Slumber Party! feat. Kyle

by Anonymous

Summary

Five Princesses have a slumber party and invite everyone's favorite adorable twink over. When they learn he's never felt a woman's touch, Entrapta suggests a little... ✨experiment✨ to test his reactions to the various girls present. Who would've thought Kyle's first kiss would be with a Princess? 😅

Walking through the village at the foot of Bright Moon Palace, Kyle was uncomfortable with all the weird attention he was getting. Thankfully, most of it wasn't on him, but that didn't make it much better that folks were whispering about him, probably making up weird rumors, even. Soon enough, he'd be inside, away from all the prying eyes, and in his opinion, that moment couldn't come soon enough.

"They're all staring," muttered Kyle. "Why are they staring?"

"Ignore them," said Adora dismissively. "Besides, they're focused more on me than you."

Kyle knew if he weren't with the famous She-Ra right now, he'd be blending in with everyone else like always. He was a scrawny, pale man with scruffy blonde hair and green eyes, the kind of person who'd apologize if you stepped on his foot. Awkwardly rubbing the back of his neck, his awkward aura was radiating off the charts. Nobody would pay attention to him normally, a fact he was thankful for; there wasn't much to look at, anyway, in his (and most of the Horde's) opinion.

Adora, on the other hand, was like a walking, talking reminder of everything Kyle wasn't. She, too, was a blonde pale human, except her status as the Princess of Power brought a lot more eyes and envy in her direction. They both wore red with grey pants, except Adora seemed to pull it off better. Her eyes were blue and it was clear from looking that she was more fit and strong than Kyle could ever hope to be. Sure, she'd always excelled in the Fright Zone, but being She-Ra made her even more popular. She was perfect.

And Kyle didn't know if he liked her or hated her like poison.

Things were fairly awkward with them, ever since they met by chance after Prime's defeat. Adora recognized how cruel she'd been to him in the past and wanted to make things right, and though Kyle appreciated the effort, he didn't know if anything could ever take away his hangups. After all, years of emotional damage from constant, casual bullying doesn't just go away in a day. But still, she'd invited him to a private party of sorts and it was worth it to try and make some friends outside of Rogelio, Lonnie and Imp. He needed a social life. He needed friends. But most importantly, he needed better living arrangements for his family and there was no-one better to ask than a Princess. Plus, having She-Ra for a friend couldn't hurt.

"I'm not underdressed, am I?" asked Kyle.

"Relax, it's fine," promised Adora. "Besides, this isn't exactly a suit-and-tie thing. It's a slumber party! You get some of your friends and you sleep in a room together."

"Like back in the Fright Zone?"

"Kinda. It's a lot more fun, though. The beds are nicer, we all banter, we eat ice cream - you ever have ice cream?"

Kyle shook his head. "No."

Adora smiled. "Oh, you are in for a treat tonight."

This was probably the nicest thing Adora had ever done for Kyle. He wasn't sure still how much fun this was going to be, being in a room full of girls who, at one point or another, were trying to kill him. Like Adora, they had Princess magic and could destroy him in an instant if anything went wrong. He was walking into a lion's den with nothing but a backpack containing pajamas, a toothbrush, toothpaste and floss; no weapons, nothing you could hurt anyone with. He might as well go naked, as far as he was concerned. Adora insisted he not bring anything, promising that she'd protect him if things went awry, but still.

The guards at the palace entrance stepped aside to let them through. Looking around, Kyle was in awe of how high up the ceiling was. Murals covered the hallway walls, depicting impressive events from throughout the kingdom's history. Past kings and queens, past battles and wars, even a rendering of She-Ra stomping out the brains of some giant beast. That stopped the curious Kyle in its tracks.

"Is this… you?" he asked.

Adora shook her head. "Nah. That's before my time. Some She-Ra from, like, three thousand years ago."

"You weren't the first?"

"Nope."

Kyle was grateful she didn't have her powers when she was still loyal to the Horde; there was no telling what they'd have done with her on their side. Not that it was fun being on the receiving end of the Princess's offensive powers.

"You can stomp monster's brains out… heal stuff, do all these cool things." Kyle did a little sad smile. "Must be pretty cool."

"Well, not to brag, but… it is. Absolutely. It's like I can do anything when I'm like that."

"Anything except come help us." Kyle realized what he'd said. "I-I mean, uh… I-I didn't mean-"

"No, it's fine, I… I knew it was gonna come up eventually." Adora kept leading Kyle through the palace halls. "The thing is, I offered Catra the chance to run and she didn't take it, so I thought if she wouldn't, you guys wouldn't, either."

"I woulda gone with you."

