Driving You Home, Driving You Crazy

by masternoveller

Summary

Catra's a driver and she's picked up Adora for a swanky event.

They get talking and maybe there's more to it than just friendly conversation...

Notes

I was oversees and got back this morning at stupid o'clock so had some of this already typed out on my phone.
Since I didn't bring my laptop with me, I started writing this.
It's a short one to start with...

Anyways, enjoy.

Tags will be updated when I get around to it.

Chapter 1: I'm You're Driver Tonight

Catra taps on her phone, accepting the ride as she clicks on the map and heads towards her newest fare.

She reads the name quickly as she pulls up to the very prestigious and expensive Etheria Hotel, pulling up her in her sleek silver Bentley Flying Spur, she throws on her driver's cap before pulling up to a stop in front of the entrance. Quickly jumping out and waiting at the rear passenger door for her fare.

A blonde woman dressed to the 9s in an elegant red sleeveless dress and strappy gold sandals, walks out quickly, the magicat driver opening the door and stepping aside for the woman, making sure she gets in alright before shutting the door behind her and getting back to the driver's door and jumping in.

"Hey, Adora?" Catra asks to confirm her passenger.

The blonde looks up and smiles back into rear view mirror where she meets the magicat heterochromatic eyes and nods, "Yes, that's me."

Catra nods back at her into the mirror and then puts the car in drive.

The drive is quiet, Catra maintains a speak only if the passenger wants to talk once she's confirmed their identity. Otherwise, just the sound of the vehicle and peripheral noises fill the space. Sometimes she does put on some light music if she's already got it on, but most times, the customer generally pick a station or music to play. Though this time around, they sit in a comfortable silence.

Adora seems more than happy with that arrangement as she stares out the window and Catra sighs quietly to herself when she slows down for a traffic light. She sees a notification appear on her phone for another job after this, doing a quick check to see who and where before declining the job as the light turns green.

As she pulls up to another stop light, she gets another notification for another job, the magicat grumbles under breath, "Fucking dudes…"

"Sorry, did you say something?" Adora's asks from the back seat, her voice startling Catra a little.

"What?"

"I thought I heard you say something." Adora replies softly as she stares at the rearview mirror once more.

The magicat hesitates a little before answering, "Ever since I started this business, I've been getting a bunch of dudes trying to cheat the system."

"But this is a female service though, isn't it?" Adora asks pulling out her phone to confirm.

"Yeah. It is."

"How do you know it's not who they say they are?" The blonde asks.

"My partner has a program that weeds out them." Catra replies and there's an odd look on Adora's face as the magicat adds, "Uh, as in business partner."

"Oh."

"I know you didn't ask." Catra replies knowingly, "Traps is good, but sometimes there are social variables that she doesn't know."

"Uh…" Adora makes a sound of confusion.

Catra chuckles under breath, her eyes catching Adora's uptick of a small smile as she elaborates, "I forget that not everyone knows the people I know."

The small smile widens on Adora's face, she shakes her head and says, "No, it's fine. It's refreshing actually, just having a conversation without any weight to it."

"Really?" Catra asks genuinely surprised and Adora nods, "Well, makes sense why you've chosen this service. I promise I will be as professional as this driving hat my partner has told me to wear. Apparently, it makes me less… intimidating."

"It does make you look cute." Adora accidentally blurts out much to her own surprise, she quickly slaps a hand over her mouth as a blush spreads over her face, "Stars… I am so sorry! I didn't mean to say that out loud."

Catra's ears flicker around her head at the surprising compliment which just makes Adora try and fail to suppress a coo, resigned to her fate, the magicat smiles with a shake of her head, "It's fine, princess."

The nickname has the blonde's cheeks flushing a deeper red as she rolls her eyes and tries to look unimpressed, "What happened to being as professional as the hat that you wear?"

"This thing?" Catra says pointing to her hat and then grins, "Is as professional as a red nose on a clown. I refuse to wear the white gloves too."

Adora laughs, the sound brings another smile to Catra's lips, the blonde leaning forward in her seat, "So, how long have you been doing this?"

"Sounds like you're trying to pick me up, princess." Catra drawls with a smirk into the mirror before chuckling at the somewhat shocked look on Adora's face, "I'm messing with you, Adora. I've been doing this for the last three years or so. But it's gotten to the point that we've had to employ more drivers to help with the workload."

“That bad, huh?” Adora asks softly.

The magicat nods, “What brought you to me?” Adora’s eyes widen at the question, “Like why did you choose this service? If you don’t mind me asking?”

“Oh.” The blonde chuckles under her breath as she flops back down in her seat, “It’s just… whenever I get into a ride share or even a cab or taxi, the driver always creeps on me.”

“Yeah?”

“Yeah.” Adora sighs, “And I mean… all drivers.”

“I’m sorry to hear that, Adora.” Catra says sincerely, “No one should have to deal with that crap. Uh, how did you hear about me?”

“My friend Perfuma recommended you.” Adora replies looking up, “She said that she’s never had a bad experience with you and that you are always reliable and respectful. And so far, she’s been pretty spot on.”

Catra chuckles under her breath, she looks at Adora in the mirror once more, “You’ve been in my car for less than ten minutes, princess. But thank you for the compliment.”

“I’m not complimenting you, it’s just the truth.” Adora says with a small smile.

Catra smiles back in return as she puts both hands on the steering wheel before remembering to ask, “Did you also need a ride back, Adora? I didn’t see a return trip booked.”

“Is that something I can book even if I don’t know what time I’m finishing?” Adora asks curiously.

“I’m yours, princess.” Catra replies and Adora’s breath hitches as the magicat adds, “Well for the night anyway. Unless I have an SOS, I’m totally yours for the night. So, just let me know and I will come back to pick you up and bring you home.”

“Oh, I don’t want to be a burden…” Adora starts to say and is quickly off.

“It’s not a burden, Adora. It’s part of the service.” Catra simply explains, “But if you would rather not have me pick you up, just let me know.”

Adora shakes her head, “What if I’m not going back to where you picked me up at?”

“Like if you wanted to hookup with someone?” Catra says not looking into the mirror and holding her breath for the answer.

The blonde giggles and Catra’s eyes look up as Adora smiles back at her and shakes her head “No, that’s not what I mean.”

“So… not hooking up with someone.” Catra repeats with an air of relief.

“No. No hooking up. Period.” Adora replies somewhat amused, “Are you…”

“Nope!” Catra quickly interrupts, “I’m not anything. I’m just need to know if I need to you pick up afterwards or not.”

“Oh, stars! You totally are!” Adora lights up, “You’re totally jealous!”

Catra huffs out, being caught despite knowing Adora for less than half an hour, “Whatever. I’m just your driver.”

Adora sits forward, leaning through the gap in the middle of the front seats, her head tilts up to look at the magicat directly, “Sounds like you want to pick me up, my driver.”

“Stars…” Catra looks down and then chuckles and turns back to the road, “You’re going to make me crash, Adora.”

“Oh, so it’s Adora now? Not princess?” the blonde teases, smirking up, Catra looks down with a quick eye roll, “So… how do I contact you to get picked up afterwards?”

“You can use the app.” Catra replies keeping her eyes on the road and doing her best to keep them there, avoiding looking down at the mischievous look on Adora’s face, “Or call or text me directly.”

Adora makes a noise like a hum acknowledgment before shuffling back into her seat at the back and going through her bag, pulling out her phone, “What’s your number?”

“Smooth, princess. Smooth.” Catra laughs out as she rattles out number and then adds, “Just, yeah. Shoot me a text or…”

DING!

Adora’s sent the magicat driver a text before Catra could even finish her sentence, the blonde puts her phone back into her bag and smiles back, “What do will you do while waiting?”

Catra already has a few ideas of dwindling down the time while waiting, she quirks an eyebrow up, “There’s an arcade up the road from where I’m dropping you off. I’m looking forward to crushing the high score on the Star Wars pinball machine in there. Some jackwad beat my score last month and I want it back.”

The blonde looks at Catra’s reflection and raises an eyebrow questioning, “Seriously?”

“Yeah!” Catra replies enthusiastically, “A.S.S is going down! Ad I’m taking them down while your… uh, doing whatever it is you’re doing at your event.”

Adora chuckles, “You know what?”

“What?”

“Take me to the arcade instead.” Adora declares.

“What?” Catra repeats.

“The arcade.” Adora says with a lilt of amusement on her lips and then rolls her eyes, “I really don’t want to go to this thing anyway. Your arcade thing sound heaps better.”

“You know, pinball is like a one player game, right?” Catra replies looking at Adora.

That makes Adora laugh out loud, “There’s multiplayer mode, Catra!”

“Is there?”

“Yes!” Adora grins wider, “Let’s go already!”

“Don’t you need to go this… party or whatever?” Catra asks, “I’m going to have to notify Traps of the change, so she doesn’t freak out if that’s what you want to do. You’ll still be charged for the trip though…”

“Well, you are of course my driver for the night.” Adora grins, “Does the offer still stand to pick me up when I’m done?”

“Does it really count if I never drop you off?” Catra drawls as she pulls over to the drop off area of the venue that was scheduled for Adora, “So, am I dropping you off, princess?”

Adora looks out of the passenger window as one of the party valet attendants opens the door and waits for her. After a moment, Adora unbuckles her seatbelt and sighs, and as she exits the car she leans back in and says, “Don’t go too far.”

Adora nods, “Okay. I’ll call you when I’m ready.”

“Whatever you want, princess.” Catra says as the door is shut and she watches as Adora is ushered inside before she looks over and pulls back onto the road when her phone rings less than a minute, she looks at the unknown number and answers the call, “You’ve got Catra.”

“I know.” Adora’s voice comes through much to the surprise of the magicat as the blonde remembers that Catra never got a chance to save her number after sending through the initial text, “Where are you?”

“I’m headed towards the arcade.” Catra replies with a smile in her voice, “What’s up?”

“I’m done.”

“Already?”

“Yeah. Come pick me up.” Adora says into the phone, sounding like she’s shielding out the sound of whatever is happening behind her, “I’ve made my appearance and I’m ready to go.”

“On my way.” Catra replies as she does a U-turn and heads back to the venue with a grin on her face.

Catra pulls up to the same spot she'd literally just dropped Adora off not five minutes ago, the blonde already waiting outside looking for her vehicle. A wide goofy grin on her face when she sees the magicat driver and then she does something that makes Catra full on laugh out.

Adora waves.

With both arms.

Like a person flagging down a bus that's on the way to the bus stop.

