I'm With Stupid (I mean Cupid)

by masternoveller

Summary

Catra's been sent to Adora to help her find her true love.
And who would be the best cupid to send to the blonde than Catra.
A magicat that's too good at her job.
But things don't go to plan when she finds herself falling for Adora.
And that's against the rules.

Will Adora find her true love or will Catra defy the rules?

Notes

I had this idea this afternoon and thought I'd start on it.
So, yeah, enjoy!

Tags will be updated when I get around to it as always.
Chapter count is... fluid...
Depends on where my brain takes this.

So, yeah, again, enjoy!

Chapter 1: I'm Your Cupid, Stupid.

“Come on, Adora.” Bow gently pulls Adora to her feet, pulling the blonde’s arm over his shoulder, Glimmer coming up on the other side to prop her up as Bow continues, “That’s enough drinks for tonight. Time to go home.”

“I don’t want to go home.” Adora pouts but then she grins dopily, “Come on, Bow. I wanna dance some more!”

“Nope! You can barely stand.” Glimmer scolds before reeling it back when she sees Adora’s face change from happy to on the verge of tears, “Let’s get you to bed, okay?”

“Mm… okay!” Adora’s sadness quickly changes, and she perks back up before she has to take a moment, “Stars… oh, my stomach…”

“Bathroom?” Bow asks quickly and without a second thought he’s guiding her towards the toilets, the blonde stumbles to the closest empty stall and starts to throw up her night’s contents in her stomach, Glimmer shuts the door to the stall and holds Adora’s hair out of the way.

“Are you okay?” Glimmer gently pats Adora on the back.

Adora drops to the floor, her breaths uneven as she takes the offered toilet paper from Glimmer and wipes her mouth and then sobs, “Why doesn’t she love me?”

Glimmer sighs, her hand now rubbing Adora’s back, “That’s her loss, babe.”

“What is wrong with me?” The words muffled by Adora’s hand over her mouth as she wipes away her tears.

“She’s not worth it, Adora.” Glimmer says softly, “Let’s get you home and into bed.”

“Okay.” The blonde concedes as she blows her nose and then drops it into the toilet bowl, Glimmer flushing it down and then helps her friend up, “You’re my best friend, Glim. I love you.”

“I love you too, Adora.” Glimmer takes most of Adora’s weight as they head back out to where Bow is waiting outside for them after washing their hands.

“Bow! I love you too!” Adora shouts out.

“I love you, Adora!” Bow grins back as he gets back under her other side to help Glimmer carry her out and back home.

“We’re going to be on the couch.” Glimmer says once they’ve got their best friend all tucked into bed, “Holler out if you need anything.”

“Thanks guys.” Adora replies tiredly, her eyes already closed as she turns onto her side, “Love you.”

“We love you too.” Bow returns, “Get some sleep.”

Cracking one eye open, she stares at her friends and then asks, “How do you two do it?”

“Do what?” Glimmer asks as she sits on the bed next to Adora.

“Be in love with each other.” The blonde asks looking between the pair, “You two make it look so easy.”

Bow kneels down next to the bed, pushing back the hairs that have fallen over Adora’s cheeks, “Huntara wasn’t right for you.”

“I mean were you guys even really going out?” Glimmer asks softly, “Or even dating?”

“I thought we were.” Adora pouts, “And then she goes off and kisses someone else!”

“Did you guys even kiss?” Glimmer asks.

“No. But we were really close to kissing.” Adora whines out and then breathes out, “I thought it could have worked… did you see those muscles?!”

“Stars…” Glimmer looks up at the ceiling, exhaling, “Bow?”

“She wasn’t the one for you, Adora.” Bow simply says, “You deserve someone who will give you the world. Who looks at you like you hung the moon in the sky. Someone that’ll spend the rest of their life doing everything in their power to make you happy.”

“Awe, babe!” Glimmer swoons, wiping a few tears from her eyes from Bow’s speech, “That’s so sweet.”

Bow shrugs, smiling softly at Glimmer, “That’s just how I feel about you.”

“You guys are so lucky.” The blonde looks at her friends still with one eye open, “I wish I could find someone like that.”

“You will. One day. You will.” Glimmer reassures.

“Adora nods, closing her eye and then falling into a restful slumber with the thoughts of true love coming her way soon, while her friends go to her couch to sleep.

After a lot of reassuring, Glimmer and Bow finally leave in the morning.

She shuts the door with a click, and then rests her forehead against it, shutting her eyes and breathes out when she hears someone grumbling from her bedroom. The blonde’s heart starts to pound in her chest as she stalks back towards her bedroom, an umbrella in her hand as her only from of defence.

“Who’s there?!” Adora shouts out, “I know you’re in there!”

There’s a little more grumbling and shuffling as the blonde kicks her door open and holds the umbrella in front of her threateningly.

Her eyes widen as she sees someone thrashing about under her blanket, seemingly caught inside it until she hears it rip open and a magicat appears, dressed in black long sleeve shirt under a marron tshirt, black ripped cargo pants and messy, rough short hair that seems to be sticking up in every direction. If it wasn’t for the fact that this magicat is trespassing inside her bedroom, no less, she would have thought the magicat to be cute.

“What? Do you sleep in a fucking net?” The magicat grumbles as she brushes off a few shreds of the blanket off her shoulder and then faces the blonde, ‘What? What are you staring at? Is it my hair? It’s my hair, isn’t it?” the magicat reaches up pats it down and then mumbles under her breath, “I can never get this to stay down…”

“Who the fuck are you and why are you in my bed?!” Adora points her umbrella threatening at the magicat intruder.

“Put that away.” The magicat pushes the umbrella away from her, “Before you poke someone’s eye out.”

“Who are you?!” Adora repeats sterner, this time poking Catra with the umbrella.

The magicat grabs the end of the umbrella quickly, pulling it out of the blonde’s hand before holding it towards Adora the same way the blonde had threatened her with it, “Humans…” she grumbles, then rolls her eyes at the blonde, “I’m not here to hurt you, dumbass. I’m here to help you.”

“Help me?” Adora frowns as she holds up her fists and then moves to attack and take out the intruder.

“Woah, what the fuck, Adora?!” The magicat manages to dodge the blonde’s fists coming her way.

“Who are you?! And how do you know my name?!” Adora grunts out as she throws punch after punch, missing the magicat by mere millimetres, “Tell me!”

The magicat finds herself cornered, her back hits the wall and she growls out, “What the fuck is wrong with you?!”

“With me?!” Adora shoves the magicat against the wall, pinning her there, “Who. Are. You?! And how do you know my name?! Answer me!”

“Okay, okay!” The magicat concedes, shoving Adora off and then brushing herself off and with a mock bow, she introduces herself, “I’m a cupid and I’m here to help you find true love.”

Adora’s jaw drops as she stares at the so called cupid in front of her and all she can say is, “Huh?”

Chapter 2: Cashless

Chapter Summary

Catra gets Adora out and about.

Adora continues to stare at the magicat alleged cupid in stupor before she can't help herself and laughs out, "You're kidding, right? You look nothing like a cupid."

"What were you expecting exactly, princess?" Catra scoffs out, "A drooling baby with wings carrying a fucking weapon to shoot into people's hearts?"

Adora nods dumbly back at her.

Another scoff, "Yeah, no. I'm stuck with you."

"What are you?" The blonde raises her hand to asks the question.

"I'm Cupid." Catra says hating the name, "Your Cupid specifically. But don't call me that."

"Then what should I call you?"

"Catra."

"Hi Catra, I'm Adora." Adora introduces herself sticking her hand out, "Also no hard feeling about the…" the blonde makes a few punching gestures with her fists and laughs awkwardly as she rubs her knuckles and then holds her hand out again.

“I know who you are, Adora.” Catra rolls her eyes and ignores the fact that the blonde attacked her first, she shakes the blonde’s hand anyway, “Or did you conveniently forget that whole part when I literally just told you I’m your cupid?”

“But why me? I don’t need a, a…” Adora furrows her brows.

“Uh, yeah. You do.” Catra replies looking the blonde up and down, “You’re a disaster and you definitely need help finding the one.”

“Rude!” The blonde huffs out, “I am not a disaster.”

Catra grins at being able to get under Adora’s skin so easily, “It’s true. Or else why would I be lucky enough to be sent here to help your dumbass find love.”

“What would you know about love anyway?” Adora crosses her arms over her chest looking away.

“Hey, this is not about me. I’m not the one that needs help in the love department.” Catra shrugs, “And the quicker you find your true love, the quicker I get to go back to paradise.”

“I don’t believe you’re a Cupid.” Adora huffs out, “Not with that attitude. Like how many true loves have you even found?”

Catra shrugs again, “Sounds like a you problem and it how many loves I’ve found is none of your concern.”

“Okay, no. You need to leave.” Adora furrows her brows and steps out of the way, so the exit is clear, “Please, leave.”

“Look, princess.” Catra flops herself back down on Adora’s bed, cradling her arms behind her head as she tilts her head up to see the blonde, “I’m your cupid, whether you like it or not. And I’m stuck with you for as long as it takes for you to find your stupid true love or whatever.”

“Get off my bed and get out.” Adora puts her hands on her hips, “I’m serious. Out.”

Catra sighs, not bothering to adhere to Adora's requests, "You've been… through a lot." Adora huffs, "The loss of your parents. The sacrifices you've had to make to get to this point. The people that manipulated you to think they loved you." The magicat turns over on her side and adds, "Honestly? That's just fucked up. If my arrows could actually inflict harm, I would have shot them all in the heart."

"Why are you telling me this? I already know all of this." Adora huffs out while getting a strange warm feeling at Catra's admission of protecting her.

"Look, I get it." Catra rolls back onto her back, "Love sucks."

The blonde snorts out a laugh, "Now I know you're not cupid."

"Why?"

"You just said, love sucks." Adora repeats back, "Aren't cupids supposed to be cheering on true love and all of that?"

"Whatever. I'm a realist." Catra replies closing her eyes.

"What the fuck is that supposed to mean?" Adora scoffs out.

"Just means that finding yours truly is going to be a fucking nightmare." The magicat says without much enthusiasm, "Considering all the people you seem to befriend have a tendency to want to use you for whatever reason."

"I'm not even that famous! Why is everyone messing with me?!" Adora groans out.

Catra points to herself, "Why I'm here, princess." And then adds, "Don't bother with dating apps or speed dating. They never work when I'm around." The magicat cracks an eye open, "Are you just going to stand there and stare at me or are you going to join me in bed?"

“What?!” Adora gasps, “I’m not getting into bed with you! I barely even know you! And what makes you think I’m that easy?!”

“Stars…” Catra grumbles under her breath, “I’m your cupid. I’m not even allowed to do anything intimate with you. Part of the rules or whatever.”

“So, what?” Adora reluctantly lowers herself on the bed next to the magicat, “Like no one has ever gotten with their cupid before?”

“It’s happened. Just once.” The magicat says shutting both eyes, “A really, really, really long time ago.”

“Yeah?”

Catra chuckles under her breath, “Why do you ask, princess? Fancy me, do you?”

“No! Stars no.” Adora says a little too quickly.

“I didn’t mean…” Adora tries to recover but realises that the damage is already done and she sighs, “I’m sorry. I didn’t mean to offend you.”

“Catra…” Adora tries to reach out, only for the cupid to quickly sit up and pull away, “What…”

“Rude!” Adora huffs out, “You don’t have to be mean.”

“Eh.” Catra shrugs, “This is strictly business anyway. So, get dressed, princess and let’s get down to business. Times a wasting.”

“You’re not the boss of me, cupid.” Adora retorts rolling over to face away from the magicat, “I’m not going. My head still hurts, and I don’t want to get up or go out.” She glances back at Catra, “Plus, who finds true love at this time of the morning?”

“You’d be surprised at how many people have found their true loves at a coffee shop at stupid o’clock in the morning.” Catra replies as she moves around Adora’s room, opening her wardrobe doors and drawers, “Hm…”

“Hey!” the blonde gets up quickly and pulls Catra away from her drawers, “Can you please not go through my stuff?!”

The magicat snickers, “Your underwear is pretty boring, princess.”

“Shut up.” Adora slams the drawer doors shut, “Stop going through my stuff.”

The magicat reaches down and picks up the shredded blanket and grin, turning back to Adora, “I know a really good place that sells amazingly soft blankets in this town.”

“What?” Adora furrows her brows at the cupid.

“Yeah. Best blankets for as long as I can remember.” Catra nods I confirmation, “Come on, I’ll show you wear.”

“No way. I’m not going.” Adora grumbles, “Go get it yourself.”

“Oh, I would love to, princess. Small problem though…” Catra smirks as she waits for Adora to ask.

Rolling her eyes, Adora asks anyways, “What’s this ‘small’ problem?”

“I don’t have money.” Catra replies with a grin.

"You shredded my blanket and you want me to pay to replace it?" Adora surmises and Catra nods with the same grin, the blonde shakes her head, "Unbelievable… no."

"Okay, if you're not going to come with me to pay for a new blanket, then I'm going to have to…" Catra starts as she thinks to herself.

"Yeah? And what are you going to do?" Adora asks with a slight huff.

The magicat grins mischievously before finishing her sentence "I'm going to… start singing. Badly."

"Ha!" Adora says before shaking her head again at the ridiculousness of the threat, "Go ahead. Sing. It's not going to work."

"Challenge accepted." Catra grins and then starts to sing.

"I keep going back there
To the crowded street where
I could see you walking in my sleep
I'll never stop trying
You're my silver lining
Even when I'm walking in my sleep
In my sleep, sleep
Even when I'm walking in my sleep

"Okay! Okay! Stop singing!" Adora finally concedes after listening to the same some for the fortieth time, "Fine! I'll get dressed! STOP SINGING!"

Catra pauses for a moment, but when Adora doesn't make a move, the cupid starts up again.

"Sleep, sleep, even when I'm walking in my sleep."

"Ugh!" Adora groans out, covering her ears as she gets up and goes to grab a fresh towel and heads to the bathroom, "STOP SINGING! I'M UP!"

Catra stops and laughs, waving the blonde off into the bathroom as she flops herself back onto Adora's bed and sighs happily as she waits for the blonde to get ready.

The door creaks open and Adora comes out, wrapped in a towel as she goes to her closet to get some clothes to wear. The blonde forgetting that she has a cupid in her bedroom as she drops her towel to get dressed.

"Stars…" Catra whispers as she quickly rolls over, looking away.

Adora turns her head, her eyes widen as she yelps, trying to cover herself, "Catra! What the fuck?!"

"What the fuck yourself, princess." Catra grumbles as she shuts her eyes for good measure, "Walk around naked much?"

"It's my room!" Adora argues as she quickly gets dressed, "What are you even still doing in here?!"

"Waiting, obviously." The magicat replies gruffly, "Maybe a little warning next time you plan to drop your towel."

"IT'S MY ROOM!" Adora shouts out, "And I'm dressed."

"Stars… finally." Catra rolls out of bed, keeping her eyes shut.

"You can open your eyes, idiot." Adora huffs out, "I already told you I'm dressed."

“Yeah, not taking chances.” Catra says as she blindly lets herself out of Adora’s bedroom and into the safety of the living room.

“What are you doing?” Adora eyes the magicat cupid trying to turn on her tv.

“It’s been a while since I’ve used one of these.” Catra admits with her tongue sticking out trying to turn the device on, “The last time I was on this physical plane the tv’s had a button to push. And they definitely were not flat like this. This is incredible.”

“How old are you?” Adora picks up the remote and turns her tv on, the magicat grinning when it powers up and on.

“No idea. Time moves… differently.” The cupid admits as she tilts her head at the screen, “This is like a computer.”

“It’s a smart tv.” Adora flicks around at the options and chooses the tv mode, “It’s connected to the internet.”

“Ah, so I shouldn’t pick up the phone then.” Catra jests and laughs to herself before looking around and not spotting one, “Where is your phone?”

Adora pulls out her phone from her pocket, “Here…?”

