… what do you think we should draw?”

“How about me and you?”

“Why would you want a drawing of us on there?”

“Because we’re best friends. By drawing our faces on here it will show not only that this bunk belongs to us but it will also show everyone who lives in here with us that we’re best friends.”

Now Adora has explained it, it does make more sense. Adora I immediately get to work, cutting into the metal with the pens edge and colouring in the gaps its leaves behind. When finished we are left with two amazing drawings of each other, or at least amazing to a pair of six year olds.

“I like them. What do you think Catra?”

“They’re alright I guess. Do you think we could trade careers from Horde soldiers to artists?”

Adora and I both start to giggle when the barrack doors suddenly open, startling us both. We stand at attention before relaxing when we notice three new figures standing before us: a young girl about our age, a young boy who may be about a year or two younger than us and some small green lizard thing on the floor beside him.

“You must be the new recruits. Hi, I’m Adora and this is Catra.”

My attention is diverted elsewhere, elsewhere being that small green lizard thing on the floor… why do I feel a primal instinct all of a sudden?

“I’m Lonnie, this is Kyle and the green thing over there is Rogelio. He’s still growing but he’ll be massive and strong her he reaches his full size. He won’t even look so lizard like anymore.”

“Well it’s a pleasure to meet you all. I’m sure we’ll make a great team right Catra?... Catra?... CATRA NO!”

“What I’m not doing anything?”

“CATRA DROP ROGELIO NOW!”

“Fine.”

Rogelio drops to the floor and scurries up Kyle’s leg and into his arms, before hissing at me.

“Catra what was that for?”

“I don’t know something came over me and I have to pounce you know.”

“Are you crazy? We’ve only just met you and your already seem like a weirdo.” Lonnie practically screams. I move forwards, fangs bared and claws ready, but the sensation of Adora's hand on my shoulder calms me instantly.

“Sorry about that. Catra’s a Magicat and sometimes her natural instincts take over. Are you okay Rogelio?”

The small lizard looks up at Adora and nods happily. I can’t help instinct, it happens sometimes. Shadow Weaver has already tried to ‘burn’ it out of me with little success. She says my primal instinct makes me worthless and disgusting. I can’t help being me. Adora likes me for being me and I like the way I am, regardless of what anyone else thinks.

“Who knows, maybe Rogelio will get his own back on Catra one day when he’s fully grown and not so lizard-like anymore.” Kyle says and they all start to chuckle.

Rogelio did get his revenge a few years later when we were twelve.

“Ah let go of me you big, overgrown lizard. I said I was sorry years ago.”

“There’s no way he’s letting go of you Catra, you knew this was coming.”

“Urgh… Adora talk some sense into your team.”

“Alright Rogelio, you’ve had your fun, let Catra go.”

The Watch Tower

Chapter Summary

Catra finds something that she wants to show Adora.

Catra has claws but Adora doesn't so they have to improvise.

Both Catra and Adora declare there new find their secret hideout.

“Catra slow down!”

I'm far ahead from Adora, currently winning our little race. I have something I want to show her, to share with her, a place only to be used my myself and Adora, but she’s got to catch up with me first.

“Come on Adora, we’re not far away now.”

Somewhere behind me I hear Adora’s footsteps pick up in speed. I can’t wait to show her what I’ve found. Adora and I have had a stressful week with training. So much so we haven’t really had much time to ourselves. It's been kind of lonely. I’ve managed to drag her away from the barracks for one night and I’m not about to waste it. I found this place when avoiding Shadow Weaver, she wasn’t able to find me anywhere. That why I know this place is perfect, perfect for me and Adora to be ourselves.

I come to a halt when I reach where I want to go. Now all that's left is to wait for Adora. My foots taps on the floor and my tail sways impatiently. After a moment or two an exhausted Adora appears from around the corner.

“Took you long enough.”

“Hey. I can’t run on my hands and feet like you can. Besides, this week’s training has really tired me out, unlike you who missed the last one.”

“What can I say Adora, work smarter not harder. We both know we didn’t need to attend that last one, it was optional, well for you it was anyway.”

Adora looks up before looking back at me…

“Is this what you wanted to show me? Some big metal tower?”

“Get over yourself. The thing I want to show you is all the way up there.”

“How exactly do you expect me to get up there Catra? I don’t have claws like you?”

“Good job I came prepared then. You’re going to use this to get up there and I’ll meet you at the top.”

I throw Adora a grappling hook attached to a target gun and start my climb up the structure.

“Come on Adora, we haven’t got all night.”

I hear Adora giggle before I notice her firing the grappling hook up to the highest platform possible. It’s a long way up so she better not look down.

I eventually reach the top and I give Adora a helping hand to get over the railing. Last thing I want is for her to fall from this height. I know she probably won’t but I know far too well how clumsy she can sometimes be.

