The Greens...

by masternoveller

Summary

Catra doesn't want to go out.
She has work to do, work that she actually loves doing.
So, when Scorpia guilt trips her into going out to celebrate her engagement, the magicat can't refuse.
It's just one drink, right?

Wrong.

But how was Adora supposed to know greens and magicats don't mix so well?

Notes

I heard that song Livin' La Vida Loca and had this idea.
As I started writing, my brain kind of went on a tangent and away from my original idea...

Though there is a throw back to a certain line in the song if you read hard enough. 😉

Also tags may or may not be updated - I'm pretty bad with updating them, so I probably won't be most likely...

See the end of the work for more notes

Celebrations

Catra works hard.

Has worked hard as long as she can remember.

She needed to.

To get the scholarship to get into the high school her guardian lectured her about.

To get into the college to get away from said guardian and to get some freedom back.

And then to land the job she's been studying so hard to get and then working hard to keep it.

And as such, she's missed out on the whole point of life.

Living.

That is until one day she meets Adora.

"Wildcat! Come out tonight!" Scorpia throws her arms up in the air, like that's really going to make a difference, "You have to come out and celebrate my engagement to Perfuma! It's your duty as my best friend and best man."

"I'm not a man or human." Catra simply replies.

Scorpia pouts, "Either way, you have to come and celebrate. As my best friend and one third of the Super Pal Trio, you are obligated."

"You can't guilt trip me into this, Scorp. Traps isn't even going to be there since she's on some secret assignment again." Catra grumbles as she goes back to reading through the document in front of her, "Besides, I've got a shitload of work to do."

"No, you don't." Scorpia sighs, "It's Friday night. All of this can wait until Monday."

"No, it can't." Catra argues as she frowns at the document, anger rising inside her at the continual interruption of the one sentence she's trying to read and make sense of.

"Yes. It can." Scorpia pulls Catra back on her wheelie computer chair, pinning the magicat in place, "You don't need to prove yourself anymore, Catra."

The magicat frowns up at her best friend, "I will if I fuck up this investigation."

"The evidence isn't going anywhere." Scorpia sighs, "Those specimens have been dead for millions of years. What's a weekend going to change?"

"Those specimens could be the next big thing. We have to find them out before someone else does."

Another sigh from Scorpia, this time mixed with a shake of the head, "I think you forget that we have exclusive access to those bones, Wildcat. If anyone is going to find out what species those bones belong to, it's going to be you."

Catra throws her head back, another argument on her lips and then she sees the scorpini's pleading puppy dog eyes and she groans out loud, "That doesn't work on me."

"Yes, it does." Scorpia continues to play the part, eventually forcing a smile from the magicat, "Ha! You smiled. I win!"

"Fuck." Catra groans again, "Fine. But I'm only coming for one drink and then I'm going home."

"Yes!" Scorpia celebrates, "That's all I ask!"

“Whatever.” Catra pushes herself up and off her chair, making Scorpia dart back so she’s not headbutted by the magicat, “Where are we going?”

“This place already hurts my ears.” Catra grumbles as she follows Scorpia inside the neon light filled club, the music pounds in her ears, as she feels a headache on the horizon and then squints forward until she sees a familiar sight, managing to clear her throat and throw a look that doesn’t look like a grimace, “Flower girl. Congrats on snagging my best friend.”

“Catra!” Perfuma quickly pulls Catra in for a hug, “I’m so happy you’re here to celebrate our union!”

“Engagement.”

“Future marriage!”

“Whatever.” Catra rolls her eyes, and then looks around for the bar, “One drink then I’m out.”

“Sure.” Perfuma claps her hands together, “But you’ll have to share that drink with me and Scorpia, otherwise it won’t count.”

“Can we please get this over with?” Catra huffs out, “I want to be back in the office tomorrow to go over the bones again.”

“Just one drink first with us.” Perfuma repeats and the magicat inwardly growls out but resigns herself to lean against nearest pillar and cross her arms, waiting until her friends finally give her the reprieve she wants.

A lot of people come and go, saying their congratulations to Perfuma and Scorpia, but no one seems to want to have that one drink with Catra and the newly engaged couple.

That is until a blonde woman comes forth, going straight past the magicat and towards the newly engaged couple and happily congratulating them.

Catra notices the woman and huffs at being ignored, not that she is looking for a relationship or anything. She doesn't have the time or energy for that. Instead she flops her head back against the pillar she's leaned against and accidentally whacks the back of her head on it hard, "Ow! Fuck…"

And that's when she hears it.

A giggle.

Usually, that would send the magicat into some sort of misguided rage on whoever thinks her misfortune is comical, but this time when she turns her head to growls at that person, her face morphs into one of surprise.

It's the blonde woman that had ignore her from earlier, staring at her with an amused yet concerned look on her face as Catra reaches up and rubs the bump on the back of her head.

"Are you okay?" The blonde asks, leaning in and staring into Catra's eyes.

Catra stares right back, the pain no longer at her attention as she nods her head slowly in reply.

That earns her a second giggle from the blonde.

"You're cute." She says.

"I'm Catra." Catra replies and then begins to ramble at the beautiful blonde woman dressed in a white top and grey pants, "Not cute. My name's not cute. It's just, Catra."

"Catra." The blonde woman repeats and stars does it sound amazing coming from this woman's mouth, speaking of mouth, Catra can't seems to stop staring at her lips. The blonde doesn't seem to be put off by it at all, instead leaning in just a little closer and whispers into her fluffy ear, “I’m Adora.”

“Adora.” Catra says dumbly like she’s trying to remember it, “I’m Catra.”

Adora giggles once more, she seems to know the effect she’s having on the magicat but Catra can’t seem to shake herself out of it, “You’re still very cute.”

Catra nods dumbly as the next few words fall out of her mouth, “Dance with me?”

The blonde raises an eyebrow at the magicat, “Only if I can buy you a drink first.”

Catra quickly turns to her friends and both of them throw thumbs up at her with wide smiles on their faces, Scorpia even going as far to mouth, “Go for it!”

The magicat turns back to Adora and grins, “Do you need to be drunk to dance, princess?”

“Princess?” Adora smirks at the magicat, but there’s a hint of a blush on her cheeks as well from the sudden nickname, “Unlike you who is most definitely cute, I am most definitely not a princess.”

“If you end up in my bed, you will be.” Catra grins thinking she’s got nothing to lose and perhas a slap in her face may also mean an early night for her, not to mention the guilt trip it would put on her friends, she leans into Adora’s space, the blonde makes no actions to move as Catra adds, “Everyone who ends up in my bed is a princess. I have very high standards.”

Adora leans in, challenging the magicat, her eyes drop to the magicat’s lips, “And… what if you are really the princess here?”

“Well… do you want to find out?” She leans so close that their lips almost touch as she adds, “Princess…”

Adora's eyes dart between Catra's eyes and lips as the magicat holds her position and the blonde finds herself closing the distance as Catra grins in victory as she kisses Adora back, feeling the warmth of the blonde's face as she blushes into it.

Catra pulls back causing Adora to whine pathetically, "Drink?"

Adora glares at the magicat but relents with a nod, holding her hand out, "Come to the bar with me."

"Sure. But I'm buying." Catra replies.

Adora smiles back, "I hope you have deep pockets then…"

Catra eyes widen at that and then she rolls her eyes when Adora laughs, "Just so you know, my pockets are not deep. But with a few more years of hard work, I hope to be able to be comfortable."

"I'm not judging you, Catra." Adora smiles back, "How much you have doesn't interest me."

Catra tilts her head at the blonde, "You interest me."

Adora just smiles back.

They walk to the bar and Adora orders two drinks, one for her and one for Catra.

She's ordered a cocktail that Catra has never heard of, but she pays for it nonetheless, the blonde grinning as she hands the magicat one of the glasses as she takes the other and gestures for them to head back to their friends to drink it.

"What is this green and blue concoction?"' Catra asks as she eyes her drink, "And why is there an umbrella on top? Am I going to cry after drinking it and it needs to protect itself?"

Adora laughs, nudging the magicat a little with her shoulder, "No. You won't cry from this drink. If anything, I hope it'll make you feel happy and maybe even a little…" Adora leans in and whispers the last word, "Crazy."

Catra leans back and looks at the blonde and then her drink, "I didn't take you for the drug taking type." The magicat places the drink on the table and slides it away from herself, "I don't think I can drink this if that's the case. Pretty sure it's poison to my species."

Adora shakes her head with a laugh, "No. Apart from the alcohol, there are no drugs in it."

"No?" Catra picks up the drink and sniffs it seriously.

"No." Adora rolls her eyes, "It's a mixture of greens, fruit juices and the obvious blue alcohol at the bottom which you need to mix with the rest of the drink before consuming. It's actually really good. And it's pretty healthy too."

"Uh huh." Catra doesn't sound convinced until Perfuma wraps her arms around the pair of them, clearly a few drinks in her already as she smiles serenely at the pair, "Flower girl, you alright there? Need water? Scorpia maybe?"

"No. I'm good." Perfuma replies in a daze before she spots the drinks, "Oh! Those are so good for you! Catra! You should drink that because you don't have enough greens in your diet!"

"I'm a magicat." Catra replies, "Greens aren't big in my diet. Besides I think the alcohol probably cancels out the good qualities in this drink."

"Drink it anyway!" Perfuma suggests with a thumbs up, "You can count this as your one drink as long as you drink it with Adora."

Catra tilts her head at Perfume, "Why?"

Perfuma just smiles wider, "No reason."

“Uh huh…” Catra replies pushing the drink further from her before startling a little when Scorpia pops up next to her, “For fuck’s sakes… Scorp!”

“Sorry, Wildcat!” The large scorpini apologises, sliding the drink back to Catra, “Perfuma’s right. We’ll count this as your one drink… since we’re going to have a drink too!”

“We are?” Perfuma says at the same time as Catra says, “You are?”

“Yes!” Scorpia waves over to the bar and someone brings over 2 drinks for them, Perfuma take the drinks with a nod as thanks and then the large scorpini grins, “Ready?”

“This is stupid.” Catra grumbles as she picks up her drink and inspects it.

“Whatever.” Catra grunts out as she holds her drink up to her friends, “To your engagement.”

“Cheers!”

Catra throws the drink back before Adora can stop her and the magicat instantly regrets it…

The next morning…

Catra wakes up in a dark room, it’s her room.

She knows it’s her room because it smells like hers.

But she can’t remember getting back here last night.

Actually… she can't remember much of anything that happened last night at all.

She startles when she feels someone nuzzle into her, freezing on the spot as her eyes widen and she goes on high alert, willing her eyes to adjust to the low light.

And that's when she sees her.

Adora.

Fuck.

"Mm…" The blonde hums into Catra's chest as she lays across the magicat, an arm thrown over Catra's stomach as a few hairs tickle the magicat's face.

Adora looks down at the blonde hair and then she realises that she can't actually get up without jostling the blonde and potentially waking her up. But the need to pee is more pressing right now.

She tries to slide herself out and off the bed, but she's caught in Adora's arm wrapped around her torso, pulling her back in even closer than before as she tries to pry herself out. Eventually with all the movement from the magicat, Adora's eyelids flicker open and she smacks her lips a little, rubbing her face against Catra's covered chest and then she finally looks up, "Hi."

"Uh, hey Adora." Catra rasps back.

The blonde just smiles back at her and Catra wishes she remember how the fuck this happened, "Have you been awake long?"

Catra shakes her head, "I actually need to go to the bathroom."

"Oh. Oh!" Adora quickly pushes herself off with a sheepish look on her face, "Sorry, I didn't mean to keep you hostage here in bed."

There’s a lopsided grin on her face as she says it as she yawns, “I’ll keep the bed warm while you go.”

“Uh… okay.” Catra replies as she quickly gets up and off the bed and tries not to run to the bathroom.

As she’s washing her hands, Catra stares at the reflection in the window and frowns at herself.

“What the fuck was in that drink?” Catra mutters to herself as she looks down at herself, she’s not wearing what she wore last night and by the look of things, nor is Adora. But then something catches her eye when as soon as she looks at her left hand, “The fuck?”

There’s a silver ring band around her ring finger as she really tries to remember how she came to have this before shrugging and chuckling to herself, “Don’t be an idiot. You didn’t get married. It’s probably just a ring from a random thing last night. Maybe it’s Scorpia’s ring that I tried on last night and forgot about…”

She shakes herself out of whatever thoughts she has around the ring on her finger and makes her way back to her bed and deal with her Adora problem, if it actually is a problem… she’s not too sure.

“There you are.” Adora smiles at Catra, she’s in the middle of the bed, the blanket, Catra’s blanket, is draped over her body as the magicat swallows down a gulp, she can’t remember if Adora was clothed or not. The blonde looks a little nervous at the magicat’s silence, pulling the blanket up a little higher up, “Is… is everything okay?”

Catra steps forward, stopping in front of the bed, her eyes drawn to the ring on Adora’s left hand’s ring finger as she can’t help but stare at it as the next words drop out of her mouth, "Did we… did we get married?"

"Oh this?" Adora holds her ring hand up and chuckles, "Well, um… yes?"

Catra sighs, taking a seat on the bed next to Adora, she looks down at the blonde's hand and takes it in hers, "Yes?"

Adora nods, "Well… you kind of insisted we get married yesterday…"

"And you went along with it?" Catra asks.

"…yes?"

"Why?" Catra turns her head, she's still holding Adora's hand, "We literally only met last night. You don't even know me."

Adora blushes, "Well… after last night… I think I know you just as well as you know me."

Catra raises her eyebrow at her in question.

"No, seriously. Ask me anything." Adora sits up, taking Catra's free hand with her own and turning fully towards the magicat, "Go ahead."

"Uh… this is stupid…" Catra rolls her eyes but Adora doesn't back down, nodding her head to the magicat to ask something, anything, "Ugh. Fine."

Adora smiles widely, "Go."

"Okay, okay… let me think." Catra looks around, "What do I do for a living?"

"You're a budding archaeologist and you wanted to get up early so you can go back to looking at those dinosaur bones at your work.” Adora answers easily, “And I think it’s cute how passionate you are about it.”

Catra blushes, coughing and turning her head to mask it, she doesn’t know why she says, “I’m not cute. You’re a princess for wanting to be a vet.”

The smile on Adora’s face gets wider, “You remembered…”

“I did?”

Adora nods, “You did.”

“…lucky guess?” Catra tries and Adora giggles, pulling the magicat into a hug, “So… not a lucky guess…”

“No.” Adora replies, “See? I told you we know each other.”

“I’ve only asked one question so far. That’s not evidence.” Catra points out as she thinks of another question, “When’s my birthday?”

“October 28.” Adora replies with the same grin.

“January 19.” Catra replies as she tries to think why she just said that and Adora’s just smirks back, “What?”

“You know my birthday.” Adora simply says.

Catra frowns as she mutters to herself, “How do I know that?”

“Catra.” Adora squeezes the magicat’s hands, “I know you think I’m crazy for marrying you last night…”

“Uh huh…”

“But I know that I don’t regret it. Not at all.” Adora smiles at Catra like she actually does love her, “And… when you asked me last night, well… I couldn’t say no.”

Then a thought comes across Catra's brain as she looks down at their rings again, "Adora?"

"Hm?"

"Did we…" Catra furrows her brows a little before asking the rest of the question, "Did we consummate this marriage?"

Adora stares back at Catra, a look of disappointment on her face before she breaks out in laughter, "Stars no."

Catra breathes out in relief and then sniffs the air and there's something… off, "Adora? You better not be lying to me. I can smell you on my blankets…"

Adora's eyes widen, a blush on her cheeks as she tries to pull away, only to be held in place by her hands, she moves around uncomfortably and then meekly asks, "You can smell that?"

Catra nods, "Magicat, remember?" she flicks an ear and adds, "I thought you said you knew a lot about me."

"I do!" Adora protests, "It's just…" the blonde sighs out, turning her face away, "Well… you had me riled up and I didn't feel right consummating last night if you weren't even going to remember it."

Catra nods for Adora to go on.

"So… once you fell asleep you kind of got… handsy… which well, mmm…" Adora can't believe she's about to admit this, "I kind of… relieved some of those urges… next to you…"

"You masturbated next to me after I passed out?" Catra surmises.

"Don't say it like that!" Adora groans in embarrassment, "Besides, you're the one that got me all… you know!"

"While I was sleeping?" Catra huffs out a laugh and Adora groans again, the magicat squeezing Adora's hands in hers, "That's kind of amazing actually. It's too bad I wasn't awake to see it. Can I get a demonstration please? You know… so I can know more about you?"

"No." Adora pouts back, "Just because we're married doesn't mean I'm only here for your own needs. I have needs too."

"I'm sure you do." Catra replies with a slight smile and the leans back against the bedhead, "Fuck… we really got married, huh?" Adora nods, "Scorp and Perfuma are going to be pissed when they find out…"

"Oh… yeah, right." Adora agrees with a pensive look on her face and then looks up at Catra, "Does this mean we have to keep this a secret?"

Catra rubs the back of her neck and grimaces, "I think we should keep this under wraps until after Scorp and Perfuma get hitched…"

"Oh." Adora thinks about the actual wedding date, that hasn't actually been announced yet and grimaces right back at Catra, "That's… going to be a while, huh?"

"Yeah." Catra replies with an apologetic smile, "Or we can get divorced…"

"Stars…" Adora groans, "Do we have to?"

Catra groans as well, "It seems like a lot of work…"

Adora shakes her head with a grin, "Hey Cat?"

"Hm?"

"How much of last night do you remember?" Adora asks and Catra furrows her brows.

"Uh… it's a little hazy after I sculled that drink." Catra admits and Adora shakes her head again, "What?"

“You’re not supposed to scull a cocktail, Catra.” Adora says with an amused grin, “I’m pretty sure it went straight to your head.”

“Definitely did.” Catra agrees readily, “What is even in that?”