“Yuppy chick.” The magicat cupid simply says as she heads towards Adora’s kitchen, “Okay, where’s your other phone? The one that connected to the phone line?”

“Wow, you’re so old.” Adora breathes out lightly with a little chuckle, “No one uses them anymore. Not unless they’re in an office setting or something.”

“Huh.” Catra looks at the blonde’s phone in her hand, “Can I see that?”

“Sure.” Adora hands it over and Catra just flips it around in her hand inspecting it, “You’ve seen a mobile phone before, right?”

“Yeah. Totally.” Catra says lying through her teeth, “Though there’s no buttons or numbers on this thing.”

“You said something about apps and speed dating not working when you’re around.” Adora brings up from earlier, “How do you know about apps?”

“Apps?” Catra repeats as she gives Adora’s phone back, “Everyone knows apps.”

Quirking up and eyebrow at the magicat, “What do you mean when you say apps?”

“Appointments. You know, like when you answer ads in the paper. Oh, also don’t bother with those chat rooms, princess.” Catra adds, “Cupid powers override all that lusty bullshit.”

“So, not that I believe you’re cupid or anything, because frankly you haven’t proved anything to me.” Adora starts, “How would you even go about finding my true love exactly?”

“Just follow my vibes, princess.” Catra grins and then looks at the tv again, “How does this thing turn off? Do I clap my hands or something? Like those lights that turn on and off by clapping?”

Adora clicks it off with the remote, pockets her phones and then grabs her wallet and keys, “Where are we going, cupid?”

“Ugh, don’t call me cupid, princess.” Catra groans out.

“Don’t call me princess then, cupid.” Adora throws right back with a smirk.

“You got it, Adorka.” The magicat cupid replies with a smirk of her own as she heads towards the door and opens it, “After you, Adora.”

“You’re such an ass.” Adora grumbles as she walks past Catra and then sighs, “Fine. You can keep calling me princess.”

Catra grins and once Adora’s locked up, the magicat says, “I knew you’d like that one.”

Adora doesn’t reply, rolling her eyes and trying to hide the fact she does like the moniker.

“Adora!” Glimmer’s voice sounds out from inside the blonde’s regular coffee haunt, the sparkly girl rushes over and wraps her arms around her best friend, “How’s the hangover?”

“It’s fine, Glim.” Adora smiles warmly back at her friend as Bow comes up and wraps them both up in his arms, “Hi Bow!”

“I love hugs!” Bow says squeezing his best friends tighter and when they pull apart, he looks at Adora, “You’re up.”

“I am.” Adora looks at Catra and then back at her friends, “Guys, this is Catra. She’s a…”

“Carpenter.” The magicat cupid quickly says and then nudges the blonde, “It’s nice to meet Adora’s other platonic true loves.”

“Uh… okay…” Bow says somewhat confused by that statement he looks at Adora, “When...? How?”

“Uh…” Adora’s brain goes blank at how to explain the whole carpenter thing to her friends. Lucky for her, the magicat is quicker.

“It was my fault.” Catra easily says, “I was supposed to be fixing a door frame and knocked on the wrong door. Well, I didn’t know that at the time and kept knocking until Adora opened the door. So, for my fuck up, I’m here to buy her a coffee as promised.”

Adora stares at Catra for a bit, her mouth open as she turns to her friends, "Yes! That's exactly what happened!"

"That's so nice of you!" Bow coos.

"Yeah, nice." Catra repeats as she nudges Adora a second time with a smirk, "So, what can I get you?"

Adora leans in and whispers, "How are you going to pay exactly?"

"Don't worry about that, princess." Catra reassures, "So? Drink? Coffee? Tea? Hot chocolate? Hot water?"

"Hot chocolate, please." Adora finally replies softly.

"Adora doesn't drink coffee." Glimmer provides happily, "So, you guys literally just met this morning?"

"Yep." Catra nods and then turns to line up, "Be right back."

Once Catra is out of earshot, Glimmer turns to Adora, "She's… interesting."

"Yeah." Adora says looking over at Catra, "I've never met a… magicat before."

"Same." Bow nods, "She seems pretty cool."

"What are you doing later, Adora?" Glimmer asks, "Bow and I are going to the beach. Enjoy this beautiful weather. Want to join?"

"I don't know." Adora replies, "I don't think I'm 'beach' ready yet. I just kind of want to go back to bed and sleep."

"You can invite Catra." Bow beams like it's the best idea ever.

Adora's eyes glance over to Catra waiting for their drinks, "I'll ask her when she comes back. What time were you guys planning to go there?"

“In the afternoon, we’re meeting up with Bow’s dads for lunch first.” Glimmer says, “I’ll text you when we’re heading there.”

“Okay.” Adora nods with a small smile, “If I’m feeling up to it, I’ll see you there.”

“Oh, don’t forget to ask Catra.” Bow reminds Adora with a knowing look and then quickly checks the time on his phone, “Oh, we need to get going. Lance wants to show us photos from their trip first before lunch.”

Catra comes back, two cups in her hand as she hands one over to Adora, “Your hot chocolate, my lady.” The magicat grins as she says it.

Adora rolls her eyes back, taking the cup and sipping it, “Thanks.”

“Catra!” Glimmer turns to the magicat, “We’re going to meet up at the beach later, come join us if you’re free.”

Catra’s ears perk up on her head, “You’re inviting me to the beach?”

“You and Adora.” Bow grins widely, “But, no pressure. We just don’t get to hang out with magicats much or ever and it’d be so cool to hang out and talk with you more.”

That statement surprises Catra, the magicat chuckles, “I’ll think about it. Maybe then you can actually properly introduce ourselves.”

Bow looks slightly shocked at his rudeness, “I’m so sorry! I’m Bow and this is Glimmer.”

“Cool.” Catra replies as she sips her drink, “Might see you nerds later.”

Adora laughs awkwardly as Glimmer looks at the blonde questioning, “Let me know when you head over?”

“You got it, babe.” Glimmer nods as she takes Bow’s hand and turns to Catra, “It was nice to meet you, Catra.”

“You too, Sparkles.” Catra says teasingly earning herself a confused look from the other woman as she’s tugged away and out of the café, “Ow!”

Rubbing her arm after Adora punched it, “What is wrong with you?!”

“What did I do?” Catra feigns innocence and then laughs, “Drink up, princess. We’ve got a bit of trek to get to the blanket place I was telling you about.”

“How exactly are you going to pay for it?” Adora asks and then narrows her eyes at Catra, “Wait. How did you pay for our drinks?”

“My charm.” Catra simply says, the lie not sticking as she rolls her eyes and pulls out Adora’s wallet and tucks it back into Adora’s pocket, “And… my pick pocketing skills.”

“Stars… Catra!” Adora whines out, “Seriously?!”

“Yes, seriously.” The magicat cupid grins, “Now, come on. If memory serves me right, we need to take the bus to the train station and then another bus and then it’s a short walk… what are you doing?”

“Ordering us a ride.” Adora pulls her phone out and starts to tap away at it.

“Woah! No way. We are not taking a taxi. Way too expensive.” Catra says, “It’s way cheaper to just take the bus, the train, another bus and…”

“Nope.” Adora sternly says, “Give me the address and we’ll see if it’s cheaper to PT it or just get a ride.”

“Well, that’s the thing. I don’t know the address.” Catra says, “It’s been a while and don’t exactly remember a lot about it apart from it’s got the best blankets ever. Hands down.”

“Okay.” The word drawn out as the blonde looks up from her phone, “Then how do you know it’s a bus, a train and another bus to get there.”

“Not sure. But that’s the only way I remember it. And I can remember it very well just the names of streets evade me.” The magicat cupid scratched behind her head, she looks at Adora and shrugs, “I think we should do it my way. I think we’ll meet a potential this way.”

“You’re not just saying this just so we have to take public transport, are you?” Adora asks suspiciously.

“What have you got against public transport, princess?” The question asked amusedly from Catra, a slight grin on her lips, “From my info, nothing bad has happened on public transport.”

“What info?”

“Just cupid stuff.” Catra replies vaguely, “You know, stuff like your name, age, occupation, past loves, stuff like that.”

“Past loves?” Adora furrows her brows.

“Yeah. I want to say I was surprised, but I really wasn’t.”

“About?”

The magicat pauses, contemplating if she should tell Adora anything at all, but then she reasons that the blonde already knows all the information she knows since she is, Adora, after all. Catra starts to walk to the door, “We can walk and talk.”

“To the bus stop?” Adora guesses.

Catra laughs, “Yes. To the bus stop.”

“I haven’t been on a bus since… high school.” Adora admits, “I don’t even have a bus pass anymore.”

“Pretty sure they still take cash.” Catra replies, digging into her pockets and coming up empty, “Oh, right. Cashless.”

“Think they take card?” Adora asks.

“I’ve got an idea.” Catra says as she spots a man in a sleek grey suit walk into the café, push himself to the front of the queue, turns around and dares anyone in the line behind him to say something before turning back to the counter, bark out his order at the cashier before slamming his money on the counter with a glare not moving off to the side, “I can get us some cash. And I think I just found my wallet… or it will be mine soon enough.”

“I can’t believe you did that.” Adora laughs as they power walk to the closest bus stop, “I can’t believe you did that!”

“What? I only took his money.” Catra shrugs with a mischievous grin on her face, “Now we can pay for the bus.”

“You stole from him.” Adora deadpans, shaking his head.

“Jerk deserved it.” Catra says, “He literally tried to get that cashier fired just for asking if he could move to the other side so the next person can order.”

“Yeah, but he didn’t deserve being stolen from.” Adora tries to argue though she doesn’t even believe what she’s saying.

“Trust me, he deserved me doing more than lifting his money from his wallet.” Catra reasons, “If I really wanted to fuck him up, I would have kept his wallet and sold his ID and all his cards on the dark web.”

“How do you know about the dark web?” Adora says surprised.

“I have a… friend.” Catra says like the admission was meant to be a secret, “She’s… really into that kind of stuff. But not for bad things. She’s really into getting bad people and all that. Well, I think she is still into that sort of stuff.”

“Scammers?”

“I guess.” Catra shrugs, “I’m not sure what she does but she’s always on her computer, tapping away like a madwoman.”

“Is she a cupid too?” Adora asks as they get to the bus stop and wait, the blonde checking the times on the board and then the time on her phone.

“No. I don’t think she even knows what love even is.” Catra chuckles like it’s an inside joke, “I think the only love she understands are ones and zeros.”

Adora finds herself smiling despite herself before schooling her features and then clears her throat, “Bus should be here soon. Do you know which station we need to get to?”

“It’ll come to me.” Catra replies.

“How do you even know we’re going in the right direction?” Adora asks.

“It’s a feeling I get.” The magicat cupid says confidently, “And it also means that we’ve got more of a chance to run into your one.”

Adora rolls her eyes, “I still don’t believe you’re cupid.”

“You don’t need to believe I’m cupid. You just need to believe and be open to love, princess.” Catra says with a sigh, “So, can you do that?”

“Look, I don’t need somebody because you think that’s what I need, Catra.” Adora replies defensively, “Or deserve.”

Catra groans, “If you want to be alone. Be close to only your best friends. I’m totally fine with that. I read your file, Adora. And I said the same thing.” The magicat watches as the bus pulls up to them, “I’m not here to force anything that isn’t supposed to be. But if there is a potential, I’m also here to help. That’s all.”

“Yes.”

“Help me fall in love with some stranger.” Adora reiterates.

“Well, we’re all strangers until we meet.” Catra says, stepping back so Adora can board first, she pays their fare and follows Adora and takes a seat next to her, “Just… try to be open to it.” And then under her breath she grumbles something.

“What was that?” Adora turns to face Catra.

“I said I sound just like the flower princess.” The magicat cupid breathes out annoyed at herself and then spots a young woman with reddish hair, Catra grins, “I think we have a winner.”

“What?”

“Straight ahead, the red head with the purple hoodie.” Catra nudges the blonde next to her.

Adora looks over, looks at the woman’s features from behind, “I can’t even see her face.”

“Go on. Go talk to her.” Catra shifts to the empty row of seats next to her.

“What?!” Adora almost shrieks as Catra grimaces before she lowers her voice back to a whisper, “I’m not just going to go up to some stranger on the bus!”

“Why not?”

“It’s creepy!” Adora whisper shouts as the bus pulls up to stop and the woman gets up and exits the vehicle, the magicat cupid throws her head back and groans while Adora breathes out a sigh of relief.

“What if she was the one?” Catra asks.

“Well, if she’s the one.” Adora huffs out, “Then fate will bring us back to together or you’ll work your so called cupid magic.”

Catra bursts out laughing, “That’s not how this works.”

“Don’t you just shoot potential lovers with your arrows to make them fall in love?” Adora mocks.

“I only have the one arrow, princess.” Catra replies, “And that’s only for true love. Every cupid only gets one.”

“What?”

“Oh yeah, guess they only told you half the story about cupids.” Catra says and Adora just stares at her waiting for her continue, “My one arrow is not for you humans. My presence creates the flames if there are sparks to start with. What happens after that, well, that’s up to you.”

“So, you’re essentially a magical match maker. A pimp essentially.” Adora surmises, “Look I don’t need your help in that case.”

“This is just about you, princess.” Catra says gruffly, “I’m your cupid.”

“You’ve said that already.” Adora rubs her eyes, tired of this conversation.

“I’m your cupid. And at some point, when I reach my quota and you get to find your true love, I’ll get to use my one arrow.” Catra says exasperatedly., “From my count, on average, you should be my last one.”

“Who is your arrow for?” Adora asks, “If not for my true love.”

Chapter End Notes

Ah, finding love on public transport...

Oh, and Catra was singing Andrew McMahon in the Wilderness - Walking in My Sleep.
Singing it off key is... offputting. HA!
I'd add a soundbite, but i have no idea how to do it. 😂

Thanks for reading, kudos, comments, bookmarks and subscribers!

Chapter 3: Blankets

Catra takes Adora on an adventure on public transport.

"You have to stop knocking back every woman I suggest to you otherwise I'm going to start pointing out dudes instead." Catra huffs out as Adora shakes her head at another love prospect, "What was wrong with the woman in the green dress?"

"Nothing." Adora replies rubbing her temples, "I'm just not looking for love right now."

"Uh huh." Catra replies with a roll of her eyes, "Maybe I need to try a different tact."

"How about you just leave me and my love life alone, cupid." Adora says back, watching Catra press the bell for the next stop, "I can't believe you've made us travel for nearly an hour just to come here."

"What can I say? Best blankets in town." Catra smirks, getting to her feet and holding out her hand to, "Are you coming, princess?"

Snorting out a laugh, Adora puts her hand in Catra's and gets up, "And you wonder why no one is going to approach me when you're around."

"Huh?" Catra's tail flicks around as she tugs Adora forward so they can get off the bus, "What you do mean, princess?"

“This. This is what I mean.” Adora says holding up her with Catra’s attached to it and raises an eyebrow.

The magicat looks at their joined hands and shrugs, “What do you mean? I’m holding your hand so you don’t get lost. Or fall and die before I can find your true love.”

“No, idiot.” Adora puts their hands down, “Do you even know anything about social interactions?”

“I’m cupid. Of course, I do.” Catra chuckles, “And besides, we’re getting off the bus. Nothing wrong with this at all, princess.”

Just as Catra says that, a pair of women walk past, they both glance down at their joined hands and one of them gives them a nod and wink in approval before walking off.

“Ah.” Catra laughs this time at the realisation, opening her hand to release Adora’s, “Message received.”

“Idiot.” Adora repeats under her breath but there’s a small tilt up on her lips that reveals a smile, “Also calling me princess all the time isn’t helping either.”

“Fine. I’ll tone it down.” Catra grumbles as she starts to walk towards the shop that sells blankets and other manchester, “It’s this way. Just up the road.”

“Okay.” Adora smiles victoriously as she follows behind the magicat cupid.