“This is what I wanted to show you.”

I guide Adora over to the watch tower platform ledge that overlooks the entire Fright Zone. Vast metal structures climb to the highest point, smog and steam can be seen floating around. Some skiffs are visible as they pass through the structures below. Sure this place is a bit rusty and dull but it’s home. I can’t even picture what lies outside these walls.

“Wow, Catra this is… incredible. I never knew the Fright Zone was so big. How did you find this place?”

“Ah you know me. Always exploring.”

Adora looks at me with a smirk appearing across her face. She knows I’m lying, she can read me like an open book.

“Okay you got me. I was hiding from Shadow Weaver and I found this place. I though, maybe, this could be our secret hideout. No one can get up here unless they have claws like me or a grappling hook like you. No one but us has to know about this place. We could make it our special place.”

Adora smiles at me. I start to blush unsure of why I suddenly feel so happy to be with her. I’m always happy when I’m with Adora but for some reason, this time it feels different. Adora nudges my side, slightly knocking me off balance, but it brings me back to reality.

“I’d like that. This will be our little secret hideout.”

We spend the rest of the night up on that watch tower, content with each other’s company. We’ve been going there every night since the night it became our secret spot.

Sleepovers are the best. Adora and I stay up all night telling jokes, playing tricks on Kyle and sharing silent whispers long into the night. Recently I've been feeling closer to Adora. I'm not quite sure how to describe it but when I'm near her I get a sensation of something like creepy crawlies in my stomach and chest. It's not a bad feeling, just a weird one. I'd ask Adora what she thinks it means but I don't think that's such a good idea considering it happens when I'm near here. I'm not happy about it keeping it from Adora, but if it continues I may have to ask Lonnie what it means. She seems to know a lot about, well stuff. You know what forget it, I'll just put up without and hope it goes away. If not then I'll have to put up with it.

"That prank we pulled on Kyle today was hilarious. I never knew he was so afraid of spiders."

The recognizable sound of Adora's voice and laugh catches my attention. We're lying side by side on Adora's bed, both of us starting at the bunk roof.

“I can’t believe he jumped off his bunk and into Rogelio’s arms. I’m surprised Rogelio didn’t even alert Kyle about our prank never alone mind catch him."

“It’s almost a good as the time you jumped into my arms because you saw a mouse.”

Adora and I end up in a fit of laughter. Stars I love her laugh, it makes me smile. I turn my head ever so slightly to face her. Her hair is lose, sprawled against her pillow. She looks so radiant with her hair down.

Curiosity gets the better of me. I have to ask if she knows what this feeling inside of me means.

“Hey Adora.”

“Yeah?”

“Do you ever get a weird feeling in your stomach and chest?”

“What do you mean?”

“Well, sometimes, when I’m with you, I get a strange sensation in my stomach and chest, almost like something is fluttering in there.”

Adora sits up in alarm and starts asking as series of panicked questions.

“Catra are you okay? Why didn’t you tell me sooner? Should I go and get help? I don’t want you to be in pain because of me?”

I sit up quickly and place both hands on Adora’s shoulder, trying to calm her down…

“Wow Adora slow down. I’m okay really. I was just asking if you know what it meant. It’s not a bad feeling, it just feels strange.

I've had it for a while now so it's nothing to worry about. It's actually… nice."

I blush at the last statement. It does feel nice, I'm just scared as to what it means. Maybe asking Adora about this wasn't such a good idea. Adora starts to visibly relax and moves forward to pull me into a tight hug… well I wasn't expecting that.

"Thanks Stars. You scared me then Catra."

I chuckle and return her hug. I suddenly start to purr.

"Sorry I didn't mean to scare you. All I wanted to do was to ask you if you knew what it meant."

Adora loses her grip and faces me again once more.

"Sorry Catra I don't know what it means."

"Oh okay, well that's fine, guess I'll check it out with one of the doctors when I next go to the medics. Not that I ever get sick or anything."

Adora smiles weakly before lying back down on her bed. I'm a little bit disappointed as I'm still let with so many unanswered questions. Adora pats the pillow beside her and I lay next to her once more, only this time we're facing each other.

"You know, now that you mention it, I do happen to know what you mean."

My ears perk up and my eyes open wide. My tail playfully bats behind me on the barracks floor. I have yet to tuck it in under the blankets.

"You do?"

"Yeah I do. It's like something running in circles in your stomach and I can feel my heart beating slightly faster. It's not something scary but it feels weird, but a nice weird. I feel it when I'm around you."

I start to feel my cheeks burning up, I'm not sure why. It's nice to hear that I'm not the only one who has to suffer with whatever this feeling is.

"Adora can I ask you?"

"Anything."