“It’s mostly greens with some alcohol.” Adora answers, “Though I think some of those greens may have psychedelic qualities in them for magiacats… it didn’t really affect me since you kind of drank my drink too...”

“I drank both drinks?” Catra asks intrigued, “Why didn’t you stop me?”

“Don’t you start, you drank it before I even had a chance.” Adora pushes the magicat playfully, “You got… interesting… after one drink.”

“A drink that affects my species, princess.” Catra corrects.

“Whatever.” Adora hums, she can’t seem to stop smiling at the magicat who also happens to be her wife.

The smile on Adora’s face is enough for Catra to lean in and want to kiss her, she’s about a hair away from Adora’s awaiting lips, “Is it okay if I kiss you, Adora?”

“Yes.” Adora whispers back into Catra’s lips, “I love kissing you.”

Catra grins, pressing her lips on Adora’s in a soft and tentative kiss and when the magicat pulls back she watches Adora’s lips turn up into a smile with her eyes closed, “So… can you tell me what happened last night?”

Last night…

“Catra no!” Adora calls out, trying to stop Catra from downing the entire contents of the cocktail but fails by the time she can put her own glass down and reach for the magicat’s. Catra sticks her tongue out in disgust, happily handing over the empty glass to Adora, the blonde looking over the magicat with concern, “You’re not supposed to drink that all in one go, Catra… how are you feeling?”

The magicat smacks her lips a few times, licking the rest of the liquid off before sticking her tongue out again, “The aftertaste is terrible.”

Adora breathes a sigh of relief, chuckling a little at the answer, “Okay. Well, as long as you don’t feel… sick. I guess.”

“Hey Adora?” Catra asks as she wipes the mouth with the sleeve of her shirt.

“Hm?” The blonde replies trying to get Perfuma’s attention.

“Can I get your number?” Catra asks with a serene smile on her lips, “I feel like I want to see you again. And hopefully not drink that again.”

“You want my number?” Adora repeats back a little taken aback.

Catra shrugs, “We’ve already kissed, so… why not date?”

“Wildcat!” Scorpia wraps an arm around the magicat, “Look at you! Meeting new people and actually getting along!”

Catra slips under her best friend’s arm, a smirk on her lips, “Adora’s not new. I’ve met her before. I feel like I’ve known her all my life but just to sure, I have to date her and probably sleep with her.”

“Woah! Wildcat… you should probably keep that last bit to yourself…” Scorpia lowers her voice as Adora blushes, “And maybe… pace yourself.”

“Ha!” Catra laughs before grabbing Adora’s hand and tugging her towards her, “So? What do you say, princess? Can I have your number so I can take you on dates and probably sleep with you?”

“Stars…” Adora says stunned at the same time as Scorpia also says, but the scorpini shakes her head.

The smirk on Catra’s lips doesn’t fade, nor does her confidence, “I promise you tonight will be a night you won’t forget.”

“Are you feeling alright, Wildcat?” Scorpia tries to push herself in between, but she’s gently pushed to the side, so as not to block Catra’s view of Adora, “Wow… you’re not really this… uh… forward.”

“I know what I want.” Catra replies not even looking away from Adora, “And I’m hoping that Adora wants the same thing as I do?”

“I don’t want to date myself, Catra.” Adora jests, watching the slow upturn of Catra’s lips into a grin, “But… I guess I could maybe go on a date with you…”

“Great!” Catra says victoriously, Adora’s hand still in hers as she starts to tug the blonde out of the club before pausing, “Wait.”

“Huh?”

“I should probably tell Scorp and Perfuma I’m leaving with the most beautiful woman in the club.” Catra says casually that Adora blushes again, but before she can say anything, she’s dragged back deeper into the club again and back to the newly engaged couple, “Guys. My one drink is done. Congrats on the upcoming wedding or whatever. Happy for you both. I’m going to go now.”

“Oh, okay.” Perfuma looks at Adora who just sends her a sheepish smile, “Thank you for coming out tonight Catra.”

“No probs, Flower Power.” Catra grins as she avoids the impending bear hug from Scorpia, “And Scorp, congrats big gal on getting your dream girl.”

“Thanks Wildact.” Scorpia nods back before scooping the magicat up in a hug, making Adora laugh, “Don’t fight it, Wildcat. I’m a hugger.”

Catra groans out, going limp in the large woman’s arms, “I know. Can I go now?”

“Oh, gosh. Yes!” Scorpia lowers the magicat back down, Catra dusting herself off before grinning widely at Adora as Scorpia looks between the pair and then to Adora, pulling out a pen and a business card, she scribbles something on it and then hands it to the blonde, “Here. Take this.”

“What is it?”

“It’s Catra’s home address. Please don’t take her home with you.” Scorpia warns, “She’s not the best if she wakes up in an unfamiliar environment… uh, I should know…”

Perfuma pats Scorpia on her shoulder, “It’s a good thing you’re really good at fixing things, sweetie. Otherwise, I’m pretty sure Catra would still be paying off the hotel for damages… and it’s such a lucky thing she knows you.”

Catra just grins back innocently, “I didn’t break that many things…”

“You put two quite large holes in the walls before nearly smashing the sink into pieces.” Perfuma reminds, “It’s lucky Entrapta tracked your phone.”

“Hey, if she hadn’t called me, I probably would have….”

“No, you wouldn’t.” Perfuma cuts in, “Or did you forgot when you woke up in my spare room after Scorpia carried you back after you went a little too hard at your graduation party? My plants are still recovering.”

“That was years ago.” Catra groans out.

“My point still stands.” Perfuma puts her hands on her hips as she turns to Adora, “Just… take her home please.”

“Okay. I will.” Adora nods, she turns to Catra, “Can I at least finish my drink before we leave?”

“You still have some left?” Catra asks as she looks at the empty glass in her hand, “Wait… why does my tongue taste like fuzz…”

“Uh, I think you drank Adora’s drink, Wildcat…” Scorpia stage whispers to Catra.

“Oh dear.” Perfuma says somewhat concerned, “Adora, could you please take her home and make sure she stays there? She’s had too many… greens.”

“Are you sure I’m the best person to, hey! Stop that!” Adora turns to Catra and quickly grabs her hands off her hips, before turning back to Perfuma, trying to hold onto the magicat’s wandering hands, “Really? Me?”

“She seems quite attached to you.” Perfuma replies with a consolatory look on her face, “I don’t think she’ll see anyone else together. Not with the amount of greens in her system.”

“Oh.” Adora says as the magicat manages to wrap her arms around Adora from behind and starts to purr loudly, sighing, the blonde turns her head and sees Catra’s eyes staring back at her, “I guess I better get you home, huh?”

Catra grins, “You wanna go home with me, huh?”

Adora sighs and nods, “Come on, let’s get you home.”

The magicat grins even wider, her eyes dart to her friends, “See ya, losers!”

Adora yelps out when the magicat picks her up and puts her on her back into a piggy back, “Catra!”

“Congrats!” Catra shouts as she quickly makes her exit, Adora on her back and a myriad of strange looks from the crowd as she weaves through them until they are both outside.

“Where are we going, Catra?” Adora asks as Catra jostles her back up again, “Also, I can walk, you know?”

“I know.” Catra says as she looks around and then decides to go left, “I think it’s this way.”

“What’s that way?” Adora asks feeling a little silly being carried the way she is currently, “Are we heading back to your place?”

“Patience, princess.” Catra says with amusement in her voice, “I’ll get you home soon enough, but first…”

“Catra!” Adora squeals with laughter as the magicat takes off in a run down the road she’s decided to turn down, “Stars!”

Catra starts to laugh, making it hard to run and breathe at the same time as she slows back down to a walk, panting out a little and trying to catch her breath, “Wow… I really need to go back to the gym…”

“I hope you’re not using me as weight training.” Adora says as she shuffles a little on Catra’s back.

“Nah, you’re not heavy enough.” Catra shrugs despite the weight on her back and then yawns, “Coffee?”

“Huh?”

“Do you want to grab a coffee with me?” Catra asks using her head to gesture to the late night café on the corner, “We can get some pie too, I guess. Get this gross fuzzy green feeling off my tongue.”

“If it means you’ll let me down…” Adora starts, “Then yes. I’ll grab a coffee with you.”

“Cool.” Catra says but makes no move to let Adora down, instead deciding to walk all the way to the café’s entrance before finally lowering the blonde down to her feet, opening the door and holding it for Adora, “After you.”

“What do you want to drink?” Adora asks as she steps inside.

“Don’t worry about it.” Catra grins as they walk towards the counter and Adora looks at the menu boards, “Get anything you want, princess. Razz isn’t going to listen anyways and bring out whatever she wants.”

“Then why bother with menus?” Adora asks with a confused look on her face.

Catra shrugs as an old woman with big white hair, huge glasses and a broom appears, there’s some kind of white moths or butterflies flying around her hair as she looks at Catra and then at Adora, a smile turns up on her lips, “Mara dearie! Why have you not come to see Razz earlier?”

Catra nudges Adora, “She means you, Mara.”

The magicat snickers when Adora looks at her even more confused, she finally addresses Razz, “Sorry, but I’m Adora. Not Mara.”

“Adora. Mara. Same thing!” Razz grins wider, “What can I get you two?”

“Coffee.” Catra replies simply.

“It’s too late for you to be drinking coffee, young one.” Razz chastises and then turns her attention to Adora and then smiles again when something flickers behind her eyes, “Finally! Took you two long enough!”

“Uh, what?” Adora asks under her breath, nudging Catra in the process to get some sort of idea of what is going on, but Catra just shrugs.

“You two. Took you long enough.” Razz repeats and this time Catra snickers under her breath.

“Catra!” Adora groans out at the unhelpfulness of the magicat.

“Hey Razz, I’m going to take Adora home tonight.” Catra declares, “I’m going to get her number, then date her and then marry her.”

“Catra…” Adora can’t hide the smile at the magicat’s declarations, “You can’t just say things like that. You barely even know me.”

“That’s why I’m going to get your number, take you on a date, marry you and sleep with you.” Catra doubles down, “Then I’ll have the rest of my life to get to know and love you.”

“Uh…” Adora’s brain hasn’t quite caught up yet, “How can you be so sure?”

“Are you not sure?” Catra replies back with a tilt of her head, “Because if you’re not sure then you should definitely not give me your number, definitely shouldn’t go on a date with me or marry me. But… I wouldn’t say no if you wanted to sleep with me.”

“Stars…” Adora repeats but can’t help the smile tilting up her lips, “Does it have to be all tonight?”

“Yes.” Catra replies seriously, “I feel like if it’s not all tonight that I’m going to miss this chance and we’ll be like… like… ships passing in the night.”

Adora thinks about it for a minute, the seriousness in Catra’s voice should make her run but it doesn’t as she finds herself reaching out for Catra’s hand, intertwining their fingers and leans in for a kiss, their second kiss, “Isn’t this a date?”

Catra leans in again and initiates the third kiss, “It can be.”

“Then, it is.” Adora declares and then teasingly says, “I guess you’re going to have to ask me to marry you next.”

“Damn straight I am.” Catra grins wide as she leans her forehead against Adora’s, “But… date first. Maybe sex later…”

“Go sit down. I’ll bring you what you need.” Razz interrupts the couple, gesturing for them to move away from her counter, “And no sex in the booth!”

Catra laughs as she repeats to Adora, “No sex in the booth.”

“Nope.” Adora laughs as well as she straightens a little to lock at Razz, “Young one here has to marry me first according to her plan.”

Razz rolls her eyes at the pair, “Go on. Go sit down.”

Catra stares back at Adora, her eyes seeing nothing except the blonde.

Not even when Razz brings over their food and drinks, she sees nothing except Adora.

The blonde just stares back at her with a soft smile as she sips on her ice tea, “What? Why do you keep looking at me like that?”

“I think I’m in love.” Catra says, she doesn’t even realise she’s said it and honestly, right now, she doesn’t even care, since the girl of her dreams is sitting across from her and on a date with her.

“You think you love me?” Adora raises an eyebrow back at the magicat, “Why do you say that?”

“I can’t see anyone but you.” Catra just smiles at Adora, her eyes still staring at the blonde, “And I don’t want to see anyone else but you.”

Adora blushes and Catra grins wider at being the reason for it, "You're only saying that because you've had too many greens."

"I'm really not." Catra replies surely, "But… I have a feeling I'm not going to remember much of tonight."

"No? Why not?" Adora asks lightly and with a slight giggle.

"Pretty sure 'fuma said that greens have a memory loss side effect if I consume too much." Catra tries to recall that conversation when they were arguing over the magicat's diet consisting of mainly meats, "But… I don't know. Might happen. Might not. Guess we'll find out in the morning."

"Are you going to forget all of this in the morning?" Adora asks and Catra shrugs.

"Ask me in the morning." Catra replies with a smile.

"Count on it." Adora nods back, "But I'll remind you if you do forget."

Catra chuckles at that, "Okay. Thanks, princess."

"Did you pay?" Adora asks as Catra swings their joined hands as they leave the late night café.

"Nope."

"Catra! We can't just dine and dash!" Adora tries to tug the magicat back unsuccessfully, "Catra! It's stealing!"

"Razz doesn't accept my money and she sure as heck isn't going to accept yours." Catra shrugs, "And trust me, I've tried."

"So… let me try. How do you know she won't accept my money?" Adora tries to convince the magicat.

“Don’t worry about it, princess.” Catra turns to the blonde, a smile on her lips, “I help her out on Sunday and Mondays.” The magicat leans in and for a second Adora thinks Catra is leaning in for another kiss, instead Catra stage whispers, “Don’t tell anyone.”

“Don’t tell anyone… that you help Razz on Sunday and Mondays?” Adora says perplexed, “What’s wrong with that?”

“I’ve got a reputation to protect.” Catra replies, pretending to look around in case anyone hears her, “So… keep my dirty little secret?”

“You’re ridiculous.” Adora rolls her eyes, “But fine. I’ll keep your dirty little secret.”

Catra grins back victoriously and then she scrunches up her nose when Adora says the next part.

“Only because you’re cute when you think you’re a badass.” Adora laughs out, “But I won’t tell anyone that you’re actually really sweet and kind.”

“I am a badass.” Catra pouts, crossing her arms over her chest, “I dig up dinosaurs and get to name them if I find a new species!”

“Yes, very badass.” Adora says as she leans in and kisses the pout off Catra’s face, “But you’re also really really cute too.”

“Not cute.” Catra grumbles, “You’re cute.”

Adora giggles, “Uh huh. Sure, but… you’re the cutest.”

Maturely, Catra sticks her tongue out at the blonde, before grabbing the Adora’s hand again and leading her further from the café, “There’s 2 more places we need to go tonight.”

“There are?”

“Yes.”

“Okay, lead the way.” Adora laughs, following Catra’s lead.

Catra stops out the front of a building with a single glass door, and the glass is frosted over so you can’t see inside except for a light that illuminates the space inside. The magicat knocks on the door five times and then waits as Adora looks around.

The sun has gone down and it’s a little cold out, she didn’t bring a jacket because she thought she’d be spending most of the night inside the club and clubs are warm, hot even, especially with so many bodies dancing and grinding against one another. The thought of Catra dancing and grinding against her has her shivering slightly.

Then all of a sudden, Adora feels warmth across her shoulders and realises that Catra’s taken her jacket off and draped it over her shoulders before going back to waiting for the door to open.

“Thank you.” Adora softly says as puts her arms through the sleeves and lets Catra zip it up, “I should have brought a jacket, huh?”

“It is winter.” Catra replies with a shrug as the door finally opens, “Finally! What happened to customer service?”

“What are you doing here, Catra?” The woman with silver hair at the door frowns at the magicat before looking out and seeing Adora, she gestures to the blonde, “How long you been with her?”

“Uh… what time is it?” Catra asks back.

“Stars… you’re an idiot.” The woman shakes her head.

“That’s Adora.” Catra juts her thumb to the blonde, “Adora, this is Netossa. Where’s the missus?”

“She’s out.” Netossa replies with her hands on her hips, “Meeting up with some of her friends for something or another.”

“Vague.” Catra observes, “Why aren’t you out with her?”

“I can’t stand her friends.” Netossa replies nonchalantly before she sees Adora shiver a little at the breeze picking up, “Come on in and warm up for a bit.”

“Thanks.” Catra nods and tugs Adora inside with her, closing the door behind them.

“I’ve got some hot tea in the pot if you want a cup.” Netossa says to Adora, “Might help you warm up a little.”

“That sounds really good.” Adora smiles gratefully at the other woman, “If it’s okay?”

“Help yourself, Adora.” Netossa points the blonde to the kitchen, “Cups and mugs are on the top shelf over the stove top.”

“Thank you again.” Adora replies as she breaks off to the kitchen while Catra follows Netossa further inside.

“No.” Netossa says as Catra paces around the room, “You barely know this girl. I’m not giving it to you to give to her after knowing her for what… an hour and a half?”

“More like 2.” Catra corrects, “But I know this is it. She’s the one.”

“Are you high?” Netossa asks off jokingly before the stretch of silence drags on too long and she has to ask again, “Are you?”

“I’ve had too many greens.” Catra admits sheepishly.

Netossa sighs, “Well, at least you’re not high.”

“I don’t do that.” Catra replies, “Never have.”

“Good.” Netossa says.

“So… can you get it for me?” Catra asks, “I have to do it tonight. I’ve got 2 out of 4 things on my list completed.”

“Stars…” Netossa groans out, “Why me? Why couldn’t you have come here last night when I was out?”

Catra just grins back knowingly, “It’s karma…”

“Fate.”

“Whatever.” Catra grins wider, “I’m feeling the pull, Nets. I’ve never felt the pull before.”

“Fuck. Really?” Netossa sighs, “Are you sure?”

“Yes.”

“Even with the greens?”