“You’re kidding, right?” Adora deadpans as she looks up at the sign on the shop, “Razz’s Nic Nacs, I thought this placed closed down years ago. It doesn’t even look open.”

Ignoring Adora, Catra pushes the door open, a bell chimes overhead as she walks through, holding the door open for the blonde before closing it gently and then taking a moment to breath in this once very familiar place.

“Little one!” An even more familiar voice calls out from somewhere in the back before warm arms wrap around her mid section in a hug that makes Catra laugh, “My sweet magicat cupid!”

“Razz! It’s so good to see you again.” Catra wraps an arm around the old woman with big crazy hair and huge glasses.

“It’s been too long, cupid.” Razz gives the magicat one more squeeze before letting go and getting a good look at her, “You haven’t aged a day. Cupid genes.” She taps her nose and Catra laughs again before the older woman looks around to see Adora, “And who is this? Did you finally find your target? She is very pretty. I’m very jealous.”

“No. I still have my arrow.” Catra snorts out a laugh, pulling Adora forward, “Razz, this is Adora. Adora, this is Razz.”

“Hi Razz.” Adora holds her hand out to Razz and then yelps when the older woman surprises her with her insane strength by pulling her into a hug, “Woah!” she lets out an awkward laugh and pats her on the back, “It’s nice to meet you.”

“Don’t let this cupid get away, dearie.” Razz whispers into Adora’s ear before pulling back and tapping her nose at Adora this time, “Little one is hard to hold down sometimes, especially with that stars awful job of hers.”

Adora blushes, her mouth opens and closes, not sure how to respond.

“I know.” Razz smiles back, “It is nice to see you again.”

Catra nods back, she clears her throat and looks around until she finds what she's looking for and walks through the shop, "Ah, yes!" the magicat comes back, a brand new blanket in her hand and a triumphant smile on her face as she holds it out to Adora, "Feel this."

Adora reaches out with tentative fingers, the fabric of the blanket soft in her hands, "Wow. This is really soft." She brings the blanket up to her cheek and leans on it, a smile appears on her face, "Mm… this is so good."

"I know, right?" Catra preens, "Oh, there's other colours too if you don't like the maroon."

"No, this one is fine." Adora grins despite her initial reservations about the shop, she turns to Razz, "How much?"

Razz takes the blanket from Adora and quickly turns it over in her hands before finding the tag and handing it back to the blonde, "Price tag is three hundred and fifty dollars, dearie."

Adora's eyes widen comically as Catra laughs out next to her, "Catra! Three hundred and fifty dollars! Are you kidding me?! I don't have that kind of money!"

Razz joins Catra in laughter before patting the magicat on the thigh, Catra leans down and Razz whispers something into her ear, the magicat stops laughing and straightens up with a flushed look on her face as she looks at Adora.

Razz grins at the pair of them, "Well?"

"I'm sorry, Razz. I can't afford this." Adora says and then starts to ramble, "I know everyone thinks I'm super rich or whatever, but it's really not the case. Most of that money went to all the lawyers after the 'win'. The rest of my money was spent on my place with enough money on monthly expenses. Bow made sure I'm on a strict budget just in case, what was it he said, something about a rainy day? Anyway, I was looking for a job but I can't seem to find anything quiet enough without being recognized and…"

“Stars, princess! Breathe!” Catra rushes over and put her hands on Adora’s shoulders, looking into the blonde’s eyes to get her to focus before she starts to spiral, “Woah, look at me, Adora. Come on, eyes on me.”

Adora’s eyes flicker up, staring into the magicat’s eyes before her eyes widen and her breath hitches when she finds herself unable to tear her gaze away from those different coloured eyes, “Wow.” She breathes out shakily, “I uh, like your eyes. They’re like, uh, very cool… or whatever.”

Catra grins at the blush creeping across Adora’s cheeks, “I like your eyes too, princess.”

“You do?” Adora voice perks up before she quickly schools her expression back to trying to be nonchalant, “I mean, yeah, it’s like, whatever.”

“I like your eyes, Adora.” Catra repeats, dropping her head slightly to gaze a little more intently into the blonde’s eyes, “Very beautiful.”

The compliment lights up Adora’s face, a smile beaming through as she bites her bottom lip to try to conceal it, “You have to say that because you’re cupid.”

At the mention of cupid, Catra recoils her hands from Adora’s shoulders, “Actually I shouldn’t be saying it because I am your cupid.”

Adora immediately misses the warmth of Catra’s hands on her shoulders, letting them drop, “Yeah. Right… Finding me love or whatever.”

Catra takes a steadying breath in and then says, “I was surprised that someone as beautiful as you, inside and out, still hadn’t found a true love connection with anyone. Is it me, or is everyone else just blind?”

The blush returns to Adora's face as she shoves the magicat playfully, "You're such a talker."

"I'm a cupid." Catra shrugs smugly and then reaches out for the blanket in Adora's hand, turning to Razz, "I'll pay for it. Just, put it on my tab, would you please, Razz?"

"Okay, cupid." Razz nods and folds the blanket neatly and turns to Adora, "Do you need a bag?"

"Do you have a bag?" Catra asks back.

"Yes, of course I do, I've got a nice reusable one in the back." Razz replies snarking, "It's an extra two dollars for a bag."

"Fine. Put that on my tab too." The magicat cupid grumbles as Razz grins back, shuffling towards the back to retrieve a bag before returning and holding it out to them.

"Here you go." Razz says with a grin on her face.

"Thanks Razz." Catra takes the bag and lets the smaller woman pull her into a hug, wrapping one arm around her, "I'll drop by with some cash in a few days if that's alright."

Razz shifts out of the embrace and grabs her broom, whacking the magicat with it on the side of her head, "No stealing!"

Catra cackles, pushing the offending weapon away as she nods, "Okay, okay! I promise, no stealing." She turns to Adora, "Unless it's a really bad person." And then turns back to Razz, "Would it be okay if I stole from a really bad person?"

"What kind of bad person?" Razz tilts her head back at Catra waiting for a reply, "Well?"

"You know. Bad people." Catra shrugs, "Assholes, jerks, creeps, turds that steal from the poor, you know, bad people. Monsters, really.”

Razz narrows her eyes at the magicat cupid, “Well, if they are bad, why not have them face the full force of the law?”

“Not my jurisdiction.” Catra shrugs again, “I’ll let Adora call the cops or whatever in that case. It’s a little hard when I don’t have an address or ID.”

“I’m not getting involved in your crimes, Catra!” Adora grunts out.

“Petty crimes, princess. Petty crimes.” Catra clarifies, “And besides, why should crime work in the favour of the already rich?”

“Look. It’s fine. I’ll pay for it.” Adora sighs and she turns to Razz, “Can I pay in instalments?”

Razz turns away, “No thanks, dearie. It’s already on cupid’s tab.”

The pair watch as she shuffles into the back, disappearing out of sight, Adora leans in, “Where’d she go?”

“Somewhere in the back.” Catra replies and then turns, “Go?”

“Where?”

“Back to your place?” The magicat cupid suggests, “You’ll want to test out this new blanket. Best sleep you’ll have in a very long time. I guarantee it.”

The confidence in that statement as Adora chuckling, “You’re an idiot.”

“I’m right. You’ll see.” Catra quirks an eyebrow up, “Come on, it’s like an hour back to your place.”

“Nope. I’m getting us a ride.” Adora pulls out her phone.

“Had enough of public transport already, princess?” Catra teases as she goes to open the door.

“No.” Adora shakes her head, blindly following the magicat out of the door as she continues to tap away.

“No?”

“No. I’m sick of you trying to set me up with people on the bus or the train.” Adora says looking up from her phone and then adds, “Our ride will be here in a five minutes.”

“You got us a taxi?” Catra asks confused, “I thought you were trying to save money.”

“It’s a ride share. Not a taxi.” Adora replies showing the magicat the app, “See. Price is already fixed so you don’t get scammed with extra charges.”

“This is whack, princess.” Catra rubs the back of her head, “What happened to not getting into strangers cars and all that?”

“Stars… you really are old.” Adora mutters under the breath, “It’s not like that. All the drivers are screened and verified. Plus the route they take shows up on the app so you’ll know if they plan to do something dumb.”

“Like kidnap you?”

“Could happen, hasn’t happened.” Adora replies, “Besides, you’re with me. So, what’s the worse that could happen?”

“Sounds terrible.” Catra grumbles as their car arrives, “I better not have to break a window or choke out the driver because you’re wrong.”

Adora giggles at that, “You’re an idiot. It’s safe. Trust me.”

“Okay, fine.” Catra concedes as she gets in after Adora.

“See, I told you. Totally safe.” Adora grins as she opens the door to her place and lets Catra in, “Admit it. You were wrong.”

“Fine. I was wrong.” Catra admits grumpily, “But back in my day…”

“Yeah, yeah, yeah.” Adora rolls her eyes and laughs and then says in a mocking tone trying to sound like Catra, “Back in my day…” she giggles, “Stars, you’re so old.”

“Whatever. I still don’t think you should be getting into strangers’ cars.” Catra grumbles, “It’s like accepting drinks from creepy people at bars or clubs.”

“Yeah, that one still stands.” Adora shuts the door, “Still a lot of creeps out there.”

“Huh.” Catra says as she walks towards Adora’s bedroom, putting the bag on the floor before grabbing the shredded one and throwing it over her shoulder, before taking the new blanket out of the bag and throwing it over Adora’s bed, ripping the tag off and then admiring her handy work, “Good to go, princess.”

Adora steps inside and looks at her bed and then at Catra, “What are you going to do with that one?”

“This one?” Catra gestures to the shredded blanket over her shoulder and Adora nods, “This is mine now since I fucked it up.”

“Uh huh.” Adora hums, “It’s too early for bed.”

“You don’t have to sleep, princess. Just…” Catra turns to the bed, “Try it out. See if you like it on you.”

“That sounds so wrong.” The blonde rolls her eyes but moves to stand next to her bed, hesitant.

“What’s wrong?” Catra tilts her head in question.

“I need to get changed first.” Adora replies sheepishly, “I don’t like getting into bed in my day clothes.”

“Dirty clothes?”

“Yeah. Pretty much.” Adora says and then stares at Catra for a moment like she should know, “Well? Are you planning to watch me get changed?”

“Oh, right. No. I’ll just turn around.” Catra quickly says and turns to face the wall. Her ears twitching around at the sound of clothes rustling and then she hears Adora get into bed and sighs out happily, “Are you decent?”

“I’m under the blanket.” Adora answers instead as she watches Catra turns around and the magicat’s eyes widen, “I’m not naked if that’s what you’re thinking.”

“I wasn’t thinking that.” Catra lies, trying to focus her eyes on somewhere else in the room than on the bed, she clears her throat, “So, uh, how’s the blanket? Best blanket ever, am I right?”

The blonde shuffles around under the blanket and lets out an honest to the stars moan, one reserved for the bedroom if Catra had to put a scenario for it. Adora opens her eyes and smirks at the reaction from her cupid, “It’s like I’m sleeping in a cloud, Catra.”

Catra chuckles darkly at that description, “I know. Razz has the best blankets and also the best pies. Maybe we can go there again on another day and I can prove that I’m right about that too, princess.”

“Sounds like a date. Are you just going to stand there or are you going to join me under this blanket?” Adora questions with a smirk, “Or are you that old school that you have to date first before getting into bed with someone?”

“I… I can’t.” Catra replies, “It’s against the rules to sleep with the client.”

“Client, huh?” Adora repeats with an amused tone, “Well, you know… I’ve heard a lot of stories about people sleeping with their clients…”

“You never slept with the people you were dealing with, Adora.” Catra points out, “And… I’m supposed to be helping you find your true love. Not seducing you. That’s… that’s not supposed to happen.”

“You’re not seducing me. If anything… Take off your clothes, cupid.” Adora challenges as she sits up in bed in an oversized tshirt with holes in the right spots to give off enough skin without revealing anything, “Or are you scared?”

“I’m not scared.” Catra huffs out, her hands closing into fists, “I’ll give you some space to enjoy that blanket.”

“Catra.” Adora quickly reaches out and manages to snag the magicat’s shirt “Stay.”

“Adora.” Catra warns.

“Please?” the blonde says breathily.

“I really can’t…” The words sounding more like the cupid was trying to convince herself, turning her head so she doesn’t have to look at Adora’s pouty face, “Stop that. I’m not going to fold.”

“Really?” Adora huffs out a laugh, “What if… I do this?”

Catra’s breath hitches as she watches Adora fold back the blanket and get out of bed, the blonde only wearing the oversized tshirt and possibly (or hopefully for Catra’s sake) shorts underneath it.

“You really aren’t going to join me in bed to test this blanket out?” Adora throws her arms over Catra’s shoulders and brings them in closer, resting her forehead against the cupid’s, “You’re overdressed for bed, cupid.”

“Adora.” Catra growls as she stares into Adora’s eyes looking back at hers.

“What did you say about my eyes? Back when we were at Razz’s shop?” Adora whispers the question with mischievous look on her face, “Remind me?”

Without hesitation, Catra says, “Your eyes are beautiful.”

“And… I like your eyes too.” Adora grins, “So…”

“So?”

“Take off your clothes, cupid. And join me in bed.” Adora whispers into Catra’s lips, “Or do I need to do it myself?”

“Stars… this is wrong, princess.” Catra breathes out.

“Doesn’t feel wrong.” Adora replies with a smirk and a shrug, “Does it feel… wrong?”

Catra shakes her head, “No. It doesn’t feel wrong.”

“Then?”

Catra looks up and into Adora’s eyes, and then says, “Fuck it.”

“Mmphf!” Adora gasps out when she feels Catra’s lips on hers, melting into the kiss as she pulls the cupid closer, feeling Catra’s hands roaming over her body, Adora whines out into Catra’s mouth as she feels the magicat’s hands dip under her shirt until she feels Catra’s hands on her skin, “Stars…”

Catra walks Adora back onto the bed, the blonde flops down onto the bed on her back as Catra rips off her clothes, leaving only her boxers on as she drapes herself over the top of the blonde, pulling the new blanket over them and then letting out a content purr, “Fuck, princess…”

Adora doesn’t let Catra finish that thought as she pulls Catra back down for more kisses, “That’s the plan, cupid.”

“Stars…” Catra finds herself purring out, “I’m in so much trouble…”

Adora giggles as she lifts herself up just enough, pushing Catra off her a little so she can pull off her tshirt, revealing nothing underneath apart from a pair of black underwear, before grabbing Catra by the back of the neck and bringing her back down for more kisses as Catra grabs the blanket and throws it over the top of them, Adora chuckles under her breath and says, “Best blanket ever…”

“That… was so very wrong.” Catra breathes out into Adora’s hair as the blonde lies naked against her, resting on her chest, “I’m in so much trouble…”

“Why? I thought that was pretty… wow.” Adora says lightly humming happily and running her fingers along the magicat’s fur, “You’re so soft… I love it.”

“Stars….” Catra says to the ceiling, “We can’t do that again.”

“Why not?” Adora pouts.

“Because I’m your cupid.” Catra says, “I’m supposed to help you find true love. Not sleep with you.”

The blonde chuckles and then looks up, “Exactly. You’re my cupid.”

Catra rolls her eyes, but deep down she doesn’t want to stop whatever this is, instead she says against whatever she feels, “We should go out tonight. Scope out the scene and see if sparks fly?”

Too tired to argue, Adora simply nods, “Okay. Later though.”

“Later.”

“We can hit the beach later actually.” Adora recalls in the moment as her fingers continue circling Catra’s fur, “It’ll be fun.”

The cupid rolls her eyes, “We’re not going to the beach just to meet your friends, princess.” Catra drapes her hand over Adora’s, the blonde’s fingers still on her chest, “The whole point of me being here is to find your true love.”

Adora simply hums back non-committally.

“I’m serious, Adora.” Catra gently squeezes Adora’s hand, “There’s someone out there for you on this level and I’m going to help you find them.”