Adora sighed, guilty. "I know. My mistake. I… I haven't been good to you, but I wanna make it up to you, if you want."

"I… s-sure, yeah. I'd like that." Kyle wasn't sure how much of that was really her fault. After all, she had her own hero problems to deal with; no time to worry about some guy. Maybe that was just him making excuses for bullies like he always did, he didn't know for sure. Still, it was good to get an apology, however late in his life it had come.

Eventually, they reached a large room with a window, a large soft bed and some sleeping bags. The walls were painted lavender and the view proudly displayed the village below. Kyle was glad it was shut; he'd always been scared of heights and falling from really high up.

What really caught his eye were the guests. There were four Princesses present, all just sitting around and talking. He'd seen some of them before and definitely knew one of them - Entrapta, Princess of Dryl, inventor, scientist and engineer extraordinaire. She was a short-ish woman with brown skin and ruby red eyes, and she wore grey pajamas that looked super comfy. Her long, purple, prehensile hair was all spread out around her, moving as she talked for emphasis.

"Hi, Adora!" called Entrapta in her shrill but endearing voice. "Who's this?"

"He's just a friend from the Horde," said Adora. "Kyle, this is-"

"Entrapta!" Kyle cowered behind Adora. "You didn't say she'd be here."

Adora was confused. "You know her?"

"Know her? Her robots flung me all over the place. I had to help her build stuff. She's a maniac."

"Well, she's not gonna fling you around tonight," assured Adora. "Right, Entrapta?"

Entrapta didn't seem to recognize Kyle. "No, of course not. That would tamper with the current experiment. I've never been to a slumber party before. This is a good chance to collect all sorts of interesting data."

“Don’t mind her,” said one of the other Princesses. “Geek princess likes watching people when they sleep. Don’t worry, she won’t actually do anything.” She had brown skin, blue-ish hair and a pajama shirt and shorts that left her strong-looking arms, legs and abdomen exposed.

Adora gestured to the girl. “Kyle, this is Mermista. She’s in charge of Salineas. You know, the kingdom by the sea?”

Kyle perked up a little. “Oh, I remember that place. Beautiful city… before, ah, you know…” He fell silent.

Mermista raised an eyebrow. “Who is this guy again?”

“He’s a friend of mine,” explained Adora. “You know, he used to be in the Horde. Right, Kyle?”

“Why are you telling them that?” muttered Kyle anxiously. “Don’t tell them that. They don’t need to know.”

“It’s okay, dude,” assured another Princess. “She told us she was bringing someone over. We just didn’t think it’d be someone so… scrawny.” This Princess was definitely not that. She wore lavender pajamas that hugged her plump, chubby body. Her hair was short and pink with glitter in it, probably from her unique magic. She looked very soft and warm, with Kyle’s eyes drawn to her thick-looking legs.

“That’s Glimmer,” said Adora. “She’s the Queen of Bright Moon. That just leaves-“

“Me!” the last Princess exclaimed before bouncing up and approaching the newcomers. She had dirty blonde hair and was just as lanky as Kyle, her voice cheery and excited. Her outfit was a strawberry pink shirt and green shorts. “My name’s Perfuma, I’m the Princess of Plumeria and it’s really nice to meet you!” She extended her arm, offering to shake Kyle’s hand, but Kyle didn’t know what she was doing. He’d never seen this before.

“Go on, shake it,” said Adora.

Kyle, not understanding, clenched Perfuma's hand in his fist and shook it side-to-side.

Perfuma pulled her hand away, trying to keep up her good mood. "Uh… okay. Scorpia's told me all about you. Have you ever been to a slumber party?"

Kyle set down his backpack, glad that Scorpia hadn't forgotten him. "Well, unless you count sleeping in a stone hovel in the Crimson Waste, I don't think so."

Mermista grimaced. "Yeesh. Well, tell you what, if it's a soft place to sleep, you came to the right place."

"Yeah, just be careful with the beds around here," added Adora with an awkward grin. "They might be a bit TOO soft."

Kyle didn't understand what she meant. "R-Right. So, umm… what do we do now?"

"Now, we eat." Glimmer suddenly disappeared in a flash of sparkles, then reappeared holding two tubs of ice cream. Once she put them down, she disappeared again and returned with bowls and spoons.

Perfuma clasped her hands together. "This is going to be an amazing night."

Adora nudged Kyle. "What do you think? You think it'll be amazing?"

Kyle shrugged. "I hope so," he said with a little smile. He took a bowl and a spoon, then watched as Glimmer popped open a container and started scooping servings out for everyone. When he received his ice cream, he looked down at it, perplexed at the brown substance.

"It's chocolate," noted Adora. "Dig in."