Okay deep breathes. She knows how things have been recently and how hard times are being. Now's your chance to ask her if this is what she really wants.

"Is this what you really want?"

"What do you mean by that?"

"What I mean is do you really want to stay in the Fright Zone forever. Have you ever thought about maybe trying to escape? Getting out of here and live a free life. Explore what lies outside these walls. You know, run away together, just you and me."

Adora takes a few moments to think. Her eyebrows furrowed in concentration. She's clearly thinking about how to answer this…

"Honestly, I have thought about it Catra. I'm fed up with feeling like I have to be the best, I have to prove my worth. There have been may times I have wanted to run away and take you with me but everytime I try I can't seem to do it. We'd have nowhere to go, the evil princesses would take us prisoner and there's no telling what they'd do to us. Right now the only place we belong is here. There is no where out there who would take two Horde fugitives, that's if we got out anyway. I've had to learn to accept it. The Horde found me as a baby and if it wasn't for them then I don't know what would have happened to me. I kind of owe the Horde my life, or at least that's what Shadow Weaver tells me. Right now, all I want is a future where you and me are alive. It's why I'm eager for us to work our way to the top of the Horde so we can rule Etheria together and decide what happens. I don’t know what I’d do if I lost you Catra. You’re my best friend and the only thing that makes this place bearable.”

Hearing Adora talk like this is new, I've never seen this side of Adora. I wish we could run away and escape this living nightmare. But Adora’s right, leaving is basically a death trap. Our best hopes are to work our way to the top and rule Etheria together.

“You don’t need to worry about me Adora. I’ve survived many things and I’ll survive many more with you by my side. I get what you mean though. You look out for me and I look out for you. As long as we have each other nothing really bad will happen. It will be me and you together at the end of the world.”

Adora and I spend the rest of the night talking, laughing and mainly enjoying being near each other. Since that night I came to learn that the feeling I had when near Adora was associate with love.

I love Adora.

It’s the middle of the night, everyone is fast asleep, all except me that its. Somethings feels off, as in doesn’t feel right. I can hear someone mumbling, shuffling about in their unconscious state which is stopping me from getting a good night’s rest. Usually I’d be annoyed and throw a pillow at whoever it is but this person sounds familiar.

I peer down over the side of my bed, which is above Adora’s, only to have my suspicions concerned. Adora’s quite restless in her sleep and looks uneasy with whatever she is dreaming about.

We’ve all had a few stressful days. Training sessions have been unforgiving recently. They’re more grueling, more demanding than before. I wouldn’t be surprised if Adora is having a nightmare especially after today events.

Adora starts to mumble something in her sleep…

“No, Shadow Weaver! Please don’t hurt her!”

Don't hurt who?

"Let her go please. I'll do anything you want."

Oh shit now she's sleep fighting. I have to wake her before she hurts herself. I jump down as quietly as possible to Adora's side. I place my hand on her shoulder, gently encouraging her to try and wake up.

"Hey Adora. It's okay. It's just a nightmare. Try and wake up."

Adora becomes more panicked in her sleeping state and nothing I'm doing seems to be making a difference. I didn't want to do this but it may be the only way to wake her up. I dig my claws into her bare shoulder, not enough to make her bleed but enough to wake her up.

Adora eyes fly open and her arm swings round, punching me directly in the face. Thankfully, her sleepy haze meant she didn't punch at her full strength but it still hurt.

"OUCH! What the fuck was that for?"

Rather than answering my questions Adora continues to blindly aim at me. She must still be a bit delirious as she doesn't seem to recognize where she is… oh wait she can't see as well in the dark like I can. I grab Adora's wrists so she can't hurt herself by blindly punching in all directions. Last thing we need tonight is a trip to the medical bay due to a broken wrist.

"Hey Adora calm down. It's only me, Catra. You were having a nightmare."

Adora seems to recognize my voice and immediately starts to calm down, certain that she is no longer in danger. Her hands moves to lace ours together. It feels weird to do this but I'm not complaining. It takes a few minutes for her eyes to adjust but when they do they immediately look into mine. Adora's eyes look glassy, almost as if she was on the verge of crying. It must have been a really bad nightmare.

“Sorry I didn’t mean to wake you.”

“It’s okay Adora. I was awake anyway. I’ll just have to remember to dodge your punches when I wake you up.”

“I didn’t did I? Catra I’m so sorry. Are you okay?”

I can't help but snicker. Adora's always one to worry, no matter how tired she is.

“I’m fine don't worry about it. Besides, you didn’t mean it. You were having a nightmare.”

Adora’s eyes fall to the floor and she turns away from me. I sense her body starting to tremble. I think her nightmare might have scared her a bit, even if it was only a dream.

“Do you want to talk about it?”