“Okay.” Adora simply says with a sigh and then adds, “I’m sure you can work your magic on the beach then. Or wherever we are.”

Catra’s body shakes with a chuckle, “I guess you’re right. What time did Sparkles say to be there?”

“Um, let me check.” Adora pushes herself up to grab her phone, Catra’s eyes easily drawn towards the blonde’s naked body and she can’t help but stare. Adora looks up from her phone and catches the magicat cupid’s stare, “Like what you see, cupid?”

Catra turns her head and coughs, “It’s alright.”

“Just alright?” Adora repeats incredulously, a playful pout on her lips as she glares lightly back at the cupid.

The magicat cupid growls out, her eyes still evading Adora and her pout, “I mean, better than alright.”

“Uh huh.” Adora says not believing Catra, “Is that why you can’t look at me?”

“I can look.” Catra declares defiantly, “It’s just that…”

“What?” The blonde starts to saunter back towards the bed, “Just what, Catra?”

“I don’t think I’m going to be able to keep my hands off you if I look at you.” Catra admits looking everywhere except at Adora, “And I really need to get cracking on finding your true love.”

The bed dips next to Catra, a warm hand resting on the cupid’s, “Catra. Look at me.”

Catra sighs out, taking a deep breath before turning her head to look into Adora’s eyes, not letting her gaze dip lower.

“How do you know if you’re in love with someone?” Adora asks softly.

The question surprises Catra, “What?”

“How do you know if you’re in love with someone?” The blonde repeats, laying down back how she was before she had gotten up to check her phone.

A purr stutters up from within Catra’s chest, “You just know.”

“Have you ever been in love?” Adora’s fingers go back to running through the magicat cupid’s fur, “As a cupid or before.”

“I don’t really remember the before.” Catra admits.

“What about as a cupid?”

“I don’t know.” The magicat cupid sighs out.

“You don’t know?”

“Is there an echo or something in here?” Catra grumbles, earning herself a pinch from the blonde, “Ow! What the fuck, princess?”

“Quit ruining the moment!” Adora huffs out, “Just answer the question, would you?”

“I really don’t know.” Catra repeats now feeling like she’s the butt of the joke, “I don’t spend enough time on this plane to find love for myself.”

A million questions run through Adora's head at hearing that, she asks, "Where do you go when you aren't here?"

"I'm not sure. And I can't really explain it." Catra replies and then closes her eyes to try to put it into words, "It's kind of like… a dream. A place where I can do anything and nothing at the same time. Kind of like walking in my sleep but not quite. Does that make sense?"

Adora shakes her head, "Not really."

"And I can't remember much of my life before this." Catra says, her fingers start to thread through Adora's hair, "I get snippets. Feeling of things from a past life. Mostly in black and white like an old film."

"How long do you usually stay on a… I want to say… project? Client maybe?" Adora asks, "And what happens to you once you find them their true love?"

"Not long, honestly." Catra replies and then laughs, "I had one that lasted about a day."

"That quick, huh?"

Catra nods, "Yeah. Right place, right time."

"And the longest?" Adora closes her eyes, her head happily resting on the magicat cupid's chest.

"Are you falling asleep on me again, princess?" Catra teases.

"Maybe." Adora yawns, "It's not my fault that that feels so good."

"Petting you?" The cupid chuckles.

"I wouldn't call it petting. That sounds a little wrong." Adora huffs out with a giggle.

"You'd call it petting when you do it to me." Catra points out.

“That’s because you’re furry. So, it tracks.” Adora reasons, “Plus that purr… mmm…”

“Don’t fall for a cupid, princess.” Catra says, but the warning is weak, just as she feels herself, “Nothing good will come from this if it continues.”

“You said before that someone has fallen for a cupid. What happened to them?” Adora asks breathing in Catra’s scent.

“Honestly, I don’t know.” Catra breathes out, “There’s just a bunch of rumours.”

“Like?”

The magicat cupid takes a breath in, “One rumour was they both combusted as soon as the cupid used their arrow on their client, just went up in flames.” A slight shudder goes through Catra, “Another one was they the higher ups got angry with them and threw them into two different planes, punished to be so close yet far enough to not be able to touch or speak.”

“That sounds terrible.” Adora grimaces.

A small smile appears on Catra’s face as she reveals the last rumour she heard, “And then there is one that says that they’re still together. Living life on this plane.”

“That one sounds much better.” The blonde smiles into Catra’s chest, “I like that rumour.”

“I knew you would.” Catra leans down, her cheek resting on top of Adora’s head before she breathes out, “But there’s a lot more negative rumours than there are positive ones.”

“How many happy rumours are there floating around?”

“Literally just that one.” The cupid replies huffing a quiet chuckle, “It’s like playing the lottery. Less than a chance to win and a heap to lose.”

“But if you never buy a ticket than you’ll never have a chance to win.” Adora points out, “Gotta be in it to win it, right?”

“And what am I winning exactly?” Catra asks somewhat amused.

Adora hums back and then changes the subject, “So, what was the longest you were here to find someone love?”

“A year.” Catra replies easily, the memory of that client flooding back and she can’t help herself and laugh, “Wow, that one was an absolute trainwreck, emotionally.”

A smile graces Adora’s lips, happy for the change of subject, “A whole year, huh?”

“Yeah.” The cupid’s body shakes with laughter, “It was like they’ve never spoken to another person before. And all the targets I had lined up, well as soon as someone flirted with them or tried to get closer, they’d freeze and then literally run away.”

Adora laughs lightly too, “Are you supposed to be telling me any of this?”

The cupid shrugs, “Nothing in my briefing to say I can’t talk about past clients.”

“Okay.” The blonde nods, a smile still on her lips, “So, how did you get your client to finally fall in love?”

“Stars, that was not easy.” Catra sighs, “I had to teach them everything from not running from everyone to just having conversations with anyone at all. Possible love interests or not.”

“And what about you?”

“What about me?”

Rolling her eyes, Adora nudges the magicat cupid with her shoulder slightly, “Who taught you?”

“Self-learner.” Catra says proudly before laughing out, “Though from whatever glimpses of my former life I’ve had, I guess smooth wouldn’t be the first word that comes to mind.”

“No?”

The cupid laughs again, “Definitely not. From whatever weird memories I have, pretty sure I struck out like a hundred percent of the time.”

“You seem pretty smooth to me.” Adora whispers.

“I think you got that the other way, princess.” Catra says, “You got me naked, not the other way around.”

“But you’re so charming, I had to.” Adora argues playfully as she intertwines their fingers, “And super cute.”

“It’s strange.” Catra says and Adora hums in question, “I just mean, it’s strange that this isn’t how you read in my report.”

“What do you mean?” Adora asks back.

“You don’t go for my type.” Catra simply says, “You don’t do hook ups or anything casual. When you fall, you fall in deep. Which is why you stopped.”

“I didn’t stop.” Adora furrows her brows.

“You did.” Catra replies, “A long time ago, you fell in love with someone and when you moved away from her, it broke your heart and now, well, that’s where I come in.”

“I don’t even remember that.” Adora admits, “But I didn’t swear off love.”

“Not consciously.” Catra says, “Deep down, you know I’m telling you the truth. You still blame yourself.”

“I don’t…” Adora tries to argue.

“Can I see the file?” Adora tries to sit up, but Catra keeps her in place, “Catra…”

“No, stay.” Catra breathes out, “You can’t see the files.”

“Why not?”

“It’s on the other plane.” Catra explains, “I read through it once and then I was whizzed over into this bed, trapped in that blanket of yours and your threats to hurt me.”

Adora pinches the cupid, making Catra yelp out before they both laugh, “How was I supposed to know that you are a cupid when you just appeared in my bed?”

“That’s true.” Catra agrees with a nod, “Though not my worst entrance ever. The one on a submarine was pretty fucking scary.”

“Did you? Did you just say… submarine?” Adora looks up surprised.

“Yeah.” The magicat cupid chuckles, “I hate the water at the best of time. But to be trapped under it… yeah, that was fucked.”

“Huh.” Adora says as she lays her head back down, “How long did you end up there?”

“Three days. Thank the stars it was only three days and the crew was not as small as I thought it’d be.” Catra reminisces, “Then again, straight couples are easier to match anyways.”

“Oh yeah?”

“Yeah. They’re like desperate for love.” Catra laughs, “Sifting through the lusty ones to find the real thing was easy.”

“How so?”

“Body language.”

“Yeah, body language.” Catra confirms, “I can sense the wrong ones from the right ones.”

“Yeah?”

“Yeah. The wrong ones only want sex.” The cupid replies easily, “The right ones, the ones that I steer my client to, want more.”

“That’s reassuring.” Adora breathes out.

“The potentials don’t just want more, they also have something in common, some kind of link or a connection.” Catra says, “Sometimes it’s a simple quick interaction from years gone pass. Other times it’s someone they already know. Most often than not, it’s the second one.”

“So, you’re saying I’m probably going to fall in love with one of my friends.” Adora surmises.

“Pretty much.” Catra nods, “Though, I’ve been surprised more than once when some dark horse comes out of the woodwork.”

“Do I get a choice in any of this?” Adora asks, interest peaked as she waits for the answer.

“Of course. Your heart. Your choice.” Catra answers, “I merely offer up suggestions. Better choices and not someone that’s going to flake out or change their mind.”

“What if I don’t choose whoever you pick for me?”

“Then you don’t pick them.” Catra shrugs, “You’ll part and then go your separate ways just like any other relationship, whether romantic or not.”

“You’re essentially just a furry match maker.” Adora surmises again.

“Yeah. But with better aim.” Catra grins before tapping Adora on the shoulder, “So, what time are we hitting the beach to meet Sparkles and Arrows?”

“I don’t get this fascination with the beach.” Catra grumbles as she trudges through the hot sand wincing with every step, “This stuff gets everywhere.”

“Quit your grumbling, cupid.” Adora sticks her tongue out before wincing too as the hot sand touches her bare legs, “Ow…”

“Should have worn pants, huh princess?” Catra smirks and then shakes the sand out of her pant leg.

“It’s the beach, Catra! And I’m wearing shorts.” Adora gestures to her bottoms, “Besides, the best part isn’t the sand, idiot. It’s getting into the water!”

“Did you not remember the part where I said I’m not a fan of water?” The magicat cupid crosses her arms over her chest, “Fuck getting into that cesspool of an ocean. I’m not planning to get eaten by a shark or stung by jellyfish or bathe in sewage.”

“Okay, one. Gross.” Adora rolls her eyes, “And two, shut up. The chances of being eaten by a shark are quite low.”

“Low isn’t zero.” Catra huffs out.

“There’s risk in everything, cupid.” Adora reaches out and laughs, “Come on, I see my friends over there.”

“Hey guys!” Adora waves to her friends, noticing that there’s a few people there that she doesn’t know, “I brought Catra!”

“Hey.” Catra nods to the group as she steps up next to Adora, her arms still crossed over her chest.

“Hi Catra!” Bow greets with a friendly wave and a wide grin, “Hi Adora!”

“Oh, hey guys.” Glimmer turns around from where she’s set up her towel on the sand, “I hope you don’t mind that we invited a few others too.”

“No. The more the merrier.” Adora smiles back as she looks around at the group of people she doesn’t know.

Catra looks over the group, her eyes fall to the red head, muscular looking but still soft, the magicat cupid nudges Adora, “You should totally go an introduce yourself to her.”

“Who?” Adora turns to where Catra is looking.

Adora finds the redhead, her eyes lock onto the muscular arms and then soft eyes staring back at her, the blonde blushes at being caught and coughs to cover her embarrassment as the magicat cupid snickers under her breath while Adora gives her a glare, “Shut it, cupid.”

“Idiot.” Catra mutters under her breath as she gives Adora a nudge forward, “Go on. Talk to her. Ask her questions like her name and what her favourite weights are to lift or whatever.”

Adora stumbles forwards, quickly turning back to glare at the magicat who’s smirking right back at her before shaking herself off and talking towards the group of newcomers, “Hi there. I’m Adora.”

The group of four turn, two guys and two girls.

The guys with bleached blonde dreadlocks grins back at Adora, “Hi Adora. It’s nice to meet you. I’m Stone. That’s Drax.” He points to the other guy that looks like he lives in a gym and then points to the other blonde, “My sister Saffyr and over there is Kendra.”

“It’s really nice to meet all of you.” Adora puts on her friendliest smiles, “So, how do you know Glimmer and Bow?”

Catra sits on a towel close to Glimmer and Bow and under the shade of a large umbrella, keeping an eye on Adora who’s chatting away with the new group of people.

“So, Catra.” Bow says holding out a cold drink, the magicat cupid graciously accepts the drink and pops the can open and takes a sip, “You’re a carpenter?”

Catra’s eyes turns to Bow and his question, “Yeah.”

“How long have you been doing that?” Bow asks as he settles on the blanket opposite so he can face her a little better.

“A while.” The magicat replies, her eyes going back to Adora who’s laughing at something someone has said, and she finds herself gritting her teeth.

He looks over and sees where Catra is looking and then back to the magicat, “How long have you known Adora?”

“What?” Catra’s eyes refocus on Bow’s upon hearing that question.

Glimmer grins, watching the exchange, “You like her.”

“No, I don’t.” Catra quickly denies, definitely a little too quickly.

“You so do.” Glimmer teases, flicking a little sand towards the magicat, “And that’s okay.”

“I’m not her type.” The magicat cupid finds herself saying.

Bow and Glimmer look at each other and then over to Adora, the former grins, “Adora does have a type. Unfortunately, that type is just really not good for her.”

Catra snorts out a laugh, “Yeah, I know.”

“You know?” Glimmer narrows her eyes at the magicat cupid, “I thought you only just met her today.”

“I did.” Catra doesn’t have to lie about this as she takes her eyes off Adora and looks between Glimmer and Bow, “She practically gravitates towards beef cake types of women, doesn’t she?”

The comment has Adora’s friends laughing out at how accurate it seems, Glimmer grins widely, “Yeah. She was moping last night about Huntara.”

“Bad break up?” Catra asks taking another sip from her can, she already knows the answer, but a little bit of conversation is better than just staring at Adora, but she can’t help herself, supressing the growl that wants to erupt from her chest when Kendra touches Adora’s arm, “So, how do you know those guys?”

“Bow knows everybody.” Glimmer says.

“I don’t know everybody, Glim.” Bow rolls his eyes good naturedly.

“You totally do, babe.” The sparkly woman leans over and kisses his cheek making him preen, “He is like friends with everyone.”

Catra nods, watching as Adora turns and walks back towards them. The magicat cupid sits up a little straighter as Adora flops herself on the towel next to her, “Hey Adora.”

“Hey.” Adora pats Catra on the thigh before readjusting herself and resting her head in Catra’s lap and yawns, “I could go for a nap.”

“You already had a nap, princess.” Catra instinctively runs her fingers through Adora’s hair, the blonde hums out happily, “I thought you were all about the beach and the water and the sand.”

The blonde snorts out a laugh, “I don’t feel like getting wet.”

“What the hell is going on?” Glimmer says watching the pair on the towel opposite them.

“What’s what?” Adora asks with her eyes closed.

“This. What the hell is this?” Glimmer gestures at them, “I thought you guys literally met.”

“We did, Sparkles.” Catra replies and then realises what she’s doing and stills her fingers, unable to come up with a reason to cover up the fact that they’ve already slept together, so she stays quiet.

“Adora!” Glimmer screeches out, jolting the blonde up, “Explain!”

“Uh…” Adora looks at Catra and then her friends.

“Are you two together?” Bow asks, putting a calming hand on Glimmer’s shoulder.

“Not exactly.” Adora replies sitting up, crossed legged and fidgeting with the bottom of her shorts.

“You two do seem awfully close.” Bow observes.

Catra shrugs nonchalantly and then pulls Adora back down so her head is back in her lap, “Yeah. We’re close.”

Adora grins, shutting her eyes once more and enjoying Catra's fingers in her hair, gently scratching at her scalp, "That feels so good."