Confused, Kyle held his spoon and scooped out a piece, then put it in his mouth. Cold but sweet. His eyes sparkled in delight, amazed.

"This is the best thing I've ever eaten in my entire life," said Kyle, his mouth full.

Glimmer giggled. "Glad you think so."

"Eh. I've had better," said Mermista.

Entrapta eyed Kyle, as if studying him for some reason, but he was too busy enjoying his ice cream to notice. He was having the time of his life now and he didn't want it to end.

What followed was a solid two hours of banter between the Princesses. There were a lot of laughs accompanied by the occasional thrown pillow for Kyle to dodge. He'd heard gossip and talk of romance in the Fright Zone before, but hearing it from the mouths of Princesses was pretty surprising. Seems people were the same everywhere, as far as he was concerned.

"So then Bow looks at me and goes, 'These aren't my panties,'" said Glimmer with a giggle, earning some laughs from the others. "You'd swear he's never seen a girl's underwear before!"

Mermista laughed. "Of course he hasn't. You think that boy gets any action? He's too pure, if you ask me. Too innocent."

"I thought you and him were an item," chimed in Perfuma. "He said something about that last time I saw him."

"We are now." Glimmer folded her arms, very proud of herself. "And you wouldn't believe how good he's been to me. Pancake breakfast every other morning, hugs and kisses at every opportunity-"

"He doesn't sing to you, does he?" asked Mermista.

"Well, no, but he does play the lute sometimes. He's really good at it, too. I'm not sure how much of a singer he is."

Mermista sighed. "Well, hopefully, you never find out. Otherwise, he'll just be singing song after song about how 'perfect' you are and it'll get real tiring real quick."

Perfuma grimaced. "Well, I'm sure Sea Hawk isn't THAT bad."

"You haven't had to pay the fines he gets for burning ships. I love him, but he's soooo annoying. He just gets on my nerves all the damn time."

Kyle just sat in silence, listening to all the casual talk about romance. These girls were lucky to have people in their lives who were that affectionate, so lucky he couldn't help feeling jealous of the treatment they were getting. He wouldn't mind having songs sung to him or being kissed regularly. Though he didn't know what a pancake was, he was sure he'd love getting one from someone he cared for.

"I-I think that's really sweet," he mumbled juuuust loud enough for Mermista to hear.

Mermista rolled her eyes. "Oh, yeah, it's TOTALLY sweet having someone sing about how you're their 'star in the night pointing you home' or whatever."

Adora noticed Kyle's bewilderment. "What she means is he's a little… obsessive. Kinda like Catra was."

Kyle knew how bad Catra could get when anything came between her and Adora. "Oh. I-I see."

Perfuma looked at Kyle curiously. "What about you, Kyle? Do you have anyone special in your life?"

"Well, there's Rogelio," answered Kyle. He realized he'd barely spoken the whole time and now, the Princesses were staring at him, waiting for him to spill like they had. “He’s a big green lizard guy who, uh, holds me and protects me and stuff… usually.”

“What do you mean ‘usually?’” asked Glimmer.

“I mean, well… uh…” Kyle didn’t like talking bad about others. He knew folks were trying their best, so slagging on them behind their backs was just rude. “He hasn’t always been helpful. When I got blamed for things, he’d be one of the guys going ‘Seriously, Kyle?’” An uncomfortable guilty glance from Adora made him regret opening his mouth.

“That doesn’t sound right,” noted Perfuma. “If they join in on people who pick on you, are they really worth it?”

“Well, who else is gonna hold me?” Kyle sighed. “Look, it’s not important. You girls just keep going with whatever you were saying before.”

Silence followed for a good few seconds as the Princesses considered what Kyle had said. Then Mermista smirked as she realized something. “By Granamyr’s corpse… are you a virgin?”

Adora and Perfuma gave Mermista bewildered glares while Glimmer spat out the ice cream she was eating.

“What’s a virgin?” asked a concerned Kyle.

“Eh, just somebody who’s never felt a woman’s touch. Or a man’s, for that matter. Or an enby’s!” Mermista laughed a little. “Has anyone ever played with your downstairs area?”

“Mermista!” Adora’s judgemental state gave way to empathy when she turned back to Kyle. “It’s alright, Kyle. You don’t have to answer that.”

“Oh, come on, we’re all talking about people we’ve been with, right? You were saying how in love with Catra you are, Perfuma was talking about Scorpia, Entrapta had that whole long tangent about the ways Hordak's been giving it to her, me and Glimmer just went - what's he shared?"

Kyle didn't like where this was going. "S-Stop it," he muttered. "I just don't have anything to share."