“I think it’s a sign.” Catra says, “But, I think I would have made my way here even if I didn’t have the greens.”

“I think I should call Spinny, just in case.” Netossa says a little defeated, “I don’t want to get into trouble with the boss, you know?”

Catra laughs, “You’re so whipped.”

“She’s my wife, idiot.” Netossa throws back with a smile tugging on her lips, “We do things as a team.”

“Uh huh.” Catra nods, “You go call her, I’m going to check on Adora.”

Catra’s sitting on the couch with Adora, the blonde sipping the cup of tea as Catra mindlessly rubs circles on Adora’s shoulder, her arm over the blonde’s chest as she leans back on the magicat comfortably.

“Spinny wants to talk to you.” Netossa reemerges.

“Thanks.” Catra says and all she hears is screaming on the other side of the phone call, Adora quickly turns her head at the sound and the magicat just shakes her head with a grin as she waits for the screaming to stop, “Hey Spinny.”

“Catra! Stars!” Spinny screams elatedly into the phone call, “Hand me back to my wife please.”

“Sure.” Catra holds the phone back to Netossa, “It’s for you.”

“Well, duh.” Netossa rolls her eyes as Catra snickers, “Hey Spinny… yes, I know. Uh huh. I know… okay, as long as your on board with this too. Okay. Love you, bye.”

“Well?” Catra smirks back at the other woman.

“Follow me.” Netossa says putting her phone back into her pocket.

“I’ll be right back, princess.” Catra presses a quick kiss to the blonde’s hair, “Stay warm.”

“But you’re my warmth.” Adora replies with a smile and then a pout.

“I’ll be right back.” Catra repeats as she gets off the couch, “Then we can go, okay?”

“Okay.” Adora says as she leans back into the warm space Catra has just vacated.

Once Catra shuts the door to the study, Netossa throws a small box at the magicat, “Spinny says she wants to meet Adora.”

“She will.” Catra replies and pops the box open and looks at it before closing it again, “Thank you for keeping this safe.”

“You’re welcome.” Netossa replies sincerely, “You better not be wrong about this.”

“I’m not.” Catra say confidently, “I can feel it in my bones.”

Catra snorts out a laugh, as does Netossa who pulls the magicat into a big hug, “Dinner Sunday. Bring Adora. And don’t you dare try to back out.”

Pocketing the small box, Catra puts her hands up, “You have my word… if I remember tonight at all…”

“Okay, get out of here.” Netossa says, “It’s meant to rain tonight. Get home before it starts up.”

“Thank you, again, Nets.” Catra touches the box in her pant pocket.

Netossa nods her head and Catra exits the room.

“Last stop, I promise.” Catra says as she leads Adora down another street, “And then I will happily return to my home with you.”

“Promise?”

“Yeah.” Catra agrees, “You have my word.”

“Okay.” Adora nods and then looks up at the sky, “It looks like it’s going to rain…”

“Probably.” Catra grins, “So, the quicker we get this done the quicker you can get me home.”

Catra knocks on a large wooden door, Adora standing next to her as the door swings open, a woman with a purple robe looks stands in the doorway, a welcoming smile on her face, "Welcome. Cash or card?"

"How much?" Catra asks in lieu or answering.

"Cash or card for what?" Adora asks instead.

The woman just hands Catra a flyer and the magicat quickly reads it, "Cash. I've got everything else."

"Great." The woman smiles, "So, do you have witnesses or are you happy to have whoever we've got in the room?"

Catra pauses to think, "Oh… that's what I forgot…"

"Are you sure you want to do this now?" The woman asks, "Because it's always a good idea to stop and think before committing to something like this."

"No. It has to be now." Catra replies confidently, "We'll just have the people in there already."

The woman turns to Adora, "You get a say on this as well."

"I have no idea what is going on right now." Adora replies looking between the pair.

The woman looks at Catra in concern, the magicat shrugs back before taking Adora's hand, "Lead the way, lady."

"Uh… have you even asked her yet?" The woman asks.

"She's aware of the plan." Catra says with a smile as she looks to Adora, and then surprising the blonde by dropping down to one knee and pulling out the box from her pocket, "Hey Adora?"

Adora's jaw drops, "Catra! I thought you were kidding! You're all hyped up on greens!"

“I may be on greens, but my head has never been clearer.” The magicat grins, “And I have also never been so sure of anything or anyone in my life as I am sure about wanting to marry you, princess.”

Adora eyes widen as she triest o think of what to say to that, but she doesn’t have to wait much as Catra continues to ramble.

“You probably think I’m high or out of my mind, but I’m really not. I’m not sure how much you know about magicats and greens, it does create a bit of a high, but it also creates clarity and an enhancement of senses and a sense of self.” Catra continues still on bended knee, “I know I love you. My heart knows it. The greens have just made it clearer. And I know that I’m going to regret it for the rest of my life if I don’t do this now. I want to spend the rest of my life knowing you. Loving you. So, will you jump into the deep end with me and marry me?”

“You better not be fooling around.” Adora warns seriously.

Catra shakes her head, “Not about this.” The magicat then grins, “But I’d be more than happy to fool around later when you’re my wife.”

Adora rolls her eyes but there’s a smile on her face.

“So? Marry me?” Catra asks again, the hopeful look on her face doesn’t fade, “What do you think?”

“Are you sure you love me? You barely know me.” Adora says softer.

“Surer than sure.” Catra grins, “And… I no longer just think I love you.”

Adora raises an eyebrow at the magicat, “No?”

“No.” Catra sighs and looks away before refocusing on the blonde, “I know I love you.”

“Stars… those greens really have got to you.” Adora says under her breath.

“It’s not the greens, princess.” Catra says as she shifts a little from her knee, “It’s you. I think I knew it the first time I saw you.”

“A few hours ago…” Adora reminds Catra.

“Doesn’t matter if it was a few hours ago or a few lifetimes ago.” Catra says with such conviction that it surprises Adora, “Like I said, I’ve never been surer of anything else in my life. And look, I get if you aren’t on the same level as me because greens don’t have the same effect on you, but it’s cleared my head and made me see what I’ve got in front of me. And unless you tell me that you don’t want this or me, then I’m going to do everything I can to keep you and this.”

Adora’s head is spinning with everything Catra is saying to her, so much that she surges forward and kisses the magicat before she starts crying with sentiment, “Shut up. I’ll marry you.”

“You will?” Catra asks a little shocked herself, even though she hoped Adora would say yes, this was a long shot even in her books as Adora pulls her up to her feet and kisses her again, a little dopey from the kiss, the magicat remembers what is in her hand and holds it out to Adora, slowly opening the box, “This is for you.”

“Not yet!” The woman in the purple robe shouts out before Adora even gets a good look at the contents of the box, “Give it to her inside.”

Catra laughs, pocketing the ring once again, “Sorry, princess. Rules are rules.”

Adora huffs out playfully, “This is absolutely bonkers, Catra.”

“Sure is.” Catra grins back, “We can be bonkers together. And then maybe after we can bonk.”

“Catra!” Adora laughs at the joke, “Marry me first.”

“What do you think we’re doing here?” Catra gestures for the woman in the purple robe to lead the way, “Sorry, I missed your name.” the magicat asks the woman in question.

“I’m Myra and I’m also a registered and licenced marriage celebrant.” The woman replies with a smile, leading the couple down a brightly lit and nicely decorated hall until they reach a door, “I do apologize if some of the people in there may be sleeping.”

“Oh, that’s fine.” Catra replies as Myra pushes the door open and it’s like a performance area, a small ‘stage’ in the middle at the front, there’s a few rows of chairs and a few fake flowers decorated around the room.

Adora looks inside as Myra flicks on more lights, there’s a only three other people in the room and they look like they’re dressed up for a wedding, “Who are these people?”

“I pay people to dress up for strangers’ weddings.” Myra answers, “They don’t even have to do anything except for sign their name as witnesses.”

“Hey, I know these three!” Catra looks around at the ‘witnesses’ in the room.

“Seriously Catra…” The woman of the trio says as she rolls her eyes at the magicat, “Of all the places…”

“What the fuck are you guys doing here?” Catra questions as the skinny blonde guy and a lizard guy finally turn their gaze onto the magicat, “Not that I’m not happy to see you… but seriously, what the fuck?”

“Are you really getting married?” The skinny guy asks.

“Yes, Kyle. I am.” Catra replies, “Why are you, Lonnie and Rog here?”

“We’re working.” Lonnie replies with a roll of her eyes, “Plus it’s an easy gig. Most nights when we’re here, it’s fairly quiet.”

“Oh! But some of these weddings are an absolute hoot!” Kyle chimes in, Rog nodding in agreement, “There was one with the drag queens and wow, it was like a performance I’ll never forget.”

“Well, sorry to disappoint you, but this is just going to be mellow. In and out. Right, princess?” Catra says, before quickly remembering she hadn’t introduced her yet, “Adora, this is Lonnie, Kyle and Rogelio. I went to school with them. Guys, this is Adora, my soon to be Mrs.”

“It’s so good to meet you!” Kyle shakes Adora’s hand with genuine happiness on his face, “How long have you and Catra been together?”

Adora blushes a little as she turns to Catra before answering sheepishly, “Honestly? A couple of hours…”

“Woah, Wildcat indeed.” Lonnie smirks.

“Oh, shut it.” Catra chastises with an eye roll, “You guys got hitched as soon as you were legal. Don’t give me shit now.”

“Yeah, but we’ve known each other for most of our lives.” Lonnie throws back before turning to Adora, “Is she coercing you into this? Do you need help?”

“I am not forcing Adora into anything.” Catra argues as Lonnie puts her hand up to stop the magicat from talking, “Hey!”

“Stop. I want to hear it from her.” Lonnie glares at the magicat, before turning back to Adora again, “Touch your left ear if she is forcing you into this. Or touch your right elbow if you are crazy enough to do this out of your own free will.”

Adora looks around at all the faces in the room, she’s all of a sudden the centre of attention and it’s frankly quite scary, she closes her eyes and clears her throat, touching her right elbow before letting out the breath she was holding to see Catra smiling back at her. Lonnie, Kyle and Rogelio all look satisfied as they go back to their seats.

The magicat yawns, “Myra? Can we please get this show on the road?”

“Sure.” Myra nods and leads them to the stage.

Myra looks at Adora, “Is there anything you want to say before we get to the exchanging of rings?”

Adora’s eyes widen in panic, “I… I don’t have a ring to give you.” She says to Catra feeling guilty.

Catra chuckles, “Why would you?”

Adora just stares back, still in a state of panic.

Catra pulls out a ring from her back pocket and holds it out to Adora, “I got you, princess.”

Adora slowly takes the ring from Catra’s fingers and looks at it, she looks back at the magicat and then says, “I promise I’ll get you a ring. A proper ring.”

“No. I will.” Adora stands firm, “I promise I will.”

“Okay.” Catra just says, “In the meantime, you can borrow mine.”

“Thank you.” Adora smiles back.

Myra clears her throat and the pair focus on her again, “Okay, so, now that the rings are no longer an issue. Adora? Is there anything you want to say before we get to the exchanging of rings?”

“Uh, yes…?” Adora replies unsurely.

“Go ahead, now is the time.” Myra gently guides the blonde before reminding her, “You also don’t need to say anything if you don’t want to.”

“No, I want to say something.” Adora declares as she then looks into Catra’s eyes and gulps down, the reality starting to set in, “I can’t believe I’m doing this…” she starts and Catra stares at her with her ears flat against her head, “But I want to.”

Catra’s ears perk back up again, hope back in her eyes as she looks Adora in the eyes.

“I know it’s crazy and probably a really bad idea but…” Adora looks up and when she looks back into Catra’s eyes, she smiles, “But I’m going to dive into the deep end with you. Not because I want to do something impulsive. But because this feels right. Really right. And I don’t know if I love you yet, but… we have the rest of our lives to find out.”

Catra can’t help the grin that comes over her face as Adora mirrors the same look back.

“Thank you, Adora.” Myra says, “Catra? How about you? Anything to say?”

“For the rest of my life, I’ve found my home.” Catra says, “And for the rest of my life, I will love you even if you don’t believe me yet. And I know I barely know you, but we have the rest of our lives to figure that out.”

“Thank you, Catra.” Myra nods as Catra can’t stop staring at Adora with the same look being mirrored back by the blonde, “Rings?”

Catra reaches into her pocket and pulls out the ring box, holding it in her hand until the time comes for the exchanging of rings. Adora slides Catra’s ring on first, the magicat grins widely and then she opens the box and takes the ring out, putting the box back in her pocket and then reaches for Adora’s hand, “This ring is the only thing I have of value." She slides the ring onto Adora's finger and then adds, "Now I have two things of value to keep safe."

Adora doesn't even hear the part when Myra says they are now married and can kiss, her brain is still comprehending the last sentence of Catra's statement as the magicat leans in and Adora smiles back, leaning in and pressing her lips against Catra's in a soft kiss.

"Whoo!" Kyle cheers and whoops in the 'crowd' of three as Lonnie and Rogelio clap and cheer a little too, "Way to go Cat! I knew you'd get there!"

Myra claps her hands together, "Congratulations. We just need you guys to fill out some paperwork and then it'll be official."

Adora can't believe it.

She got married.

To Catra.

It's absolutely crazy but…

Fuck does this feel right.

Her hand in Catra's as the magicat leads them back outside.

The smile on her face doesn't fade, nor does Catra's.

"I can't believe that just happened." Adora breathes out as she leans in and kisses the magicat, "And I can't believe I get to just do that."

Catra grins even wider, "How does it feel? Being married."

"Amazing." Adora replies sincerely, "I never in a million years thought it'd ever happen like this."

“Neither.” Catra agrees, “It’s better than a dream. And I really hope I remember this in the morning.”

“You better.” Adora says without any heat, before she breaks out into another smile, “What do we do now?”

And before Catra can answer, a drop of rain hits her on the face, the magicat looks up and starts to laugh as more raindrops fall, “Stars… we better get out of here.”

They run as the rain starts to get heavier, they take shelter under the awning of a shop that’s closed for the night and wait it out, Adora looks at the now drenched magicat and laughs at seeing her in the dim of the streetlights.

“What?” Catra asks aloof, shaking the rain out from her fur, “Why are you laughing?”

“You’re drenched.” Adora observes with another laugh and then yelps when Catra shakes her fur a little more vigorously, getting Adora in the process, “Hey!”

Catra grins back innocently, “I’m not doing anything…”

Adora glares at the magicat before she pulls the magicat in for a heated kiss, pushing Catra’s jacket off her shoulders, “Mm… dance with me…”

“Dance with me.” Adora repeats as she takes Catra’s hands and slides them under her shirt, “Please?”

Catra nods, pulling Adora’s shirt off, leaving the blonde in her bra, the blonde ripping open the maigcat’s shirt and grinning at the sight, her eyes widen as Catra rips the garment off and throws it to the ground to join Adora’s as she’s pulled out into the pouring rain, the blonde draping her arms over Catra’s shoulders as they slow dance to the sound of the rain.

“Does this count as our first dance?” Catra asks as she leans into Adora’s ear, her arms tightening around the blonde, “Because… this is kind of perfect.”

Adora nods as she hums back happily, closing her eyes and enjoying the feeling of Catra, the rain and the sounds of rain all around her.

“Adora?” Catra whispers when the rain starts to let up.

“Hm?”

“I’m sort of half naked and in the middle of the street…” Catra says with a little bit of a laugh, “I think we better get dressed and then back to my place.”

Adora tries to look down at the magicat, but squints her eyes shut when Catra starts to shake out her fur again, grabbing the blonde’s hand and quickly throwing her jacket back on before holding out Adora’s drenched shirt.

“No fair.” Adora pouts.

Catra chuckles, “You’re literally my wife, princess. You’ll see all of me soon enough.”

That seems to sate the blonde as she wrings out her shirt of the excess water before putting it back on again and shivering, “Cold…”

“We’ll run.” Catra says as she grabs Adora hand and pulls her towards her place in a bit of a run.

Catra stops abruptly in front of a house, the rain has subsided, but the wind is still cold as the magicat reaches into her pocket and pulls out her keys, “Well, here we are.”

“Can I come in?” Adora blurts out the question.

Catra snorts out a laugh, “Deny my wife the right to see my home? Are you kidding?”

Adora shuffles a little nervously at the question, “I mean… everything has happened really fast…”

“You’re such an idiot.” Catra rolls her eyes, “Come in. I insist.”

“As long as you’re sure.” Adora bites her bottom lip.

“I’m sure.” Catra presses a kiss on Adora’s lips before lifting up the blonde into her arms.

“Woah!” Adora yelps as Catra readjusts her in her arms, “Not again…”

“This isn’t a piggy back, princess.” Catra laughs, “Can you grab my keys?”

The magicat jingles the keys in the hand under Adora’s thighs, “This is ridiculous.”

“Why?” Catra asks as Adora manages to get the keys, the magicat walking forward towards the front door, “I thought this was tradition or something.”

“There are no traditions here, Catra.” Adora replies as she tries to stick the right key into the lock, “We just got married after you consumed too many greens.”

“We start our own traditions.” Catra shrugs, “And it’s the green key, princess.”

“Oh, right.” Adora flicks it to the green key and unlocks the door, “What traditions are we starting exactly?”

“Well, for one…” Catra pushes the door in with her foot and then steps inside, “Can you turn on the lights, it’s on your left.” Adora flicks the switch, “Thanks. Anyways, first tradition, get married after meeting for a few hours.”

Catra closes the door behind them, “Can you lock the door please?”

“Sure.” Adora reaches over, her tongue sticking out as she locks the door, “Second tradition?”

“Dance half naked in the rain after said wedding.” Catra continues to walk further into her house, pushing through another door on the right, “Light again, please.”

“Got it.” Adora once again reaches over and flicks it on, “This is your bedroom, Catra.”

“Sure is.” Catra replies as she gently lowers Adora back down to her feet, “Third tradition, carrying my wife over the threshold.”