The magicat cupid looks down, "So, how'd things go with the redhead?"

"Kendra?"

"If that's her name." Catra chuckles and then looks up to see Kendra staring daggers at her, the magicat cupid can't help but preen at that as she smirks back.

"She's nice." Adora replies with her eyes still closed, "She asked me out for dinner tomorrow."

Catra's fingers still, she clears her throat and hopes the heavy feeling in her chest does the same, "Oh yeah, what time and where?"

"No time. No where." Adora simply says, "I turned her down."

"Wait, what?" the cupid says in shock, "Why would you turn down a potential… date?"

Adora cracks and eye open and stares up at Catra, "I'm busy tomorrow night."

"Are you?" Glimmer asks just as confused, "She asked you out and you said no?"

"Yeah. I've got that thing tomorrow night." Adora shrugs with one shoulder as she shuts her eye again, "Plus I don't think I want to be dating right now anyway. It's too soon."

"Babe, Huntara and you weren't even really dating." Glimmer reminds her best friend, "She was just using you. For what, I'm not exactly sure. You guys weren't even bumping uglies."

“Glimmer!” Bow says aghast, “I did not want that image in my brain.”

“No one does.” Catra agrees.

“It’s whatever.” Adora brushes off the question, “Was whatever. I’m over it. I just don’t feel like jumping back into dating straight away.”

“Uh huh.” Glimmer quirks an eyebrow up at them, “Then what exactly are you two doing?”

“I’m literally just the carpenter.” Catra replies holding back a snicker.

“We just get along really well.” Adora says, cracking her eyes open to glare lightly at the cupid, “And besides, Catra’s fixing some stuff around the house for me.”

“I am?” Catra says, Adora nudges her with her shoulder and the magicat cupid straightens up, “Right. I am.”

“What are you fixing up around Adora’s house?” Glimmer asks suspiciously.

“The… walls.” The magicat cupid replies unsurely, “There’s some water damage that needs to get fixed. And it’s not going to be a quick job so she’s very graciously offered her couch for me to sleep on so I don’t have to rent a room for however long this job last for.”

“Your walls have water damage?” Bow asks trying to remember where or how.

Adora doesn’t bother to answer, nudging Catra to continue on the lie since it was her idea to fix the wall, the magicat cupid rolls her eyes, “She’s going to need a roofer. I think the leak is coming from the roof.”

“Wait. Really?” Adora abruptly sits up, “Is there really a leak?!”

“You seriously did not notice, princess?” Catra deadpans, “I’m surprised Sparkles and Arrows didn’t pick up the mould coming from the ceiling and then the warping in the wall in your bedroom.”

“Shit!” Adora starts to panic.

“Relax, Adora.” Catra leans back, her hands propping herself up from behind, “I’ll jump on your roof tomorrow and take a look.”

“But… the mould!” Adora’s eyes widen.

“But how did you notice it?” Adora asks.

Catra points to herself, “Magicat.”

“And… what does that mean?” Adora tilts her head at that answer.

“Enhanced… everything.” Catra simply replies, she looks over at the group still behind them as they start to make a move, “Looks like they’re going to go swimming.”

“Adora. Want to hit the waves?” Bow asks pushing himself up to his feet, “Glim’s not feeling it today.”

The blonde looks to Catra who simply shakes her head at her, “Well, we are at the beach.”

Adora turns her head and smiles, nodding, “It really does.”

“Come on then.” Bow grins, shucking off his shirt before leaning down and giving Glimmer a quick peck on the lips, “I’ll see you in a bit.”

“Have fun.” Glimmer smiles back at him.

“Are you sure you don’t want to come in? The water is really nice.” Adora says as she pulls off her shirt and Catra has to turn her head away so she doesn’t gawk at the sight of Adora in a bikini, the blonde smirks and then rolls her eyes while pushing down her shorts, “I promise it’s not as bad as you think.”

“Nope. No thanks.” Catra quickly says, still averting her eyes from Adora’s now red bikini clad body, “Me and water don’t really mix. One near drowning experience is enough.”

“Uh, okay.” Adora nods, “Keep an eye on her, would you, Glim?”

“Of course.” Glimmer replies with a nod and a shit eating grin while Adora follows Bow towards the surf. The sparkly woman tosses some sand at Catra, “What the hell was that?”

“What the hell was what?” Catra feigns ignorance, “I don’t know what you’re talking about, Sparkles.”

“You totally like her.” Glimmer teases, “And from that reaction…”

“Well, she’s hot.” Catra shrugs, “I didn’t want to be totally disrespectful and just ogle her like a creep.”

“That’s… fair.” Glimmer nods in agreement and then pats the spot next to her on the towel, “Now, come join me so we can ogle them together from a creepy distance.”

The sentence has Catra snorting out a laugh unexpectedly, but she moves regardless, settling next to Glimmer on the towel as she watches Adora and Bow play around in the water.

“Adora seems to like you.” Glimmer says out of nowhere, Catra’s ears prick up, “I’m not saying that lightly. She doesn’t… well, more like she hasn’t had a relationship since… well, I can’t even remember.”

“Why are you telling me this?” Catra asks as the other group move towards Bow and Adora, a beach ball being flung around the group, her eyes concentrated on Adora as she sees Kendra wading closer to the blonde and she furrows her brows at that.

"Just… treat her right. That's all I'm saying." Glimmer says glancing to the group in the water as well, she turns back to Catra, "And I swear to the stars, if you hurt her…"

"Woah! Steady on, Sparkles." Catra puts her hands up in surrender, "I'm have no intention to hurt her. I'm just trying to help her find true love."

"True love?" Glimmer repeats and then snaps her head over to Catra who's gotten to her feet and trudging towards the water angrily, "Okay…"

SPLASH!

"Hey!" Catra leaps into the water and shoves Kendra back with enough force to make her stumble back and fall into the water. The magicat cupid quickly pulls Adora up and checks over her, "Are you alright?"

Coughing, Adora wipes the water from her face her eyes stinging from being under the water suddenly as she sees Catra standing in front of her, in the water, "Catra?"

Catra reaches up and puts her hands on Adora's face, leaning in and doing another check when she's pulled back and thrown into the water, the cupid struggles to get back up to the surface as she's held down under.

"Catra!" Adora shouts out upon seeing Kendra and Drax standing over where her cupid was, Kendra's hands under the water, holding down the magicat cupid. Adora rushes over, "Bow! Help me!"

“Coming!” Bow shouts out only to be blocked by the brother and sister duo, keeping him away.

Kendra laughs out and looks to Adora, “You could have just said you and this animal are a thing.”

Drax joins in laughing, “Guess we’ll have bait after all.”

“ARGH!” Kendra shrieks, her arms coming up bloody as Catra thrashes around wildly with her claws, catching Drax’s face and making him howl out in pain and surprise.

Catra growls at them, “Get out of here before I draw the sharks in with your insides.”

Drax holds his bleeding face and looks to Kendra, “Fuck this. I’m getting out.”

Kendra scoffs at him, “Coward!”

Drax gives her the finger and wades out of the surf, Adora wades over to Catra, placing a hand on her shoulder, “Are you okay?”

“I will be once we get out of this water.” Catra replies without taking her eyes off Kendra, her eyes quickly glance over to Bow, “Arrows! Get out of the water. Now.”

“Okay!” Bow shouts back and quickly makes a move to exit the surf as well.

“Stop him!” Kendra barks out, the duo stare at her, red blood pooling around her as they both shake their heads and head back to shore too.

Adora watches as everyone else starts to move their way to the shore. She gently squeezes Catra’s shoulder, “Come on. We should go too.”

“What are you so scared of?” Kendra holds up her still bleeding arm, “Scared of some fish?”

“Fuck. How was I so wrong about you?” Catra grumbles under her breath before shaking her head, she turns back to the redhead, “I hate the water.”

Catra turns, letting Adora lead them back to shore.

“What the?!” Catra gets pulled back once more, Adora’s grip faltering as Kendra grabs the magicat cupid and puts her in a headlock before dropping down into the water to drown her.

Adora rushes over and tries to pull Catra out of Kendra’s grasp, “Let her go!”

Kendra just laughs, “Agree to the date with me and I will.”

With one last effort, Catra pushes herself up hard and high enough to throw Kendra off balance and get herself out of the headlock before the cupid throws a punch, landing squarely on the redhead’s jaw and practically knocking her out.

Panting out, Adora quickly comes up to the magicat’s side. Catra turns, “This was a bad target.” The words are said whilst still trying to catch her breath, “What the fuck is wrong with my powers?”

Adora frowns, “I don’t think she’s getting up.”

“Fuck me.” Catra grumbles, reaching out and grabbing Kendra by the arm and flipping her onto her back, “Of course she’s knocked out.”

“We need to get her to shore.” Adora grabs the redhead’s other arm and the pair drag her to shore, “We can’t let her drown.”

Catra nods and the pair drag her to shore.

Glimmer’s waiting on the sandy bank, phone in hand and scowling, “The police are on their way. As well as an ambulance.”

“Thanks Sparkles.” Catra drops Kendra to the sand, Adora checks the woman over.

“She’s still breathing.” Adora says, rolling Kendra onto her side as she looks around, “What happened to the others?”

“They ran.” Glimmer glares in the direction of the carpark, “I saw everything that happened from the beach.”

“I’ll be back.” Adora wraps her arms around Catra’s shoulders, “I’m just going to grab some towels.”

“Okay, princess.” Catra nods resisting the urge to shake out her fur while Adora is still so close, the cupid coughs out the seawater in her throat and the blonde’s heart sinks a little. Catra looks up, “I fucked up.”

“What?”

“I fucked up.” Catra repeats, “I don’t know why I even suggested this piece of shit.”

They both look down at Kendra’s unconscious form on the sand as the sound of sirens get closer, Adora gives the magicat cupid a reassuring smile, before leaning in and pressing her lips on Catra’s, “You scared me.”

“I know.” Catra looks down, disappointed with herself, “That’s the first time that’s ever happened to me. My targets are usually really good.”

Adora rolls her eyes and pulls Catra in for another kiss and then whispers, “You’re an idiot, cupid.” Catra’s eyes lock onto the blondes and she nods, acknowledging that statement that turns out to be very true, the blonde wraps her arms around the magicat cupid once more before repeating, “I’m just going to go grab some towels, okay?”

Catra nods.

Once Adora’s walked away, the magicat cupid shakes out the water from her clothes and fur making Glimmer scream out, “Oh, shit. Sorry. I didn’t realise you were still so close.”

Glimmer glares at Catra for a moment and then breaks out into laughter, wrapping an arm around Catra’s shoulders and grinning, “I knew it! You totally like her!”

Catra grimaces as two thoughts go through her brain.

“I love her.” the magicat cupid thinks to herself and sighs and then breathes out, “I am in so much trouble…”

Chapter End Notes

The real question is... will the next chapter be the final chapter?
I don't know... my brain hasn't figured it out yet so there's a chance it might be or might not be.

Chapter 5: That Darn Cupid

Chapter Summary

Adora and her Cupid go back to see Razz.

Chapter Notes

I've added another chapter... so, this is now the second last chapter...
Enjoy!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

“So.” Adora says as they step back into her place, “I’m assuming you’re going to be staying here. With me.”

“I cannot be, if that’s what you want.” Catra replies a little too quickly, “I’m sure the train station won’t bat an eyelid if I sleep there for a night. Pretend I missed my train… a lot.”

“Catra.” Adora turns to the cupid and gives her an incredulous look, “I’m not putting you out. And you are not sleeping at the train station.”

“I’ll be fine. I’m a cupid. What’s the worse that could happen?” The magicat cupid tries to jest but it doesn’t land as the look on Adora’s face doesn’t change, “We can’t sleep together again.”

“Why not?” Adora sighs, “Is it… me?”

“Stars no.” Catra answers confidently, “It’s definitely not you.”

“Then…?”

“I’m your cupid. You’re my client.” Catra says, “I’m supposed to be helping you find true love. And I’m fucking failing at it.”

Adora sighs again, stepping forwards and taking Catra’s trembling hands in her own, “You’re being too hard on yourself, cupid.”

“I’m really not.’ Catra shakes her head, “Red was… the worst target I’ve ever lined up. And you could have gotten really hurt and I…”

“You stopped it from happening.” Adora reigns the magicat cupid back in, “You did that.”

“I should never have let that happen in the first place.” Catra frowns down between them, “I don’t know what’s going on with me. I’m never wrong.”

Adora squeezes Catra’s hands, “Maybe I’m just an exceptional client?”

“You are.” Catra says unbridled, “And that’s the problem. You’re my client, Adora. You’re not mine.”

The blonde’s breath hitches, so soft that Catra barely catches it, but does nonetheless, “Maybe you’re having an off day?”

Catra chuckles under her breath and shakes her head again, “I don’t have off days, princess. This cupid thing doesn’t let me have off days.”

“Then I don’t know what to tell you.” Adora shrugs with a small smile, “We can try again tomorrow if that makes you feel better.”

“I don’t know if it’ll get better or worse.” Catra pulls one hand out of Adora’s and rubs the back of her head, “What if the next target I set you up with is a serial killer or something worse?”

Adora laughs a little, “What could be worse than a serial killer?”

“Someone that’ll break your heart.” The cupid replies looking into Adora’s eyes, “And I don’t mean like that muscle freak you were moping after last night. I mean someone that’ll make you fall in love with them and then take your heart and break it, making you feel like it’ll kill you. And… since it’ll be my doing, it’s going to feel ten times worse to the point that you might even…” Catra shakes her head, “I don’t even want to think about it.”

Adora sighs, shaking her head and then stepping forward and pulling Catra into a hug, "Look, what if we sleep on it for the night?"

"I just said…" Catra starts and is promptly interrupted by Adora.

"Just sleep." Adora breathes out, "We don't need to do anything more except sleep."

"Just sleep?" Catra repeats suspiciously before taking a breath in "I don't know if I can just sleep with you, princess."

"Fine. Sleep and cuddle. Final offer." Adora says and then her lips tilt up in a smile as catches the cupid's eye, "I'll keep my clothes on and yours. Promise."

The joke has Catra relaxing a bit, "Stars… you're going to kill me."

"Probably." Adora smirks before her face drops in thought, "Wait, what are you? Like… are you, alive?"

Catra shrugs, "I think so. I'm pretty much in this state when I'm on this plane."

"In this… state?" Adora stares at Catra, trying to figure her out.

"Yeah." Catra nods, "I breathe. I bleed. I use the bathroom, which honesty is really inconvenient, though it's not a regular thing. I just get urges now and then but I've gone days without needing to go."

"Uh…"

The cupid chuckles, "Yeah, I know. Going to the bathroom is really annoying."

Adora makes a face like she wants to say something, but then just shakes her head, "So, what exactly does all that mean? Not the going to the bathroom stuff, but like the bleeding and breathing stuff."

“It means, I have no idea.” Catra breathes out.

“Do you have a heartbeat?” Adora asks.

The magicat cupid steps forward, reaching out to take Adora’s hand and presses it against her chest, over where her heart should be, ignoring the little hitch in Adora’s breath at the action, “You tell me, princess.”

Adora narrows her eyes where her hand rests on Catra’s chest, swallowing down hard as she does her best to feel a heartbeat. The problem is, her own heart is beating too loud in her ears for her to feel the cupid’s.

Catra seems to catch that and smirks, “Really, Adora?”

“What?!” Adora whines out trying to pull away but held in place by Catra’s hand on top of hers.

“We had sex less than twelve hours ago where we both touched and felt a lot more of each other intimately.” Catra states with an amused look on her face, “But this.” She glances down at their hands over her chest, “This makes you freak out?”

“I am not freaking out!” Adora argues fruitlessly, a traitorous blush creeping onto her cheeks as she once again tries to pull her hand back, “Catra!”

“What? I’m not doing anything.” The magicat cupid grins as she releases Adora’s hand, “I’ve got another way you can check if my heart is beating.”