"You've gotta have SOMETHING. Did this Rogelio ever touch your cock? Ever kiss you?"

"Just ignore her," insisted Adora, trying to defuse the situation.

"No, no, I'm kinda curious now, too," chimed in Glimmer.

Kyle clenched a fist, trying to sound calm. "It doesn't matter."

"I would've thought they'd all be doing it in the showers," joked Mermista.

"Yeah, well, they did. Yeah? A-And I was never invited," snapped Kyle. "Okay? Is that what you wanna hear? That I was listening to everyone fucking each other while I just sat in my bed, wanking and crying? That I've never felt a 'woman's touch?' That everybody was too busy picking on my pathetic, helpless ass to even think about kissing me or showing me any of the love you take for granted? Huh? Is that it? Is that good enough for you?!"

He stopped, realizing he'd gone too far. The Princesses were now giving him pitying looks, like he was a lost puppy they needed to take home and look after.

"I… s-sorry," said Kyle, immediately regretting his tone and shrivelling again. "You didn't need to know any of that."

"You poor baby," said Perfuma, her hands clasped together. "You've been around so much negative energy your whole life…"

"You've never been kissed?" queried Glimmer.

Kyle shook his head. Though Rogelio and Lonnie were trying to be better to him now, that still didn't make it better how much he needed their protection. He would LIKE to kiss them, but he didn't want to creep them out, so he just kept that desire to himself.

Perfuma noticed that Entrapta, who'd been silent the last few minutes, was tapping away on a tablet device. "Entrapta? What are you doing?"

"Science!" declared Entrapta with gusto, before whipping around to address the others. "Kyle, would you be willing to help me test something?"

Kyle shrugged. "Uh, well, I guess, sure. What do you-" His words were cut off by Entrapta's lips pressing against his. He didn't realize how FAST she could be! Nor did he ever consider what it would've been like to kiss her, yet here she was giving him a big smooch that shocked the other Princesses as much as it did him.

Entrapta backed away, then typed on her tablet again. "Thank you! I just needed to establish a baseline for your reactions to physical affection. Your face is red. Is that normal?"

Kyle was speechless, his fingers drifting up to his lips. He couldn't believe what just happened. "I… uh…"

"What the fuck?!" yelled Adora.

Mermista chuckled. "Look at his face. How about that, dude? Your first kiss was a Princess. Aren't you special?"

"Uh, I… um…" Kyle still couldn't form a coherent sentence.

"I think you broke him," said a worried Perfuma.

Adora nudged Kyle a little. "Kyle? Are you alright?"

"Y-Yeah, I'm fine, I just… wasn't expecting that," replied Kyle finally.

Entrapta grinned as she typed away. "This is promising. Very, very promising. Girls? Kyle? Do you wanna be part of an experiment to gauge how an affection-starved individual reacts to sudden releases of endorphins?”

Mermista groaned, annoyed. “English?”

“Sorry, it’s just, you were all talking about affection and he’s never had any.” As Entrapta spoke, her hair slowly made her rise into the air, her arms waving to emphasize what she was saying. “What better time to show him some? I wanna study the different effects we can have on him, the ways he’ll react, how his heart rate will rise and fall, how his pupils will dilate; there’s no end to what we could do to him! I just need your consent and we’ll all be making a valuable contribution to science!” She cackled like a mad scientist and spread her arms to cap off her tangent.

Kyle was still trying to understand. “Y-You wanna study affection?”

“Exactly!” Entrapta got really, really close to Kyle’s face, close enough to give him another kiss if she wanted. “How does someone denied love and care all his life react to receiving it from several girls in a row?”

Adora raised her hand. “Uh, hello? Do we get a say in this?”

“Aww, come on, Adora. It’s for science!”

Perfuma chuckled nervously. “I’m not so sure about this. I mean, we all have partners.”

“They’ll understand,” assured Entrapta, spinning in Perfuma’s direction.

“I’m a lesbian!” yelled Adora. “And you want me to, what, grope him?!”

Entrapta was about to answer, but then she started typing on her tablet again, liking that idea. “Actually, that could be part of the tests. Good idea, Adora!”

“What we mean,” reasoned Glimmer, “is that we don’t really know him that well and not all of us are comfortable doing that kinda thing with him.”

“I am,” said Mermista frankly while looking at her nails. When she noticed the other staring, she added, “Oh, what? It could be funny. Besides, how often does a cute little twink like him just fall in our laps?”

Kyle was still processing this. “Okay, this has to be a dream, right? No way any of this is really happening.”

“No, it’s not a dream,” said Entrapta. “Here, I’ll prove it!” She pinched Kyle’s cheek to drive her point home.