Adora laughs a little at that one, “The threshold to your place, Catra.”

Catra shrugs, “A threshold is a threshold. I’d take you home but I’m afraid that I’d probably destroy your place when I woke up.”

“Perfuma wasn’t lying about that, huh?” Adora ask.

“Nope.” Catra grins as she shrugs off her soaked jacket and heads out of the room, before popping her head back in, “Give me your wet clothes, princess. I’ll put them in the wash.”

“Uh…” Adora blushes at seeing Catra’s bare chest.

“I’m going to see you naked sooner or later.” Catra smirks and then tugs down her pants, “Come on, the quicker you get out of those wet clothes, the warmer you’ll get in dry clothes.”

“Can I use your shower?” Adora asks instead, not comfortable getting naked in front of her new wife just yet, “And… maybe borrow some clothes?”

Catra nods, walking over in nothing but her underwear, still holding onto her wet clothes as she pulls out a shirt, shorts and a towel, "I don't have underwear that doesn't have a hole in the back for my tail."

"No, that's fine." Adora replies holding the clothes away from her wet clothes still on her body, "Do you mind if I go commando in your shorts?"

Catra snorts out a laugh, "Why would I? A gorgeous woman going commando in my shorts whilst also being my wife, why would I have a problem with that?"

Adora rolls her eyes, "Where's your bathroom?"

"Behind you, princess." Catra replies and Adora notices the door that's shut.

"Right." Adora turns to see the door.

"Give me your wet clothes, Adora." Catra says.

"Okay, hang on." The blonde goes into the bathroom, shutting the door behind her as she strips out of her wet clothes and opens the door just enough to give them to Catra.

"Thanks. I'll be out here when you're done." Catra says as she heads out to her laundry.

Adora walks out of the bathroom to see Catra dry and clothed, she's on top of the blankets and fallen asleep, the light still on the room as Adora smiles down at the sight. She shuts the door behind her and moves to turn off the light before getting into bed with the magicat.

"Catra…" Adora whispers to the sleeping magicat, "You're on top of the blankets."

"Mmm…" Catra hums back, making no effort to move.

"I got you." Adora whispers as she pulls the blankets out from under the magicat and then tucks her back in underneath, pressing a kiss on Catra's forehead before moving under the blankets herself, she smiles watching her wife sleep and soon enough falls asleep too, furry arms wrapping around her securely as a light purr fills the room. And Adora has never been happier than now.

Back to the morning after…

Catra stares at the blonde with her mouth open in shock as she takes in everything Adora has just told her and then stares down at Adora's hand, the one with the ring on it, the ring she must have gotten from Netossa and Spinny and then has to physically shake herself back into the present.

"Right." Catra says, there's nothing else that seems to come to mind, "Right…"

Adora offers up a nervous smile, pushing herself to her feet, "I'm going to get some water. I'll be right back."

"Right." Catra repeats staring after her… wife, "Right…"

Adora returns with two glasses of water, she holds one out to the magicat as she sits herself back down in bed next to Catra, "Are you alright?"

Catra takes the water gingerly, bringing it up to her lips for a sip to bide her time while her brain musters up some sort of answer, and when she lowers the glass all she can ask is, "You married me?"

"Yes." Adora smiles again, "I did."

"Why?"

The question stumps the blonde, thinking she'd already answered this during the long explanation from before, "Uh… Because you asked me and… I thought we already went through that…"

"No. I mean, yes." Catra rubs her back of her neck before looking back up at Adora, "But why me? I'm not… And you're… fuck… you're like… totally out of my league."

That statement makes Adora giggle as she brings her glass to her lips for another sip, "You're cute. What are you talking about? I am not out of your league, clearly as I married you."

"I'm not cute…" Catra grumbles despite her bed hair saying the opposite as it sticks up all over the place, "But you…" the magicat looks the blonde up and down, before realising again that she's in Catra's bed and married to her, "Are gorgeous, beautiful and every other synonym of those two words that I can't seem to articulate right now…"

Adora leans forward, collects Catra's half drunk glass and puts it on the bedside table alongside her own and pulls the magicat in for a kiss, and when they part, there's a dopey grin on Catra's face as Adora smirks back, "See? You're cute. Adorable. And every other synonym of those two words…"

Catra leans in again for another kiss, "Fuck…"

"Mm… no, we haven't don't that." Adora whispers into the magicat's lips before she adds, "Yet."

Just as Catra is about to retort, her alarm goes off and she groans out, reaching around to grab it and muttering a, "Sorry" in the process as she turns it off and rubs her eyes, "Hey, Adora?"

"Hm?"

"Want to come to the lab?" Catra asks with an awkward smile.

"Sure. Show me your dinosaurs." Adora smiles back as she leans back in for a few more kisses, "But I still want more kisses."

Catra laughs, feeling lighter as she decides that making out with her wife is an excellent use of her Saturday morning, since no one is actually expecting her to be at work today anyway.

"Are you sure it's okay for me to be here?" Adora tentatively steps inside, dressed in her magicat's clothes.

"Yes." Catra replies as she swipes her card and holds the door open to her office, "I just can't leave you unaccompanied. So, where you go, I go."

"What if I need to use the bathroom?" Adora asks as she watches Catra drop her bag on the floor behind her desk, "Or if I need to… I don't know… make a phone call or something?"

"Do you need to do either of those two things right now, princess?" Catra looks up from her computer after switching it on as Adora shakes her head, "And in answer to your questions, for now, yeah, I'll have to be with you. Obviously not go into the stall with you and watch, but I can wait outside the lavatory, so you've got some privacy. And if you need to make a phone call or whatever, just use my office. I'm just going to be in the main lab next door, you'll be able to see me through the windows."

"Oh, okay." Adora replies as she looks around Catra's office, it's not big or even all that personable, just mostly books, books and more books. Only for a fossilised skeleton of a small Compsognathus that's been reassembled and positioned in the middle of the bookshelf gives the room some sort of décor, the blonde looks over to Catra, "Nice dinosaur."

Catra looks up and grins, "I found that one."

"Oh yeah?" Adora says with genuine surprise, "That's really cool."

"Yeah." Catra replies as she quickly types something on her computer and then gets up and off her chair to stand next to the blonde, looking at the small dinosaur skeleton, "I found that one on my first dig. Well, not that one exactly. This is actually just a replica, the real one is in a museum that I rent out to them."

"You rent out a dinosaur?" Adora asks perplexed, "Can you do that?"

"Yeah. Finders' keepers." Catra shrugs, "It's all above board. No dodgy dealings if that's what you're thinking. Traps has all the footage and all the documentation to prove it if anyone tries something."

"Huh." Adora tilts her head, "Can I ask how much you rent it out for?"

Catra grins, "Hm… it's a bit early to talk money in our relationship, isn't it?"

Adora eyes widen and the gasps, "No! That's… I'm not after your money! I swear!" the blonde quickly says, "I'll sign a pre-nup and back date if you need me to!"

Catra just stares at her incredulously, "Are you planning on divorcing me already, princess?"

"No." Adora replies, "I mean, I don't want to."

"Okay…" Catra drawls before she smiles at the blonde, "Guess I'm going to spend the rest of my life getting to know and love you, huh?"

Adora pauses when she hears that, "What did you say?"

Taken aback a little with a smidge of recognition, the magicat slowly repeats, "I'm going to spend the rest of my life getting to know and love you?"

Without warning, Adora pulls Catra into a fierce kiss, the magicat yelping a little at the act before letting herself melt into it and kisses her wife back and when they pull apart for air, the blonde smiles as she rests her forehead against the magicat's, "That's why I married you…"

Catra blinks back at her, whispering, "I meant every word of it."

"I know you do." Adora smiles a little wider as she closes her eyes and enjoys Catra's warmth, "So… show me what you do here."

Adora frowns down at the slab in front of her as Catra continues to work, gently drilling and chipping away at rock around the bone as she huffs out, pushing her safety goggles up. The magicat's ears perk up, "What's up, princess? Am I boring you?"

"No, that's not it." Grey blue eyes meet heterochromatic ones as the blonde furrows her brows as she looks back down at the slab, "How can you tell what's bone and what's rock?"

Catra stares at Adora incredulously, before she grins, pulling off her goggles and walking across to where Adora is still glaring at the slab of rock in front of her, "Here, I'll show you." She takes Adora's gloved hand and runs her forefinger over the slab, "Feel this?"

"Hm."

"That's rock. See how it's rough?" Adora nods tentatively as Catra moves her fingers to another part of the slab, "And this, this is bone."

"What's the difference?" Adora asks, her brows still furrowed.

"It's smoother." Catra replies but the frown still stays on the blonde's face, the magicat chuckles and nudges Adora, "It's okay, princess. It takes a while to get used to what's what."

"Uh huh." Adora nudges Catra back playfully, "Guess I'm not made for this stuff."

Catra wraps her arms around Adora from behind and rests her chin on the blonde's shoulder, "It's okay. You're not getting paid to know this stuff."

The blonde giggles, leaning back against Catra, "Do you still have a lot to do?"

"Nah, I think I'm done for the day." Catra replies, "I know a great place we can go for lunch."

"Brunch." Adora corrects.

"Sure." Catra grins as she presses a soft kiss onto Adora's neck, scent marking the spot right after, "Brunch."

"Okay." Adora agrees as she rubs her cheek against the top of Catra's head, "Mm… Do you want to come and see my place later?"

"Yeah. I'd love to." Catra replies with a purr as she pulls the blonde out of the lab and back to her office.

"So, this is my place." Adora opens the door to her apartment, "It's… it's not as nice as your place, but it's home."

"Cosy." Catra says as walks in and looks around at the studio apartment, "I like it."

Adora shuts the door and watches the magicat walk around her place before standing at the foot of the bed, the blonde rushes over, quickly picking up the clothes strewn over the bed from when she was getting the night before and quickly dropping all the items in her laundry basket, "Sorry… I wasn't expecting anyone here…"

"Do you sleep over a lot, princess?" Catra asks teasingly, quirking an eyebrow in the process, "Because I think that needs to stop right now. The only exception would be sleeping over at my place, obviously."

Adora rolls her eyes, "No. I don't sleep over a lot."

"Great." The magicat takes off her jacket, throws it over the back of the couch and then flops onto her bed, "Woah… your bed is super firm… how do you sleep on this thing?"

"Shut up!" Adora chastises as she drops onto the bed next to the magicat, "It was all I could afford when I first move in here. And I just never changed it."

"Hm…" Catra thinks to herself, "Move in with me. I'd hate to tear your place apart by accident."

Adora looks over at the magicat, there's a smirk on her face but by all accounts, Catra seems serious, "Really? You want me to just… move in?"

"Yeah. You're my wife." Catra shrugs, "It's kind of makes sense that we would actually be living together."

"What am I going to do with my place?" Adora asks, "And what's going to happen if…"

"If what?"

"If this doesn't work out." Adora sighs out, "I mean, we kind of jumped into this and I don't think we've really taken the time to process everything. Maybe…"

"You want to hold off on moving in with me?" Catra's ear droop slightly in disappointment as she sighs, "I get it." The magicat turns over on her side to look at Adora, "One step at a time?"

"We're already married." Adora points out, "Maybe we should slow down a little…"

Catra chuckles, "Slow down after the fact that we're married?"

“Yeah.” Adora smiles back, “You know, kind of… really get to know each other, before we have joint everything.”

“Okay.” Catra nods as she reaches into her pocket and holds out a set of keys, “Here.”

“What’s this?”

“Keys to my place.” Catra replies as she flops onto her back, “I trust you, princess.”

“When did you even have time to do this?” Adora looks at the set of keys in her hand.

“When you took forever in the bathroom.” Catra says with a grin.

“Hey! I did not take forever!” Adora pouts, “It was totally a normal amount of time to use the very busy bathroom.”

“Uh huh.” Catra replies unconvinced, “Anyway, those are yours. Come and go as you please.”

“Do you want keys for my place?” Adora asks as she puts the keys down on the bed next to her, “Because I’m going to have to ask the landlord if I can get another set cut…”

“It’s fine, Adora.” Catra replies, “I’m sure I’ll be able to charm you into living with me soon enough.”

Adora glances over and sees Catra grinning at the ceiling, “Uh huh.”

“And then you can stop renting.” Catra yawns, putting her hands behind her head and getting comfortable, “I can donate this bed to the nearest prison. It’s probably as hard as their cots.”

Adora glares over at the magicat before turning over and then tickling Catra, the magicat laughing as she tries to stop the blonde’s fingers tickling her, “You’re such an ass.”

Catra pants out, trying to catch her breath from laughing so much to grin back at the blonde, "Okay, okay. I won't donate it to the prison. I don't want anyone else having your scent but me." The magicat yawns again, "I'll just stick this in my spare room, I guess."

Adora pulls herself up and rests her head on Catra's chest and then wraps one arm over the magicat's stomach, "Mm… are you sure this is a good idea?"

"What?"

"Being married."

"Yes." Catra replies tiredly, "Those greens might have fucked with my memory, but the feeling in my bones is still the same. I'm sure, princess."

Adora smiles up at the magicat, "Do you remember dancing half naked in the rain?"

Catra smiles down, actually recalling that memory, "It was kind of perfect, wasn't it?"

"Yeah." Adora leans up and presses a kiss on Catra's lips, before sighing, "What are we going to tell everyone? Should we tell everyone?"

"Well, I would love to tell everyone. Shout it from the rooftops." Catra starts, "But, I think my friends are going to be pretty peeved with me…"

"Mine too." Adora agrees.

"But at the same time, I don't want to keep this a secret." Catra says, "Well? What do you think? I reckon we bite the bullet and just tell everyone."

"Are you sure?" Adora bites her bottom lip nervously.

“I am. As long as you’re comfortable with it.” Catra cups Adora’s cheek, rubbing her thumb gently over it, “We can hold off if you want to.”

“No.” Adora rubs her face against Catra’s hand on her cheek, “I think you’re right. Besides, I’m a really bad liar…”

That makes the magicat laugh, “Honesty it is, then.”

“Yeah, as long as we do it together.” Adora says hopefully, “I don’t think I could handle doing it alone…”

“That’s fine.” Catra replies, “Just let me know where and when and I’ll be there.”

“Promise?”

“Yeah. I promise.”

Perfuma and Scorpia stare at Catra in shock, they haven’t said a word since the magicat told them that she got hitched last night. They haven’t even asked to who due to said shock. Eventually Perfuma snaps out of it first and narrows her eyes at the magicat, “Are you sure you got married? Like… I know what greens can do to you…”

“I’m sure.” Catra replies confidently, “Very sure. Extremely sure.”

Perfuma nudges Scorpia, her scorpini friend shakes herself out of it and then smiles, “That’s… gosh… I don’t even know what to say to that…”

“Who exactly did you wed last night?” Perfuma finally asks as she look around the café that the magciat has brought them to, “And when did you go see Netty and Spinny to get the ring?”

“Last night.” Catra replies like it’s obvious, “You can call them to confirm but I’m pretty sure they were on board with my decision.”

“To who?” Scorpia blurts out, “I mean, who’s your… uh, wife?”

“Adora.” Catra replies with a dopey grin and then shakes her head unbelievably, “Can you believe she actually said yes?”

“Uh…” Both her friends say at the same time as Adora walks in.

“Oh, hey guys.” Adora greets awkwardly as Catra wraps an arm around the blonde’s waist as Adora blushes at the act as she tries to regain her composure, “It’s good to see you guys again. How was the rest of your engagement night?”

“Not as good as yours it seems.” Perfuma replies trying to figure out if this is some kind of prank, “Did you really get married last night?”

Adora nods awkwardly as she sheepishly says, “I know it’s kind of crazy…”

“But I’ve never felt like this for anyone before. So when Catra asked me I guess, why wait right?” Adora shrugs with a soft smile as Catra presses a kiss on her cheek, “Like I could say no to her.”

Catra grins back and pecks Adora’s lips, “I can be very charming, I guess.”

“Not charming.” Adora says before smirking and then whispers into Catra’s ear, “Cute.”

“Uh… congrats?” Scorpia says unsurely and then looks to Perfuma for guidance, “Right, sweetie?”

“Well, if they actually did get married then yes.” Perfuma nods and then sighs out before her eyes light up, “Stars… you got married, Cat!”

“I did.” Catra replies squeezing her hand on Adora’s waist, “I totally did.”

“Bring it in!” Scorpia finally gets on board as she pulls all three of them into her arms and laughs out, “My wildcat is married! Woo!”

“So… you’re not… upset?” Adora asks as her cheek is smooshed against Catra’s.

“No! Of course not!” Scorpia beams and then smirks to Perfuma once she releases everyone from the hug, “Now, Perfuma owes me dinner!”

“Huh?” Catra tilts her head in question.

Perfuma sighs as she looks to Catra, “I never thought you were the marrying kind.”

“I’m not.” Catra shrugs, “But, greens, a beautiful blonde and the perfect night kind out pulled it all together.”

“Okay, no more greens for you. Ever.” Perfuma points her finger at the magicat, “Lest you end up doing something really bad…”

“Like what?” Catra asks perplexed.

“I don’t know.” Perfuma concedes, “Maybe deciding to buy an island or something.”

“Ha!” Catra laughs, “Like I could afford anything like that! Ridiculous!”

“It was just an example!” Perfuma huffs out, crossing her arms over her chest, “I still can’t believe you actually got married…”

“Believe it, Flower Power.” Catra smirks.

The wiry blonde smiles back after looking at Catra holding Adora close into her body and coos, “Stars, you’re positive energy is through the roof right now! I'm so excited and happy that you've finally moved out of that horrible brooding and growly stage."

"I was not brooding." Catra denies.

"You were, Wildcat." Scorpia backs her fiancé up, "But you looked real good doing it. If you're success with the ladies… oh, I mean, you definitely had a… presence…"

Adora quirks an eyebrow up at Catra, "Did you now?"