“Oh yeah? And what is… woah! Catra!” Adora yelps out as the cupid pulls Adora’s head into her chest, the blonde’s ear against her heart, “Catra!”

“Shh.” Catra gently shushes Adora, “Just listen. Feel.”

Adora stops and listens, her arms wrap around Catra’s middle.

“Well?” Catra asks, actually wanting to know.

Adora squeezes her hands on Catra’s hips before lifting her ear off and stares into the cupid’s eyes, “You don’t know if your heart is beating or not?”

“I’ve never checked. Didn’t seem like I needed to.” Catra shrugs staring right back into Adora’s eyes, “Besides, my heart has never been in question.”

“But it is now?” Adora asks, her hands still on the magicat cupid’s waist.

Catra looks up at the ceiling and sighs, “I don’t know. But this time… it feels, different.”

“How?”

Catra furrows her brows, her brain unable to articulate her feelings that are rolling around thunderously inside of her, then she feels a gentle squeeze on her fur, Adora’s hands. The cupid looks down and carefully removes Adora’s hands from her hips and just holds them in hers.

“We’ll try to find a target again tomorrow.” Catra finally mutters.

“Okay.” Adora softy replies as Catra releases her hands, “So… sleep?”

“Yeah.” Catra breathes out, staring at the old couch in Adora’s living room, “You couch looks…”

“Looks what?” Adora smirks, already knowing the answer.

“Lived in.” The cupid finishes her sentence and…

And that is not what Adora was expecting.

Lumpy? Yes.

A little dirty? Probably.

But, lived in? What does that even mean?

And before she has a chance to ask, Catra turns and walks into her bedroom, "Hey! Wait!"

The magicat cupid grumbles, stopping in her tracks in and in the middle of pulling off her shirt, "Fine. I'll take the stupid lumpy and dirty couch."

"No!" Adora stops Catra from walking out, "I didn't mean that."

Catra just stares up at her.

Sighing out, Adora grabs her hand and leads her to her drawers.

"What are you doing?" Catra tilts her head in question as she stares at the blonde's open wardrobe.

"Finding you something to sleep in." Adora replies easily before turning around and poking Catra in the chest, "You're not sleeping naked."

Catra puts her hands up, "Wasn't planning to."

"Sure, you weren't." Adora rolls her eyes, not believing that definite lie, "Then why were you about to take your shirt off?"

"Uh…" Catra says trying to think of a lie and failing, "Fine. But I'm not technically naked if I'm covered in fur."

Adora's mind drifts off and she has a dopey smile on her face.

She's brought back into reality when she hears Catra snickering in front of her.

The blonde just glares back at the cupid, another blush blooming on her cheeks, "Shut up."

That makes Catra laugh, "Whatever. Give me a shirt and some shorts, princess. I'm sure I'll fit into your clothes."

Adora turns around and looks back through her drawers, going through a few shirts and shorts, trying to find something for Catra to wear when she sees a clawed hand reach n under hers and pulls out one of each item. The blonde whines out, "Hey!"

"Too slow, human." Catra takes a few steps back, turns to face the wall and starts to get change, Adora's eyes widen as she turns back to face the drawers when she hears another snicker, "No wonder you're still single."

"Whatever." Adora scoffs.

"Are you like this after everyone you sleep with?" Catra asks amused.

"Shut up." Adora grumbles, "I don't just go out and hook up with people."

"Yep. Already knew that." Catra grins, "I'm just messing with you, princess."

"Well, stop it." Adora huffs with a pout.

"Okay." Catra agrees with a nod and then walks into the bathroom, "Got a spare toothbrush?"

"Stars… it's like you're moving in…" Adora mutters under her breath before moving towards the bathroom and retrieving a new toothbrush for Catra, "Here. There's toothpaste on the bench."

"Mouthwash?"

"Uh, yeah. There's that too." Adora replies.

"Great." Catra says walking into the bathroom and shutting the door while Adora quickly grabs her pyjamas and gets changed.

When Catra comes out, Adora's in bed, under her blankets and scrolling through her phone. The magicat cupid pulls back the blanket on the other side and gets in, "Bathroom is all yours, princess."

"Mmhm." Adora hums back, placing her phone on charge and then getting up to brush her teeth when she hears Catra muffled laughs, turning around and staring at her, "What? What's so funny?"

"Your pjs." Catra says, "I've never seen a grown woman wear unicorn pjs before."

"Stars…" Adora looks down at herself and cringes, "Shut up. These are really comfy! And I don't wear them around strangers."

"Oh, so I'm not a stranger?" Catra teases.

"You're my cupid, idiot." Adora crosses her arms over her chest and smirks, "Besides, I like my pyjamas. Also, shut up."

Catra laughs, "Are you sure you want me to shut up? I can sing again…"

"Don't you dare!" Adora points a finger at her threateningly, "You got that stupid song in my head all day."

"It's a good song." Catra shrugs, "Sounds better when it's in key. Which I refuse to do."

"Ugh." Adora groans out, but there a small grin on her face, turning back around and heading to the bathroom.

Catra turns over onto her side to see Adora staring right back at her, "Hey, Adora."

"Hm?"

“Did you feel it?” the words come out softer than Catra intended.

“Feel what?” Adora blinks slowly, tiredly.

“My heart.” Catra clarifies, “Is it… beating?”

Adora stares into Catra’s shining eyes, blinking slowly again and then smiles, a soft, “Yes.” The word escapes the blonde’s mouth breathily, “It is.”

“Oh.” Catra puts a hand over her heart and then feels it beating, not steady and strong like Adora’s or any other healthy living person on the planet, but it is beating. Even if there is a lag of a few seconds, “That’s…”

“Maybe you’re not only here for me.” Adora whispers like she’ll break whatever moment they seem to be in, “Maybe you’re a cupid looking for a love of your own.”

“It doesn’t work that way.” Catra sighs, “I’ve heard too many stories…”

“Exactly. Stories.” Adora yawns, “Stories are just that. Stories. Some are real. Some are fairy tales. Some are an exaggeration of events that may or may not have happened… Tell me how do cupid’s move on?”

“Their arrow.” Catra simply replies turning onto her back to look up at the dark ceiling, “And I fear using it. I don’t want to hurt anyone.”

Adora just breathes out. Listening as her breathing slows and her eyelids grow heavy.

“Sleep, princess.” Catra looks over and whispers, “At least one of us should.”

That makes Adora giggle, “You need to sleep too.”

“I don’t need anything. I’m a cupid.” Catra exhales, “I don’t think I can even sleep.”

“Then just close your eyes.” Adora reaches out and puts her hand over Catra’s eyes, “If you can’t sleep, then just close your eyes. And maybe rest will come of it.”

Catra puts her hand over Adora’s that’s still covering her eyes, “That feels nice.”

Adora giggles again, “I’ll keep it there for as long as you need, cupid.”

“Thanks, princess.” Catra smiles as she lets the darkness take over and she focuses on her heart’s slow beat as she feels her truly relax for the first time in a very long time.

“Rise and shine!” Catra says as she pounces on top of a still slumber Adora, jolting the blonde awake, “I’ve got an idea! One that will definitely land you true fucking love!”

Adora rubs her sleepy eyes and tries to focus on Catra, “What time is it?”

“No idea!” Catra grins.

The blonde reaches over and grabs her phone to check the time before groaning, “Catra! It’s 4am! Why are you waking me up at 4am?!”

“Those health nuts are up at stupid o’clock. So why not you?” The magicat muses with the same grin, “So, get up, princess. You’re wasting time to meet your true love.”

“True love can wait until the sun comes up.” The blonde grumbles and tries to hide under her pillow, “Find a target that doesn’t get up at stupid o’clock.”

The magicat cupid chuckles, “And here I thought you were into the health nuts.”

“Just because I like going to the gym, doesn’t mean I want to date another version of myself.” Adora replies as Catra pulls the pillow off her face, “Did you even sleep?”

“Nope.”

“Ugh. Just… lie down, cupid.” Adora looks up at the magicat with a tired look, “Or cuddle me or whatever will keep you from running around like you’ve just drunk ten cups of coffee.”

“You want to cuddle?” Catra asks with a tilt of her head.

“I wouldn’t be opposed to cuddling.” Adora turns over so her back is to Catra, “But I want to be the little spoon.”

Laughing, Catra lies back down behind Adora, scootching closer so her front is flush with Adora’s back and says, “I think this is called spooning.”

“Same thing.” Adora shrugs, “Now, let me go back to sleep and wake up at a reasonable time.”

A purr erupts from Catra’s chest unexpectedly, “Huh, that’s weird.”

“What is? Your purr?” Adora hugs the magicat cupid’s arm that’s draped over her.

“No. Well, yes.” Catra says, “I haven’t purred this much in a long time.”

“Huh.” Adora hums and then smiles to herself as she says, “Guess it must be because I’m purrfect.”

“Stars…” Adora laughs, her body shaking in Catra’s hold, “You’re such a dork.”

“You love me.” Adora says offhandedly, like it’s something that can just be said, “Sucks to be you.”

Catra stills at those words, her body frozen and not sure what to do as her purr stutters to a stop while Adora pushes herself back more.

The blonde grunts out confused, “What happened to your purr?”

“What did you say?” The magicat cupid whispers into Adora’s hair.

“What happened to your purr? It just stopped.” Adora murmurs out, wiggling herself further into Catra’s body, rubbing her cheek against the cupid arm she’s snuggling against and that seems to get Catra’s purr to start up again. The blonde giggles, “There it is.”

“Yeah… there it is.” Catra breathes out, Adora’s words still rolling around in her brain as she shuts her eyes and tries to refocus on finding Adora’s true love.

“Are you… are you making breakfast?” Adora steps out of her bedroom and into her kitchen to find the magicat cupid at the stovetop, hovering over a fry pan with something sizzling inside.

“Yeah.” Catra replies not turning around, “You really need to go grocery shopping, princess. It’s fucking sad in your fridge.”

Adora huffs out with a pout and crosses her arms over her chest, “It is not sad.”

“No. It’s not sad.” Catra repeats, “It’s fucking sad.”

“Hey! You’re supposed to be nice to me.” Adora whines out as she stands next to Catra at the stovetop, “I’m not going to find my true love if you’re mean to me first thing in the morning.”

The magicat cupid shrugs, “It’d be a great icebreaker in my opinion.”

Adora nudges Catra with her shoulder playfully, “Is there anything you want me to do?”

“Yeah.”

“What is it?” The blonde asks, ready to tackle anything, like juice or toast.

Catra turns her head and smirks at Adora, “Go sit your ass down, princess. Get out of my kitchen.”

“It’s my kitchen.” Adora chuckles as the magicat cupid points the spatula are her, “But, fine. Whatever. I can get us juice.”

“You don’t have juice.” Catra chuckles, “And whatever was juice, is probably fermented to the point of toxic.”

Adora furrows her brows, “I only just bought that juice…”

“It expired a month ago.” Catra deadpans as she goes back to the pan, “Grab some plates if you want to be helpful.”

Just to prove a point, Adora goes to her fridge and opens it.

“Stars…” the blonde looks into her sparse looking fridge, reaching out to the juice and picking it up. What was once orange juice has turned a not so good brown colour, “Ew… Guess I better get rid of this…”

Catra shakes her head in amusement, “Whatever you do, don’t open it in here.”

“Uh, I wasn’t going to.” Adora says, even though she totally was going to, instead she puts it on the countertop for later, “Plates, right?”

Adora silently grabs two plates and sets them down on the benchtop, "I think I have tea or coffee or something."

"I saw some tea in that cupboard up there." Catra gestures to the shelf above, "Smelled alright still."

Nodding, Adora grabs two tea bags and dumps them into a pair of mismatched mugs before filling up her kettle and turning it on to heat up.

"Milk?" Adora asks.

"You don't have milk in your fridge." Catra points out and Adora makes a humming noise of acknowledgement, "Plain tea is fine."

"Okay." Adora sighs, "Sorry. My kitchen and fridge are kind of… sad."

Catra shrugs, "It's fine, princess. Besides it's a good glimpse into what domestic life with you would be."

Adora laughs at that, "Better pick up my game, huh?"

"I think you just need to find someone who'll love you when you're like this and not try to better you. Changing people is hard and most times people just revert back to how they were after a while. Fact of life." Catra simply says, the sincerity in her tone makes her ears twitch and then she clears her throat, "Which is exactly what we'll be doing after breakfast, not the changing you bit, just the true love bit that'll love you exactly the way you are."

"Mm." Adora just hums back again as the kettle clicks off an Adora goes to fill the two mugs with hot water, she looks over at Catra plating up the eggs and bacon, a soft smile appears on her lips, "No one's made me breakfast before. Well, not in my own home for that matter."

“And that’s also really fucking sad, princess.” Catra replies with a mischievous look on her face, “Because you deserve that. Every day.”

“No wonder you’re a cupid.” Adora turns away with a blush on her cheeks, “I’ll put our drinks on the table.”

“Actually…” Catra says as she picks up the two plates and brings them to the dining table, setting them down, “I think first thing we need to do is get you some groceries. And maybe another blanket from Razz’s.”

“Because you’ve got nothing in your fridge or cupboards. Not even toast.” Catra replies as she digs into breakfast.

“No. I wasn’t talking about groceries.” Adora says with a laugh, “I know I need to go get supplies. I just mean, why do we need to go back to Razz’s?”

“Pie. Duh.” Catra replies with a grin.

“Okay.” Adora quickly agrees, “I’ll drive.”

“Oh, Bow’s got my car. I’ll just ask him to bring it back so I can do some shopping.” Adora gets up from her chair and hastily goes to retrieve her phone, “Pretty sure he’s got the day off today too.”

“Sure.” Adora shovels the rest of her food into her mouth and grins with chipmunk cheeks.

The magicat cupid nearly spits out her food as she tries not to laugh, barely able to hold it in before she can swallow, “Stars… you’re such an idiot.”

Adora just smiles back at her again, this time without the food in her cheeks.

Adora pulls up to Bow’s place, he gets out and leans on the driver’s open window, “Thanks for lending me your car, Adora.”

“Of course, Bow.” Adora smiles back as he pats her on the shoulder, “Just let me know if you need it again. I barely use it anyway.”

“You got it.” Bow waves as he steps back, “It was nice to see you again, Catra!”

Catra nods back to him from the passenger’s seat, “Likewise.”

“Bye!” Bow waves again to the pair as Adora waves back before pulling back onto the road. She turns to Catra, “So, where is this place again?”

The magicat cupid shrugs, “I only remember it from public transport.”

“Razz’s something something?” Catra rattles off.

“What are you doing?” Catra asks looking over at the blonde tapping away on her phone, “Stars, that thing is like a little computer.”

Adora looks up amused, “Yeah, it pretty much is.”

“Huh.” Catra nods, “I remember the old brick phones back in the day…”

“Wow… you really are old.” Adora chuckles to herself, “How does time move as a cupid? You obviously don’t age…”

“Not fast enough.” Catra says looking out the window, “I guess it’s been a long while since I’ve been here.”

“Ah, I think I got it.” Adora says triumphantly and setting her phone into the cradle and plugging in it so she can use the maps, “Razz’s Nic Nacs!”

Catra turns her head and grins, “Yeah, that sounds about right. How far is it?”

“A lot quicker than a bus and train.” Adora teases and watches as Catra roll her eyes with a smile as the magicat cupid goes back to looking out the window, she pulls back onto the road once more and grips and ungrips the steering wheel, a question on her mind as she does.

Catra catches on, “You have a question?”

“Uhm…” Adora hums to herself in thought before she decides to bite the bullet and ask the question anyways, “You said that I had my heart broken. When I, when I went away?”

“Yeah?”

“Well, see… I don’t remember that.” Adora glances over at the magicat, “And you said your files said that.”

“It did.” Catra frowns.

“I just, don’t remember that memory is all I’m saying.” Adora racks her brain over it, “Because I’d remember something like that. Wouldn’t I?”