“Oww!” Though the pinch hurt, it did confirm this was really happening. Kyle rubbed his face, unsure what was going to happen.

“See? That would’ve woken you up if this were a dream. Come on, girls. It’s for science!”

“Saying ‘it’s for science’ doesn’t make it better,” noted Adora. “I’m sorry about this, Kyle.”

“No, no, it’s fine,” assured Kyle. “I just… well, I mean, I wouldn’t be…”

Adora raised an eyebrow. “You wouldn’t be what?”

Kyle couldn’t believe he was saying this. “I-I… wouldn’t be against doing this… if everyone was okay with it?”

At first, there was silence around the room as the Princesses considered this. Entrapta’s experiments were known to get out of hand, but this was certainly a lot more tame than her attempts to build robots that fling people across rooms and battlefields. Plus, Kyle’s rant and overall meek and pathetic vibe earned him some pity points without him meaning to. It was crazy how they were actually thinking of doing this for him.

Well, for Entrapta, but still.

Mermista shrugged. “I’m in. Could be funny.”

Perfuma looked at Kyle. “You don’t mind?” When she saw him shake his head in response, she added, “Then I’d like to, as well. You’re in desperate need of positive energy in your life, if you don’t mind my saying, and I have it in spades. Just ask Scorpia.”

Mermista glanced over at Glimmer. “What about you, sparkle girl?”

Glimmer was still on the fence about it. “Well, I… what if Bow finds out?”

“You’re making a valuable contribution to science!” claimed Entrapta proudly. “I’m sure he’ll understand. Oh! Actually, next time you see him, could you ask him if he’d like to be part of this?”

A scoff escaped Glimmer’s lips. “You want me to ask my boyfriend to kiss a stranger?”

“Not a stranger, a test subject. For science!”

Glimmer wasn’t quite as convinced by that, but still, it was obvious Entrapta wasn’t going to let this go. “Well… if it’s for science… okay. But I’m not telling Bow about this.”

“Oh, that’s fine, I’ll ask him myself,” said Entrapta innocently, earning an exasperated look from Glimmer. “Adora? Do you want to do this?”

“What part of ‘I’m a lesbian’ didn’t you understand?” replied Adora.

“Well, he’s your friend, isn’t he? What’s a kiss between friends? Besides, you’ve been protective of him all night.”

“So? I’m protective of Bow when we’re out doing Best Friend Squad stuff and I don’t wanna kiss him.”

Entrapta got close to Adora, close enough to feel her breath. "But… it's for science!" she protested. To her, that sentence should've been enough and she didn't understand why it wasn't working.

"It's fine," muttered Kyle. "Y-You don't have to."

"But she DOES! It's not just about how you react to her. I wanna see what effect She-Ra will have on you."

Mermista laughed. "Okay, now, you HAVE to do it. I wanna see that."

Adora shot Mermista a glare. "Not funny. Look, I'm just not attracted to guys, alright? It'd be weird. You wouldn't get the results you want, anyway. It's not him, it's me. Besides, it's MY power, nobody else's. Only I decide what I do with She-Ra."

"Even if the results aren't ideal," reasoned Entrapta, "they're still results. That's why it's an experiment!"

"You know she's not gonna stop," said Glimmer.

"It's true," agreed Perfuma. "Once Entrapta sets her mind to something, nothing can stop her."

Adora didn't want to have to fight Entrapta all night. She pondered this silently before mumbling, "Catra's gonna kill me." Taking a deep breath and readying herself, she said plainly, "I'll do it… if you're okay with it, Kyle."

Now it was Kyle's turn to be concerned for her. "You're sure about this?"

"As I'll ever be. Might as well, you know… make you feel better. Who knows? Could be fun." Adora rubbed the back of her neck, clearly not that enthusiastic but still trying to be polite.

Kyle was touched. "Then, umm… okay. Let's do this."

Entrapta squealed in delight, then tapped on her tablet some more. “Okay, we’re gonna do this in stages. First stage: KISS. Let’s see how our subject reacts to a little, tender smooch. Who wants to go first?”

The Princesses muttered to each other for a moment, then Perfuma put her hand up. “Me. I’ll go first.”

She crawled over to Kyle, who gulped in anticipation. This was really happening. He’d spent his whole life being told the Princesses were all evil and they’d kill him if he got out of line. They’d creep into his bunk and steal his fingers or make him bleed from his nethers, like the story of the Bleeding Princess than Shadow Weaver enjoyed telling way too much. Now, he was in a room full of Princesses and one of them was about to kiss him! His face turned red from all the blushing and he took some slight comfort in knowing Perfuma was blushing, too. They were both feeling weird about this whole arrangement, but they were going to tough it out.