Adora takes a deep breath and squeezes my hands tighter. My tails moves to gently strokes the side of her leg, letting her know that I’m ready to listen when she is ready to tell.

“Shadow Weaver has been haunting my sleep for the past few nights but tonight was the worst. Our squadron failed one of the training simulations and Shadow Weaver was angrier than I have ever seen her. However, I had expected her to only punish me as I was the leader of our squadron but no. Shadow Weaver said that the most suitable punishment for me was to hurt those who I cared about. She dragged you into that room Catra and I was forced to watch. You were in so much pain. I begged her to stop but she wouldn’t listen. I tried to get to you so I could stop her but I was held down but so sort of evil power. Me sleep fighting was me fighting that evil power, trying to get to you. I failed Catra.”

Tears start to leave Adora’s eyes and I instinctively pull Adora into a tight embrace. Adora holds me tight in response and muffles her crying against my chest. My hand gently strokes through her long blonde hair. I remove Adora's hair band to make it easier for her to relax.

Even in her dreams that bitch has to haunt her. Isn't it bad enough that this is our reality.

"Shhhhhh, It's okay Adora. I'm here. I'm not going anywhere."

After a while Adora calms down and I can tell she's starting to feel tired by the way her body is resting against mine.

"Can you stay with me tonight please? I'm too scared to fall back asleep on my own. You help keep my nightmares away."

"Yeah I can do that. I'll sleep at your feet though so you can't punch me again. I'll be right here all night long okay."

Adora smiles and settles back against her pillow and I get comfy in my new resting stop.

The nights turn into weeks, and the weeks turn into months. Adora's sleep fighting still continues but her nightmares haven't been as drastic with me sleeping at her feet. Everytime they occur I gently dig my claws into her leg and she immediately awakes. She tells me what they were about, we talk until she settles down and we fall back asleep. Some nights I'll sneak up the side of the bed and sleep beside Adora without her knowing. I myself have been sleeping better with Adora near me. It's a shame I can't sleep by her side every night because believe me if I could, I would.

Adora's Jacket

Chapter Summary

Catra has a surprise for Adora.

Adora can read Catra like an open book.

Adora loves her surprise and Catra gives it her own personal touch.

Okay, now I have to work out what to tie this thing together with. I search around the barracks looking for something that I could used to wrap up Adora's present in. Adora has been really stressed out lately, training has been taking its toll on all of us but Adora the most. She's been really good with helping us all out, making sure that we're as strong as we can be and have everything we need. Unfortunately she has been sacrificing herself for the more demanding protocols and taking on more than she can bite. I wanted to get her something nice, something special as a thank you for everything she's done for us all. Besides, Adora does need a re-vamp of her uniform. If she's going to be our future Force Captain she might as well look the part. She's going to make a great future force captain. It may have taken me a while but I eventually found something that I think she'll really like and I think it will suit her perfectly.

I eventually find a piece of string hiding in an old box, specifically the one I arrived here in, labelled Catra's and Adora's stuff. All sorts of stuff is in here, old photos that we took on a camera we found years ago, a laser pointer that Adora used to have me chase around the barracks and a yawn of string… that'll do.

Removing the string from the box, I carefully tie it around Adora present, making sure that it is tight and secure. My eyebrows furrow in concentration. Who knew tying bows were complicated, especially with claws.

"Prefect. Adora's going to love this."

"Adora's going to love what?

Whilst concentrating wrapping Adora's gift, I hadn't noticed Adora enter the barracks. Shit she wasn't meant to be back yet. I quickly hide her surprise behind my back, deliberately puffing up my fur along my body trying to hide it from her.

"Adora you're back early."

"Yeah, our sergeant only wanted to see me to discuss my progress for one-day becoming Force Captain. He was concerned that my sacrificial tendencies are playing a part in keeping our squadron up to scratch so he wants me to work on that as he states, 'the force captain should be the strongest.' I get what he means but a team is only as good as their leader and I want to look out for you all, we're family. Other than that, he says that I'm further ahead than expected and he could see me being the youngest Force Captain in the Horde's entire history if I keep up with training. "

"He does have a point about the putting others before yourself but I get what you mean… Future Force Captain? Wow Adora, that's amazing, I'm really happy for you."

"I'm happy for me to. Hang on a second, what are you hiding?"

"Who? Me? I'm not hiding anything."

"I can tell you're lying Catra. Your fur may be puffed up but you tail is swaying side to side meaning that you're excited and up to something. What are you hiding?”

Stupid tail, always giving my true intentions away. Over the years Adora has been able to read my body language perfectly. She can tell exactly how I’m feeling just by looking at the movement of my tail or the flick of my ears.

“Well if you want to know so badly…” I run past Adora, clutching her gift close to my chest… “you’ll have to catch me first. Meet me our secret spot.”