And before Catra can get out to open the rear passenger door for her, Adora flings the front passenger door open and throws herself in breathlessly, "Hi. Also, ow. What am I sitting on?"

"My drink bottle." Catra drawls, reaching out and shoving her hand behind Adora's back to grab said items, "And my receipts."

"Oh. Sorry." Adora replies sheepishly as she lifts herself up so Catra can grab all the papers from the seat, "No wonder you make me sit in the back seat."

Catra looks around to where she can put her bottle before shrugging and tossing it behind into the back, the receipts she shoves into the centre console and then looks at Adora, "Okay. Ready to get smashed in pinball?"

"Yes." Adora nods and reaches over to grab the seatbelt and buckle herself in while Catra waits until she's set before pulling back onto the road once more.

"You were in there for like a minute. How exactly did you make an appearance after a minute, princess?" Catra asks amused as she drives.

"Talent. Also, I only had to get my name ticked off to say that I attended." Adora replies undoing her sandals before pausing and looking over at Catra, "Actually, can we do a pit stop?"

"Huh?"

"I don't really want to be out in the arcade dressed like this." Adora gestures to herself.

"Why not? You look hot." Catra says off the cuff before looking around knowing she'd fucked up, "In a uh, non-professional driver-customer sort of way… or whatever."

Adora can't help the small smile on her lips upon hearing that, a blush on her cheeks as she brushes back a few strands of hair that have fallen on her face, "Thanks. But if it's okay…"

"It's fine, Adora." Catra says reassuringly and then holds out the cable that connects to the car, "Plug your phone in with the coordinates and I can drop you off."

"Not drop me off. It's a pit stop." Adora corrects as she pulls her phone out of her bag and plugs it in, the blonde's face drops when her playlist starts to automatically play a song from a show clearly aimed at kids and Catra sits there pretending not to be laugh, “Shut up. I like the songs, alright?”

Catra smiles back, “I didn’t say anything.”

The magicat turns the song up and Adora stares at her like she’s grown a second head, “What are you doing?”

“Maybe I like that song too.” Catra simply says and starts to hum along with it, much to Adora’s surprise who relaxes back, the magicat glances over, “Address, princess.”

“Oh, right.” Adora puts her address in and then sits back, a smile on her face as they hum along to the tunes, the blonde turns her head to look at Catra, tapping her fingers lightly on her thigh, “So… As a non-professional driver-customer sort of way or whatever, I look hot?”

“Stars…” Catra grimaces, her grip on the steering wheel tightening for a moment, “I totally crossed the line and I’m sorry, Adora. That was very unprofessional and inappropriate for me to say.”

“Are you like this with all your customers?” Adora asks with a raised eyebrow and a smirk on her face.

“Why don’t you ask Perfuma.” Catra throws back feeling her cheeks warm up.

Adora shakes her head, “Don’t need to.”

“No?”

“No.” Adora doubles down, “I think I understand why she put me in touch with you and your services.”

“Stars…” Catra repeats once more as she turns to the blonde once they get to a traffic light, “This is not that kind of service.”

“What?” Adora tilts her head before her eyes widen in realisation, “Oh! No! That’s not what I meant! I meant your driving services not… not, not anything else!”

The panic in Adora’s voice has Catra chuckling, “You’re such an idiot.”

“I am not!” Adora harrumphs, but there’s a hint of a smile in there, “You’re the idiot.”

For a beat, Catra says nothing and then the magicat simply shrugs, “I can definitely recommend someone for that other type of service…” she watches as Adora’s face turns pinker with another blush forming, “What’ll be? Man or woman?”

“Shut up!” Adora groans out in her seat as she covers her face with her hands while the magicat laughs next to her, taking off once the light turns green, “I don’t need those kinds of services.”

“Need and wants are two different things.” Catra says as she makes a left turn according to the navigation, “Sometimes wanting isn’t a bad thing.”

“Well, then I don’t want those services either.” Adora says staring back at the magicat amusedly, “What about you?”

“My wants and needs change from day to day, I guess. Moment to moment as well at times.” Catra replies simply before turning her head to Adora and asks, “So, Adora. What do you want?”

“I…” Adora sighs, “I don’t know what I want.”

“Sure, you do.” Catra says instead and gets a questionable look from the blonde back, the magicat glances at the blonde before turning back to the road to and then says, “You want to go home and get changed into something more… casual.”

Adora shakes her head with a small smile, “You’re right. What was I thinking?”

“Guess I know you better than you know yourself, princess.” Catra grins back as she pulls up to the address on the GPS and parks up in the driveway, “Am I alright to park here or should I move to the curb?”

“You can just park here. I don’t have a car anyways.” Adora says as she unbuckles her seatbelt and opens the door, waiting outside the car with the door open, “Aren’t you coming out?”

With the engine still running, Catra eyes Adora a little confused, “Uh, no?”

“You can’t just sit in the car. Come inside.” Adora insists with a small wave.

“No, thanks.” Catra politely declines a second time, “I can just wait in here.”

“No.” Adora shuts the door and walks around to the driver’s door, knocking on it and then standing back with her arms crossed over her chest as she huffs out but then whines, “Come on, Catra.”

The magicat driver chuckles, “I really shouldn’t go inside, princess. It’d be against the rules.”

“You’re off the clock, aren’t you?” Adora points out, “See? I’m home. Job done. Off the clock.”

Catra sighs, “I don’t think that’s how it works, Adora.”

“Then, just clock off, Catra.” Adora smiles and then that smile dims slightly, “Unless you don’t want to come inside…”

“Argh! Put those eyes away, princess.” Catra looks away from the puppy dog looks on Adora’s face, “Fine. I’ll come in. But only so I can use your bathroom. I’m bursting.”

“Yay!” Adora cheers as she opens the door and switches the engine off as Catra gives her a look, “Come on then, get out of the car already.”

Catra rolls her eyes, unbuckles her seatbelt and takes off her hat, "Fine. Lead the way."

"Adora! Are you ready yet? How long does it take to get changed out of that dress?" Catra calls out from the couch the blonde pushed her down to sit on after she'd used the bathroom and was pacing around.

"Okay! I'm nearly done! I just couldn't find my…" Adora steps out holding one sock in her hand, "I can't find my other sock?"

Catra turns her head, pushing herself up from the couch so she's standing and giving the blonde an incredulous look, the blonde still not changed yet, "You're still in your event wear. And what, do you only have one pair of socks? Like in this whole place, you've only got one pair of socks?"

"No." Adora huffs out, "But these are my lucky socks."

"Lucky socks." Catra repeats a little slower, "You think you're going to get lucky tonight?"

"At pinball, Catra." Adora deadpans, "Not whatever you're thinking."

The magicat grins and then shrugs, "We'll you're going to need all the luck you're going to be able to get to beat my score at pinball."

Adora sticks her tongue out at the smug look on Catra's face before she sighs, "Well, if you help me find my other sock, we can get going and you can smoke my ass in pinball."

Catra rolls her eyes, "Okay, where did you leave it last?"

"I don't know. If I knew that, I wouldn't be looking for it." Adora starts to look around her living room.

“Hang on, princess.” Catra gets a thought in her head, “Are these socks even clean? Because clean socks wouldn’t just be around randomly…”

“They’re clean.” Adora says slightly offended at the accusation, “I fold my laundry on the couch. Can you check in the cushions?”

Catra leans down and sticks her hand between the cushions before quickly pulling it out when she feels something gross and pulls all the cushions off, “What the? Why is there a pickle in your couch?”

“Oh, that’s where that went.” Adora picks the pickle out of Catra’s hand as she looks around the couch to no avail for the second sock, “I’m just going to put this in the bin.”

“Right.” Catra wipes her hand on her pants, “Your sock is not here. Where are we looking next? The kitchen? The driveway?”

“Ha ha. Very funny.” Adora deadpans after throwing out the pickle and washing her hands, “Come help me look in my room.”

“I’m not going into your bedroom, Adora.” Catra deadpans, “That’s a big no.”

“We’re not doing anything, Catra.” Adora rolls her eyes and grabs the magicat by the wrist and pulls her towards her room, “Just help me find my sock.”

Catra grumbles as she gets pulled into Adora’s room, her eyes widen, “Stars, princess.”

“What?”

“How do you find anything in this mess?” Catra tries not to step on any of the clothes on the floor.

“I was looking for something to wear tonight.” Adora reasons.

“For that event you spent 30 seconds at or the arcade?” Catra asks with a raised eyebrow.

“The event, obviously.” Adora huffs out as she continues to scour her room for the second sock, “I don’t dress like that by choice every day.”

“Oh. Disappointing.” Catra replies as she turns to look for the sock as well, the magicat hears an annoyed sound behind her as she clears her throat, “Not that you don’t look good in casual stuff, like, uh or whatever.”

“Good save, Cat.” Adora replies as she pulls back her blanket and then, “Aha!”

“You find it?” Catra straightens up as she looks at Adora holding up the second sock triumphantly, “Great. Am I going to have to help you look for your other clothes too?”

“No. You can go out now so I can change out of this dress and put on my other clothes.” Adora waves the magicat out of her room, Catra chuckles as she walks out and straight back to the couch once more while she waits for Adora to come back out.

“Ready!” Adora steps back out, freshly changed and with her lucky socks on, she leans over the back of the couch and looks down at the magicat who stares back up at her, “I’m done. We can go now.”

“Great.” Catra pushes herself up, turning around and finally gets a good look at the blonde in her casual attire or jeans and a long sleeve white shirt, “Guess I was right after all.”

“About?”

“You look good in casual gear too, princess.” The magicat replies before looking past the blonde as she pulls her keys out of her pocket and clears her throat, “Okay, so, we good to go?”

“Yes.” Adora gives her a shit eating grin as she follows Catra to do the door, “Oh, am I still paying for this part?”

“You’ve already been billed for the night, Adora.” Catra replies, “It’s a flat rate. No surcharges or anything.”

“Even if dropped me off home early?” Adora asks.

“We’re not done yet, Adora.” Catra rolls here eyes, “I’m still driving you to the arcade, aren’t I?”

“Yeah, but not as my driver though.” The blonde points out.

“I am still your driver.” Catra says with certainty, “You’ve got me booked for the entire night. Which means, I still need to get you home at the end of whatever happens tonight.”

“Oh, but…”

“No buts.” Catra opens Adora’s front door and holds it open, “Non-negotiable. I bring you home. No matter what.”

“Are you sure?” The blonde steps outside and Catra shuts the door behind her so Adora can lock up, “Seems like you’re short changing yourself if you have to take me home too at the end of the night.”