“Your energy is so very negative,” said Perfuma. “Like a stray animal wandering through the woods, needing comfort for its broken leg.”

Kyle wasn’t sure what that meant. “Umm… thank you? Is that a good thing?”

Kyle perked up a little, somewhat relieved. “And, uh, what does being a friend of Scorpia get me? ‘Cause she knows me, too.”

Perfuma let out the most lovely giggle Kyle had ever heard. “Well, that could get you something more if you want. Maybe you could stay with us? And I could help you… heal your energy levels?”

This was working out a lot better than Kyle expected. “I-I’d like that a lot, actually. Like I said, the Crimson Waste-“

“Ugh, get on with it!” yelled Mermista.

“Hey, shush!” snapped Perfuma. “Is it bad I wanna know who I’m kissing?” She turned back to Kyle. “Sorry. Are you ready?”

Kyle nodded.

“Close your eyes.”

Without hesitation, Kyle did as he was told and after a couple seconds, he felt Perfuma’s lips pressed softly against his. It lasted longer than what Entrapta had done and because he was prepared, he could actually take in the feeling and savor it. It was… GOOD. Calming. She smelled like a pretty flower and retained the taste of the chocolate ice cream she’d been eating earlier.

After maybe ten or so seconds, Perfuma backed away, signalling Kyle to open his eyes again. Perfuma gently stroked Kyle’s cheek with her hand, making him shudder. His face was red from all the blushing, and judging from the warm smile on the Princess’s face, she liked it, too.

“How was that?” asked Perfuma.

“That was… nice,” answered Kyle, leaning into Perfuma’s touch. “Thank you.”

“My pleasure. I meant what I said about coming to stay with us. You’ll need a lot of time and care before your aura is at full strength, and as it happens… I‘m a beacon of positive energy and I like to share~”

Kyle suppressed a giggle. He tried to sound suave, but his words came out more cute than he meant them to. “W-Well, uh-“ He cleared his throat. “I’ve been meaning to get my aura looked at by a professional.”

Entrapta then butted between them, shoving Perfuma aside to look at Kyle’s face. “Incredible! Your pupils have dilated significantly.” She put her fingers on the spot where his jaw and neck met. “Heart rate is slower than when I kissed him. Overall attitude is very serene. This is promising. Very, very promising!” She typed up all the results on her tablet. “Thank you, Perfuma!” She looked around. “Perfuma? Where’d she go?”

“Down here,” muttered Perfuma, her face buried in a sleeping bag. She slowly got up and brushed herself off. “Could you not shove me like that?”

“Sorry! My bad.” Entrapta pulled away from Kyle, who just sat there confused, taking him out of his peaceful state.

Mermista laughed a little. “Some kiss.”

Kyle’s insecurities were slowly returning. It was good enough for HIM. “W-What was wrong with it?”

“You call that a kiss? That was like something from a fairy tale book for five-year-olds.”

Perfuma scoffed as she sat back down. “Like YOU could do any better.”

“Wanna bet?” asked Mermista with a smirk. “I’m going next. Lemme show you a kiss with some flavour in it.”

“Uhh…” Kyle gestured for Mermista to come forward. “O-Okay? Come on.”

Mermista crawled over to Kyle with a predatory grin, like a powerful lioness stalking her pray. She was awfully proud of herself, which Kyle figured made sense for a powerful, beautiful magical girl. Come to think of it, even without her powers, she could probably pin him down with ease. Like Lonnie, she had strong arms and legs that he couldn’t help lingering on, looking away when he realized how long it was lasting. He swore that her thighs could choke him out if she wanted.

“Take a picture, it’ll last longer,” said Mermista, positioning herself in front of Kyle.

“W-What..?” asked Kyle.

“Don’t think I haven’t noticed you checking me out.”

Kyle sighed. It was true; he’d occasionally stolen a glance at her, her thin pajamas not really leaving much to the imagination. To be fair, she was really sexy and didn’t mind flaunting what she had. If she hadn’t been so rude to him earlier, he’d probably be more eager for this.

“Alright, hold still,” commanded Mermista, who brought her hands to Kyle’s shoulders and held him in place. There was no escape.

Then she leaned in.

Whereas Perfuma’s kiss was pretty chaste and tender, Mermista was more hungry, moaning a little and making breathy noises. Kyle’s eyes shot wide open when he felt something slimy pass between his lips and wriggle around his mouth; it took him a good few seconds to realize what it was. He couldn’t pull away with the solid grip the Princess had on him, so this kiss went on for a lot longer than the last one.

Adora had moved next to Glimmer and they both watched what Mermista was doing to this boy with surprise.