Adora has gotten faster and stronger over the years, but I can still easily outrun her. She eventually makes her way up to our secret spot, the watch tower, which we found years ago. Nothing much has changed, except for the fact we added a few climbing steps in at a higher points to make it a bit safer for Adora to get up and down from here. Adora’s gift it still well hidden behind my back when she reaches the top.

“Took you long enough.”

“Well I wasn’t exactly expecting you to make me chase you when we were back in the barracks. Now tell me, what are you hiding?”

“Close your eyes first.”

“Catra…”

“Just do it, for me.”

Adora smiles and eventually caves. She can’t resit my request when I give her the ‘kitten eyes’. She closes her eyes tightly.

“Okay now put your hands out.”

Adora proceeds to do so and I place her present in her hands.

“You can open your eyes now.”

Adora does and hers hands run smoothly over the gift in her hands.

“Catra what’s this?”

“I wanted to get you something special. You know because of how well you're doing and as a thank you for everything you’ve done for us, for me especially.

“Catra, you really didn’t have to…”

“I know, but I wanted to. You're my best friend Adora and I’m going to spoil you when I can. Now come on, unwrap it so I can see you with it on.”

Adora un-ties the string and hold out her present: a crimson red jacket with the Horde logo printed on the back. She removes her belts from her white shirt and puts the jacket on straight away. The sleeves are a little too long but no doubt about it she’ll grow into them. Her belt helps to keep the jacket in place.

“Wow Catra. This is amazing.”

“Hold on, there is one more thing I need to do.”

Moving forward I place a claw onto the upper arms of her sleeves and make a slight rip in the fabric, causing Adora to protest.

“Hey what was that for?”

“I wanted to give it my own personal touch… so what do you think? Do you like it?”

“Like it? Catra I love it! It’s wonderful. I’m never taking this thing off.”

“Makes you look kind of bad-ass in that jacket. I think it will suit you nicely for your Future Force Captain role.”

“I couldn’t agree more.”

Adora pulls me into a warm, tight hug. I immediately starts to purr in response. Little did I know back then that Adora was serious about never taking it off. It literally became known as Adora’s ‘lucky jacket.’

Injuries

Chapter Summary

Adora helps Catra sort out her injuries.

Catra is embarrassed that her tail wraps around the person she trusts when injured.

Catra and Adora share a tender moment.

"Does it… does it hurt?"

"It's a lot worse that it looks."

"I can tell you're lying Catra."

"Okay fine. It stings like a bitch now can you please finish helping me patch it up. The sooner this is over the better."

Why's it only ever me that has to suffer this way. I didn't even do anything wrong. Three times this week I've been dragged into the room that Shadow Weaver lurks in. I'm sure I'm the only cadet that has seen it the most times during my time with the Horde.

The first one was for because Shadow Weaver was having a bad day, no real reason, just that. The second one was because I beat Adora in a training simulation. I was proud of myself, after everything I managed to achieve something worth gloating about.

Apparently all I did though was embarrass Adora, especially at this curtail time, in front of her commander so I had to face the consequence to make sure I never upstage her again. I don't see how any of that was true as Adora was really happy for me, she was really concerned when I came back to tell her what had happened. Even she was shocked. Today's was the worst though. I accidentally feel asleep next to Adora last night after bandaging up each other injuries from the training trails that ensure that we're on track to be the Horde best soldiers. I didn't wake up fast enough to get back up to my own bed before the morning patrols. Unlucky for me, Shadow Weaver was sorting the patrols that day and caught us. I was dragged to that room by her dark shadows that encased my entire body. Adora desperately tried to get Shadow Weaver to realize me, begging the witch to take her instead of me. She even took a hit in the process, which only increased my punishment. Adora did everything she could but there was no escape from what was to happen.

The results: a series of electrical burns across my waist, open wounds on my legs and forearms, and a bunt tail tip. After so long, you get used to it but it doesn't ease the pain.

At least I have Adora with me, I'd be forever lost without her. She means everything to me and I'd do anything to protect her, not that she knows it.

Adora rinses out a wet flannel into a bowl of warm water beside her… "This may sting a little. You ready?"

I nod in response and Adora gets to work cleaning my wounds. She's already helped me work around the injuries on my face after I removed my mask, now we have to sort the more severe injuries. A hiss escapes through the grit of my teeth and my tail instinctively moves to tightly wrap around Adora's working arm. I'm holding onto her so tight that I can feel her pulse underneath my tail, it's probably because we're in our nightwear and her arms are bear.

"Sorry. Do you want me to stop."

“No keep going. Just stings a bit.”

My tail keeps its firm grip on Adora’s arm but she doesn’t question it. She continues to clean my injuries, before drying and bandaging them up.