"Nope. Not going into that." Catra kills that line of conversation before yelping out indignantly when Adora grabs her arm and starts to lead her out, "Hey! What are you doing?"

"We are going to the doctors and getting a health check." Adora declares much to the amusement of Catra's friends, the blonde turns to the pair snickering, "Has she engaged in any… dangerous behaviours?"

"Uh… I don't think so…?" Scorpia replies rubbing the back of her neck, "She's generally pretty safe. Most times she… ow! Wildcat, that was uncalled for."

Scorpia rubs her shin from where the magicat had kicked her to stop talking, "I've been very safe."

"Uh huh." Adora says, "How safe? I'm not going to ask how many people you've been with because frankly, I don't want to know."

"Adora!" Catra groans out, "Fine, we'll go get tested. Together. You and me."

"Fine." Adora nods defiantly.

"No secrets, right?" Catra asks, "And besides I get checked regularly."

"Me too."

“Good.”

“Great.”

“Okay, then.” Catra nods, “Well, you want to go to my doctor or yours?”

“Is your doctor like… specialised in magicats or is it cool that I go there too?” Adora asks nervously.

“If you’ve got your own doc, we can go to your doc first and then mine after.” Catra suggests, “Do you have a doc, princess?”

“I don’t really have a doc.” Adora admits, “I usually just go to the local clinic and get whoever the doctor on duty is.”

“Oh, do you want to go to mine then?” Catra asks.

“I mean… if that’s alright?” Adora asks meekly.

Catra chuckles pulling the blonde in for a kiss on the lips, “It’s fine, Adora.” She presses another kiss on Adora’s cheek, “They have that whole doctor-patient confidentiality or whatever. So, your medical stuff is all yours unless you want me to know.”

Adora nods, “Okay, yeah. We’ll go to your doctor then.”

“Okay.” Catra agrees and pulls out her phones and brings up the online appointment booking calendar and shows it to Adora, “She’s got bookings for tomorrow if you want to go.”

“Oh, let me see.” Adora grabs the phone and looks over the screen, “She works on Sundays?”

“Yeah, she does the odd hours and days. That’s why I go to her.” Catra replies, “So… tomorrow?”

“Can we do it in the morning?” Adora asks as she looks over at her wife, “I’ve got a horse to see at 930am. Then we’ve got the rest of the day to do whatever.”

“So… no sleeping in, huh?” Catra pretends to be disappointed before she feels Adora nudge her, “But, for you, yeah. Morning is fine. What time?”

“7am and 730am?” Adora asks as she looks to her magicat, “Or is that too early?”

“Oh, you need a username and password.” Adora points out as Catra gently takes the phone back.

“No problems.” Catra grins as she types in her username and password and books the times Adora suggested, “Done and done. Now, you better set like 10 alarms so I don’t sleep in.”

Adora giggles, “You won’t need 10 alarms, because I’ll be your alarm clock in the morning.”

“So…” Catra rests her forehead on Adora’s, “Does that mean you’ll be staying the night again?”

“Mm…” Adora pretends to think, “Well, I guess it would be fitting to sleep in the same bed as my wife…”

“Very fitting indeed.” Catra replies before they’re interrupted by Perfuma clearing her throat, the magicat rolling her eyes as she gives the wiry blonde a look, “What’s up?”

“Don’t forget you’re going to be going with Scorpia to shop for wedding outfits Monday night.” Perfuma warns before she leans in and whispers into Catra’s ear, “Try to keep it simple.”

“You know me.” Catra grins.

“Uh huh.” Perfuma rests her hands on her hips, “And get yourself another suit. You’ve worn out the only one you’ve got.”

Catra rolls her eyes again, “What’s wrong with my suit?”

Perfuma ignores the magicat's question, instead addressing Adora, "Get her to show you her one and only suit. And then tell her why she needs another one for my wedding."

"Uh…" Adora nudges Catra with her head, "Is that… okay?"

"You want to see my suit?" Catra smirks before shrugging, "You're totally going to dig my suit. So much so that you'll be begging me to take it off so we can…"

"Okay!" Perfuma cuts the magicat off, "Anyways, don't forget."

Catra nods with a shit eating grin on her face as they finish off the rest of their drinks.

"Okay, are you ready?" Catra asks as they stand outside an unfamiliar house, Adora's hand almost crushing the magicat's as nervous tension takes over the blonde's body, "I'll be right here with you."

"I know." Adora nods psyching herself up before gulping down, "They are going to be so mad…"

"Why?" Catra asks tilting her head, "If you're happy, then they should be happy for you too. Otherwise, they aren't really your friends."

"Harsh." Adora turns to face Catra, sighing out and leaning her forehead on the magicat's, "I am happy."

"Good." Catra breathes out, "And I'll do my best to keep making you feel happy."

Adora leans in and presses her lips on her magicat's, "They're still going to be mad."

"Let them be mad then." Catra whispers out with a small smile, "Are you ready?"

Adora nods, “Yeah, let’s do this.”

Knock Knock

The door opens and Adora steels herself as her friends appear in the doorway, “Hey guys!” she looks to Catra, “Guys, this is Catra. And Catra, this is Glimmer and Bow. My best friends.”

“Hey.” Catra greets with a nod.

“Hi, Catra!” Bow waves with a beaming smile, “I’m Bow.”

“Uh, yeah.” Catra sticks her hand out and Bow quickly grabs it for a handshake, “It’s nice to meet Adora’s friends.”

“This is Glimmer. My best friend and my girlfriend!” Bow happily announces much to Adora’s surprise.

“What?!” Adora almost shouts as she wraps her friends up in a big hug, “When did this happen?! Why didn’t you tell me?!”

“Well, it kind of just happened last night.” Glimmer replies cooly, “We’ve been… preoccupied.”

The sparkly girl smirks as Bow blushes, a big grin still on his face as he adds, “Come on inside. We’ve got tea brewing in the pot.”

“Sure.” Catra shrugs as she’s tugged inside by Adora and shuts the door.

Adora goes to help Bow with the tea while Catra heads to the other room and Glimmer gestures for the magicat to take a seat on one armchair while she takes the couch as they await their partners to come back.

“So. Catra, right?” Glimmer asks and the magicat nods, “So, how do you know Adora?”

“I met her last night actually.” Catra replies vaguely.

“Oh, that’s cool.” Glimmer says as she relaxes back more into the couch, “Oh, was it at Perfuma and Scorpia’s engagement? Bow and I went there a little later and missed her.”

“Actually, yeah.” Catra says surprised that they have mutual friends, “How do you know Perfuma and Scorp?”

“Bow used to date Perfuma.” Glimmer replies still somewhat peeved, “Not that I care about that now…”

“Sure.” Catra replies trying not to shake her head, “So… I guess they’re still on good terms?”

“Well, it’s hard not to be when Scorpia is so sweet.” Glimmer smiles back, “And Perfuma is very much smitten with her.”

“They really are made for each other.” Catra agrees returning the small smile.

“Are you going to be at their wedding?” Glimmer asks as Bow and Adora return with steaming cups for tea, “Wait, have they even decided on a date yet?”

Catra accepts the cup from Adora with a tooth grin, taking a quick sip before answering, “Yeah, I kind of have to be at their wedding since I’m Scorp’s best… whatever.”

“Oh! That’s so exciting!” Bow beams as he puts both cups on the coffee table in front of the couch, his eyebrows raise as he watches Adora do the same with their cups before swiftly being pulled into Catra’s lap, pressing a soft kiss on the magicat’s cheek, “Uh… okay…”

Adora shuffles a little in the magicat’s laps before finally settling, her cheeks flushing red when she sees her friends staring, “So, how did you guys get together last night?”

“Oh, no you don’t.” Glimmer smirks at the blonde, gesturing wildly at the pair on the armchair, “What is going on here?”

Catra peeks her head around the side of Adora and grins, “It’s more comfortable this way.”

Glimmer and Bow look at one another, not expecting that answer of all things as the latter tries again, “Adora? Are you and Catra… a couple?”

“Wait, didn’t you just meet last night?” Glimmer adds confused.

“Yeah, we did meet last night.” Catra answers vaguely, not giving more than Adora seems to be comfortable with, the magicat rubs her cheek against the blonde’s shoulder, “Guess you can call it… love at first sight?”

“Stars… really?” Adora turns her head and looks fondly at Catra and the magicat nods. The blonde grins widely as she pulls Catra into a kiss, only breaking apart by Glimmer clearing her throat, turning her attention back to her best friends, “Uh, yeah, I guess we are a couple...”

Catra snickers as Adora nudges her playfully, the magicat whispering into Adora’s ear, “A couple of crazy people in love?”

Adora giggles and nods, breathing out, “Yeah.”

Once again, Glimmer and Bow share a conspiring look as Adora and Catra seem content to be in their own little world, and once again, Glimmer clears her throat to get their attention. Adora looks over, the same blush on her face as the sparkly woman asks, “What is going on here? Are you two… girlfriends? Like… after one night of meeting each other?”

“Uh…” Adora says biding her time as she looks to Catra for support, the magicat just smiles back, a questioning look in her eye as if she’s asking; do you want me to tell them? The blonde shakes her head and takes a deep breath, finding comfort in

Catra's arms around her as she turns back to her best friends and says, "Catra's not my girlfriend."

"Hm?" Bow hums back a little confused as Adora bites her bottom lip before saying the next part.

"Catra's my wife." Adora finally blurts out.

"What?!" Both of Adora's best friends shriek at the same time as Catra's ears flop down from the sound but continues to hold onto Adora securely.

"You're joking… right?" Glimmer asks laughing awkwardly, "There's no way you got married when you literally just met last night." She looks to Bow and asks him looking for confirmation, "Right?"

Bow laughs nervously, "It doesn't really seem like you Adora." He starts, "You don't tend to jump into relationships…"

"Believe it, Arrows." Catra says as she pulls Adora back into her, enjoying the weight and warmth against her, "I may have been on greens last night, but I have zero regrets about Adora. Not at all."

"Aw, babe!" Adora gushes with a soft look on her face, turning her head to press a kiss to the magicat's lips, "I have no regrets either. Because I have the rest of my life to know and love you."

"You love me?" Catra asks.

"Stars…" Glimmer sighs out before Adora can answer, "Are you kidding me?!"

"What's wrong, Sparkles?" Catra asks without taking her eyes off Adora.

"You don't know if Adora loves you. And yet you still got married?" Glimmer asks exasperated, pinching the bridge of her nose as Bow pats her on the back, just as confused, "Stars… also… you were high?!"

“I was on greens.” Catra shrugs, “Doesn’t change the fact that I know I love Adora.” The magicat narrows her eyes at the pair, “Do you even know what greens do to magicats?”

“I’m not stupid. I know what greens do.” Glimmer glares back, “You got married when you were high.” She looks at Adora, “Have you been doing drugs too?”

Adora shakes her head, “No. You know I don’t do that.”

“Greens give me an overwhelming sense of clarity.” Catra cuts back into the conversation, “Makes decision making a lot easier. Clearer.”

“So do drugs.” Glimmer provides unhelpfully, “It alters you. Your perception.”

Bow wraps an arm around his girlfriend, “Are you sure this was a good idea?”

“Yes.” Catra answers confidently.

“I do.” Adora says at the same time as the magicat, “It feels right. And, I know it’s a lot to take in…”

“That’s an understatement.” Glimmer mutters under her breath, annoyed that the blonde has stolen her thunder.

“But this feels right.” Adora repeats as she lets herself get pulled back into Catra’s arms, “And I’m happy. Like, genuinely happy.”

Bow smiles back, “I’m happy for you Adora.” Before he has to ask again, “Are you sure getting married so soon as a good idea though?”

“Yes.” This time Adora confidently replies, “And like Catra says, we’ve got the rest of our lives to get to know and love each other.”

“But you don’t love her yet.” Glimmer points out, throwing her head back against the couch, “How can you be so reckless?”

“Look, Sparkles.” Catra growls out, unhappy with the insinuation that her feelings don’t stack up, “We’re married. Adora’s my wife. Deal with it. Or don’t. I don’t care what you think.” Taking her glare away from Glimmer, Catra sighs and looks at Adora, “I don’t care if your friends don’t believe me or think that I was under the influence or whatever. I love you. I know I do and I know I did when I married you last night. And I know you’re not there yet, but I’m not letting you go. Not letting you get away. I’m not going to ever give up. Not on you, not on us. I have no doubts that you are the one I’m supposed to spend the rest of my life with.”

Adora’s eyes well up a little at her wife’s words, the magicat cupping her face and leans their forehead together, “I…”

“Adora! Think about this!” Glimmer screeches out, “Have you lost your mind?”

“No.” Adora says without thinking twice, “I know what I agreed to and I wanted to do this.” She looks to her friends, “I know you think I’m crazy. And honestly, I don’t blame you. It’s fast. But at the same time, this feels right. I don’t regret marrying Catra. If anything, I kind of wish I met her sooner because then we would have known each other a little longer and this wouldn’t seem so sudden. And you’re right. I’m not quite there yet, but, I’ve never been so close to being able to say those words back to her. Well, to anyone in a romantic sense.”

Glimmer’s jaw drops upon hearing Adora words and she suddenly gets to her feet, Bow following in surprise as the pair stand in front of the blonde and magicat still cuddling in the armchair next to them, “I’m sorry.”

Catra’s ears perk up, not sure if that apology was one of rejection or not when Adora quirks an eyebrow and sinks into her wife’s arms a little more as she waits for Glimmer to elaborate.

Glimmer sighs, “You’re our best friend. And as crazy as this is, I just want you to know that we’ll support you. No matter what happens.” Catra tilts her head at the sparkly girl as Glimmer continues, “And if being married to… Catra… makes you happy, then, I guess we’re happy for you too.”

“Convincing.” Catra grumbles under her breath as Adora nudges her, pressing a soft kiss to the magicat’s cheek, making Catra smile back.

“She’s trying. This is hard for her too.” Adora whispers into the magicat’s ear before pulling herself up and off the chair where Bow gathers the trio into a group hug, “Thank you for trying.”

“We’ll always have your back!” Bow squeals out happily as Glimmer nods back sincerely, “Now, our tea is getting cold.”

“That… that went surprisingly well.” Adora sighs out as she flops down onto Catra’s bed, “I thought Glimmer was going to blow a fuse.”

Catra nods with a blank look on her face, walking over to her dresser to collect her sleeping clothes and then disappearing into the bathroom to get ready for bed. Adora just watches in silence, a sickening feeling in the pit of her stomach as she waits for Catra to return.

“Are you going to get changed?” Catra asks as she pulls back the blanket and gets into bed.

Adora sits up, “Um, yeah. Okay.”

Once Adora’s changed and gotten ready for bed, she sees Catra already turned over with her eyes closed, as the blonde goes over and turns off the light and gets into bed as well, she turns onto her side and waits for her eyes to adjust enough to see Catra’s back and sighs.

She gets a sinking feeling in her gut as she hesitantly reaches out to touch the magicat, only to stop and hover her hand over the top before swallowing down loud enough for Catra's ear to twitch in response. Adora's voice cracks when she finally says, "Catra?"

The magicat lays still, the only indication that she's heard her is the flick of her ear as Adora swallows down hard again.

"Catra?" Adora tries again, "Are you… are you mad?"

"No." Catra replies, the response feels cold.

"Oh, okay." Adora replies gritting her teeth together from being too emotional, after all, they barely know each other as she thinks about whether she should just get up and go home, maybe this was all just a huge mistake, she looks at Catra's back, tears on the verge on falling as she weakly asks, "Do you want me to leave?"

"No." Catra breathes out, growling to herself as she turns over and her heart drops when she sees the look on her wife's face, "Fuck. I'm sorry, princess. Please, don't cry."

Adora squeezes her eyes shut, shaking her head and trying to hold back the sob that wants to break out, "I'm… I'm sorry."

"Why are you sorry?" Catra pulls Adora into her, "I overreacted. I'm… I didn't mean to… fuck. I'm such a fuck up…"

Adora laughs wetly, feeling Catra's thumb rub the tears from her cheek, she shakes her head, "What… what happened?"

Catra sighs, leaning her head against the blonde, she hates admitting her feelings, but with Adora, she owes it to the blonde, to her wife, to be honest and open and so she does, "I got into my own head."

"Why?"

“Your friends don’t like me.” Catra breathes out, not able to look Adora in the eye, “I’m… I’m not good enough for you. Sparkles made that very clear.”

“You’re such an idiot.” Adora lifts Catra’s chin up so she can look into Catra’s eyes, “Why do you care what my friends think?”

“Because.” Catra frowns down, “They know you the best. And they love you and support you. And they obviously don’t think you marrying me was sane or even a good idea. And… I don’t want to be the reason that makes you sad.”

“What are you talking about, Catra?” Adora asks softly, her eyes staring into the magicat’s, “I love my friends.” Catra’s ear fold down upon hearing that, it’s not that she’s jealous, just, where this conversation is leading doesn’t seem like a good path. Adora takes Catra’s hand and runs her fingers over the ring on the magicat’s finger, “But, this is my decision. I wanted to marry you. I want you. I don’t regret this. And my friends are just being protective. It doesn’t mean that you aren’t good enough. Because you are. Good enough. I chose you.”

“Not exactly, princess.” Catra looks up, a lilt of a smile on her lips as she catches Adora’s eyes, “I chose you.”

“We chose each other.” Adora declares with a soft smile that Catra returns, the blonde leaning in and pressing a kiss on the magicat’s lips, “You scared me.”

“I’m sorry.” Catra sighs as she pulls Adora into her, “I just…”

“You’re good enough.” Adora instantly says reassuringly, “You’re perfect.”

“You’re perfect too.” Catra whispers into Adora’s hair.

“I’ll always be yours, princess.” Catra replies, “As you’ll always be mine.”