“You’ve got me for the night, Adora.” Catra repeats what she said previously, “Besides, I get paid to play pinball. So, it’s a win-win for me.”

“I’m so going to kick your ass at pinball.” Adora declares with a smirk as she finishes locking up and steps up to Catra, “What are the stakes?”

“What stakes?” Catra asks without baking down.

“If I win, I get to drive your car home.” Adora suggests with a wide and toothy grin.

Catra shakes her head and laughs, “No way. No deal. That’s a nearly half a million dollar car. My insurance wouldn’t cover you if we got into an accident.”

“Fine.” Adora concedes upon hearing the price of the car, “What about… if I win, I get to pick something from the claw machine.”

“I’m not a claw machine expert.” Catra drawls with a small smile as she unlocks her car and opens the back passenger door, “But okay. I can do that. It might take a while though.”

Adora rolls her eyes and goes to the front passenger door instead and pulls it open, getting in and then grinning at the magicat. Catra shuts the back door and walks over to the driver’s door and gets in, “I don’t like the backseat.”

“Neither.” Catra replies as she turns on the engine and starts to back out of the driveway and back on the road towards the arcade.

Catra parks up her car in the parking lot of the arcade and gets out, trying to get to Adora’s door before the blonde can step out, but she’s not fast enough, the magicat rolls her eyes as Adora smirks at her and shuts the door, “You don’t have to open my door, Catra.”

“Yes, I do.” Catra says.

“Maybe you need to be quicker on your feet.” Adora looks down and notices the magicat not wearing shoes, “Oh, where are your shoes?”

“I can’t stand wearing shoes.” Catra locks up her car and pockets her keys, “They make it hard to drive. And walk. And move in general. I only wear them on occasions when I have no choice.”

“Like?”

“Uh huh.”

“My feet still get cold in the snow.” Catra shrugs, “And places where I know there’s going to be broken glass, shit and scorpions.

“Scorpions?”

“Yeah. Those fuckers hurt if they sting you.” Catra says like it’s obvious, “Not to mention the whole venomous schtick they got too.”

“Are there many scorpions around?” Adora asks concerned as she quickly looks around, “They aren’t like going to jump out and sting me, are they?”

“No, Adora.” Catra replies somewhat amused as she leads them towards the automatic doors of the arcade, letting the blonde go through first as they head to the counter to get a card to load up so they can start playing. Adora reaches for her wallet only for Catra to push her hand away, “My treat, princess.”

“You mean because I’m already paying you for tonight?” Adora questions with a smirk, forgetting the cashier is right behind them still, the blonde blushes at her own words, glaring at Catra who’s on the cusp of breaking out in laughter, “Shut up…”

The magicat takes the card from the cashier with a wink and then gestures for Adora to follow her, letting the previous statement pass, “Oh, I forgot to ask, what do I get if I win?”

“What do you want?” Adora simply asks back, her eyes darting around at the bright lights and the sounds around them, before turning her attention back to Catra, “What?”

Catra shakes her head with a grin, “I haven’t decided yet.”

“Okay.” Adora says still looking around as she tugs on Catra’s hand and points to the basketball shooting game, “We have to go play that one later!”

“Stars… you’re a jock, aren’t you?” Catra deadpans before softening with a chuckle and giving in, “Sure, whatever you want. But only after pinball.”

Adora grins back widely, “I will definitely beat you in that.”

“I’m sure you will.” Catra readily agrees as she eyes the machine that’s currently unoccupied, “But until then, let’s knock A.S.S on their ass and off the top of the leaderboard.”

The blonde giggles at that as she follows Catra towards the pinball machine, the magicat swiping the play card twice, the blonde grins leaning into the magicat’s ear, “Told you it could be multiplayer.”

Catra grunts out playfully, “Maybe I don’t like waiting.”

“Patience is a virtue.” Adora sing songs back playfully, “Do you want to go first?”

“No. I think I’ll let you have that honour, princess.” Catra says stepping back so Adora can get into place, “Oh, and I thought about what I want as my prize.”

“Yeah?” Adora says as she launches the ball and starts to focus on the game.

Catra leans in and says, “I want a kiss.”

Adora’s body stiffens in surprise, her eyes dart to Catra, the ball going straight down the middle as the blonde groans out while Catra cackles next to her, “You totally did that on purpose!”

“Totally did.” Catra admits with a grin on her face as the ball is launched again for Adora due to how quick it went down the middle, “But yeah, if you’re up for it. I wouldn’t say no to a kiss.”

…and Adora’s ball goes down the middle again.

Chapter 3: High Scores

Chapter Summary

Who'll be the champion of pinball?

Chapter Notes

I'm having way too much fun writing this - hence the quick update!
Enjoy!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Catra stands back and watches with astonishment as Adora plays on, her score ticking over a million, activating the free ball function as she leans and sticks her tongue out as multiball is activated.

“You’re A.S.S. Aren’t you?” Catra says as Adora surpasses the magicat’s first ball score, “You’re totally hustling me, aren’t you?”

“Shh! I’m concentrating.” Adora chastises amusedly, sticking her tongue out in concentration, “Better get your claw machine skills in order, Catra. Because I’m expecting that big unicorn plushy that we walked past on the way in.”

“Stars…” Catra shakes her head, “I might as well go to the store and buy you one of those for what I’m going to spend on trying to get it out of that machine.”

Adora chuckles as the pinging noises continue on her play, “Nope. That’s cheating. You have to win it for me. Not buy it for me.”

“You haven’t won yet, princess.” Catra drawls with an eye roll.

“Well, considering you messed up my first ball, I think it’s only fair that you get two shots instead of three.” Adora suggests, “Unless you don’t think you can win fairly.”

Catra sighs, “Fine.”

“Great.” Adora grins as she continues on and then the ball goes down the side slot and she groans, “That’s so unfair!”

The magicat chuckles as Adora steps back so Catra can take her place, the blonde still pouting but looking smug as well as she eyes the scores on the machine, clearly in the lead as Catra launches the ball and lets it go down the middle.

“What are you doing?” Adora frowns, “You didn’t even try.”

Catra shrugs and relaunches the saved ball and lets it go down the middle as well. She steps back to see the confused look on Adora’s face and says, “Well, it’s only fair right?”

“You threw your turn on purpose?” Adora says as she walks back into place for her last ball, “Why?”

“Two shots each, isn’t that what you just said?” Catra replies as she stands off to the side to watch Adora’s last turn, “Go ahead, Adora.”

Adora launches her third and last ball and starts to play.

Catra takes a deep breath in, she stares at the scores on the machine and she knows she’s going to need to pull out a phenomenal last ball to beat the blonde. Adora stands back, her arms crossed over her chest and a smirk on her face, almost like she already tastes victory. The blonde leans in, “Are you going to launch or are you scared?”

The magicat pulls back on the ball launcher and then leans over the glass and gets into the zone.

Catra's score keeps ticking over, she's nearly on par with Adora's as her ball is locked and the game goes into a different mission, the magicat takes a moment and shakes out her hands before putting them back on the flipper buttons.

Adora watches, biting her bottom lip, the unicorn plushy slowly getting out of reach the longer Catra plays. And she thinks to herself, "I have to do something…"

"Something on your mind, princess?" Catra asks without looking at the blonde, "You look like you're scheming."

"I am not scheming." Adora denies despite the fact she was thinking about it not a few seconds ago.

"I was kidding about the kiss." Catra says, "Just getting the high score is enough prize for me."

The blonde deflates somewhat, though she's not sure why, instead she tries a different tact, "You really wouldn't want that kiss if you won?"

The magicat lets the question sit in her brain as her eyes dart around the machine after the ball before replying, "I'd take a kiss if you're in a giving kind of mood."

"You have to win first, Cat." Adora points out despite her lead getting smaller and smaller, "And you haven't won yet."

Without missing a beat, or the ball, Catra asks, "Are you A.S.S?"

"What?"

"Come on, princess." Catra grins into the game as she completes another mission, "Didn't take you for someone so… immature."

Adora huffs out, "Wasn't my doing."

"Oh yeah?"

“My friend Glimmer thought it’d be funny.” Adora admits with a roll of her eyes at the memory, “It’s meant to stand for Adora’s Super Score.”

Catra chuckles under the breath as the ball flicks off the flipper and goes up a side ramp clicking over to her second million and activating the free ball, she grins as she readjusts her stance against the machine and then gets back into it, “Hey Adora, are we also doing stakes for the jock game of yours?”

“Yes.” Adora quickly answers, “I want to win at least something tonight.”

“I already feel like a winner.” Catra says without a second thought as Adora just gapes at her, the silence has the magicat almost turning her head, but doesn’t, “What? Something I said?”

“Stars, you’re so cheesy.” Adora blushes but there’s a small smile on her lips.

“I don’t mean to be.” Catra replies, her eyes still focussed on the game in front of her, the numbers still going up as she reaches and surpasses Adora’s score, “Just think, if we did this properly, we could be one and two on this board.”

“And who’s fault it that?” The blonde raises an eyebrow despite the magicat not looking, “Maybe we can go again after?”

“Maybe.” Catra says as she quickly glances at the scores, “So close…”

Adora steps forward, leaning over the side of the machine and sighs, “You won.”

“I know.” Catra replies and then adds, “But I already won before I even started this game.”

“Stars…” Adora says again.

Catra grins, “Yep. Winning.”

The blonde shakes her head with a smile and says, "I'll kiss you. I think you've earned it."

"Not right now though, right?" Catra asks with the same grin, "I still want this high score."

"Oh, you think you're going to score tonight?" Adora says knowingly as the magicat tries to suppress a growl, and just because she can, Adora leans in and whispers into Catra's ear, "Maybe tonight…"

That makes Catra's head turn to see the smirk on Adora's face as she quickly goes back to her game, just managing to catch the ball at the very edge of the flipper as she huffs out a laugh, "Oh, nice try, princess."

Adora laughs, taking a step back, "Can you blame me?"

"Not really." The magicat's tail brushing against Adora's wrist briefly as she grins into the game, "Good try though. I still have like two free balls saved."

"Seriously?" Adora looks at the screen and sure enough, lit up on the game is the free balls, "Okay, I have to admit something."

"What's that?" Catra asks without looking over.

"I may have got that high score because someone had left the game halfway through the first ball." Adora says, "I didn't even pay for it."

"When was this?" Catra's ball goes down the side and she sighs as the game clicks over the first free saved ball, the magicat takes a moment to stretch out her muscles before centring once more as she remembers the last time she was here, "Tell me it wasn't on the ninth."