That's the thing though isn’t it… we’re not safe, not with that witch around anyway. One day we’ll outrank her and I’ll make sure that she regrets everything she ever did to me.

I reopen my eyes to find that my tail is still tightly wrapped around Adora arm.

Shit!

My tail quickly recoils and puffs up. My ears lie flat against my head in embarrassment…

“Sorry, I-I didn’t mean to grab you with my tail.”

“It's okay. I actually quite liked it. Felt nice, comforting. Catra can I ask you something? Why did your tail ‘unconsciously’ wrap around my arm?”

“I’m a Magicat Adora. Magicats react differently to other species when in pain. One of them being… wrapping our tails around the people we trust.”

Adora blushes at the statement and moves slightly closer to me. Wait what’s going on?

“You know that's kind of cute right.”

“I am not cute!”

“SHHHH! Keep your voice down. Do you want to wake the other?” Adore giggles as she looks around us. Everyone feel asleep fairly quickly after lights-out but I only got back about and hour ago. Adora stayed up waiting for me to return.

I turn back to face Adora. Stars she's beautiful. It's something I've come to recognize recently, Adora is really beautiful. I started to notice how stunning she was a while ago, but I never really questioned it. That was until I learned what love meant when I saw one or two of the older cadets showing displays of affection towards one another. The 'mandatory mammalian reproduction one-off class' that we had to take was when I started to understand my feelings for Adora in more detail. Beautiful is how I would describe Adora, she's beautiful on the inside and outside. Adora is the definition of beautiful.

"Well I liked it and it isn't something you should be embarrassed about Catra. You look out for me and I look out for you. I'm glad you trust me. Now how about we get some sleep. You can stay down here if you want but you'll have to remember to get up before morning comes. I hate seeing her doing this to you Catra, I wish there was something more I could do."

There is Adora. We can run away and forget this place. Run away and never come back. Forget the war, forget the world and live as just you and me. – But that's never going to happen. It's just a stupid dream.

I smile at Adora, before gently nuzzling her cheek and start purring. If I can't tell Adora about my feelings for her, I hope this shows her how much I care for her. As I move away Adora looks deep into my eyes, before suddenly moving forward and placing a gentle kiss to my cheek. It feels magical.

"Goodnight Catra. Wake me up if you need me."

With that Adora tucks herself into her blanket and within minutes falls asleep. I want nothing more than be able to tell Adora how I feel about her, that I love her but I can't, not yet. I worry she won't feel the same way about me. Maybe one day, I'll finally have the courage to tell her the truth.

One Last Song

Chapter Summary

Adora isn't feeling well.

Catra takes care of her.

Catra sings to Adora for one last time?

"I've - cough - got to get to - cough - training."

"Adora stop! You're not going anywhere like this. You can barely stand let alone mind compete in combat training. You're staying put."

Adora is currently wrapped up in her blanket on her bed with me by her side. She started showing symptoms of being unwell as few days ago. What I mean by 'showing symptoms' is that I could sense she wasn't feeling too well but Adora refused to rest and hid her sickness to the best of her abilities. Today however got the better of her. She contracted a bad case of 'Fright Zone Fever'.

What's Fright Zone Fever? It's basically a sickness where you have extreme nausea, become seriously dehydrated, have a high fever, get a slight cough and cold and your muscles feel like they have been stretched beyond their limits, making it almost impossible and defiantly painful to move. The fever takes hold gradually and then hits you all at once. It's called 'Fright Zone Fever' as it occurs when cadets are under extreme pressure and become exhausted from hard-core training regimes. It's only ever been witnessed in the Fright Zone.

I've been lucky enough to escape Fright Zone Fever on a few accounts. Magicats have powerful immune systems and I've come to the conclusion that I'm not as susceptible to some illnesses unlike other Etherians.

"Catra if I don't go Shadow Weaver will kill me."

"No she won't because I won't let her."

"Alright but please at least let me try and go to training Catra. If not for myself then for our squadron."

"Technically it's your squadron Adora. You're the one who's on track for Force Captain. However, if you insist on going to training, stand up without my help and if you can remain standing then I'll let you go to training with the others."

Adora grumbles as she starts to shift from her position on the bed. It's quite amusing, watching her trying to get up. Adora stops every few moments and winces in discomfort from her aching muscles. Once fully stood, Adora lets go of the bunks' metal frame and smiles triumphantly…

"See told you I could…"

A wave of nausea hits Adora and she start to wobble. I rush forwards catching her in my arms. Once the nausea passes she looks up at me…

"Okay maybe you were right."

"I'm always right dummy. Now I'm going to tuck you back into bed then I'm going and see if I can get you some ratios soup and medicine to help with your temperature."