“Pfft! I would hope so.” Catra snorts out and then tilts her head in thought, “Though, broken hearts, especially the first one, usually stays with you for a long while, sometimes forever.”

“Yeah! That’s what I mean!” Adora tries to point out, “I don’t think I’ve ever really been in love.”

“Been what?”

Catra thinks for a moment and then says, “Compromised.”

“Compromised?” Adora repeats, “How does something like that even happen?”

“I have no idea.” Catra scratches her ear, it flicks back up and Adora has to hold back a coo, “You’re the first client I’ve had that hasn’t quite panned out like the paperwork says.”

“Huh.” Adora hums, “Have you slept with any of your other clients?”

“Clients? No.” Catra admits, “But I have hooked up when my client was, uh, busy. And before I got blinked out. Lucky I’ve managed to get out before disappearing for real.”

Adora takes that in, there’s a twang of jealousy in her gut, she takes a breath in, “So… was I just someone you hooked up with?”

“Stars no.” Catra replies confidently, “And that’s why we can’t do it again. I overstepped and I must’ve used my powers or something on you.”

The blonde snorts out a laugh, “You’re such an idiot.”

Catra rolls her eyes, “Yeah, an idiot that could have gotten you really hurt with that last bad target.”

“Okay, enough of that.” Adora chastises, “You can’t change the past. But you can learn from it.”

“That’s the thing. I don’t know how to learn from it.” The magicat cupid sighs, “Everything seemed to line right up, the feel was right but then… it wasn’t.”

“And you stopped it from getting worse.” Adora points out, “So quit blaming yourself and move on.”

“I’m sure you’ll figure it out, cupid.” Adora says confidently, “If there’s someone that can fix my love life, I’m sure it’d be the person who sang offkey at me until I gave in.”

“I could sing again…” Catra jokes.

“Don’t you dare.” Adora glares lightly at the cupid before laughing, “Hey, can you find that song you were singing so I can listen to what it actually sounds like before you fully butchered it?”

“As much as I would love to help you, I have no idea how to do that.” Catra says, “I haven’t seen any music shops since blipping back onto this plane. Also, what happened to all the bookshops?”

“Most are online now.” Adora replies with a chuckle, “Stars, you really are old.”

Catra sighs, “I remember watching live performances of small local bands in the local bookstore or music shop. Now those were the days.”

“They still do that. Just… not really bookshops or music stores.” Adora says, “Some performers do street stuff and others do this thing called a tiny desk.”

“Sounds stupid.” Catra snarks.

“It’s not really a tiny desk, idiot.” Adora says with a roll of her eyes, “It’s just what it’s called.”

“Huh.”

“I’ll show you some clips later. Once we park up.” Adora promises, “As well as search for that song.”

“Okay.” Catra smiles back.

Once parked up, Adora grabs her phone and starts to tap on it furiously before handing it over to Catra, “Watch.”

The magicat cupid gingerly takes the offered device and presses the play button on the video, her ears perking up straight away, “How did you even find this?”

“I looked up some of the lyrics you sang. It was pretty easy.” Adora shrugs like it’s nothing, her voice then changes to one of nervousness, “Was it the right one? I wasn’t like, a hundred percent sure…”

“Yep. It’s the right one.” Catra grins, “Stars, I remember actually being there when he played Piano man randomly, on a Saturday night.” The magicat cupid chuckles to herself, “Though, this was one of my favourite songs when I was around last.”

“Oh yeah?”

"Yeah." Catra smiles back reminiscing, "And you see the world in blinding colour."

Adora just stares back at the cupid, waiting for some kind of elaboration.

"That's just the way I picture it when my clients find their true love." Catra unbuckles her seatbelt and hands it back to Adora, "Especially since I'm sort of colourblind."

"Wait, really?" Adora says surprised, "But you can see some colours?"

"Yeah, just not in the same way you see them." Catra replies as she hands the phone back to Adora, "I can see blue, yellow and green. But a lot of the other colours just look grey or brown to me."

"Oh."

"But it just means that I can see better in the dark." Catra shrugs, "Guess it's not a bad trade off."

"You really haven't been in love, have you?" Adora asks softly, pushing back a few strands of hair behind her ear.

"I'm… I'm not sure." Catra looks away, "But this isn't about me. I'm here for you."

"Okay." Adora nods, letting the conversation go for now, "So, we're here."

"Yeah." Catra looks out the front windscreen and smiles up at the sign over Razz's shop, "Come on, it's pie time."

"Ah! You're back! I knew you two would figure it out!" Razz cheers out and then drops that look of elation for one of disappointment when Catra just stares back, "Pie?"

“Yeah.” Catra says looking at Razz confused, “Figure what out?”

“She’s right, you know.” Razz simply says to the cupid before turning around and going further back into her shop.

“That, that was weird. Even for her.” Catra simply says while Adora pretends to look around the shop at whatever is on display, the magicat reaches out for the blonde’s hand, not quite touching but just there, “It’s in the back. She only does the pie in the back. It’s a bit of a secret.”

“Mysterious.” Adora laughs at her own comment, before finding no hesitation in putting her hand in the cupid’s, “Lead the way, cupid.”

Catra smiles without looking back, but she squeezes Adora’s hand as she guides them towards the back.

“Over here, dearies!” Razz calls out to the pair, “Pie is getting cold!”

“She just does.” Catra shrugs, “And she always knows when I’m here.”

“Did you know her before?” Adora asks softly, Razz’s back turned to them, “Like when she was younger?”

“She’s always looked the same to me.” Catra replies as she looks over to the other woman getting the pie ready, “Just, the same Razz.”

“Sit, dearies.” Razz orders the pair to take a seat at the small tables situated within the mess in the back.

The pair take a seat across from each other as Razz puts a plate of pie in front of each of them with two spoons, Catra leans forwards and smiles, “Trust me. It’ll be the best pie you’ve ever had.”

“Eat!” Razz says startling the pair apart, “Before it gets cold!”

The old woman swiftly turns and walks back to the front of her shop, leaving the pair to it.

Catra cuts off a piece of her pie with her spoon and then holds it up to Adora, “Here. Try it.”

Adora raises an eyebrow at the magicat cupid, “We’ve got the same pie, Catra.”

“No. We really don’t.” Catra grins, gesturing with her eyebrows for Adora go try it, “Trust me. It’s good.”

Taking a breath in, Adora leans forward and lets Catra feed her the pie, whispering out a soft, “Oh my stars…”

The magicat watches as the blonde’s eyes close and she looks like she’s having a moment and the cupid asks, “Do you want me to leave you and the pie alone for a minute?” Catra asks amused at the blonde’s reaction, “You look like you just had an orgasm.”

“The best kind there is.” Adora moans out filthily, “A food-gasm.”

Catra laughs using the same spoon she fed Adora with to cut off another bit for herself, “I know.”

Adora just smiles back at the magicat cupid, “Do you want to try mine?”

“Why don’t you try yours first before I make a comment that might alter your opinion.” Catra suggests.

“Or…” Adora hums out, pretending to think.

“Or?” Catra takes another bite of her pie, savouring the flavour.

Adora leans in again, pushing her plate towards the middle and then quirks and eyebrow up at the cupid, “Or… you could feed me?”

Catra’s eyes widen and she just stares back at Adora, “You. You want me to feed you?”

Adora nods, the bravado slipping slightly as a blush colours her cheeks, “I mean, if you want to…”

“Sure.” Catra quickly replies, “Spoon?”

“Yours will do just fine.” Adora simply says as she rests her chin on her hand, elbow propped on the table as she just stares back at Catra, a playful challenge in her eyes, “Well?”

“I’m getting there.” The cupid says pulling Adora’s plate towards her so it’s easier to manage, “Patience, princess.”

Adora just watches Catra’s movements.

With the spoon now filled with pie, the cupid holds it up towards Adora, “Happy now?”

The blonde just grins as she leans forward, eyes closed and Catra can’t help herself.

Pulling the spoon away and leaning forwards instead.

Adora’s hums happily as she feels Catra’s lips against hers.

The magicat cupid pulls back, “Sorry. Fuck, I shouldn’t have… mmphf!”

Adora pulls Catra back in, the spoon clattering onto the plate as it’s forgotten about when Adora’s hand reaches up and cups the cupid's cheek, they break apart for breath but still close enough to feel each others breath, "You're such an idiot."

"I've been told." Catra whispers back as a purr stutters up in her chest, "My… my arrow."

"Hm… what?" Adora giggles, "Your arrow?"

"I can feel it." The magicat cupid reaches down towards where her arrow hides, her fingers lightly grazing it.

"Oh, like your arrow." Adora repeats realising Catra actually means her arrow.

A smirk comes across Catra's lips, "Stars… get your head out of the gutter, princess."

Adora blushes at being caught out with her not so subtle thoughts, "I wasn't…"

"Oh, you totally were." Catra teases and then laughs, "You already know I don't have one of those. Though… if that's what you're interested in…"

"Stars, please stop…" Adora groans out embarrassed and then tries to change the subject, "So, your arrow?"

"Don't change the subject, Adora." The magicat cupid says with a shit eating grin, "Is that what you're interested in? It'd be good to know. For research purposes…"

"Ugh!" Adora groans out again, "Can we please move on?"

"No." Catra shakes her head defiantly, "Answer my question first."

Swallowing down hard, the blush on Adora's cheeks grows redder, "Why do you even need to know that?"

Catra shrugs, "I'd like to know what makes you… feel good."

"Why?" Adora repeats, pushing down the strange feeling inside.

“Just… research.” The cupid replies.

“Will you tell me about your arrow?” Adora tries instead.

“Yes.”

Catra just stares at Adora, the blonde shuffling a little in her seat as she mulls over whether to answer or not.

Eventually, the blonde throws her head back and murmurs something under her breath.

Catra leans in, “Did you say something, princess?”

Adora narrows her eyes at the cupid, “Fine. Yes. Maybe. I don’t know.”

“Cool.” Catra simply says, “My arrow just felt a little funky is all. It’s never done that before.”

“Felt funky how?” Adora asks.

“Like a buzzy feeling.” Catra shrugs, her fingers brushing against it once more, “It only seems to happen around you.”

“Oh. That’s…” Adora starts to say when Razz appears again, broom in hand and the blonde quickly turns to the woman, “This pie is amazing.”

“Thank you, dearie.” Razz smiles at Adora before lifting her broom up and whacking it against Catra’s legs, “Cupid. What are you doing?”

“Eating pie?” Catra replies confused.

Razz shakes her head, “I knew cupids weren’t the brightest, but I had high hopes for you.”

“Uh…” the magicat cupid just looks at Razz bewildered, “What?”

“When you figure this out, I’ll bake you and Adora a cake. Maybe three tier. I have the figurines ready to go too.” Razz says as she puts the broom down, “Let me wrap those up and you can get on your ways.”

“Are you kicking me out, Razz?” Catra tilts her head in question, “Did I do something wrong?”

Razz sighs, shaking her head, “No, young one. But I need you to figure this out first.”

“Figure what out?” Catra asks fruitlessly, knowing once Razz has made up her mind, that was it, “But yeah, I guess we’ll get them to go.”

“Great!” Razz claps her hands together and then goes to retrieve a container, “Be right back, dearies.”

Catra turns to Adora, “Well, that was weird.”

Adora just smiles back trying not to shake her head and stating the obvious that her cupid seems to be missing.

“I guess we’ll try to find a target when we go get you some groceries.” Catra thinks out loud, completely missing the hints Razz was giving, “It’s not the most romantic way, but you never know. It might work.”

“Sure.” Adora simply says as they wait for Razz to come back.

Chapter 6: To Live!

Chapter Summary

They go shopping.

Catra walks around the supermarket darting in and out of aisles like a kid on a sugar high, her eyes wide and she seems to want to touch everything on the shelves.

Adora giggles at the sight of the magicat cupid so excited and also so intrigued by the items on the shelf and on display.

“Catra. Slow down.” Adora tries to sound serious, but she can’t help the smile that comes over her face when the magicat looks at her while holding a box of cereal in her hands.

The magicat cupid walks back to Adora and the trolley the blonde is pushing and just grins, “I haven’t had these in such a long time.”

Looking at the box of cereal, Adora chuckles under her breath, taking the box out of Catra’s hand and drops it into the trolley, “You better be brushing those teeth of yours. That box is nothing but sugary badness.”

“I think you mean sugary goodness, princess.” Catra corrects and then grins, “This place is huge compared to the shops I used to go to.”

“Yeah, I guess you’re right.” Adora shrugs, “I don’t really know any better.”

“So, what’s next on your list?” Catra asks as she looks into Adora’s fairly empty trolly, “You’ve barely got anything except for bananas.

You’re not really a monkey, are you?”

Adora snorts out a laugh and shoves Catra back, “If anyone is closely related to a monkey, it’d definitely be you with the way you climb everything.”

The magicat cupid just grins back, “You see anyone in here that takes your fancy, princess?”

Adora stares at Catra for a moment, sighs and then looks around at the other shoppers then shakes her head, “No. It’s hopeless, cupid. Guess I’m just going to die alone.”

“You wouldn’t die alone, princess.” Catra replies.

“And why would you say that?” the blonde pushes her trolley into the next aisle and starts going through the carton of eggs, “I’m never going to find true love, Catra. It’s just not in the stars for me.”

“Wait, what?” Adora turns her head so quickly she nearly drops the carton of eggs in her hand.

Catra rubs the back of her neck, “Did I just say that out loud?”

Adora just stares at her and then nods, “Yeah. You love me?”

“Yes…?” The cupid breathes out, “I don’t know what it is, but it definitely feels like it.”

Adora quickly puts the carton back on the shelf, just in case she accidentally drops it, “I still don’t understand how you can be a cupid but not know what love is.”

“Well, you don’t either.” Catra points out, “Not true love.”

“I do, actually.” Adora says biting her bottom lip.

“My files didn’t…” Catra starts to say and then remembers her files are completely wrong, “I don’t know what love is for myself. But I can see it in other people. The way they look at someone, the way they act around them, the way that they put the other person before themselves… what? Why are you looking at me like that?”

Adora just smiles softly back at Catra, “Come on, that’s just a little too deep of a talk for a supermarket trip.”

Catra chuckles, “I guess so.”

Adora starts to push the cart again and realises that Catra isn’t following, “Catra?”

The magicat cupid eventually catches up and gently places the carton of eggs into the trolley, “I swapped out the cracked ones.”

“Oh, thanks.” Adora says bumping the magicat cupid playfully on the shoulder, “Bread?”

“Yeah.” Catra nods, “Lead the way, princess.”

The blonde grins as they go around and collect all the groceries and then head to the checkout area to pay.

“So… you bag it yourself?” Catra stares at the self-pay checkouts that they are waiting to use, confused, “Where are all the checkout chicks?”

Adora chuckles, “Didn’t they have these machines the last time you were here?”

“I mean, yeah.” Catra nods, “Though it wasn’t this… popular.”

“Huh, you’re going to really hate fast food joints...” A counter opens up and Adora pushes the trolley towards it, handing Catra the reusable bags, “You bag. I scan.”

“This is putting people out of the job.” Catra mutters as she starts to bag the items Adora is scanning and then handing over to her, “Though… I guess buying embarrassing products would be helpful…”

Adora pauses her scanning, “What kind of embarrassing products are you referring to cupid?”

Catra looks around conspiratorially before whispering into Adora’s ear, “That aisle where they keep all the medicines and sports cream also has like… sex stuff…”

Adora just stares back at Catra blankly before she breaks out in laughter, “Stars, Catra… you really are old school.”

The magicat cupid just stares back at Adora unimpressed that what she said didn’t seem to have any effect, Catra scratches behind her left ear, “Is sex stuff in this day and age like a normal thing to just talk about in public?”

“I think people are little less sensitive than before.” Adora says as she starts to scan their items again, “Pretty sure most people have some sort of sex toy at home now that you can pretty much order anything online.”

“Huh.” Catra says taking the scanned box of cereal and bagging it, “What about you?”