"Uh…"

“Stars, it was, wasn’t it?” Catra chuckles under her breath, “Man, I was in such a good spot. It was still my first ball when I got the call to pick up my ride for the night. Unbelievable.”

“If it makes you feel any better, I was wearing my lucky socks that night.” Adora says with a small grin.

Catra’s ears spin around in curiosity as she gruffly asks, “Did you?”

“Did I what?”

“Get lucky or whatever.” Catra elaborates a little too softly, the feeling from before in the car when they spoke about before, it definitely feels like jealousy.

“I got the high score, didn’t I?” Adora replies not addressing the innuendo yet, “See. Told you my socks are lucky.”

Catra just nods, the answer definitely not quelling that queasy feeling in her gut, one that she knows she has no right to feel, she clears her throat, “Not so lucky tonight, since I’m on my way to topple A.S.S.”

“You seem tense, Cat.” Adora observes with a shit eating grin, watching as Catra concentrates a little more intensely, “Maybe you need to get lucky.”

“I am lucky.”

The blonde laughs loud and freely, “And to answer your unasked question, I did get lucky.”

Catra grits her teeth but doesn’t say anything, pretending to be more involved in the game as she feels Adora lean in closer once more.

“I got lucky finishing your game, Catra.” Adora whispers, “And that’s it.”

The confirmation has the magicat's shoulders relaxing, releasing that breath she was holding as she tries and fails to be nonchalant about it, "I didn't ask."

"You did." Adora says taking a step back again as the magicat groans out, "What?"

"Nothing." Catra grumbles but there's a hint of a smile as her eyes flick up and sees that she's only a hundred or so points away from getting that high score back.

"Stars… you're nearly there." Adora points out.

"Uh huh." The magicat nods and then she groans out when the ball goes straight down the middle, "Dammit."

"You've still got one left." Adora points out, "And you're like fifty points from the high score."

Catra nods again and takes a deep breath, she shakes her arms out once more and then wipes her hands on her pants, her breath hitches when she feels Adora's lips on her cheek. The magicat turns her head, her eyes wide open as she stares slack jawed back unable to form words.

"That's for luck." Adora whispers with a smirk and then gestures for Catra to continue, "Well, go on then. You won't get that high score just staring at me."

"Uh…" Catra's brain reboots and she shakes herself out of it physically, "Right, uh, right. I'm just going to…"

The blonde giggles at the fact she's broken Catra's brain, "Go score."

Catra nods, psyching herself up as she pulls back on the launch plug and shoots the ball into play, leaning back over the glass in concentration and trying to keep the feeling of Adora's lips on her cheek at bay for now.

The ball goes down the side as Catra groans out, the game finally finishing.

"Dammit. Of course it had to go down the side." The magicat rues and then feels a bump against her shoulder and looks over at Adora and then grins triumphantly, "I got my mantle back."

"I know." Adora cages the magicat in against the machine, Catra's eyebrows go up towards her hairline as the blonde leans in, there's the sound of tapping behind them, but Catra doesn't seem to notice as her eyes drop down to Adora's lips. Those lips turn up into a smile as the blonde whispers, "Can we go play the other game now?"

"Yeah." Catra breathes out, her hands fisting against her side to stop her from reaching out and wrapping them around Adora's waist, she looks back at the pinball machine, "Let me just put my name in first."

Adora grins, stepping back to give her space to spin around.

"What the…?" Catra frowns down and then back at Adora, "Seriously?"

"What? No?" Adora acts all innocent.

Catra looks at the initials on the screen, C4A glowing on the screen with the option for the magicat to change it if she wants to. The magicat shakes her head with a chuckle and presses button to save it, "Team effort."

"Sure, it was." Adora smiles, reaching out and grabbing Catra's wrist and tugs her towards the basketball hoops game, "I want to win a round!"

Catra laughs out and lets herself be pulled over and all she can think about is how all she wants for the rest of her life is to make this woman happy, no matter what it takes.

“My arms hurt, princess.” Catra rubs her biceps, not used to shooting hoops at such a rapid rate as the buzzer sounds to signal the end of the round before it starts to countdown to the next, “Stars… how long does this go for?”

Adora laughs as she moves the ball from one hand to the other and sticks her tongue out at the magicat, “I’m surprised that you’re still going.”

The game starts up once more and Catra groans out, “I think I’m going to throw this round.”

“Don’t you dare!” Adora huffs out, “I don’t want to win by default!”

“I’ll kiss you anyway!” Catra throws back as she shoots the ball into the ring and Adora pauses to stare at the magicat, Catra keeps playing despite her grumbles and tired muscles as she chastises, “You’re going to lose if you keep staring at me, princess.”

“Oh.” Adora quickly turns back to her game, a blush on her cheeks at being caught staring, though it was the very intended effect that the magicat driver was going for, her brain finally reconnecting after the brief downtime, “I want a plushy. Not a kiss, Catra. That wasn’t even the deal.”

“A plushy, huh?” Catra chuckles under her breath as the timer counts down to double points per basket, the magicat pants a little bit from the effort but still manages to score and as it finally dwindles down to zero, the magicat breathes out, leaning against the game and looking up at the scores between the pair of them and smirks, “Well, looks like you’ll have to wait for that plushy, princess.”

Adora wipes the sweat from her forehead with her sleeve as she looks up at the scores and groans, “You totally cheated!”

“How so?”

“You, you…” Adora huffs out, “You said you’d kiss me!”

“I did.” Catra crosses her arms over her chest, catching her breath and then leans forward like she’s about to tell Adora a secret, “Because I would.”

Adora’s breath hitches and then she groans out when Catra pulls back and chuckles, “You can’t keep saying things like that, Catra.”

Taken aback, Catra steps back and looks down, guilt building up inside her for overstepping, she knows she shouldn’t have said or done those things and it makes her think she’s no better than the people she’s supposed to be protecting her customers from, unable to look Adora in the eye, the magicat softly says, “I apologise for my words and actions, Adora. And if you want, I can get another driver to take you home if I make you feel uncomfortable and refund your money.”

“What?” Adora stares at Catra incredulously.

“I overstepped.” Catra says still unwilling to look up, “And I should know better. I should be better. And… I just… failed.”

“I…” Adora starts to say and Catra holds her hand up.

“I’m… I’m an idiot and I’m sorry. I should never had taken you here. Never should have gone into your house. Into your bedroom.” Catra continues to say, “I shouldn’t be saying any of those things and definitely shouldn’t be coercing you into things you don’t want. I’m no better than.. than…”

“Catra!” Adora pulls the magicat in by the collar of her shirt, stopping the magicat’s words in their tracks, “Stop.”

“I’m trying.” Catra whispers back still not looking up.

“Could you at least look at me?” Adora tugs on Catra’s collar a little, the magicat shakes her head, the blonde sighs and then tries again with her puppy dog eyes, “Please? Can you look at me?”

Catra sighs and takes a deep breath in before looking into Adora’s eyes, “I…”

The magicat’s breath gets taken away as Adora wraps her arms around her and brings her in for a tight embrace, Catra stiffens in the blonde’s arms and Adora rubs her cheek against Catra’s ear, “You haven’t done anything wrong.”

“Haven’t I?”

“No.” Adora hums when she feels Catra returning the hug, “If you had, you would definitely know. I’m a kind of a punch my feelings out kind of person.”

“You’d punch me?”

That question elicits a slightly wet laugh from Adora, “I’m not going to punch you. It’s just a saying.”

“A terrible one. But… warranted.” Catra sighs as she leans her head against Adora’s, “I wouldn’t blame you if you wanted to toss my ass out the door.”

“You’re such an idiot.” Adora chuckles into Catra’s shoulder, “I’m having fun with you. And you haven’t done anything wrong, well apart from cheat me out of winning.”

The magicat chuckles under breath, “I didn’t cheat.”

“Oh, you so did!” Adora pulls back and laugh, “You’ve totally cheated me out of two plushies!”

Catra smiles up at the blonde, “How about one more shot at this hoops game?”

“Oh yeah?”

“Yeah.” The magicat nods.

“And… the stakes?” Adora asks her arms still wrapped around Catra’s neck.

“Whatever you want.” Catra replies.

Adora takes a moment to think and then when she settles on what she wants, a shit eating grin on her face as she grins at the magicat, “I think I know what I want if I win. But what about you? What do you want?”

“Uh… nothing.” Catra replies rubbing the back of her neck, “I think I’ve already won enough tonight with the high score and… hoops and stuff.” She clears her throat and looks up at Adora, “What do you want?”

“You only won those because you cheated.” Adora rolls her eyes, earning herself a small grin from the magicat and then the blonde leans in, bumping her forehead against Catra’s, “If I win…”

“Yeah?”

“I want a kiss.” Adora says and Catra straightens up to see the blonde’s soft look in her eyes.

“Say that again.” Catra shakes her head, thinking she’s just imagined that.

Adora leans her forehead back on top of Catra’s and repeats, “I want a kiss. A real kiss. Think you can handle that?”

The smug look on Adora’s face has Catra grinning back, “Stars…”

“Well, can you?” Adora challenges, “Or are you scared of losing?”

“I’m not scared.” Catra pushes her head slightly more against Adora’s, “If you win, I’ll make sure it’ll be the realest kiss you’ve ever had.”

Adora throws her head back and laughs, “What does that even mean?”

“Well, you’ll have to win to find out, princess.” Catra replies with a wink as she swipes the playing card against the machine twice and gestures for Adora to join her at the hoops games.

The game starts up, the basketballs rolling down as the machine counts them down, Adora nudges Catra, “Get those lips ready, Catra. Because you’re going down.”

Catra looks Adora up and down and quirks an eyebrow up at the blonde, licking her lips suggestively as Adora’s eyes widen in realisation, the magicat picking up one of the balls and says, “Presumptuous. And we aren’t even on a date.”

Adora stutters out something under her breath.

“You say something, princess?” Catra asks as the games starts.

The first round ends and Adora turns to Catra, hand on her hip and says, “I changed my mind about the kiss.”

“Is that right?” Catra replies somewhat bemused.

“Yes. That’s right.” Adora replies as the countdown timer for the game gets closer to the next round starting, the blonde picking her ball and then says, “If I win…”

Catra picks up her ball and waits, the countdown nearly dwindling down to start the next round.

Adora raises an eyebrow at the magicat and says, “I want a proper date.”

BUZZ!