“Promise?”

“Yeah. I made a vow last night and I plan to keep it.” Catra says with conviction, “For as long as you’ll have me.”

Adora laughs softly into Catra’s chest, “Well, you better be ready for a lifetime then.”

“Always am.” Catra replies surely as they remain wrapped up in one another as they fall asleep.

“You did not tell me you worked with these… beasts…” Catra warily eyes the horses in their pens as she follows Adora through the stables, “Where are we going exactly?”

“I did. I said I had to go see a horse today. To see Swift Wind.” Adora replies as she grabs Catra’s hand, squeezing it to make her magicat feel safer, “It’s okay. You’re okay. Perfectly safe here.”

“Says you.” Catra grunts out as she follows her wife so close that she’s nearly stepping on Adora’s heels, “Who or what is a Swift Wind?”

“Isn’t it obvious?” Adora turns back with a goofy smile as Catra sniffs the air and sticks her tongue out at the smell of manure, “Come on, he’s just over here.”

“Over where…woah…” Catra walks right into Adora’s back upon seeing the massive white horse in the last pen, “And… why are we here?”

And before Adora can answer, a woman appears, “Adora! There you are!”

Adora turns around and smiles politely back, “Oh, hey Val. Here I am.”

Val, a middle aged woman with long greying red hair tied up in a bun, pearls and a fancy light blue pants suit has Catra eying the woman suspiciously, the woman raises and eyebrow up at the magicat, “What did I say about strangers, Adora?”

“Oh, this is Catra.” Adora confidently says, “She’s not a stranger. She’s my wife.”

“Your… your what?” Val says, shock clear in her voice, before she huffs out a laugh, “Very funny, Adora. No strangers.”

“She’s not a stranger and I’m not being funny.” Adora replies in a huff of her own before holding up her hand with the ring on it, “Catra and I got married on Friday. And she’s not a stranger. Now, we’re going to go see Swift Wind and take care of his hoof issue.”

Val narrows her eyes at the blonde, “Fine. But make it quick. I have places to be.”

“Oh, you don’t need to be here for this.” Adora says, “I need to go grab a few tools still once I get a better look at Swifty’s leg…”

“I’m not leaving you here with that… stranger.” Val glares at Catra, “So, you better hurry this up.”

“It’ll take as long as it’ll take… sweetie.” Catra growls out angrily at the way this woman is treating her wife, “And if you don’t want it drag out longer, I suggest you better get to those places you need to be and leave my wife to work in peace.”

“How dare you speak to me like that!” Val puffs up angrily as Catra stands a little straighter, she’s still a good foot shorter than the woman, but that’s never been a problem to Catra, she’s harder to hit the lower she is, “Get off my property.”

“Val.” Adora steps in between the pair, “I’ve worked with Swifty ever since he was born. You know he doesn’t take to other vets as well. So, you either leave me in peace like you have in the past or you can get comfortable in here and miss whatever fancy thing you want to go to."

Val seems shocked by Adora's retaliation as she winces in annoyance, "Fine. But it better be done when I get back. And you better have locked everything up and nothing better be missing."

She poignantly stares at Catra when she says the last part, the magicat's hackles raise at the insult as Adora squeezes her hand once more and looks pleadingly with her magicat not to make things worse. Catra sighs and nods, shaking her head and glaring back at Val, "Have a nice day, lady."

"I'll let you know when I'm done." Adora says and then pulls Catra with her towards Swift Wind, ignoring Val as she walks out of the stables in a huff.

Once Catra's ears pick up that's she gone she turns to Adora, "Are you sure her name is Val and not Cow?"

Adora giggles, nudging Catra as she opens the door to Swift Wind's pen, "You should probably stay out there, he's not great with other people…"

"Fine by me." Catra shrugs, pressing a kiss to Adora's cheek before taking a step back and watching her wife approach the horse, "What's wrong with him?"

"Nothing." Adora replies with a smile as she glances back, "He just needs a new shoe."

"Uh huh." Catra replies not knowing what that means as she stares down at the horse's 'feet', "He's not wearing shoes. He doesn't even have feet."

Adora can't help but snort out a laugh, "Really, Cat?"

"What?"

“And I thought you were smart.” Adora glances back with another laugh making Catra smile back despite knowing she’s the butt of the joke, the magicat watches as Adora gently pulls up the horse’s back leg to show Catra, “See this?”

“What am I looking at?” Catra tilts her head.

“It’s come loose. See how it’s not tight in there?” Catra shakes her head, as Adora just smiles back as she explains it, “Anyway, we need to get this guy a new shoe.”

“Uh… okay.” Catra nods her head like she understands as Adora releases the horse’s leg and gives him a good pat while checking over him, “And… how do you put a shoe on a horse?”

Adora smiles even wider, “I’ll show you.”

“Stars! Doesn’t that hurt?! You’re like hammering nails into his foot!” Catra panics as she watches Adora work, “Princess… are you sure this is like… ethical?”

Adora shakes her head with a laugh, “Don’t worry, Cat, it doesn’t hurt him.”

“But… but…” Catra points to the hammer in Adora’s hand, “It’s got to hurt him…”

“It’s cute that you’re so concerned about Swifty, Cat.” Adora finishes what’s she’s doing and releases the horse’s leg and then wipes the sweat off her brow, “But he’ll be fine. It doesn’t hurt him. If anything, he’ll feel better now that he can walk properly.”

Catra still frowns down, her brain still not understanding the mechanics of horses as she finds herself being wrapped up in Adora’s sweaty arms from behind and she tries to wriggle free unsuccessfully, “Adora! Gross! You’re all gross and sweaty!”

Adora laughs as she hugs Catra tighter and presses a kiss on her wife's cheek, "Sorry, but you're just so cute when you get so… thinky."

"Uh huh." Catra rolls her eyes, finally relaxing in Adora's embrace, "You're still gross and sweaty."

"I am." Adora agrees with a grin and then whispers suggestively into Catra's ear, "Maybe you can help me wash up later?"

Catra grins back as she tries to stop the shiver going down her spine at the suggestion, "Uh… yeah, I can do that… I, uh, I could. If you want… that is…"

Adora giggles at the bashful magicat in her arms, "Cute."

Catra groans out, "Can we go now?"

"Yes." Adora nods, pressing one more kiss on Catra's cheek, "I just need to quickly finish cleaning up."

"Okay." Catra says as Adora releases her from the hug, the magicat taking a few steps away before turning around, "Do you think Cow will notice if I steal a horse?"

"Catra!" Adora laughs out loudly, "Yes, I think she'd know if you stole a horse."

"Damn it." Catra pretends to be disappointed as she grins back widely and then shrugs, "Guess my dreams of watching you ride my horse will never be fulfilled."

"You want to watch me ride?" Adora quirks an eyebrow up at Catra.

"Oh yeah, I do." Catra replies mischievously, "I'd be up for watching you ride my horse… or me…"

"Catra!" Adora's eyes widen as her face turns red, slapping the magicat on the shoulder and looking around like someone else might have heard that, “You can’t say stuff like that!”

“Why not?” Catra shrugs nonchalantly, “Is it wrong to think sexy thoughts about my wife?”

“No…”

“Then?” Catra smiles back, teeth and all as she gestures to the blonde, “Hurry up, this Sunday’s a wasting.”

Adora rolls her eyes, “Okay, okay. Help me grab my tools?”

Catra takes the blonde’s tool bag and slings it over her shoulder, leaning against the wall as she watches Adora say goodbye to Swift Wind with a few more pats before exiting.

“I’m hungry.” Adora whines out playfully to Catra as they walk back to the blonde’s car, the magicat putting her tools in the back as she takes the keys and walks to the driver’s door, “I can drive…”

“I know.” Catra smiles as she gets into the driver’s seat and puts the key in, “Get in, princess.”

“Okay.” Adora gets into the passenger seat and slumps back, feeling exhausted, “I think I’m going to need a massage.”

“Oh yeah?”

“Yeah.” The blonde rolls her shoulders and stretches out her arms in the narrow space of her car as Catra starts to drive, “I’m hungry.”

“Hungry enough to eat a horse?” Catra deadpans as she turns her head slowly to glance at her wife before grinning.

“Not funny.” Adora smiles despite herself, “But I am hungry.”

“What do you feel like?” Catra asks and Adora shrugs, “Okay… what don’t you feel like?”

“I think I’m just a little dehydrated.” Adora reaches around back for her water bottle while Catra hums, “Oh, crap!”

“What?!” Catra looks over quickly, “What happened?”

“I’m supposed to meet Glim and Bow for brunch today.” Adora groans out as she flops her head back against the head rest.

“What time?”

“11.30am.”

“We got time.” Catra replies as she grips the steering wheel a little tighter, steeling herself a little bit with the talk of Adora’s friends, “Where do you usually meet?”

“Oh, I’ll just cancel.” Adora sits up upon hearing the slight hesitation in Catra’s voice, “I see them every week anyways.”

“No. Go.” Catra sighs out, “I want you to.”

Adora bites her bottom lip, “Are you sure?”

“Yes, I’m sure.’ Catra replies with a nod, “I’ll be okay for a few hours by myself.”

“Come with me?” Adora asks softly, almost pleadingly.

Catra thinks about it silently in her head, weighing up the positives and negatives as she focusses on the road in front of them, biding her time to answer, feeling Adora shuffle nervously next to her.

“You don’t have to if you don’t want to.” Adora reaches out and squeezes Catra’s hand.

Catra wraps her fingers around Adora’s before the blonde can let go, the magicat sighs, “Okay. I’ll come with you.”

“Yeah?” Adora asks surprised.

“Yeah.” Catra nods, “As long as it’s okay with you and them.”

“I’ll let them know.” Adora smiles at her wife, “Thanks.”

Adora leans over and presses a kiss on Catra’s cheek, squeezing the magicat’s hand again, “Really. Thank you.”

Catra turns and smiles back, “When did you become so dependent on me?”

The comment makes Adora snort out a laugh, “I am not dependent on you!”

“Whatever you say, princess.” Catra chuckles.

“We’re married.” Adora pouts playfully, “So, that makes it alright.”

“Ha! You are totally dependent on me!” Catra points out with a laugh and Adora groans out, “It’s okay, princess. It’d be weird if we weren’t sort of dependent on each other now.”

Adora nods shyly, “I need to shower first.”

“Sure. You’re place or mine?” Catra asks.

“Bow!” Glimmer whisper shouts at him, “Not cool!”

“Sorry! Sorry!” Bow quickly apologises, looking sheepishly at the Adora and Catra at the table, before beaming again, “Anyways, how is everyone?”

Catra shrugs as Adora smiles, holding Catra's hand on the table and playing with her claws, "I went to see Swifty this morning."

"Oh, how is he?" Bow asks as Glimmer and him take a seat as a waiter comes over to take their drink orders.

"Had to replace on of his shoes, but otherwise, he's good." Adora replies, "Though Val was a total… cow… today."

"Adora!" Glimmer says dramatically before laughing, "How you deal with that woman, I have no idea. She practically banned me and Bow from going to see her horses. Even though she's only a caretaker to the stables."

"She tried to kick me out too." Catra adds with a shrug.

Bow's eyes widen, "She is definitely not the nicest or even pleasant to deal with."

"Don't I know it." Catra agrees.

"You know, the first time Glim and I went with Adora to see the horses, she threatened to have the police called just because there were 'too many' of us on her property." Bow picks up his menu, despite already knowing what he wants, "Glim and her had a full on shouting match that I thought for sure the cops would be coming."

"I wished the police showed up so I could get her fired." Glimmer grumbles under her breath, "Why my parents keep her on baffles me."

"She works for your family?" Catra asks confused.

"Sadly yes." Glimmer replies, "I think my dad just feels sorry for her and lets her live there."

"I'm afraid to ask why." Catra rubs the back of her neck.

“She used to be some top socialite back in the day.” Glimmer answers, “I’m not too sure exactly what happened, but I think there was something to do with fraud and pyramid schemes that basically scammed her out of most of her money… anyways, you’d think she’d be better.”
“Still living in the past then.” Catra surmises.
Glimmer nods, “She’s still angry at the world and at everyone.”
“Figures.” Catra shrugs as the waiter comes back to take their orders.

“Hey.” Glimmer leans forward towards Catra when Adora and Bow have both excused themselves to the bathroom.

Catra looks up from her phone and then deadpans, “Don’t tell me. You think my wife and your boy are cheating on us.”

“What?! No!” Glimmer rolls her eyes as Catra laughs, “You’re such an ass.”

“Okay, shut up. I’m trying to do something here.” Glimmer complains.

Catra leans back and puts her hand up teasingly, “Sorry Sparkles, but in case you forgot. I’m married. And I’ve only got eyes for my wife.”

“Of course she’d marry you.” Glimmer grunts under the breath as she kicks Catra in the shin.

“Ow!” Catra rubs her shin but still sports a shit eating grin on her face at riling up the other woman, “Can you just spit out whatever you’re trying to say or do?”

“I was trying to tell you that I’m sorry for last night.” Glimmer huffs out but her lips tick up a little into a smile, “I shouldn’t have said what I said.”

“No, you shouldn’t have.” Catra agrees, “But, it’s whatever. I’m used to it.”

“Okay, if you keep kicking me, I’m not going to forgive you, Sparkles.” Catra threatens lightly with a slight growl.

“Stop being difficult!” the sparkly woman grumbles, “Anyway, I’ve never seen Adora like this.”

“Like what?”

“Genuinely happy.” Glimmer says easily, “As much as I hate to admit it, you make her happy.”

“I do?”

“Yes.” Glimmer concedes with a sullen look before looking back up at the magicat, seeing Bow and Adora coming back as she quickly says, “She loves you.”

“Huh?”

“She. Loves. You.” Glimmer repeats slower.

“She does?” Catra asks, her ears perking up as she hears Adora and Bow get closer.

“Yes. She does.” Glimmer repeats as their cohorts rejoin them, the sparkly woman standing up and grabbing Bow’s hand, “Okay, thanks for coming to brunch. We’ve got tickets to that new rom-com movie starting in half an hour.”

Catra starts to pull out her wallet to pay when Bow pushes her hand back towards herself, “Our treat today.”

“Uh, what?” Catra says, “Nah, I can pay.”

“We know you can.” Glimmer smirks, “Treat your wife to something special, Catra.”

Once Adora’s friends are out of sight, Catra leans over and says to Adora, “Your friends are weird.”

And just as Catra is about to kiss her wife a little more, her phone pings with a new message and after a minute her phone rings and Catra groans out while Adora giggles, “Really? Can’t I kiss my wife in peace?”

Catra nods and answers her phone, “Spinny. To what do I owe this call?”

“Dinner. Tonight.” Spinnerella simply says, “630pm and bring your wife. That’s an order.”

“Uh, huh?” Catra replies bewildered until something clicks in her head and she remembers, “Oh, right. Yes. Will do. See you tonight.”

“Bring your wife.” Spinnerella repeats excitedly, “Oh, can you ask her if she’s got any dietary requirements?”

“Sure.” Catra relays the message to Adora who answers no, “No, she’s all good.”

Catra nods despite Spinnerella not being able to see it and the call ends. The magicat sighs, “We’ve been summoned to dinner with Netty and Spinny. Is that cool?”

Adora smiles back, “Of course. As long as it’s okay with them…”

“I have to bring you.” Catra returns, “And I apologize in advance as it’s very much… meet the parents.”

Chapter End Notes

Well, one more chapter to go before I wrap this up.

Thanks for reading, commenting, bookmarking, subscribing and kudos.
I really do appreciate all of it.

Also, writing has been a little slower due to my work schedule ramping up...
But by no means does it mean that I've stopped. 😁

Chapter Summary

Catra and Adora have dinner with Spinny and Nets.

Chapter Notes

Final chapter! Enjoy!

"Hey, Adora." Catra grabs Adora's hand as they stand in front of the familiar door of Netossa, the magicat knocking on it shortly before as the blonde tenses, "It'll be okay. They're going to love you."

"I've already met Netossa." Adora breathes out shakily, "They're going to think I'm crazy…"

Catra chuckles, "No, they won't."

"How can you be so sure?" Adora says in almost a whine.

The tone has the magicat shaking her head with a small smile, "Because."

"That's not an answer, Catra." Adora visibly pouts out unhappily.

Catra turns to fully face Adora, her eyes focused on the blonde's as she says, "If I wasn't so sure about you, Netty would never have handed over that ring that's on your finger right now."

Adora looks down at the ring and smiles, she looks back up still with a little uncertainty, "You must have been very convincing."

"I didn't need to be when I was completely sure." Catra returns, dipping her head a little so she can catch Adora's eyes once more, "And right now… I am more than sure that I was right."

The door swings open, Spinnerella stands in the doorway with hearts in her eyes, one hand on her heart and the other at her eyes, ready to wipe her teary eyes, “Stars. I knew you had it in you, kiddo.” She says almost sobbing, a soft look on her face when she looks at the pair in front of her, “Come on in, dinner’s almost ready.”

And before Catra or Adora can say anything, Spinnerella has spun around and gone back inside to finish getting dinner ready. As Catra shuts the door, they hear Netossa’s voice call out from somewhere in the house, most likely the kitchen, “Help set the table, guys!”

“Sure thing!” Catra calls back, grinning over at Adora, “You good?”

Adora nods and lets herself be pulled in by Catra.

Netossa stands there holding a stack of empty plates in her hands, noticing the pair enter the kitchen, “Ah, I see you actually went through with it.”

“Of course I did.” Catra grins, “I told you, I would.”

Netossa quirks an eyebrow up at Adora, “And you went also along with it?”

Adora nods meekly, “I did.”

“I think you mean, you do.” Spinnerella jests as Adora blushes, “Anyway, stop teasing them.”

“What? Me?” Netossa feigns innocence, “I was just asking perfectly nice questions.”