Adora merely nods in response and I gently lower her back to her bed, draping her blanket around her waist rather than tucking her in completely due to her raging fever. She looks so vulnerable like this. It’s kind of scary as I have never seen Adora like this before. Sure she’s been sick before but never this bad.

Just as I’m about to leave Adora grabs my hand. I look back concerned…

“Don’t be too long please?”

I kneel beside her and smile. I then brush a strand of loose sweaty hair that has fallen from her hair poof out of her face.

“I’ll be back as quick as I can, I promise.”

I hate having to leave Adora in this state but she’s going to need fluids and medicine sooner or later. I’m better leaving her now before her sickness gets worse.

I'm gone for about 10-15mins and I immediately return to Adora beside once I have what we need. I managed to retrieve some medicine and pain killers that will help with Adora’s fever and muscle aches from one of the first aid boxes in the medical bay rooms. I’ve just removed the cold flannel from Adora's head now that her temperature is under control and her medicine had kicked in. She's had some water and ration soup, which she said was slightly difficult to have as her throat was extremely dry but it’s better than having nothing to drink or eat at all. Ration soup isn’t the greatest, it’s worse than ration bars if you ask me but with Adora’s throat being sore there’s no way she’ll be able to get those gritty things eaten, not yet anyway.

Adora has decided to cuddle up next to me, her head resting on my chest, her arms wrapped around my waist. She says she feels more comfortable this way and if I’m being honest so do I. Having Adora close to me, especially when she's like this, makes me feel at ease knowing that I can do something that will at least help her relax a bit more. My hand strokes through her lose, long blonde hair, attempting to soothe Adora enough to encourage her to get some sleep, even if it's only for a while.

"I'm sorry Catra."

"What-What you sorry for?"

"For being sick. Putting you in this position…"

"You're such an idiot. Adora you can't help getting sick. To be honest, I'm surprised you manged to hide it this long. You lasted longer than I thought."

"Still I'm putting you behind in training because you're taking care of me. You can leave whenever you want. I don't want you to fall behind."

"Adora stop being such a dummy. You're my best friend. We promised to look out for each other and that's exactly what I intended to do. I intent to keep my promise. You'd do the same for me. Besides, I'm not falling behind in training. Have you seen my scores recently? I'm tied with you. If anything it's the other who need to catch up, Kyle especially. He's just, wow he's really far behind compared to us now I think about it."

Adora starts to giggle but she ends up coughing. I hand her some water which she gulps like there is no tomorrow.

"Slow down. The faster you drink the more sore your throat will be."

Adora slows her drinking before passing the glass back to me.

"Thanks" Adora says and she leans back against my chest and snuggles into me further. It's comforting for us both.

“I’m worried about you Adora. I’ve never seen you this sick before.”

“Don’t worry about me. I’ll be okay. It’s like you said. It’s just a bad case of Fright Zone Fever. I’ll be over it in a few days. Beside, I’m being well looked after. I don’t know what I do without you Catra.”

Even though Adora is right, I still worry about her. I’m always going to worry about her, even when there probably isn’t anything to worry about. It warms my heart to know that Adora wants me near her. I wish I could tell her how I feel about her, but it’s not safe to do so, not yet anyway.

“Hey Catra?”

Adora’s voice sounds a bit groggy but better than it did an hour ago.

“Yeah Adora.”

“Can you maybe... sing to me please. It helps me to relax and you have a really nice singing voice.”

Adora blushes when she asks if I can sing for her. It's either blushing due to her temperature or she’s slightly embarrassed to ask... more likely the latter.

I giggle sightly and start to hum a gentle tune from a song that I have sang to Adora many times before. I can’t exactly remember when I first heard this song but it was many, many years ago. I remember someone holding me, cradling me in their arms, singing me this tune as I started to fall asleep. I haven’t heard it, other than myself humming this tune, since I came to the Fright Zone but it has stuck with me ever since. Maybe one day I find where I first heard that tune many years ago.

Adora’s body starts to relax against mine, she's out within a matter of minutes, finally settled in her sleep. With Adora asleep and the rest of our squadron at training I might as well try and get some sleep too. I wrap my tail across Adora's waist and slowly start to drift off to sleep.

--

I wouldn't have awoke so soon if it hadn't sensed a dark presence standing over me. I slowly opened my amber eye and find that I am greeted with an unforgiving sight, Shadow Weaver. I refused to move from my position, keeping a firm hold on Adora. If I move she may wake up and the last thing I want is for her to see what Shadow Weaver is here to do. I'm actually safer besides Adora because I know Shadow Weaver won't attack if it could harm her 'star student'. Adora is still fast asleep. Hopefully Shadow Weaver will know better than to try and wake her.

"What do you want Shadow Weaver?"

Shadow Weaver looks down at Adora before looking back at me. Not an ounce of concern is shown for the sick girl I hold in my arms.