“She’s really going to town, isn’t she?” noted Glimmer, her eyebrow raised.

“They’ve gotta come up for air at SOME point,” said a worried Adora.

Glimmer chuckled. “What do you think? She’s a mermaid.”

“He’s not!”

Mermista pulled away after a moment, making sure her ocean taste lingered with Kyle for a while. She licked her lips and let go of him, her grin wide and her attitude smug, like she'd just won a contest and wanted to lord it over everyone.

But Kyle wasn't really as impressed. "Your tongue was in my mouth. She put her whole tongue in my mouth!"

"So?" said Mermista nonchalantly. "That's just how I kiss. What, you don't like tongues?"

"I-I guess not… sorry."

Mermista seemed disappointed with this. She started crawling back to her sleeping bag. "Whatever. Another notch on your bedpost, I guess." Then she mumbled, "Sea Hawk likes it when I use my tongue."

"Sea Hawk likes it when you breathe in his general direction," joked Adora.

Entrapta moved in front of Kyle and checked him again, looking into his eyes and feeling his heartbeat. She talked as she took her notes on the tablet. "Pupils aren't as dilated as with Perfuma. Heart rate's much higher. Subject appears shocked and slightly upset. Side note: not a fan of tongue kissing."

Kyle wasn't sure how he felt about being studying like this. Sure, being kissed was interesting and all, but this just killed the feelings they instilled in him. "You're not gonna share this with anyone, are you?"

"Oh, but of course I will! Once this study is done, I'm gonna publish it in the New Etherian Scientist Journal."

Glimmer didn't seem happy with that. "Uh, no, you aren't."

"Don't worry, I won't use any of your names. Trust me, this'll all be completely anonymous."

That put Glimmer and Kyle at ease, but only a bit. “It better be,” said Glimmer. “‘Cause if anyone finds out, I’m blaming you.” She cleared her throat, then started crawling over to Kyle. “Looks like it’s my turn. You still good to go?”

Kyle nodded meekly. “Yeah. Just… gently, okay?”

“Sure thing. I can be gentle.” Glimmer moved in front of Kyle. “You, uh, wanna have a hug? Bow likes it when we hug first.”

Another nod from Kyle, with a muttered, “S-Sure.”

Glimmer wrapped her arms around Kyle’s thin body. She was wider than him and way more huggable. The sparkles in her hair caught his eyes more than anything, making her look so damn pretty. Her warm bosom was pressed against Kyle’s chest, earning a prominent blush from him. His guard was lowered and he felt like he could just sink into this Princess…

“Y-You feel nice,” stammered Kyle.

“I do?”

Glimmer smiled. “Thanks. Uh, so are you, actually.”

That surprised Kyle. “Really?”

“Uhh… no, sorry, just trying to be polite.” Glimmer looked into Kyle’s eyes. Hers were pink and glittery like her hair, though it was clear on her face she was having second thoughts she wasn’t voicing yet. “Ready?”

“R-Ready.”

Glimmer brought her lips to Kyle’s, giving him a taste of not only lingering ice cream, but sprinkles, too. There was some slight hunger to it, though not nearly as much as what Mermista had done. Kyle’s hands unconsciously moved to touch the Princess’s thicc thighs and giving them a light rub and squeeze. This one didn't last as long as the others but was still worth remembering.

Glimmer looked down, feeling what Kyle was doing. "Someone's getting handsy."

"S-Sorry."

"No, it's fine. Just, uh, don't tell anyone about this, okay? What happens at the slumber party STAYS at the slumber party. One-time thing." Glimmer let go of Kyle and started going back to where she was.

Kyle had to think of something nice to say like he did with Perfuma. "Umm… Bow's a lucky guy, if you don't mind my saying."

Glimmer positioned herself back on her sleeping bag and folded her legs. "Yeah… he is… oh jeez, what have I done? I blame you for this, Entrapta."

Entrapta didn't understand. "For what?"

"For me betraying Bow! He's the sweetest guy ever and here I am getting felt up by a twink 'for science'."

Kyle felt like a massive jerk. "I'm really sorry for this…"

Adora leaned over to Glimmer. "Calm down. You're scaring him."

"He should be scared!" yelled Glimmer. "I'm scared! What kind of Princess am I?"

"The kind of Princess who caves to peer pressure," joked Mermista.

"Hey, YOU are my peers. That makes it your fault." Glimmer took a deep breath to try and calm herself. "I'm okay. I think. You know what? I think I'm gonna need more ice cream." In an instant, she was gone, teleporting away in a flash of glitter.

Kyle couldn't hide his guilt. This was meant to be a friendly night, yet he'd just caused the Queen of Bright Moon to have a panic attack. "Is she gonna be okay?"