“Yes, dear.” Netossa kowtows to her wife, quickly making her way to the dining room with her stack of plates, followed closely by Catra and Adora carrying various things as well. The older woman hears the magicat snicker and once she’s placed her stack of plates down, glares at Catra, “Don’t give me that shit. You’re just as whipped as I am.”

“Guilty as charged, Netty.” Catra replies with a mock salute, “Like you, I’d do anything for my wife.”

“Ooh, how does it feel saying ‘wife’?” Spinnerella asks excitedly as she appears with food, “How often have you said it to each other?”

“It feels…” Catra starts and then watches as Adora moves around to place the plates and cutlery in place as the magicat smiles and finishes her sentence, “Right. Really right.”

“How about you?” Spinnerella asks before realising she hasn’t actually introduced herself yet, “Oh, stars. How rude of me.” She wipes her hands on her apron before holding it out to shake Adora’s hand, “I’m Spinnerella. Everyone just calls me Spinny. And you’ve met my wife Netossa the other night.” She leans in and stage whispers to the blonde, “Don’t let her scare you, she’s all talk and no bite.”

“Hey! Spinny!” Netossa groans out as Catra laughs out, “You’re not supposed to tell people that!”

“Oh love.” Spinnerella presses a kiss on her wife’s cheek, “You don’t scare me.”

“Ugh!” Netossa groans again but succumbs, “I don’t want to scare you.”

“I know.” Spinnerella grins, “You love me. And I love you.”

“Yes. Definitely.” Netossa agrees before she turns to her guests, “Sit.”

Catra pulls out the chair for Adora, the blonde smiles with a nod, "Thank you."

"My pleasure." Catra replies softly as she takes a seat next to her before looking up at their hosts, "What?"

"Such chivalry." Netossa smirks at the magicat.

"Am I upstaging you?" Catra asks cheekily and that earns her a playful glare before laughing, "I'm joking. You probably invented the whole thing since you two have been together since the time of the dinosaurs."

"Hey!" Spinnerella whines out, "We are not that old!"

Catra just grins back, "If you're older than me and Adora, then… you're old."

Spinnerlla ignores the magicat and turns back to Adora, "I'm sorry, we keep getting interrupted. As I was saying before, I'm Spinny and this is Netty."

"I'm Adora." The blonde introduces herself, "It's really nice to meet you in person."

"Likewise." Spinnerella smiles back, "Okay, dinner is getting cold. So, let's eat!"

They sit back in their chairs once they've finished dinner.

"Dinner was fantastic." Adora compliments, "I don't think I've had a proper home cooked meal in a very long time."

"You're very welcome." Spinnerella gushes out at the compliment, "We try to get Catra over at least once a month. It's hard to pull her away from the lab when she's got a slab of rock in front of her until it's completely exposed."

“Oh, that’s right.” Netossa agrees with a nod, “She barely ate or slept when she found that tiny dino that she rents out to that museum.”

“Guys… really?” Catra rolls her head back sheepishly, “I wasn’t that bad.”

“Yes. You were.” Spinnerella points her finger at the magicat, “If it wasn’t for Netty physically pulling you out of the lab and to our place to eat and sleep, you would have probably joined that dinosaur on that slab.”

“Would not have.” Catra argues defiantly.

“Tell me again that time you didn’t nearly collapse into a bowl of soup?” Netossa smirks, “Because I have that photo still.”

The magicat shakes her head, faux disappointment on her face as she says, “Spinny, I can’t believe you condone this kind of bullying against me.”

“Leave my wife out of this, kid.” Netossa warns with a smirk, “Or your wife is going to know a lot more embarrassing things about you that you probably never want her to know about.”

“Ooh… like what?” Adora sits up and acts very interested, much to Catra’s horror, “Do tell.”

“Nope! Nah uh!” Catra stands up quickly before turning to Adora with a grin, “I think you should discover all my… misadventures… slowly and not all at once.”

Adora pouts out but there’s a smile trying to break out underneath it all, “But why?”

“Yeah, kid. But why?” Netossa imitates the blonde with a grin and then laughs, the older woman leans against her wife, and then looks at Adora, “I think you should discover all her… secret misadventures on your own. It’s not as fun when it comes second or third hand.”

"Though, I think I should have the privilege of telling the story about the time Catra thought it was a good idea to celebrate new year's surrounded by strangers that also happened to be swingers…" Spinnerella brings up with a shit eating grin as Adora's eyes widen and Catra groans, "It was quite a story…"

"Seriously?!" Catra eyes Spinny, "You can't keep boasting about meeting me for the first time at an elaborate swingers party that I was invited to by your then girlfriend turned wife."

Adora's jaw drops as she muses under her breath, "Why would she invite you if she already had a girlfriend?"

"Swingers, princess." Catra shrugs, "Though… it did happen to turn out to be a good night."

"Hm." Spinnerella nods, "I'm also very glad that you didn't partake in any of the activities once you realised where you were."

"It was fucking hilarious!" Netossa roars out a laugh, "That's what you get for being cocky on hitting on my friends."

"I was not hitting on your friends!" Catra denies, "If anything, your friends are very… handsy."

"You didn't have to be handsy back, kid." Netossa quirks an eyebrow up at her.

"Okay!" Adora interrupts as she quickly checks her time before she turns to Catra, "It's getting late and I've got a 6am appointment at the clinic."
"Oh, yeah. Shit, sorry, princess." Catra quickly apologises before standing up and facing her hosts, "Thanks for dinner. It was… a blast."

"Don't be a stranger, Cat." Netossa replies as they walk the pair to the front door, "Just because you're married doesn't mean you can skip out on our monthly dinners. And Adora, I expect you to be here too, drag her ass in if you have to."

Adora laughs as Catra groans at the same time, the blonde nodding as Catra grumbles out, "Whatever…"

"It was very nice to meet you, Adora." Spinnerella says as she brings the blonde in for a hug, "I'm so happy Catra married you."

"It was really nice meeting you too." Adora genuinely says as she looks at Catra, "I'm just lucky that Catra was so insistent."

Spinnerella leans in and whispers into Adora's ear, "Don't be scared, dear. Our Cat really does love you. And she doesn't love or like a lot of people."

"I heard that." Catra says flicking her ears around.

"Oh, hush you." Spinnerella chastises before bringing the magicat in for a hug as well, "Take care of her."

"Of course." Catra nods solemnly, "I married her because deep down, I love her."

"Ah, to be young." Spinnerella sighs out happily.

"Hey! We are not even that much older than that rugrat." Netossa cuts in before softening up when her wife presses a gentle kiss on her cheek, "Take care. Let us know when you get home."

"Will do." Catra replies as they say their final goodbyes and eventually leave.

"Are you sure you don't need to grab stuff from your place?" Catra asks whilst driving the pair back to her place, "You don't have to stay with me every night if you don't want to."

"I want to." Adora quickly dispels any concern from her magicat wife, "But… I guess if we could do a detour to my place first…"

“No problems, princess.” Catra replies and then glances over at Adora who’s looking back at her, the magicat takes one hand of the steering wheel and intertwines her fingers with her wife’s, “I want you to stay with me too.”

“Are you sure it’s not because of my soft and very comfortable bed?” Catra asks right back with a smirk of her own.

“Well, the bed is nice…” Adora starts before she squeezes Catra’s hand, “But sleeping next to my wife is pretty darn good too.”

Catra chuckles, “I love sleeping next to my wife too.”

“Are you sure you’re still okay with me not moving in all the way yet?” Adora asks biting her bottom lip nervously.

“Yes, Adora.” Catra replies, “Baby steps.”

The blonde laughs at that, “Wasn’t really a baby step getting married though, was it?”

“Well, at least I haven’t got you pregnant too.” Catra replies with a laugh, “The upside of being gay.”

“Uh huh.” Adora smiles back before she takes a breath in, “Do you think you’d want kids?”

Catra’s ear flicker at that, she concentrates just a little bit more on getting them to Adora’s place as she bides her time trying to think out an answer, “Honestly? No.”

“Really?” Adora says a little deflated, “Can I ask why?”

The magicat glances to the blonde who stares back at her with a look of infinite patience as Catra takes in a deep breath, “I… I don’t think I’m really… parent material.”

“Oh.”

“What about you?” Catra asks back.

“Well, it has crossed my mind every now and then.” Adora admits, “But, I’d never thought of it seriously.”

“How come?”

“Well, I’ve always thought that if I was going to have a family then I’d have to find the right person and be in the right place… financially.” Adora starts, she plays with her wife’s claws as she continues, “And… well, I never thought in a million years that I’d even find the right person let alone get married.”

“Are you disappointed?” Catra asks softly, scared to hear the answer.

“No. I’m not.” Adora replies with a squeeze to Catra’s hand, “I think… I think we should take things as they come. I mean, there’s no point pressuring each other for things that we just aren’t ready for or even know if we really want to.” The blonde purses her lips together, “I mean, who knows… things might change in the future.”

“Yeah.” Catra nods before she glances over to Adora again, “You think I’m the right person?”

Adora giggles, “You’re such an idiot.” The blonde leans in and presses a kiss on Catra’s cheek, “Of course you’re the right person. My right person. I did marry you after all.”

“Well, you’re my right person too.” Catra declares with a lot more confidence, “And… we’re here.”

Adora looks up and sees her place, “Want to come up with me?”

“Sure.” Catra says as she parks up.

“You got everything?” Catra asks as she grabs the duffel bag from Adora while the blonde stands in the middle of her place and looks around.

“I think so.” Adora replies as she keeps looking around, “I feel like I’m forgetting something…”

“Like…?”

“I’m not sure.” Adora frowns down and then snaps her fingers in recognition of what she’s forgotten, “That’s right… I’ll be right back.”

Catra nods as she watches Adora walk off to grab whatever it is she’s forgotten, the blonde disappearing into the wardrobe as the magicat slings the duffle bag over her shoulder and leans up against the door, waiting patiently. And when Adora returns, the magicat lifts her head to see her wife coming towards her with a smile and her hands behind her back, “Did you find what you were looking for?”

“Yes.” Adora smiles back happily as she continues to hold her hands behind her back.

“What have you got behind your back, princess?” Catra asks with a raised eyebrow.

“Oh, just something I’ve been meaning to give you.” Adora replies biting her bottom lip ad she brings her hands to the front to show her wife a small box in her hand, “I know it’s not like… expensive or even… pretty, but… it’s something I’ve had for a while and I think you should have it.”

Adora holds the small box out to Catra, looking at her hopefully, the magicat taking the item out of Adora’s hand and she lowers the duffle bag back to the floor and then opens it, she looks back up at her wife, “It’s… a ring?”

“Yes.” Adora nods but doesn’t elaborate more as she watches Catra take the simple ring out from the box and inspect it, the blonde then panics and then starts to ramble, “I know it’s not as nice as the one you got me but it’s the only thing I’ve kept from my childhood and… oh…”

Adora stops rambling when she watches Catra take off the ring around her finger and slide on the one that Adora had just given her, the magicat’s ears flick up and towards her wife, “Thank you.”

“You’re… welcome?” Adora replies, a smile tugging on her lips as Catra pockets her ring back in her pocket, “I hope it’s okay…”

Catra pulls her wife in and presses their lips together, and then breathes out, “You’re such an idiot. I love it.”

Adora pouts, “You can’t call me an idiot.”

“My idiot.” Catra grins as she leans her forehead on her wife’s, “And you are an idiot if you think I wouldn’t love anything you’d give to me. Especially something with such sentimental value.”

“Really?”

“Yes, really.” Catra confirms.

Adora beams up at her wife, pulling Catra back in for another kiss, “Mm… Can we go home now?”

Catra’s chuckles, “Aren’t you already at home, princess?”

The blonde blushes, “Can I not call your place home too?”

“You really think my place is home?” Catra asks genuinely and then nods, “Yes. I want you to think of my place as our home.”

“Oh.” A devious grin appears on Adora’s face, “So… I could do some… redecorating if I wanted?”

“You can do whatever you want, princess.” Catra replies sincerely, “Besides, my place hasn’t really felt like home until you came along.”

“I’ve literally only been there like… 2 nights.” Adora reminds the magicat.

“Best 2 nights of my life.” Catra replies with a grin, “And I can’t wait for you to make your mark on it.”

“Okay.” Adora nods, “But… just be prepared…”

“Hm?”

“You better get ready for all my stuff then…” Adora laughs out, “You’re so going to regret marrying me and letting me take over your place.”

“Don’t think so.” Catra grins, “Not sure if you noticed, but my place is pretty sparse. My lovely wife’s touch would do it good.”

Adora leans in and kisses Catra with a chuckle, “Well… I’m just warning you.”

The magicat rolls her eyes, “Okay, I’ve been warned.” Catra presses one more kiss on Adora’s lips and then says, “So, should we get going?”

Adora nods, “Okay, oh let me.”

Catra brushes Adora off as she grabs the blonde’s duffel bag and slings it over her shoulder, “You can grab your other bag over there.”

The blonde turns and grabs her backpack and then the pair head out.

“6am, huh?” Catra turns over in bed to ask her wife with a yawn, “How far is your office?”

“It’s not too far from here actually.” Adora replies turning over to reply to Catra, “I looked at the bus times and we’re only half an hour or so from the clinic by bus."

"And… what time is your bus getting to the stop? And how far is this stop?" Catra asks in rapid fire, "Are there even buses around at that time?"

Adora giggles at the last question, she reaches out and pets over her magicat's ear, "When was the last time you took public transport?"

"A really long time ago." Catra replies, "I've… I've never really felt safe using it. Being… non human and all…"

"Oh…" Adora pauses her petting for a moment before resuming her rhythm, "I didn't know that was a thing… I'm sorry."

Catra shrugs, "The operators are mostly fine. There's a few that aren't so… well, they're vocal about letting me or other hybrids on." Adora eyes soften, shaking her head a little angrily at what she's hearing, as Catra continues, "And if it's not the driver, it's the other passengers."

"Cat…"

"Trains are fine. The drivers of those don't care as they stay in their own little space." Catra says, "And there's always the segregated carriages for us, hybrids. So, it's not generally too bad on the train. The bus has always been… complicated."

Adora pulls her wife in for a soft kiss, sighing out and trying to keep her emotions in check, "That's sucks, babe."

"Babe?" Catra grins, happy for the lilt in conversation, "How long have you been waiting to say that to me?"

Adora shrugs nonchalantly, "It just came out. You don't like it, babe?"

"It's fine, princess." Catra smiles back.

“Hm…” Adora thinks hard about it and comes to the conclusion, “No, babe is too… generic.”

“Uh huh.”

“Yes.” Adora declares as she furrows her brows and thinks harder before she looks into Catra’s eyes, “How do you feel about me calling you… kitten?”

“No. I’ve heard that too many times and not generally in a good way.” Catra replies scrunching up her nose at the option.

“Okay, not kitten.” Adora looks up again in thought before she suggests the next one, “How about… tiger?”

“Tiger?”

“Yeah.” Adora nods and then runs her hand along her the strips on Catra’s arm, “Because, tigers have stripes. Like you have. And you’re kind of like a tiger…”

“Tiger.” Catra repeats in thought and Adora nods again.

“You think I’m badass?” Catra asks incredulously.

“Totally.” Adora replies as she leans her forehead against Catra’s, “Total badass, tiger.”

“Ugh… fine.” Catra begrudgingly agrees, quietly happy with the nickname, clearing her throat as she goes back to her original question and train of thought, “So, how long is it going to take you on the bus to get to work?”

“About an hour.” Adora turns over and grabs her phone, swiping around until she lands on the transport page, “I need to be at the bus stop by 5am.”

“5am…” Catra repeats, “I thought you said it was half an hour…”

“It is, but I want to get something to eat and drink before work too.” Adora replies, “So, it’ll give me a buffer and I don’t have to rush.”

“So… you’re going to be at the bus stop for 5am?”

“You’re nuts.” Catra replies with a shake of her head.

Adora glares back at her bleary-eyed, “I am not. I have to get to work.”

“Tell me again why you didn’t just drive your car over?” Catra asks confused, “Aren’t all your… tools and stuff in there?”

“I won’t need them at the clinic, tiger.” Adora replies with her eyes shut, “The clinic has basically everything anyways. I just have to be there on Monday and Wednesdays.”

“What for?”

“Consultations and coverage really.” Adora replies.

“And you’re going to take the bus to work?”

“Yes.” Adora giggles this time as she confirms yet again.

“Fuck. Let me drive you then.” Catra says and Adora opens up one eye to stare at her wife, “It’s sketchy at 5am. Even if it is a Monday.”

“Oh, you don’t have to.” Adora closes her eye again, “I’ll be fine. There’s no point you being up so early if you don’t have to.”

“Yes. I have to. You’re my wife and I promised to protect and serve you.” Catra declares, “I’ll drop you off at your work before I head to mine.”

“Protect and serve was not part of our vows, Tiger.” Adora laughs as she opens both eyes this time and stares at Catra with a grin, “You really don’t have to drive me, tiger. I’ll be alright.”

Adora’s words do nothing to sway Catra, who simply shakes her head, “No. I’m taking you to work in the morning.”

Adora sighs, “Are you sure? It’s really early…”

“I’m sure.” Catra says with an air of finality, “And… maybe we can get some coffee and something to eat…”

“Mmm… you really know how to treat a girl.” Adora jests with a giggle as she brings Catra in for another kiss, “Okay, I’m only letting you do this because of the free breakfast.”

“Whatever you say, princess.” Catra grins, pressing her lips against Adora’s once more before turning over and grabbing her phone, “Let me just set my alarm. Where is this clinic?”

Catra wakes up earlier than her alarm, turning over and shutting it off before looking over at the warm body laying next to her and smiling down at Adora’s form, she turns on her side and just… watches.

Adora’s alarm goes off at 4.15am, the blonde slowly rouses as Catra reaches over to turn it off, the blonde smiling as she pulls her wife down and on top of her, making her magicat yelp a little in surprise as Adora wraps her arms around her torso, bringing her wife in for a hug.