The next round starts and Catra just stands there staring slack jawed at Adora who's already started the next round.

Adora chuckles, seeing the magicat still standing there stunned next to her, "You're going to lose if you don't start playing, Cat."

"Oh, right." Catra turns back to the game and throws the ball, every now and then looking over at the blonde, just to watch her, and then under her breath she just repeats, "Right… yeah, a date. A proper one."

"And a proper kiss at the end of it if I deem it good." Adora adds without looking over.

Catra stops again, not sure if she's hearing it properly, shaking her head out of it as she grins, "Whatever you want, princess."

"Oh, and don't think I forgot about that kiss from last round." Adora says offhandedly knowing that she'd just thrown Catra right off her game as she casually adds, "It's overdue and I plan to make up for it."

"I think you mean two kisses, princess." Catra replies with a grin and then softens, "But I'm happy to count the cheek kiss as one."

Adora shakes her head, "No. I'm a woman of my word. You'll get two. After this game."

"After this game." Catra repeats, "And after this game… maybe I can take you on a date?"

Adora grins as the final buzzer sounds, the blonde finally winning a game as she turns to Catra beaming, "Told you my socks are lucky."

"So close!" Adora groans out as they watch the claw release the plush rainbow unicorn just before the drop chute.

Catra sighs, swiping the play card for the fourth time, "I'm telling you, princess. This game is rigged. All of these claw machines are rigged."

"That's because you suck at it." Adora replies sticking out her tongue and grinning, "Here, let me have a shot."

The magicat steps back and holds her arms out presenting the machine to Adora, "It's your turn anyway. Have at it."

"Thank you." Adora steps up and moves the joysticks around and then slaps the button to make the claw go down, "Come on, come on, come on…"

The claw wraps around the toy once more, lifting it up enough to take the weight before the plush falls through the arms and they come out empty handed. Again.

Adora throws her head back and groans, "Oh, come on! I got that! I totally got that!"

Catra shakes her head with a laugh, “Want to go again? I’ve got like two more shots before the card runs out of money.”

“No, it’s your turn.” Adora pouts, glaring at the toy in the machine.

“Guess your lucky socks aren’t firing today.” Catra says looking down towards Adora’s feet.

Adora huffs and then gets an idea, just before Catra swipes the card again, “Hey Catra?”

“Hm? Mmphf!” Catra’s back hits the front of the claw machine as Adora leans in unexpectedly and presses her lips onto the magicat’s, the kiss is chaste and before Catra can even process it, Adora’s pulled back sheepishly, “Uh, what was that for?”

“For getting the high score in pinball…?” Adora replies with a slight grin ad then blurts out, “I’m sorry, I should have asked you before I did that.”

The magicat smiles back lopsidedly, “I think I’m getting used to your sneak attack kisses, princess.”

A slight blush dusts Adora’s cheeks as she adds, “Also, maybe it’ll bring you some luck? Like in the pinball with the high score…”

“You really want this unicorn, don’t you?” Adora nods with bright eyes and Catra swipes the card, “Okay. Let’s hope the combination of your lucky socks and your lips do the trick this time, huh?”

“Go get them, tiger!” Adora cheers on as the magicat chuckles at the declaration.

Catra swipes the card and gets in position once more, Adora’s eyes fixed to the claw as Catra moves it around so it’s over the unicorn plush, “Hopefully it’ll grip it this time.”

“Yeah.” Adora breathes out as Catra pushes the button to descend the claw, “Come on…”

The claw drops right over the top of the plush and grabs the unicorn plush toy, picking it up and then swaying haphazardly as it makes its way back to the drop zone. Catra stares at Adora face, unable to look away at the all the emotions that go through the blonde's face as the toy finally drops into the chute and then she watches Adora's face light out in excitement.

"YOU DID IT! STARS! YOU DID IT!" Adora jumps out and down in celebration and punching the air like she's just won the gold medal.

Catra grins back triumphantly as she turns around to collect her prize, holding it out to Adora, "For you, my lady."

Too excitedly, Adora wraps her arms around Catra's shoulder and brings her in for a hug, jumping up and down happily, "I can't believe that worked! If I kiss you again, can you win me that big one over there too?"

Catra turns her head to see a larger plush unicorn, hanging by a thread in one of the machines, "Adora, that's not a claw machine."

"No. It isn't." Adora happily accepts the unicorn plush from Catra, "But maybe if…"

Adora leans in again and presses another kiss onto Catra's stunned lips and then grins at the magicat, "What was that for?"

"Luck." Adora replies pulling back slightly, a blush on her cheeks as she tries to hide it behind the unicorn plush, "It… it seems to work."

"I guess that means I'm out of kisses." Catra says instead as she reaches out and wraps her fingers around Adora's wrist and smirks, "Well, let's see if you're right about your socks and those sneak attack kisses."

"They are not sneak attacks." Adora denies but lets herself be tugged forward towards the game with the giant plush unicorn in it, "Also, do you even have enough credit for that game?"

“We’ll see.” Catra says pulling out the play card and letting go of Adora’s wrist to swipe the reader. The machine lights up and so does Catra, “Yep. There’s ten cents left on it. Which is stupid in my opinion… Why not just round up or down the cost of the games so you don’t end up with stupid values leftover that you can’t cash out?”

Adora shrugs, “Every cent counts…?”

Catra chuckles as she turns to the machine, “Do you want to have a go? You do have the lucky socks after all…”

The blonde shakes her head, “But you’ve got my lucky socks and my lucky kisses. So, if anything you’ll have better luck than me.”

“I’m already lucky, Adora.” Catra says with a soft smile that Adora mirrors immediately.

“Hey!” Adora eyes the machine counting down on the timer, “Quick! It’s going to finish without you even playing!”

“Oh, right!” Catra steps up to the controls, “How does this work?”

“I think you need to position that cutting bit where the string is.” Adora points out, “It looks like it’s nearly cut through, just probably needs one more.”

The magicat nods, moving the cutter up and across to where the string is and then pushes the button to move it forward and for a moment, Catra thinks she’s misaligned the cutter as it almost doesn’t quite go around the string, but then manages to just get it inside of it. Catra breathes out a shaky breath as the cutter engages and pushes the teeth together and then…

“YOU DID IT!” Adora shouts out, jumping in the air while waving the smaller unicorn plush around as the much larger plush falls to the bottom for collection, “Stars! I can’t believe you did it!”

Catra can’t help but grin back and then laughs, “I can’t believe that actually worked. I was sure it wasn’t lined up right.” She bends down and retrieves the larger plush and then holds it out to Adora, “Here you go, princess.”

Adora shoves the smaller plush into Catra’s arms and grabs the bigger one, hugging it to her chest, “This is the best day ever.”

“Wow, win a girl two plushies while beating her in pinball and a round of hoops and that makes it the best day ever for her…” Catra mutters amusedly, Adora doesn’t care as she just grins back, “Okay, what now?”

Adora smiles around the large unicorn plush, “I thought you were going to take me out on a proper date.”

“Ah, yes.” Catra recalls as she moves the unicorn plushy to under her left arm, “Hungry?”

Adora nods, grabbing Catra’s free arm as the magicat leads them out of the arcade and back to her car.

“You know, you can put them in the backseat…” Catra gestures to the two unicorn plush toys in Adora’s lap, “It’ll probably be safer for them.”

Adora sighs dramatically but concedes, “Okay.”

Catra gets out of the car and walks to Adora’s door, opening it and holds her hand out, “Come on, princess. Pass them over.”

Another sigh, “Fine. Just… be careful with them.”

“They’ve been living in a machine for stars knows how long, Adora.” Catra replies with a light chuckle, “I’m sure they’ll be fine in my very comfortable back seats.”

Adora nods, holding both unicorns out to Catra, “Your back seats are quite comfortable.”

“Honestly, I wouldn’t know.” Catra admits, “I’ve never actually sat back there.”

“You’ve never been back there?” Adora repeats back surprised.

“No. I haven’t.” Catra confirms, “I’ve never had a reason to sit back there since I’m usually sitting behind the wheel driving.”

“And you don’t let anyone else drive, do you?”

“Stars, no.” The magicat shakes her head while putting both plush toys on the seat and pulling the seatbelt across the pair before shutting the back door and getting back behind the wheel, “Plus, no one else can drive this car but me.”

“How so?”

“There’s a trick to starting up this car. It’s not just as simple as sticking the key in and turning the engine over.” Catra replies.

“What if there’s an emergency?” Adora asks as Catra puts the car into gear, pulling out of the arcade carpark and back onto the main road, “Like if something had happened to you and I had to get you to a hospital or something?”

“Are you insinuating something, princess?” Catra glances over and grins, “Planning my demise to steal my car?”

“No. It’s just a thought.” Adora shrugs and then sticks her tongue out at the magicat, “I’m not insinuating anything or planning anything shady.”

“You want to drive my car, is it?” Catra returns.

“Well, no, actually.” Adora admits, fidgeting with her fingers, “I don’t actually know how to drive.”

“Really?” Adora nods, “Then why ask before?”

The blonde shrugs, “Making conversation…?”

Catra chuckles, “So, you don’t know how to drive? Like, at all?”

“No.” Adora says, “No one taught me and then as I got older, it kind of got embarrassing to admit.”

The magicat nods, “Fair enough.”

There’s a beat of silence as Catra continues to drive.

An obvious question in the air that Adora wants to ask but it sits on her tongue until Catra breaks the silence, “Do you want to learn?”

“Learn what?”

“To drive.”

“You’d teach me?” Adora looks over with a small smile on her lips.

“Not in this car.” Catra says as she pulls up into a gated residence, “Definitely not in this car.”

“Yeah, I don’t think I’d want to risk it learning in this car either.” Adora agrees and then looks out the side window, “Where are we going, my driver?”

“I’ve got an idea.” Catra says glancing over and winking, “It is… a little unconventional though.”

“Uh huh.” Adora raises an eyebrow up at the magicat, “It’s not… illegal or anything, is it?”

“Stars no.” Catra laughs, “Illegal activities are saved for at least the third or fourth date.”

The blonde smirks back at Catra, “You think you’re going to get that far, huh?”

“I’ve got a good feeling about you, Adora.” Catra replies without looking over, “A really good feeling. You might even say, I’m even feeling… lucky.”

“Stars…” Adora laughs out, “What have I gotten myself into?”

“Well, I hope it’s something good.” Catra smiles and then after a momentary pause she adds, “Good to enough to last a lifetime.”

Adora laughs out again, “Stars! You really are bringing out the charm for this date, aren’t you?”