“What about me?” Adora simple repeats back not looking at Catra as she puts her bananas on top of the inbuilt scales and then hold it out to Catra.

The magicat cupid takes the bananas and puts them in the bag, “Have you ordered any sex toys online?”

A few other shoppers turn their head to the pair and Adora face heats up, the blonde instantly noticing their attention, “Can we not talk about this here?”

“Catra…” Adora groans out as she hands over a tube of toothpaste just scanned.

“What? What did I say?” Catra smirks as Adora glares at her before rolling her eyes.

“You’re a menace.” Adora says as she takes her card out and tap it on the card reader to pay for her groceries, “You can put everything back into the trolley so we can wheel it out.”

“Sure thing, princess.” Catra nods and starts to move the bags back into the trolley, the magicat looks around and furrows her brows, “Does no one use cash anymore?”

“Doesn’t that mean you get stung with more surcharges?” Catra starts to push the trolley, following behind Adora, “Seems kind dodgy to me.”

“I guess.” Adora tucks her receipt into her back pocket as they exit the supermarket.

As the automatic doors open, Catra’s ears flick forward at the sounds of something strange, and without a second thought, she’s grabbed Adora and flung them both out of the way when someone crashes right through the doors they were exiting.

CRASH!

Broken glass and an old beige sedan rammed straight through the automatic doors and only stopping at the row of self-checkout machines, people shouting and screaming as chaos descends.

Catra's got her eyes squeezed shut as she holds Adora down to the floor, her body tense as she braces for something more.

Adora's eyes open and her breathing slows as she sees and feels her cupid wrapped her around her like a safety blanket against the world.

"Catra?" Adora manages to say, not realising the wind had been taken out of her by the impact of being thrown to the ground, she can't help the cough that comes out as she takes in a breath tainted by dust and smoke.

Catra eyes open, she looks around first, checking their surrounding before looking down at Adora and quickly assessing the blonde before asking, "Are you hurt?"

"Just winded." Adora replies with a wry smile, "Are you okay? What happened?"

"I'm fine. I'm a cupid. I'm not too sure what happened." Catra slowly pushes herself up and gets off Adora, holding her hand out, "Can you stand?"

"I think so." Adora takes the offered hand lets Catra pull her up to her feet, her eyes dart around the mess of checkout area, "Stars…"

Catra runs her hands over Adora's sides and back, checking over her hands after and says, "You're not bleeding."

Adora tilts her head to the side at the cupid, "What?"

"You're okay." Catra says with a nod before turning around when the sounds of screaming startles the pair, "I think there's someone in the car still."

"There's smoke coming out of it." Adora observes as they watch on as people run out while people run in to steal whatever they can from inside.

“Bunch of grubs.” Catra mutters, “Come on. There’s someone in the car still.”

Adora nods as she follows Catra towards the car, the magicat cupid carefully climbing around the mess and then looks inside, she turns to Adora, “There are people in here.”

“Stars…” Adora starts to move to where Catra is, but the magicat cupid holds her hand up to stop her, “What?”

“Call the emergency services.” Catra simply says, “Then take as many people out of here as you can. Go.”

“What? No!” Adora argues, “What about you?”

“I’m a cupid.” Catra replies, “My life doesn’t really matter in the grand scheme of things.”

Adora’s jaw drops upon hearing those words, “But…”

“No.” Catra says more sternly, “Call the ambos, firies, cops, whoever to get down here to help, now! You’re wasting time and more of these idiots coming inside to loot are going to die too if you don’t hurry, princess.”

Adora huffs out, pulling out her phone and dialling the emergency services, while Catra punches at the car window.

CRASH!

Adora’s turns her head quickly to see Catra’s managed to punch the glass out of the passenger’s front window, the magicat cupid reaches inside and unlocks the door so she can pull it open while Adora talks to the services on the phone.

“Hey.” Catra climbs inside the now smoking vehicle where an old man in the driver’s seat is slumped over the wheel while the two small children in the backseat look like they are going in and out of consciousness.

She unbuckles the old man’s seatbelt first and checks he’s still breathing, which he is, just knocked himself out when his head hit the steering wheel. The magicat cupid crawls through the middle of the front seats and looks over the two children at the back, a boy and a girl nearly the same age stare back dazed at her.

Catra tries to smile reassuringly at them, reaching out undo their booster seatbelts, “Hey, I’m going to get you guys out of here.”

“Grampy.” The little girl says pointing the old man in front, “Grampy!”

“I’ll get him too.” Catra glances over to him and then reaches for the door handle at the back and tries to open it, but they won’t, “Child locks? Really?”

She reaches over and pulls them the boy out first, he seems a lot less resistant than the little girl, Catra shuffles herself back between the front seats and looks around for Adora, “Hey! Princess! Come grab little Timmy here!”

“Not Timmy.” The little boy grumbles and Catra grins back at him.

“You’re a little dude. You’re a Timmy for now.” Catra simply says as Adora rushes over with her arms out, “Here. I’ve got little Tiffany to grab too.”

“I’m Jessica!” The little girls corrects loudly and Catra snorts out a laugh despite the situation and then looks back at Adora, “I’ll be right back. Once she’s out, I need someone to help with Grampy over here.”

Adora nods as she watches Catra climb into the backseat once more to retrieve the little girl.

Catra stops just before reaching out for little Jessica, "Hey, Jessica. Let's get you out of here."

Surprisingly, the little girl leaps into Catra's arms, wrapping her arms around the magicat's neck, "Grampy…"

"Grampy will be fine." Catra whispers back reassuringly as the smoke starts to get thicker and she holds back the cough in her throat, "Adora's going to look after you, okay? And then I'll be right out with Grampy."

Jessica nods and then starts to cough as Catra speeds up getting her out of the car.

"Catra! Hurry!" Adora's eyes widen when she sees a spark try to catch onto the fumes, little Timmy still in her arms.

"Here. Take her." Catra transfers Jessica into Adora's arms, she pats the little girl on the head, "Adora's going to take good care of you."

"Catra…" Adora jostles the two children in her arms, "There's not enough time."

"All I've got is time, princess." Catra replies, "You however, fleshy and human, do not. Now, get out of here before things get worse."

And before Adora can argue the small spark turns into a flame and those flames grows exponentially bigger in mere seconds that she takes a few steps back. Catra's name caught in her throat as she watches her cupid dive back into car to retrieve the old man.

The smoke and the fumes getting too much, Adora is forced outside as the children coughing gets worse, "Sorry! Sorry!" the blonde continues to apologise until they are outside and can breathe again, "The ambulance will be here soon."

“Grampy!” Jessica cries out, reaching her arm back towards the now burning building.

“It’s okay. She’ll get him.” Adora says, more so for herself than the children as she watches with bated breath for her cupid to come out.

“Hey, Grampy. Wake up, old man.” Catra shakes him, hoping that he’ll regain consciousness but doesn’t and she sighs, reaching over him to try and open his door for an easier removal, but it’s jammed shut, “Fuck.”

Her ears twitch around her head at footsteps running and she turns around and growls out to one of the thieving hooded looters, “Hey! You!”

They come to screeching stop, staring back at her stunned, “Fuck no.” they say and run back for more stuff.

“Fucking grubs.” Catra chastises and realises she’s not going to get any help, “Alright, old man.”

The magicat cupid grabs the man from just under his armpits and drags him towards the middle console, he’s nothing but deadweight as she struggles to move him.

Catra manages to get him into the passenger’s seat, the smoke getting thicker and the heat rising now the fire has gotten out of control, lapping up at the windscreen and threatening to come in. She pulls her shirt over her nose and mouth and grumbles, “Where the fuck are the firies?!”

Her ears pick up the faint sounds of sirens coming closer, still too far to help right now as she grunts and pulls the old man over her shoulder and stumbles backwards, managing to steady herself just.

“Catra!” she can hear her name being called out as her vision is completely greyed out and she becomes turned around.

Then she hears Adora’s voice again, “Catra!”

Coughing out, she manages a strangled call back, “Adora… where…”

“Catra! Where are you?!” Adora shouts out, her voice still sounds muffled in the magicat cupid’s ears, “Catra!”

“A-Ador…” The cupid coughs, stumbling forward a few steps, “Adora!”

She can still hear Adora’s voice from the outside, “Catra! Catra!”

The magicat fights the urge to keel over into a coughing fit, instead she feels her arrow within her start to pull, pulls her forward.

Pulls her towards Adora’s voice.

Pulls her toward Adora.

“Over there!” Adora shouts out as a few people in yellow fire fighting gear rush over to the magicat, “Catra!”

The old man is quickly taken off her shoulder and then she feels someone prop her up from under her own arms, the magicat cupid leans forwards and starts to cough violently.

“I’ve got you!” Catra turns her head, her eyes stinging from the smoke as she blinks painfully at Adora, “Come on! We need to get you help!”

Catra has the audacity to laugh, coughing between breaths and wheezing, “I don’t need help… I’m a cupid.”

“You’re my cupid and you need help.” Adora huffs out as she practically tugs Catra forward, “And don’t you dare argue with me.”

“Whatever you want, princess.” Catra starts to feel herself grow more tired by the second until the world finally goes black.

She doesn’t feel when the fire turns into a huge fireball or when she’s Adora’s tears fall onto her face.

The magicat cupid blinks her eyes open.

There’s nothing but darkness.

And her thoughts instantly go into panic mode.

She failed.

She never found Adora’s true love.

She never found her own true love.

Now she’s here.

In a world of darkness.

And…

Wait, why does that smell like pie and coffee?

She sits up abruptly, rubbing at her eyes and finding a cloth covering her eyes as she tugs it up and off her face.

Then the smell hits her.

Not just a smell.

A scent.

A very familiar scent.

Adora’s scent.

She’s back in Adora’s bed.

But…

Where’s the blonde?

The door opens with a creak and Catra’s head turns to see who it is when the light shines inside.

But it’s not Adora.

No, definitely not.

Not with the wild hair and large glasses and… is that a broom?

“Razz?” Catra rasps out and then rubs her head, “The smoke really got to me…”

“Hello little one.” Razz says as she sits on the edge of the bed.

“Uh, hi Razz.” Catra looks up at her confused, “What are you doing here?”

“I brought pie.” She simply says.

“You. You brought pie?” Catra repeats even more confused.

“Yes.” Razz nods, “You need pie.”

“O-kay…” Catra just stares at her, “Where’s Adora?”

“She’ll be here soon, dearie.” Razz pats the magicat on the hand and then gets up to leave, “Pie is for both of you.”

“Thanks, Razz.” Catra manages to say before the old woman is gone again.

The magicat sits in the dark again once Razz shuts the door.

Her arrow thrumming against her leg as she reaches down and grazes it with her fingers.

And then the door opens again.

Adora.

The blonde steps inside and switches on the lights and stares at the cupid sitting up in her bed for a moment before a look of relief washes over her features and she literally leaps into the magicat cupid's arms, "I was so worried!" Adora's voice cracks and then she slaps Catra on the shoulder hard, angry, "Don't you dare do that again!"

"What? Save some kids and their grampy?" Catra asks rubbing her arm.

"No." Adora tackles Catra back onto her back, the blonde boxing the magicat cupid under her body, "Your life matters too. You matter!"

"I really don't…" Catra starts to say as Adora growls at her, and she stops the next words from coming out.

"You're my cupid, stupid!" Adora practically sobs as her body drops down onto Catra's, "Why can't you see that?!"

"I am your cupid." Catra brings her arms up and wraps them around Adora, the thrumming of her arrow on her leg getting stronger, "I'm your cupid, princess."

"I know. "Adora huffs out.

"No, you don't get it." Catra whispers out, shaking her head and rubbing her cheek against Adora's, "I'm your cupid."

Adora huffs out again, not looking at the magicat.

“Adora?” Catra’s voice shaky from the realisation she should have known from the start.

The blonde doesn’t budge or move.

“Adora?” Catra tries again, her hands now running up and down the blonde’s sides soothingly, “I’m your cupid…”

“You’ve already said that.” Adora words muffled into Catra’s shoulder.

“Now who’s stupid?” Catra grumbles as Adora nips her on the shoulder, “Ow! Okay… yeah, I totally deserved that…”

Adora finally pulls herself up and glares down at the magicat cupid, “I hate you.”

“No, you don’t.” Catra reaches up and cups Adora’s wet cheek.

“Yes, I do.” The blonde pouts out leaning into Catra’s hand.

“You do?”

“I love you, Adora.” Catra repeats and her arrow thrums harder until her fingers finally grasp around the object that’s become solid in her hands, “And this…” she brings up the golden arrow to Adora, “Is for you. My… my true love.”

Adora’s eyes narrow on the gold arrow in front of her, “What?”

“My arrow.” Catra says, “I’m ready.”

Adora gingerly takes the arrow, the weight of it heavier than she thought it’d be, “Ready for…?”

“Stab me with it, princess.” Catra says nonchalantly, “And then we can have pie.”

“I am not stabbing you!” Adora almost shouts, “Are you crazy?!”

“But, how do you know?” Adora breathes out, “You said it was only rumours. What if you like… blow up or straight up die?! Or I never get to see you again.”

“I won’t happen, I’m sure of it.” Catra says calmly.

“How can you be so sure?” Adora gulps down the fear as much as she can.

“I believe.” The magicat wraps her fingers around Adora’s hand that’s holding the arrow, “But it’ll only work if you love me, like really love me, too.”

“The arrow needs to go here.” Catra pulls Adora’s hand down and covers her heart, “You’ve felt it beat before. And it only beats because of you. Only beats for you.”

“I can’t die.” Catra replies, “Not as a cupid.”

Adora nods, she hesitates as she lifts her hand up and off Catra’s chest, sitting back on her knees as she straddles Catra, “Are you sure?”

“Are you sure?” Catra asks back, not about the arrow but about Adora’s love for her, “Because if this isn’t one hundred percent for you then… oof! FUCK ME THAT HURT!”

“Stars! I’m so sorry!” Adora goes to take the arrow out, only for the gold of the arrow to disappear into Catra’s chest, “Catra! Please don’t die! Please don’t leave me! I love you!”

“Woah!” Catra hisses out, the sudden stabbing and the arrow dissolving inside her chest has her feeling a little disorientated as she rests a hand over her heart and then something happens.

“It beat before.”

Adora looks at her, “What… what does this mean?”

Catra grins broadly, “It means I can die now.”

“WHAT?!” Adora shrieks and goes to check on the magicat cupid more thoroughly, “Are you hurt?!”

The magicat cupid just laughs, “No, I’m not hurt, princess. But I can get hurt.” Adora narrows her eyes at Catra, “And I can die.”

“Catra!”

“It means…” Catra takes a solid breath in and out, “It means I can die.”

“Stars…” Adora huffs out as she tries to get off but is held in place by Catra’s hands on her waist.

“But it also means… I can finally live.” Catra says, giving Adora’s waist a gentle squeeze, “Really live. Not blip in and out of existence randomly.”

“Oh.” Adora finally realises what Catra is saying and rolls her eyes, leaning down and pressing her lips onto Catra’s in a very long overdue kiss after a lifetime of misunderstandings, “You’re an idiot with the way you just said all, that was totally and utterly and cupidly, stupid."

"Well, you're with a cupid." Catra grins as she leans up and kisses Adora again.

"No, I'm just with stupid." Adora rolls her eyes but smiles, "I love you."

"I know." Catra shrugs, "Knew it from the start."

"You're so full of it." Adora laughs.

"What do you mean? I totally figured it out!" Catra argues with a laugh.

"Razz figured it out and tried to give you hints, you big dope." Adora points out and then smiles, "She even offered to bake a three tiered cake with figurines of us…"

"She did?"

"Stars…" Adora giggles.

Catra wraps Adora up in her arms and kisses her again and when they break apart the magicat sniffs the air, "Guess we better go eat that pie."

Adora nods, not making any effort to move off just yet.

"Well, now that I'm off the market as a cupid…" Adora hums back in question, "I guess I better start looking for a new job."
