Comfort [JBTS] [Shera-tober prompt]

by Lyssandia

Summary

Glimmer slowly walked around the table until she was right next to her advisor and the moment Catra looked up questioningly, Glimmer had her hand on the feline's forehead. "I knew it," she sighed. "You have a fever."

OR
Catra has the flu and gets comforted.

Notes

This story takes place in the "Just below the Surface" AU, somewhere in the first few months after the war.
But you don't have to know that story to understand anything.

This is also a short story for ilikeyoucatradora's Shera-tober prompts!
Originally, the idea was meant for "having a cold", but I just couldn't make it for that date, so it's now for the keyword "comfort".

Many thanks go to CanadianBear for beta-reading once again!

Also a lot of thanks to Henar for drawing the fanart for me, this time as last-second commission. xD

For Iria and Henar and all my friends on our discord-server! <3

Glimmer had to admit that Catra tried her best. She focused on her work and took notes like usual in this meeting and the Queen was quite certain that no one else had noticed so far.

But the cat couldn’t deceive her Queen.

The red, glossy eyes and nose were one sign.

That Catra didn’t say a word was another.

Her sneeze a third.

Sighing, Glimmer continued with discussing the newest development in Scorpia's kingdom and ended the meeting soon after.

She knew Catra usually stayed a bit longer to complete her notes and sometimes they even discussed some matters, and sure enough, even though everyone else had left, Catra stayed and wrote.

Glimmer slowly walked around the table until she was right next to her advisor and the moment Catra looked up questioningly, Glimmer had her hand on the feline’s forehead.

"I knew it," she sighed. "You have a fever."

"I do not!" Catra protested, but her hoarse voice couldn’t convince anyone.

The shorter woman raised her eyebrow and saw how Catra winced. "Ok, fine, maybe I do. But it doesn’t matter, there's a lot to be done here and I…"

"...and you belong in bed! You're sick! You need to rest!"

"But…"

"No 'but'! I promised Adora to take care of you when she went on that mission and I intend to keep my promise!"

Catra could be quite stubborn, but Glimmer wouldn’t have any of it.

She saw how the feline failed at holding her emotions back. It all flickered over her face.

Adora had been gone for two days and the mission in Erelandia would take a few more and Catra missed her dearly.

Of course the catgirl would never admit it. But it wasn’t hard to see.

Catra would've loved to accompany her girlfriend, but there had been too many important other tasks she didn't want to postpone, most of them regarding the former Fright Zone.

But at least she had insisted that Melog would accompany her, arguing that she still had Glimmer and Bow to look out for her.

She hadn't anticipated that Glimmer would actually do exactly that.

"How long have you been feeling sick already?" Glimmer asked, her voice a lot softer now.

"Uhm…"

Catra didn’t really want to answer that, but now that the cat was out of the bag anyway, her whole posture crumbled.