“You did ask for a proper date.” Th magicat shrugs, a lilt of a smile on her lips as she continues to go up the very long driveway, “We’re nearly there.”

“Where?”

“There.” Catra points out with a slight nod forward of her head, puts the car in park and gets out, moving swiftly around the front of the car to open Adora’s door, “We’re here.”

Adora takes Catra’s offered hand and gets out of the car, “What is this place?”

The blonde takes in the mansion of a house that looks to be carved into the rocky mountain behind it, the look itself is like from an old vampire movie as she narrows her eyes at Catra. The magicat just grins back, “Cool, isn’t it?”

“Uh, I guess you could say that.” Adora replies unsurely, “This isn’t a murder house or something, is it?”

“A what now?” Catra furrows her brows and then softens, “But I guess it might take a little getting used to.”

“You can say that again.” Adora says under her breath as Catra leads them to the front door, pulling out a set of keys and unlocking the eight individual locks on the door, “That is ridiculous.”

“Tell me about it.” Catra nods, “Pretty sure three locks would suffice, but it’s not up to me.”

“Wait. Isn’t this your house?” Adora tilts her head in question.

“My house?”

“Yeah.”

“No…? Why would I bring you to my house on the first date?” Catra asks back.

“Uh…”

Catra laughs, “This isn’t my house, per se.”

“What does that mean?” Catra pushes the door open and gesture for Adora to go in first, “If it’s not your house, why do you have the key?”

“I’m house sitting for a friend.” Catra says as she switches on the lights inside, “Traps owns this place. She’s like a new age Duck-ula.”

“I think you mean Dracula.” Adora says following Catra through the hallway towards another door.

“Nope. Duck-ula.” Catra repeats, “She’s not a vampire and she’s not evil.”

“Uh, okay…”

“She’s… eccentric.” Catra settles on, “Oh, in here.”

The magicat switches on the light and Adora’s eyes widen, Catra’s brought her to the garage that’s full of cars, everything from small cars to SUVs and even a tank, “Why is there a tank in here?”

“Beats me.” Catra shrugs and then claps her hands together, “So, pick a car, not the tank. And I’ll teach you how to drive it.”

“Seriously?” Adora’s voice drops, not believing what she’s hearing.

“Yeah. Why would I joke about this?” Catra replies completely serious, “So, yeah. Pick a car.”

“Hold up. How is this a date?” Adora asks, her eyes roaming over all the vehicles in the huge garage.

“Oh, were you expecting dinner and a movie?” Catra returns faux innocently.

“I, I didn’t know what to expect.” Adora admits, “But it definitely wasn’t this.”

“Yeah, well, I wasn’t expecting to be dating my customer tonight. But, here we are.” Catra replies, “Though, I’m pretty sure this goes against policy…” she turns to Adora, “Did you even read the terms and conditions before booking me?”

“Nope.” Adora shakes her head, “Was I supposed to?”

“Uh, yes…?” Catra replies, “I think I’m going to refund your fare for tonight.”

“Huh? Why?” Adora asks surprised.

“Because it kind of goes against the whole driver-customer policy.” Catra explains, “It’s really not a good look if it gets out that I took advantage of you because of it.”

“You didn’t. Haven’t.” Adora replies, “I can vouch for that.”

“Nah, it still would feel right.” Catra pulls out her phone and taps on it a few times before pocketing it, “Done. Now I’m not your driver for tonight. Just your date. Who’s going to drive you around in my car… tonight.”

Adora laughs under her breath, “This is ridiculous. You’re ridiculous.”

“You should get your refund soon.” Catra says with a grin.

“Okay…” Adora rolls her eyes at the magicat.

“Great.” Catra claps her hands once more, “So, have you picked a car you want to drive?”

“The… red one?” Adora points to an older red mustang, “That looks… durable.”

The magicat laughs, “She is. Very much so.” Catra takes a quick look at the vehicle and then nods, “Right. Let me just go get the keys and then we can get cracking.”

And before Adora can say anything, Catra’s darted off to retrieve the key as the blonde stares at her selection and takes a shaky breath in with nervous energy at getting behind this beautiful vehicle.

“Get in, princess.” Catra says to Adora after situating herself behind the steering wheel, Adora looks at her quizzically, “I’m going to drive her out of the garage first and then you can take over once we get to the track.”

“The track?” Adora gets into the passenger seat, the seats cool to the touch, “What track?”

“The racing track.” Catra replies as she expertly reverses and then drives the car out of the parking garage, “It’s where I get to test them after Traps has done whatever mods she wants to them.”

“Oh, okay.” The blonde nods, her hands sweating in the anticipation of actually getting behind the wheel and driving, “Are you sure about this?”

“No.” Adora gulps down and Catra cackles next to her, earning the magicat a whack to the shoulder, “Ow! Not cool, princess.” Catra replies, feigning injury, “That’s my shifting arm too.”

“I’m already freaking out about this…” Adora admits nervously, “Are you sure we can’t just do dinner a movie?”

“Do you want to do dinner and a movie?” Catra asks back, making her way to the dark racing track, “Because if that’s what you want, we can totally do that.”

“I mean, if that’s okay with you.” Adora looks over at Catra shyly.

“Of course, it is.” Catra concedes and then turns back towards the garage, “Maybe next time I teach you to drive?”

That seems to perk Adora up, “Yeah. I’ll even bring my own helmet and padding.”

Catra chuckles, “You won’t need any of that stuff, princess.”

Adora breathes out the nervous energy and then reaches out, cupping Catra’s hand over the gear shift, “Thank you.”

“No, thank you for telling me.” Catra returns, “I don’t want to push you into doing something you’re not comfortable with.”

“I just, I just wasn’t expecting it.” Adora says, “But yeah, next time.”

“Just tell me when you’re ready.” Catra says genuinely, “I promise it won’t be scary.”

“I will.” Adora nods back.

“Great.” Catra loops her thumb over Adora’s fingers and rubs it gently, “Okay, I’ll put this back into the garage and then we can start our date, properly.”

Adora smiles at the magicat, “Okay.”

Catra pulls up in front of an old diner, it’s bustling inside with customers as she grins at Adora, “You’re going to love this place.

They make the best pies."

Adora looks inside and bites her bottom lip, "It looks… really busy."

"It is." Catra replies getting out of the car and walking over to Adora's side and opening the door.

The blonde rolls her eyes, "You don't have to keep opening my door, Catra. I'm not even your customer anymore."

"It's a habit." Catra simply brushes it off, "But if you really don't want me to, I can stop."

"No! I mean, no. You don't have to…" Adora brushes back a few strands of hair that have fallen out of her ponytail, the magicat just nods back knowingly, "Shut up… it's not like that."

"Like what?" Catra feigns ignorance and then leans into Adora's ear, "I can't help it. I like treating you like a princess."

A blush dusts Adora's cheeks, "Stars…"

The magicat just grins back, holding out her hand to the blonde, "You coming?"

Adora looks at the offered hand and smiles, reaching out instantly and lacing their fingers together, "Yeah."

"Cool." Catra grins as she leads Adora towards the front door, pushing it open and then repeats, "The pies here are a-ma-zing."

"You already said that." Adora giggles as she looks around the busy diner, "Are you sure we can even get a seat?"

"Leave it with me, princess." Catra replies as she tugs the blonde forward towards the counter.

“Unbelievable.” Adora says as she takes a seat in the booth, Catra sits on the opposite side preening.

“What?” Catra asks with a smirk, “I mean this is my booth.”

“How did you even get this?” Adora asks looking around at the photos stuck on the wall around them, spotting one with the magicat on it, “Is this you?”

The magicat squints at the photo, her eyes widen and then she groans, “That… is not me.”

“It looks like you.” Adora points out, “A lot younger and, stars, fluffier!”

Catra huffs out, rolling her eyes and then grumbles under breath, “Damn it, Scorp…”

“So, it is you!” Adora grins out as Catra picks up her menu, hiding behind it, the blonde pulls the menu down, “You’re so cute there!”

“And I’m not cute now?” Catra huffs out, slouching back in her chair trying not to pout.

“Oh, you are still very cute.” Adora says without thinking, before slapping her hand over her mouth at the ready admission, “Oh, stars…”

Catra grins back, “Thanks, princess. You’re a goddess in my eyes.”

Adora face turns bright red at the compliment, “Catra! You can’t just say things like that!”

“I can if I’m on a date with you, princess.” Catra replies confidently, “So, what do you want to eat?”

Happy with the change of subject, Adora picks up the menu and peruses it while Catra watches her, already knowing exactly what she wants.

“Okay, I hate to admit it, but you were totally right.” Adora concedes.

“About?” Catra pauses with her fork halfway to her mouth with pie.

“The pie.” Adora hums around the forkful in her mouth, “Stars, this is so good.”

“I know.” Catra says before popping the piece into her mouth, closing her eyes and humming happily, “So good.”

“How do you even know about this place?” Adora asks eating another bit.

“I drove Razz around for a while.” Catra simply says like Adora should know who that is, “She owns the place. My friend Scorp used to work here, hence the cringy photos in this booth.”

“Okay. But how did you get a standing reserved booth?” The blonde asks bringing another forkful to her mouth.

“I drove Razz around for free.” Catra says, “I refuse to take her money since she practically kept me fed while I was growing up.”

“Oh.”

“Yeah.” Catra sighs, “I’m always going to owe her. Pretty sure I would have starved or froze on the streets without her.” the magicat looks Adora in the eyes, “But enough with the sob story, what movie did you want to watch later?”

“Is she here?”

“Who?”

“Razz.”

“Yeah, in the back.” Catra says, “Why?”

“Nothing.” Adora replies looking away.

“Do you want to meet her?” Catra asks.

“Maybe?”

The magicat laughs, “Don’t worry, Adora. She’ll come out to refuse my money when I try to pay later.” Catra leans in to whisper the next part, “I leave the money in the tip jar after she tries to whack me with her broom.”

“Your money is no good here, young one!” An older woman’s voice chastises before the shape of a broom comes up and whacks Catra lightly in the back of the head, “Don’t think I don’t know what you do!”

“Ow! Razz!” Catra laughs out as she dodges another sweep of the broom, “That’s totally unsanitary!”

Razz turns her attention to Adora, her thick glasses shine in the overhead lights, a smile of recognition comes across her face, “Ah! Mara! Where have you been?”

Adora turns to Catra and mouths the word, Mara.

Catra shrugs back, clearing her throat, “Razz, this is Adora. Not Mara.”