“Morning, princess.” Catra whispers out, gently lowering the phone back down onto the bedside table and then nuzzling into her wife’s neck, “It’s early.”

“Mhm.” Adora hums out happily as she cuddles Catra in her arms, “Sure is.”

“Time to get up and get ready.” Catra says as she presses a soft kiss on Adora’s neck, “Also… we don’t have time for shenanigans if you have to start at 6am.”

“This is the first time I’ve hated started early in my life.” Adora grumbles into Catra’s chest, “Maybe I should call in sick…”

Catra laughs, “No. I’m already up.”

Adora pouts.

“And knowing you, I’m sure that you’re not that kind of person to do that to your coworkers unless it was really bad.” Catra pushes herself up as she grins at Adora knowingly, “Do you want to shower?”

“Guess I should.” Adora sighs out dramatically, “What about you?”

“Yeah, not going to happen.” Catra says as Adora stares back surprised, the magicat grabs Adora’s hand and rubs it over her chest, “Fur takes a while to dry.”

“When was the last time you showered?” Adora asks a little concerned.

“Yesterday. Before we went to Spinny and Nets place for dinner.” Catra replies, “I’m surprised you didn’t notice.”

“What was I doing?” Adora tries to think back.

“Princess.” Catra says bringing the blonde back to the present, “You’ve got your alarm set for 415am… aren’t you going to get ready?”

“You’re what now?”

“My first alarm.” Adora replies with a smile.

“How many alarms have you got?” Catra asks as she tries to reach for Adora’s phone to turn off the other ones.

Adora shrugs, “3 or 4.”

“Uh huh.” Catra hums out as she flops down on the bed next to Adora, the blonde’s phone in her hand as she turns off the rest of her wife’s alarms, “How long does it take you to get ready?”

“Half an hour.” Adora shrugs with a grin, “Which means… we’ve got half an hour…”

“Less than.” Catra says as she shows the time to Adora.

“Can you do it in less than half an hour?” Adora quirks an eyebrow up at her wife.

“That’s… that’s not the problem.” Catra replies with an eye roll.

“Then... what’s the problem?” Adora asks with a smirk, “It’s not like you have a problem with getting it up.”

Catra rolls her eyes and then yelps when Adora flops herself on top of her magicat, “What are you doing, princess?”

“Well… if you’re not going to make a move…” Adora leans down and presses kisses on Catra’s cheek, jaw and neck, “I’m going to have to do it myself.”

“You’re going to masturbate in my bed again?” Catra deadpans.

The question makes Adora chuckle, “Well, if you’re not up for it… then I guess I’ll have to do it myself.”

“Uh huh.” Catra says flatly, an incredulous look on her face, “What’s gotten into you, princess?”

“Hopefully… you.” Adora replies as she leans down for more intense kiss…

“Catra! Hurry up! I’m going to be late!” Adora calls out from the front door.

The magicat growls out, she’s still trying to dry herself off from the last minute shower, grumbling under her breath, “Yeah, yeah. Don’t get your panties in a twist, princess.”

“Can’t get them in a twist if I’m not wearing any.” Adora replies with a smirk watching Catra’s jaw drop upon hearing that before the blonde laughs, “I’m wearing underwear, tiger. I don’t even own panties.”

“Same thing.” Catra shrugs before draping her damp towel over one of her dining chairs and grabbing her keys, “Got everything?”

“Yeah.” Adora nods as she opens the door and the pair head out.

“What time do you finish?” Catra asks as she parks up in the parking lot of the vet clinic.

“My shift ends at 2pm.” Adora replies as she unbuckles her seat belt and takes a look at the time, “Oh, crap! I’m going to be late!”

Adora grabs Catra bye the collar of her jacket and pulls her in for a kiss, the magicat laughing at the blonde as she tries to get out of her car quickly, “Have a great day, princess.”

“I love you, tiger!” Adora calls back as Catra waves to her, watching until her wife has made it inside before putting her car back in gear and driving off.

“Adora?” Starla from reception pops her head inside one of the rooms that Adora’s currently in as the blonde checks over a small dog, Adora looks up, “Your… wife… is in reception.”

“Thanks, Starla.” Adora nods, ignoring the look on the other woman’s face, “I’ll be right out after I finish up with Molly here.”

Starla nods and shuts the door, Adora turns back to the owner, “Molly, looks all good.”

“What did her blood tests come back with?” Molly’s owner, Bruce asks, “She’s been limping a little when she walks.”

“Her blood work came back fine. The limp is from the fur around her paws being a little overgrown. I’ve clipped the fur around them back as she was slipping and sliding all over the place.” Adora replies lifting the dogs paws up to show him, “You’ve just got to keep on top of that, especially if she’s on slippery or tiled floors.”

“Was that it?”

“She seems to be walking better now.” Adora tells him, “Easier for her to walk. She was struggling before but she seems to doing better now. See.” Adora places Molly on the ground and the dog happily walks around the room inquisitively sniffing everything as her owner smiles, “She’s all good to go.”

“Thank you, Adora.” Bruce says as he clips the leash back onto Molly’s collar, “I’ll do better to keep on top of her paws.”

Adora nods with a smile, turning around to wash her hands before she goes to open the door for Bruce and Molly to head out, “Bye guys!”

Bruce waves back as the blonde pops her head out and sees Catra, her wife, a beaming smile on her lips as she stares at her magicat who sees her and grins, walking over with 2 cups of hot drinks and a paper bag in her hands.

“Hey Adora.” Catra rasps out holding out a cup towards her, “Coffee?”

“You are a life saver!” Adora grins widely as she eagerly grabs the cup and takes a sip, “Ahh…”

Catra smiles back, “I aim to please.”

Adora giggles, “Don’t I know it.”

“I totally do know it.” Catra replies with a smirk, leaning in and speaks softer, “Pretty sure I pleased you multiple times this morning…”

Adora shivers, closing her eyes and recalling their morning in bed together, before opening them and finding the paper bag in her wife’s hands, “Ooh… what’s that?”

“Oh, this?” Catra holds up the paper bag with the same smirk on her face, “Breakfast. Hope you like breakfast wraps.”

“Gimme, gimme!” Adora makes grabby hands for it as Catra hands the bag over to Adora, the blonde quickly pulling out the food and unwrapping it before sinking her teeth into it, the ensuing moan reminiscent of the sounds the blonde made earlier in the morning, “Stars… that is so good…”

Catra takes a sip of her own cup to hide her grimace upon hearing that sound come from her wife, “Okay… well, I guess I better get back to work.”

“Awe, do you have to?” Adora pouts out, not caring if anyone else can hear them, “It’s only 7am. What time do you start work?”

“Uh… whenever I want really.” Catra shrugs.

Their conversation is interrupted by Starla tapping on Adora’s shoulder, “Sorry, Adora. But your next patient is here.”

“Oh, right.” Adora says in realisation that she needs to get back to work, “Give me 5 minutes, would you?”

Starla nods, “No worries.”

“Thanks, Starla.” Adora says as she turns to Catra, “Uh… I better get back to work.”

Catra watches amusedly, “Yeah, you better.” She holds her hand out for the unfinished breakfast wrap, “Are you going to finish that?”

Adora pulls her breakfast back protectively, “No way!” and then stuffs the whole thing in her mouth, almost choking before managing to chew and eventually swallow it down, “See. All gone!”

“You’re ridiculous.” Catra laughs, “Okay, I better get going, princess.”

“Okay. Bye tiger.” Adora leans in and kisses her wife and then yelps when she feels Catra’s tail whack her in the ass and glares playfully at her, “Will I see you tonight?”

“Yes.” Catra replies before groaning out, “Ugh, I have to go shopping with Scorp tonight…”

“Do you… can I come?” Adora asks nervously.

“Uh, yes.” Catra replies a little uncertainly before the thought of having Adora there while she finds herself a new suit makes her smile and then she repeats a lot more confidently, “Yes. Come.”

Adora blushes, “Catra…”

“Stars…” Catra chuckles, “You’re such an idiot. I’ll meet you at your place after I finish work, don’t eat dinner.”

“Okay.” Adora nods, “Wait, why?”

“Because Scorp and I are going to grab dinner before we go clothes shopping.” Catra replies matter of factly, “We usually hit up a steak house or something beforehand.”

“You… you eat before you go shopping for clothes?” The suggestion is completely foreign to the blonde, “Why?”

“Well, if you fill up before you go clothes shopping, the clothes you get will feel better when you’re wearing them on event days or nights.” Catra simply says, “Otherwise any clothes we get will be form fitting and we won’t be able to enjoy any food during said event days or nights. Trust me, I’d rather be comfortable and stylish than the opposite.”

“That’s actually pretty smart…” Adora hums out.

“Because it is smart, princess.” Catra smirks.

“Adora!” Starla calls out, “Your 5 minutes is up. Patient is in your room.”

“Thanks Starla.” Adora sheepishly replies as she quickly leans in and kisses Catra once more, “Thank you for breakfast. I’ll see you later. Love you.”

“I love you too, princess.” Catra grins back wildly, “Okay, I’m out of here. Lest I get attacked by your next patient…”

Adora grins as she watches Catra exit the clinic before quickly turning back and getting back to work with a spring in her step.

“Scorp.” Catra greets back with a nod, “I’m starving.”

“Oh, I hope you’re hungry, Adora.” Scorpia grins at the blonde, “I’ve booked us a table. Are you guys ready?”

“Yes.” Adora beams back, squeezing Catra’s hand at the same time, “I skipped lunch so yeah, definitely hungry.”

“Awe…” Scorpia coos upon seeing Catra holding hands with Adora, “I still can’t get over the fact that you guys are actually married.”

Catra can’t stop the smile that comes on her face at hearing Scorpia say the word, married, squeezing Adora’s hand back in return, “Believe it. Those greens, which I will no longer partake in ever again, really did something to me.” She looks at her wife fondly, “And I’m so lucky she said yes to me.”

“I hope me and Perfuma will be just as happy when we get married.” Scorpia gushes.

“But you’re already happy, right?” Adora asks.

“Yes. More than happy.” Scorpia says as she leads them to the restaurant.

“Then it really shouldn’t change once you get married.” Catra shrugs, “I mean, you’re already living together. You practically do everything together. I don’t think putting a ring on it is going to change how you already feel about her.”

“Awe, Wildcat!” Scorpia wraps both of them in a hug, “Married life really has changed you…”

“No, it hasn’t.” Catra denies, “Can you put us down so we can finally get dinner?”

“Oh, gosh, right.” Scorpia puts the pair down and they make their way inside for dinner.

Perfuma and Scorpia’s Wedding

“I do!” Perfuma says as she pulls Scorpia in for their kiss as everyone laughs and cheers when they are finally married officially.

“Way to go, Scorp.” Catra pats a beaming Scorpia on the shoulder as she watches the pair walk down the aisle and into the crowd of well wishing friends and family, her scorpini friend pulls her in for a bone crushing hug, “Oof… good on ya, big gal…”

“Thanks Wildcat!” Scorpia says with tears in her eyes.

As soon as the bride and bride disappear into the crowd, Catra stalks down to find her own wife, who happens to be standing with Glimmer and Bow, talking animatedly about something with happy tears in their eyes.

“Hey Adora.” Catra wraps her arms around her wife.

“Catra!” Adora turns around and pulls her wife into a happy embrace, “That was so beautiful.”

“It really was, wasn’t it?” Catra agrees with a nod.

“Yeah, Catra.” Glimmer snarks teasingly, “It was really beautiful… what was your wedding like to Adora?”

Catra growls out playfully, used to the jibes and back and forth with the sparkly woman, “Our wedding was so amazing and beautiful that no one except a few people witnessed it.” She smirks at Glimmer, “So… when are you and Arrows getting hitched?”

Glimmer blushes and Bow looks away, making a humming noise.

“Oh, he hasn’t asked yet…” Catra surmises with another grin, “Come on, Arrows. What are you waiting for?”

“Uh…” he looks around for an exit, maybe a hole to swallow him down, “Soon. Just… I can’t do it here for obvious reasons.”

“Totally.” Adora agrees.

“Yeah, because I will claw you if you steal Scorpia’s and Perfuma’s thunder today.” Catra warns, her claws unsheathing threateningly as she also reveals her teeth, “And don’t think I’m playing around here…”

“Guys!” Scorpia says as her and Perfuma come back to meet the group, “Thank you so much for coming to our celebration!”

“It was so beautiful.” Adora gushes.

“Totally was.” Catra chimes in.

“It was lovely.” Glimmer wipes a tear from her eye.

“I totally loved it.” Bow beams, “Everything is so… perfect!”

“Oh, thank you guys!” Perfuma laughs, brushing it off like it didn’t take a lot of preparation as a few waiters start to bring out drinks on trays, “Drinks everyone! Grab a glass so we can do a toast.”

Everyone grabs a glass as they watch the newly married couple take the stage set up off to the side, waiting in anticipation of what the pair want to say when Catra, out of nowhere pulls out a microphone from her suit jacket and turns it on.

“Ahem, everybody?” Catra speaks into the microphone as the venue staff quickly set up the stage with a standing mic as everyone turns to the magicat, “Uh, thanks. I guess as Scorp’s best person, I’m supposed to make a speech or something.”

“Do you have a speech, tiger?” Adora whispers into Catra’s ear a little nervous as she waits for an answer.

Catra nods with a small smile on her lips as she turns back to see everyone looking her way, “Okay, where was I? Right, a speech. So, here it is.” Catra smiles at her friends on stage and then starts to speak again, “Scorp, you’re one of my best friends. And usually I’d pawn this type of thing to Traps to do, but I fear she’d make some kind of cyborg to deliver it.”

“I totally would!” Entrapta shouts out from somewhere in the room, garnering laughter from the crowd.

"Which means, I've got that job of delivering this speech." Catra continues, a smile still on her face, "Scorpia is a true believer in love. And for her to meet and fall in love with Perfuma who is as much or more of a true believer in love, well, that's… that's incredible." The pair nods and hold their glass up to the magicat, "And I have to say, it took them a while to get to where they are now, but, stars, if I had to hear Scorp gush about how perfect and amazing Perfuma was one more time and then not act on it, I think I would have had to literally lock them in the tunnel of love together until they figured it out."

That gets a laugh from the crowd as the newly married couple rolls their eyes at Catra.

"Anyways, I wish them both the best and that they'll love and cherish each other for the rest of their lives…" Catra takes a moment, "And now I sound like the celebrant… anyways, to Perfuma and Scorpia!"

To Perfuma and Scorpia!

"Hey Wildcat!" Scorpia and Perfuma join the pair on the dancefloor, "Come have a drink with us!"

"Nah, I'm all good, Scorp." Catra chuckles.

"Oh, come on, Cat!" Perfuma chines in, "Just one!"

"Ugh fine." Catra rolls her eyes as 2 drinks get shoved into her and Adora's hands as the lights go darker, "To you guys, I guess." Catra toasts and slings back her drink.

"Cat! Wait!" Adora tries to stop Catra from sculling the drink after tasting what was given to them and her eyes widen upon seeing Scorpia and Perfuma essentially coming to the same conclusion.

“What’s wrong, princess?” Catra grins dopily back at her wife, “Oh, are you going to drink that?”

And before Adora can move her drink away, Catra’s snatched it up and sculled it too, “Stars… Catra…”

“Wildcat… we got our drinks mixed up…” Scorpia sheepishly admits as Catra’s eyes go wide, “Uh, how are you feeling?”

“Good? I guess… why?” Catra replies feeling strange and then sees the looks on her friends and her wife’s face and comes to the realisation, “Let me guess… greens?” the group nod in unison, “Well, what’s the worse that can happen now? I mean, I’m already married to Adora.”

Adora nods, “Okay, come on, tiger. Let’s go home.”

“I don’t know what’s the big deal, princess.” Catra complains as Scorpia assists in getting the magicat to an awaiting car, the magicat turning back to her friend, “I mean, what’s the worse that can happen…”

The next day…

Catra wakes up in her bed, alone.

She looks around for Adora, before flopping back down on it.

“Adora?” Catra groans out, “Are you here?”

Adora comes back into the bedroom and smiles at her wife, “Morning, tiger.”

“Oh, I can’t believe you got a face tattoo!” Adora tells her wife.

“What?!” Catra jumps up and out of bed, her fingers on her face like she might be able to feel it, “I got what?!”

Adora watches with a chuckle as she watches Catra run to the bathroom, “How is it, Cat?”

Catra comes back from the bathroom with a predatory look on her face as she quirks an eyebrow up at her wife, “You tricked me.”

“You should have seen your face!” Adora starts to laugh before Catra tackles back down onto the bed, the blonde shrieks out in laughter as her wife tickles her, “Stop! Stop! Catra…” she can’t stop laughing, “Please! Mercy! Mercy!”

“Uh huh.” Catra leans in and presses a kiss onto her wife’s lips.

“I got you good.” Adora smirks.

“Yeah, you did.” Catra rolls her eyes, “But… I got you good last night…”

“How much do you even remember of last night?” Adora asks.

“I remember everything clearly up to the part where I drank those two drinks.” Catra recounts and then she smirks, “And…” the magicat reaches for Adora’s shirt and pulls it off, “I also remember getting you good, real good last night…”

Adora face blushes at the memory of last night’s bedroom activities.

“And… now that I sort of remember it…” Catra rubs her cheek against Adora’s, “So… let me relive it without the greens…”

“Oh, stars!” Adora moans out as her wife recreates what happened last night.

Chapter End Notes

And... done.

I've kept the smut out of this one - I have other fics that's got that stuff in it.
So, feel free to use your imagination.

Thank you to everyone that's read, commented, given kudos, bookmarked and subscribed.

It's been a while since I've got no works in progress...

But never fear! I have something or 2 in the works...

Until next time!