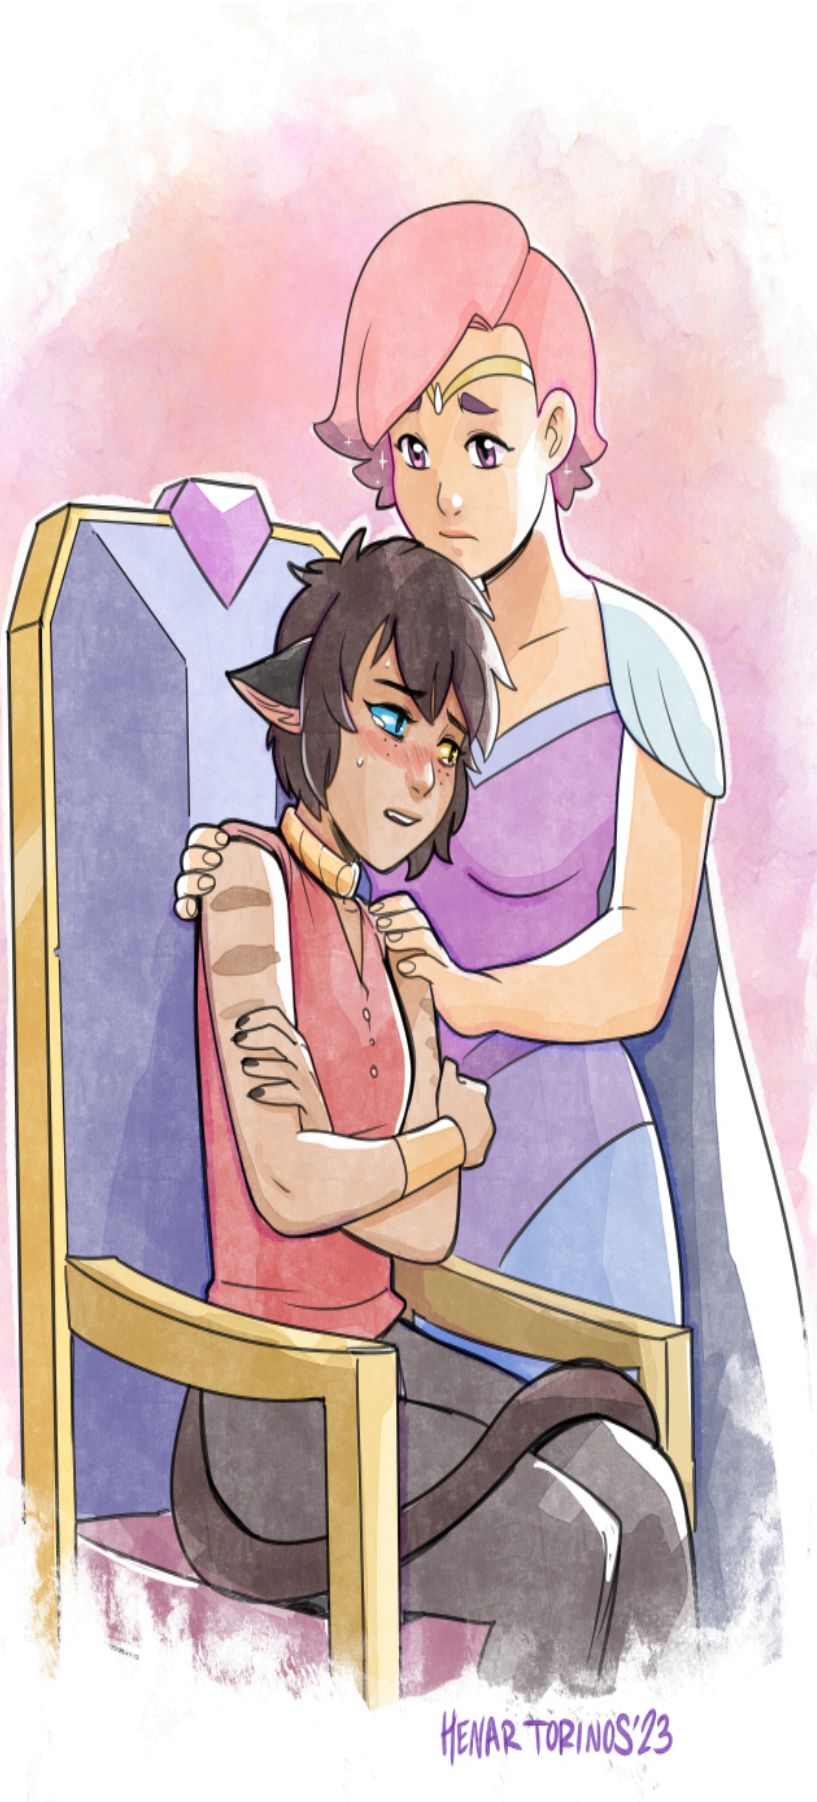

"Shit!" She swore, hissed and finally sobbed.

The queen felt sympathy for her and embraced the sobbing mess that was Catra, giving her as much comfort as she could, drawing small circles into her back.

"How long, hm?" She asked again.

"It began yesterday… stars, I feel like shit…" Catra whispered.

She had mustered all her strength to work like always, to not let anyone see her weakness and vulnerability - and failed.

HENAR TORINOS'23

But somehow, Glimmer’s embrace felt soothing and welcoming and she finally allowed herself to let go of her composure.

"I bet. You’re burning. C'mon, you belong in bed. I'll teleport us to your room and get Adora."

"No!" Catra protested immediately. "Her mission is important! She doesn't need to know about this!" Her voice almost gave out.

"You're more important than a mission, Catra! You’re sick and you're missing her! You don’t have to suffer more than necessary!"

"Please, don’t," the feline repeated, begging. She probably feared that Adora would worry too much.

"Fine. For now. But only if you’re a good girl now and go to bed." Glimmer insisted.

"Okay, okay…," Catra finally agreed.

The thought of lying down actually wasn’t that bad, she realized. Her body felt incredibly sore and tired.

A few moments later, she found herself in her and Adora’s bedroom.

Glimmer helped her with putting her pajamas on, made sure she drank a lot of water, and finally tucked her in.

She didn't need long to fall asleep.

When Catra woke up a few hours later, the first things she noticed were the strong arms that held her close and the distinct scent of her girlfriend, as well as Adora’s soft breath above her ear.

"Hey Catra," Adora whispered and caressed her back tenderly.

The feline only needed a second to understand that Glimmer had lied to her.

"Ugh… that dork got you here…"

"Of course she did," Adora confirmed. "She told me you were sick and asked me if I wanted to come back, though."

Catra nudged her face into Adora’s chest, glad she could snuggle into her girlfriend.

As much as she hated that Glimmer didn't listen to her, she was more relieved to finally have her Adora back.

"What about the mission?"

Adora stroked the feline’s ear until she heard her content purr erupting from her chest.

"The mission can wait a few days. You can't. You’re more important to me than any mission!"

"Hm," Catra replied, feeling incredibly comforted by that. "Guess I need to believe that now…"

"You do! I love you, Catra!" Adora confirmed again.

"Love you, too…," Catra sighed happily, falling asleep again.