Ignoring the magicat, Razz tilts her head at Adora, “Where are the berries, dearie?”

“The… berries?” Adora replies confused, “Uh…”

“Razz.” Catra groans out and repeats, “This is Adora.”

For a moment, Razz’s expression stays the same, and then it changes, “Oh, I know she’s not Mara, young one.” The older woman smiles at Adora, “Is the young one treating you right, dearie?”

“Razz!” Catra huffs out.

Adora giggles behind her hand, “Well, she cheated on two games that we played at the arcade.”

“Ow!” Catra grimacing, rubbing the back of her head dramatically, “I did not cheat!”

“You so did!” Adora argues laughing as Razz raises her broom again and Catra scrunches her face ready to be hit, the blonde holds up her hand, “Hold on, Razz.”

“Hm? Yes, dearie?”

“She also won two games for me.” Adora rests her chin on her hand as she stares fondly at the magicat, “And has been very sweet.”

Razz hums and then nods, a smile on her face as she reaches out to Adora and pats the blonde’s free hand, “Good. If she steps out of line, you come tell me, okay dearie?”

“Will do, Razz.” Adora nods and smirks at the magicat.

Catra rolls her eyes back light heartedly, “How’s things, Razz?”

“You’ve been gone too long, young one.” Razz replies, “The other young ones aren’t as good as you were. They aren’t as efficient. Always so talkative.”

“Wait. Stop. Did you used to work here too?” Adora asks with both eyebrows raised, “No way…”

Catra throws her head back as Razz makes the magicat scoot over so she can retell Adora all the stories about the magicat working in the diner as a young one, a wild streak and even wilder hair.

Laughter fills the booth with each retelling of a memory from Razz, all the while Catra sinks further down the bench of the booth, feeling a sense of pride yet embarrassment from all the stories Razz is regaling.

And all the magicat can think about is how beautiful Adora is right now, despite the fact that she’s laughing at her...

And then the next thought is, how she is completely fucked.

“I love Razz.” Adora smiles as they get back into Catra’s car.

“Yeah, me too.” Catra agrees, “She’s the best.”

“Totally is.” The blonde hums as she buckles up, turning to look behind and smiling back at the magicat, “Thank you.”

Catra glances back at the two unicorn plush toys safely buckled up in the backseat, “You’re very welcome, Adora.”

“I don’t mean for the unicorns.” Adora cups Catra’s cheek softly in her hand and turns the magicat so she can look into those mismatched eyes, “Well I do, but I meant for tonight. For everything.”

“The night’s not over yet.” Catra replies holding the gentle stare with Adora, “We still have a movie to catch.”

“Honestly?” Adora tries to hide her yawn behind her hand, “I’m kind of beat.”

“No problems, princess.” Catra nods, her cheek rubbing against Adora’s hand, “I’ll take you home.”

“Okay.” Adora strokes her thumb against the magicat’s cheek before dropping it back into her lap, she looks down at the hand, “Would you…”

“Would I?” Catra asks tilting her head at Adora.

“Would you want to watch a movie at my place instead?” Adora asks softly, “I mean, there’s a good chance I’m probably going to fall asleep anyways, but it’d be nice if you stayed for a bit.”

“You want me to stay to watch you sleep? Because that’s not a movie.” Catra asks with a little chuckle, “Or is this like a something and chill type situation?”

Adora shakes her head, “No. I don’t want to fall asleep in that situation, I’m too tired to do the second thing.”

The magicat laughs a little, the blonde joins in as Catra puts the key in and starts up the car, “Alright, princess. Let me take you home and we’ll just watch a movie.”

“Thank you.” Adora replies, “And you’ll stay?”

“A little.”

Adora nods, already thinking about how she’s going to convince Catra to stay longer.

Catra pulls up into Adora’s driveway and cuts the engine.

She looks up and sees Adora’s face pressed up against the glass on the other side, fast asleep. The magicat shakes her head with a silent chuckle, she quietly unbuckles her seatbelt and then clicks Adora’s belt off too, carefully pulling it over the blonde before stepping out of the car.

As quietly as possible she opens the door, careful not for the blonde to fall out, and when she's certain Adora's isn't going to fall out, she pats down Adora's pockets and finds her house key, tucking it into her jacket pocket. She looks at the blonde, leaning over and whispers, "Adora?"

"Mm…" The blonde hums back with her eyes closed.

"We're here."

"Mm-where?" Adora mumbles out.

"Home." Catra replies, "Your home."

Adora smiles at the words, "Home…"

"Okay." Catra crouches down, "Come on."

The blonde huffs out and goes deeper into her seat, "Comfy."

"Can you walk, princess?" Catra asks softly and then she pats Adora's thigh, "Or do I need to carry you…"

That earns the magicat a smile, "Carry me."

Catra chuckles under her breath, "Okay, come on then."

The magicat slides her arm under Adora's legs and the other behind her back, grunting slightly as she lifts the blonde out of the car, Adora wraps her arms around Catra's neck, nuzzling her face against the magicat's cheek, pressing her lips onto it and smiling.

"Sneak attack kiss." Catra mumbles under her breath lightly as she uses her hip to shut the door before, locking it with the keys in her hand before carrying Adora to the front door. She jostles the blonde in her arms slightly making her grumble out, Catra holds back a snicker, "Sorry… just need to open your door."

“Hm…” Adora hums out as she relaxes into the magicat’s arms a little more.

Catra chuckles as she thanks the stars that Adora only has the one lock instead of the eight at Entrapta’s place, pushing open the door and guiding them inside, navigating through Adora’s place in the dark until she pushes the door to the bedroom and gently lowers the blonde down onto her bed.

What she doesn’t expect is for Adora to pull her into bed with her, “Woah!”

“Stay…” Adora whispers as she holds the magicat closer into her, “Please.”

Catra leans down closer, her lips brushing Adora’s, seeing the blonde’s half lidded eyes staring back her, “Let me just take the kids out of the car first.”

Adora giggles, “We don’t have kids, Catra!”

“Sure, we do.” The magicat replies with a hint of sincerity, “They’re in the back seats.”

Adora laughs again, pulling Catra down for a kiss, “I forgot what their names are again…”

“Such a bad mom.” Catra chastises amusedly as she pulls back and teases, “Can’t even remember the names of our children.”

The blonde pouts out at the magicat, “I am not! But we didn’t even pick names for them!”

Catra laughs, leaning in for another kiss, “Let me go retrieve them first.”

“Don’t take too long.” Adora huffs, “I want to cuddle you.”

“I’ll be quick.” Catra replies pecking another kiss onto Adora’s lips, “Don’t want to be one of those parents that leaves their kids in the car."

"I'll come with you." Adora sticks her arms up, "Help me up."

Catra shakes her head and then deadpans, "I literally just carried your ass in here, princess."

Adora grins back innocently, her arms still up in the arm, "Mm… you sure did."

Catra groans out playfully, "Are you planning to walk or am I going to have to carry you back out to my car, princess?"

"Carry me?" Adora whines out playfully, a small pout on her lips as she coaxes the magicat back to bed, "Please?"

Groaning out playfully, Catra grabs Adora by the ankles, making the blonde yelp out, the magicat drags her to the edge of the bed before she picks her up, Adora wrapping herself like a koala around the magicat, grinning victoriously at Catra, the magicat stares right back with a roll of her eyes, "What's up, baby?"

Adora blushes at the nickname, "Baby?"

"Yeah. You're in my arms like one currently." Catra jostles Adora in her arms playfully, "Hold on, baby."

"Stars…" Adora breathes out into Catra's neck and then realises that the magicat hadn't turned on any of the lights, "Hang on, let me just get the lights."

"Don't need them." Catra simply says as she gets to the front door, "But you can get the door for me, baby."

"Stars… you're not going to stop calling me that now, are you?" Adora grumbles into Catra's neck.

"I can stop if you want me to." Catra replies truthfully, "If you don't like it or it makes you uncomfortable, I can stop. And I'll only call you Adora."

“No. It doesn’t make me uncomfortable.” Adora replies once they get to Catra’s car, the magicat letting the blonde down, their faces barely a whisper apart as Adora leans in, “I like them.”

“Which one?” Catra whispers into Adora’s lips.

“All of them.” The blonde leans in and presses her lips onto Catra’s, “Mm… should we get our children out of your car?”

Catra chuckles, unlocking the car and stepping out of Adora’s hold, “Sure, thing… honey.”

Adora giggles this time as Catra opens the back door and retrieves the two unicorn plush toys, the blonde quickly says, “Careful with Swifty and Cookie.”

The magicat tilts her head in surprise, “Those are… interesting names.”

“You’ll get used to them.” Adora brings both unicorn plush toys into her arms, hugging them into herself carefully, “Unless you don’t like those names…”

“No. They’re perfect.” Catra replies as she watches Adora turn around and head back into the house, a little skip in her step while the magicat locks up her car once more and follows the blonde back in.

Catra passes the couch and then she yelps a little when she feels Adora grab the magicat by her shirt and pull her into the bedroom, a light chuckle on her lips as she lets herself get dragged on top of Adora on the bed.

“I don’t think this is a good idea, princess.” Catra whispers into Adora’s lips.

“Why?”

“It’s… it’s too fast.” The magicat whispers in reply.

“I want to…” Adora reassures as she starts to work on Catra’s button up shirt, the magicat firmly gasps Adora’s wrist, “What? I thought you wanted this too…”

“I do.” Catra admits, “I really do.”

“Then what’s the problem?” Adora replies, “I mean, we already have children.”

Catra laughs, letting herself flop next to the blonde on the bed, Adora turns over and curls into Catra’s side, the magicat sighs, “It’s a good thing they ended up with your genes.”

Adora whacks Catra’s shoulder playfully, “Hey! If anything, they have your genes since they’re furry just like their parent.”

“Oh, is that right?” Catra grins back.

“Yes.” Adora nods solemnly before cracking a smile, “They’re furry, just like you!”

Catra rolls her eyes with a smile, “Well, they’ve got your personality.”

“Oh yeah?” Adora quirks an eyebrow up.

“Well, you give off unicorn-horse girl vibes.” Catra replies and that earns her a tackle from the blonde making the magicat cackle out loudly as Adora starts to tickle her, “Stars! That’s not fair! No tickling!”

“I do not give off unicorn-horse girl vibes!” Adora huffs out while grinning, pinning down the magicat.

“Okay! Okay!” Catra finds her arms pinned down over her head, “You don’t give off unicorn-horse girl vibes…” and then after a beat she adds with a smirk, “You give off… princess vibes…”

And before Adora can retort, Catra lifts her knees up and throws the blonde off balance before flipping them over, "Hey!"