"I came see why Adora had not shown up to training today only to find her here curled up next to you. I should have known you'd be behind this. Fortunately for you I had one of my shadow spies tell me that Adora has a sever case of Fright Zone fever."

Well that explains the dark shadow I saw pass through the vents earlier.

"So if that's all you came to find out then why are you still here. I've been the one taking care of Adora since no one else, not even you, seems to care about what happens to her."

"Insolent creature! Adora is my greatest priority and that's why I will not be allowing her return to training until she has made a full recovery. She contains more power than me or you could ever understand. She's the Horde's most valuable asset. You Catra will be the one to monitor her progress and you will report back to me when she is fully recovered."

"Wow, thanks Shadow Weaver, never knew you could be so considerate."

Obviously that was sarcasm and Shadow Weaver is clearly not happy about it.

"Listen carefully Catra. The only reason your still here is because Adora has high hopes for you. If it was down to me you would have been disposed of the day she found you in that box. I'd be sending you to Beast Island right now if I could. However, it is clear to me that for Adora to make a full recovery quickly, she needs you at her side. I'll have to train that out of her, the need to have you by her side, but for now you'll have to do. You are responsible for Adora's care. Do you understand?"

"Yes Shadow Weaver."

I was hoping that was the last of it, but clearly I was wrong.

"Oh and one last thing…"

Shadow Weavers hand clutches tightly around my neck, her nails digging into the side of my throat. I hold my body still, I don't want this to wake Adora. Shadow Weaver looks at me dead in the eye as her nails dig into my throat tighter. One of my hands makes contact with her writs and my claws start to pierce into her skin through her robes. She's not the only one who can inflict pain.

"If either myself or my shadow spies catch you signing ever again, I'll see to it personally that you are silenced for good. I'll be the one who will take great pleasure in ripping your vocal chords your throat with my bare hands."

Shadow Weaver releases her grip, before chuckling and floating out of the barracks. My hand flies to my throat, rubbing what I can only imagine to be a swollen, reddened area. Only once she's left do I cough slightly and retrieve my own glass of water that I left at my side.

Why is she like this? What have I ever done to annoy her other than exist?

I look down to find that Adora still hasn't awoken, thank stars for that. I would go back to sleep with the barracks still being empty with the rest of the squadron at training but I can't, I'm on high alter especially after what's just happened.

--

Another hour passes before Adora starts to awake. Her arms tighten around me and she nuzzles further against my chest. I start to purr and I start to rub gentle circles on her back, coaxing her to wake up slowly. When she finally awakes, her eyes appear brighter in colour. Her temperature has seemed to remain stable and some colour is returning to her face.

"Hey sleepyhead. How you feeling?"

"Better than before but still not great. Thanks for staying with me."

Adora moves to sit up slightly and rubs her eyes clear from sleep. I hand her a glass of water and she takes a few sips. She then turns to look at me and her smile drops instantly.

"Catra what happened to you neck?"

"Oh this. Ah it's just a scratch or something. Nothing to worry about."

"It doesn't look like 'its nothing to worry about' to me."

Adora’s hand gently brushes against the fur on my neck, carefully assessing the reddened area. It stings slightly but nothing I can’t take care of after. Adora looks at me concerned, its clear that she can tell that I’m lying.

“I’m fine really Adora.”

Before Adora can respond the squadron enter the barracks. They must have finished training for the day. Adora gives me a look of 'we’ll discuss this later' before she starts talking to the team. They all keep the distance as they don’t want to catch the fever. Jokes on them though as they all suffered from it a week later.

When you’re in the Fright Zone there is no escape.

I eventually ended up telling Adora about what happened after she wouldn’t stop questioning me. Since then I haven’t sang for Adora, only purred. I can tell she misses me singing, I miss singing too. I have since made a promise to myself that when this living nightmare is over I will start singing again and the first person I will sing for is Adora... my Adora.

Chapter End Notes

> Hope you enjoyed reading the final prequel chapter about Catra and Adora growing up in the Horde. Please comment and let me know what you think. The reason why there is a question mark (?) at the end of the last summary text is because I feel that Catra would immediately start singing for Adora after the ending of my original fic: Together at the End of the World.
> Unfortunately, this prequel chapter concludes all works connected with my original fic: Together at the End of the World. Thank you to all my incredible readers for joining me on this incredible journey. I have enjoyed sharing these prequel stories with you. On the bright side, the end of this works mean that I can start planning my next fan fic. I hope to see you soon. :)

Why not check out You & Me - Version 2 (Adora's POV). This prequel story is the same this story but all chapters are told from Adora's POV. This will hopefully answer a burning question - When did Adora start to have feelings for Catra? - You can find this story in the series list. Hope you enjoy reading it. :)