"You were saying?" Catra preens as she pins Adora down.

Adora tries to lift her head up to kiss the magicat, who simply pulls back making the blonde pout, "Catra! Kiss me already!"

"That. I can do." Catra leans in and kisses Adora, the blonde trying to deepen it as the magicat just smiles into it until she feels another pout form on Adora's lips, "Not sleepy, princess?"

"Nope." Adora smiles back, the pout gone as she strains up to kiss Catra again.

"Movie?"

"What?"

"Want to watch a movie with the kids on the couch?" Catra asks, fully serious.

"You're really don't want to sleep with me?" Adora asks with puppy dog eyes.

"You're making it really hard…" Catra grits out and then sees the blonde's eyes drift between their bodies making the magicat laugh, "I didn't mean in the literal sense, princess."

Adora blushes, biting her lip as she nods, "I wasn't…"

"You totally were." Catra teases and gets off, standing on the floor on the end of the bed, her hand outstretched, "Come on, princess. Let's finish this date off right. We're not sleeping together on the first date, I want to leave a good impression."

"You already have left a good impression." The blonde grumbles under breath, "And you could already have finished me off right."

“What was that?” Catra asks, a shit eating grin on her face as she looks down to her outstretched hand once more, “Come on. The kids are waiting.”

“You’re insufferable.” Adora concedes and puts her hand in Catra’s, getting pulled up and out of bed, “Fine. Let’s go watch a movie.”

“With the kids.” Catra adds, grinning.

Adora rolls her eyes and then whines, “But the kids should already be in bed.”

Catra laughs, pulling Adora into her body and pressing their lips together in a soft kiss, “I’ll make it worth your while…”

“Mm…” Adora leans her forehead against Catra’s and hums back, “Better be.”

Yawning, Adora flops down on her couch, wrapping her arms around the larger unicorn plush as Catra grabs the remote and turns on her tv, then taking a seat next to the blonde who automatically leans into her.

“What are we watching?” the blonde asks yawning into the larger unicorn plush.

“Monkeybone.” Catra replies as she manages to find the movie and places the remote down on the arm of the couch, “Seen it before?”

Adora shakes her head, “Can’t say I have.”

“I need this body!” Catra waves her hand around like she’s holding something and chuckling as Adora looks at her confused, “It’s from the movie… you’ll see later.”

“Okay.” Adora smiles back knowing that she’ll probably fall asleep anyway.

“Which child are you hugging, princess?” Catra whispers as she wraps an arm around Adora, “And which one is the least favourite?”

Adora slaps the magicat weakly as she huffs out, “There is no least favourite child. I love them both equally.”

“Sure, you do.” Catra chuckles.

“Also, I am very surprised that you don’t know our children.” Adora says with faux look of disappointment on her face hold out the unicorn plush in her hands, “This is obviously Swifty.”

“Ah.” Catra picks up the smaller unicorn, “Obviously. So, I take it, this would be Cookie? Like Cookie Monster?”

Adora nods with a grin, “She’s just so cute!”

“She?”

“Yes. She.” Adora nods in declaration as the movie starts up, “And Swifty is her best friend.”

The magicat laughs as she pets the plush toy in her hands, “Okay. Sounds good.”

They settle back in to watch the movie cuddled up on the couch happily.

Not even halfway through the movie, Catra smiles watching Adora cuddled up to her asleep, both unicorn plushies moved to the other chair as the magicat wraps her arms around the blonde and presses a soft kiss on Adora’s hair, “Goodnight, Adora. This was definitely worth it.”

A few days later…

Catra pulls up to Adora's driveway, she tugs on her hat and opens her door, stepping towards the back passenger door and waits for Adora to come out.

The front door opens and Adora steps up, dressed up again in the red sleeveless dress and gold strappy sandals, but she's got her hair down this time and Catra can't take her eyes off the sight of Adora.

The blonde stops in front of Catra, her eyes sparkle in amusement at seeing the magicat driver short circuit, she lifts her hand and pushes Catra's mouth shut and smirks, "See something you like?"

"Definitely." Catra replies, her eyes still looking at Adora before shaking herself out of it and clears her throat, "Are you ready to go, Miss Adora?"

"Are we back to Adora again?" The blonde quirks an eyebrow up at the magicat as she lets Catra open the door before getting inside, "Also, why can't I sit in the front?"

"You've booked my services for the night, Adora." Catra drawls out with an eye roll, "Watch your legs, princess."

Adora's eyes widen and she giggles at the moniker, nodding for Catra to shut the door, watching as the magicat moves around to the driver's door and gets in. The magicat tips her hat into the mirror looking at Adora and then puts the car in drive. Her eyes catching onto the soft look in Adora's eyes as she drives down the road with the sun setting behind them, a smile settling on her lips.

Adora breaks the calm silence within the car, "So… my driver. Where are we going?"

Catra grins into the reflection back at Adora, "Well, wherever you want. I am under your instruction."

“Hm…” Adora pretends to think, “It’d be a waste to be all dressed up and…”

“Got a big date tonight or something, princess?” Catra teases.

“Yeah.” The blonde replies and Catra chuckles, “I do.”

“Didn’t see a booking for a pick up afterwards.” Catra replies.

“Hm…” The blonde hums, “I don’t need think I need one.”

“Is that right?” Catra drawls as she pulls into a carpark and turns off the engine.

Adora looks up and smiles at where Catra’s parked up, “How did you know this was exactly where I was thinking of going tonight?”

“Just a hunch.” Catra unbuckles her seatbelt and steps out, heading to the back passenger door and opening it for Adora, “You coming?”

“Vibe killers.” Catra replies as she helps Adora out of the car, the magicat throws her hat in the backseat after Adora, earning herself a raised eyebrow from the blonde, Catra shrugs, “It makes my fur itch.”

“It’s very cute.” Adora giggles brushing down Catra’s hair and petting the magicat’s ear, “You’re very cute.”

“And you’re beautiful.” Catra replies as she shuts the door, “Even when you’re in sweats or in nothing at all.”

Adora blushes, wrapping her arms around Catra’s neck and pressing her lips on the magicat’s, “You’re so full of it.”

“Am not.” Catra replies with absolute certainty, “And when we go inside this here diner, Razz will agree with me and then whack me over the head for taking you here of all places when you're looking absolutely stunning and radiant."

The blonde giggles, "So… can we do a pit stop later?"

Catra raises her eyebrow up and then grins, "Arcade after?"

"Yes!" Adora laughs out, "I want that high score on that pinball machine! And no cheating this time!"

Nodding, Catra smiles back, "Dinner and pie first though."

"Yes." Adora intertwines her fingers in Catra's before she pauses just before they step inside, "Do you think we should get some pie for the kids?"

"Stars…" Catra laughs, "Yes. Definitely. Swifty and the Cookie Monster can have pie when we get home."

"Home?" Adora repeats with a huge grin on her face.

"I move fast." Catra preens.

"Well, if you want it to be…" Adora shyly says, brushing a few loose strands behind her ear, "Home, that is."

"Well, I'm glad it doesn't have eight different locks on the door, so, yeah, I'm in." Catra shrugs and then cackles when Adora whacks her in the arm, "But… I am driving you home at the end of the night and I wouldn't mind calling your place home too."

"You know…" Adora bites her bottom lip, "My place never really felt like home until you came into it."

"Now who's being cheesy?" Catra smiles back, "But yeah, same."

"Really?"

Catra nods, "I'm driving you home but you're driving me crazy."

Adora laughs, “Wait until Razz hears this. She’s going to think we’re both crazy.”

“In love…?” Catra says looking away with a sly smile.

Adora stills as she stares at Catra before bringing them together for a soft kiss, “Are we?”

“I am.” Catra leans her forehead on Adora’s, looking into the blonde’s eyes.

And after a beat, Adora finds herself nodding, “Yes.”

“Say it, princess.” Catra whispers, “Say it or it isn’t true.”

“You’re such an idiot.” Adora giggles and then kisses Catra again, “Yes. I love you.”

Catra grins and then, “Ow! Razz!”

The magicat rubs the back of her head, the older woman stands behind her with her broom in her hand, “Well! What are you waiting for?! Tell her, young one!”

“I was getting there!” Catra groans out, “Also, what are you doing out here?!”

“Quit stalling!” Razz lifts her broom up in the air in warning, “Tell her!”

Adora giggles behind her hand as Catra rolls her eyes, the magicat pulling Adora in by the waist making the blonde’s breath hitch, and then leans in, “I love you too, princess.”

“Phew!” Adora laughs out pretending to wipe the sweat off her brow, “I really didn’t want to be a single parent.”

“Yep. You will definitely be driving me crazy, what have I gotten myself into...” Catra mutters and then grins, “Come on, let’s go eat before Razz whacks both of us.”

Adora laughs, “And we are definitely getting pie to take home to our kids… or ourselves for later.”

“I’ll ask Razz to save us a whole pie for later to take home.” Catra replies, “Wait, where’d she go?”

The pair look around for them and don’t see the old woman, Adora shrugs, “I have no idea…”

Catra grabs the door and opens it, “Come on, princess. We better get that pie before it’s completely sold out and gone. Or worse.” Adora tilts her head in question, “She brings the broom back out and you feel her wrath too.”

Adora throws her head back and laughs as they walk inside, “That would never happen. She loves me.”

“I can see why.” Catra replies with a grin as they’re led to her booth, “How could anyone not be?”

Adora’s eyes softens, “Stars, still so cheesy.”

“And you love it.” Catra replies as they stop in front of their booth, “And I love you.” The magicat looks around quickly and then back to Adora, “She’s not behind me with the broom, is she?”

“She is.” Adora laughs, “But the broom is not in attack mode.”

The magicat relaxes and says without looking back, “Are we good, Razz? Can I sit down now with my girlfriend?”

“Yes, young one.” Razz says approvingly, “I’ll bring you the pie to bring home to your children.”

Catra and Adora look at each other and chuckle, “Should we tell her they’re unicorn plush toys?”

Adora whacks Catra in the chest lightly, “Don’t you dare!”

The magicat laughs as they take their seats, Catra looks fondly at Adora, “I’ll keep it to myself… if you can beat my score in pinball…”

“Oh! After dinner and dropping off the pie to our children.” Adora starts and then whispers to the magicat, “And if I win, can we have a few more kids?”

“Ooh, confidence.” Catra grins, “I love it. You’re on!”