Adora chuckled nervously, rubbing the back of her neck. "Hard to say."

"Right. So this Bow guy, he's not gonna, like… hunt me down and kill me, is he?"

"Are you kidding?" snickered Mermista. "That boy's a total pushover. I bet she's gonna tell him what happened and she'll cry, then he'll cry and they'll just cry all over each other like the saps they are. You're in no danger, dude. No danger."

"Yeah, exactly," promised Adora. "Maybe not the 'crying all over each other' part, but still. You've got nothing to worry about."

Entrapta checked Kyle again and typed out what she'd detected. "Hmm… subject responded well to physical comfort on top of the kiss. Breathing is normal, eyes dilated slightly, heart rate at ease - these readings are fairly close to Perfuma. Side note: enjoys tenderness."

Perfuma liked the sound of that. "So you're saying we got the best results so far? Me and Glimmer?"

"Won't know for sure until the end," said Entrapta. "This just leaves Adora and her super form."

Here it was. The moment Adora had been clearly dreading. "R-Right," she mumbled before crawling up to Kyle, hoping to get this over with soon.

Kyle felt bad for her, after she'd felt guilty for him all day. "If you don't wanna, you don't-"

"No, no, it's fine. Everyone else went."

"Yeah, but you…"

Adora sighed, straightened her back. "I know. It's nothing personal. I mean, you're a catch, for sure, objectively speaking."

Kyle snickered. "Yeah, right."

"No, I'm serious. Anyone would be lucky to have you. You're really considerate, you know your way around a machine-"

"And he's a good kisser!" chimed in Perfuma.

"A good kisser, thank you." Adora brought one of her hands to Kyle's cheek. "I'm sure you'll find somebody just as great as you are."

Hearing that from someone who'd made his life so miserable for so long was… comforting to Kyle. "I… t-thank you." He wiped a tear from his eye. It wasn't fair. One of his biggest bullies shouldn't be this caring OR pretty. Still, better than never, he figured.

"Well, he's not THAT great," muttered Mermista. "You're just saying that 'cause you think you owe him-" She felt Perfuma's elbow go into her gut, shutting her up.

Adora gave Mermista a glare, before returning to meet Kyle's gaze with an awkward smile. "Uh… ready?"

"S-Sure," said Kyle. He couldn't believe how nervous he still was. This was maybe the best night of his life and he was still fairly confident something would go horribly wrong.

Adora's hand moved to Kyle's shoulder with a much gentler grip than Mermista's and when their lips touched, there was… significantly less passion. It was just as awkward as this whole arrangement and though Adora was trying her best, it was clear she wasn't enjoying this. Still, Kyle appreciated the effort and kept his hands to himself, not wanting to make her any more uncomfortable than she already was.

The smooch ended with Adora pulling away and sighing with relief. “Good. That was… that was good.”

“Yeah, good,” said Kyle, just as unsure as Adora.

Mermista was cringing. “Really? That was kinda painful to watch.”

“Well, I think it was sweet to try,” claimed Perfuma.

Entrapta moved behind Kyle to copy down the results on her tablet. She tilted his head up to look at his pupils. “Dilated pupils, heart rate calm… subject appears conflicted.”

Kyle hoped he wouldn’t have to say why. “Is that a bad thing?”

“Nope! Just an interesting observation.” Entrapta backed away. “Alright, Adora. You know what to do.”

Adora needed a moment to remember what she meant. “What? Oh, come on, I already did it once.”

“But it could be different with She-Ra! It’s for science!”

Adora knew she was fighting an uphill battle. “Alright, alright. Kyle, you might wanna back up.”

Kyle slowly dragged his butt away from Adora, watching her rise to her feet. She closed her eyes and concentrated, bringing her hand up dramatically.

“For the honor… of Grayskull!”

A bright light engulfed Adora, then vanished just as quickly as it came. What stood before them all now was a seven-foot-three goddess in shining armor, a beautiful exaggeration of all of Adora’s natural features. Her white and gold outfit covered her legs but not her arms, though it was clear both were now longer and way more muscular. While nothing happened to her face, her hair had grown significantly, her ponytail now stretching down to brush her thighs. An air of power surrounded her, like standing in the presence of the most powerful woman in the universe.

She-Ra, Princess of Power.

This was a different form than what Kyle had seen on the battlefield and in his opinion, far less terrifying.

“I never get tired of this,” said Perfuma, who looked like she might cry.

Glimmer shrugged. “Ehh… you see it enough times, you get used to it.”

She-Ra looked down at Kyle, who stood up. She was almost two feet taller than him. “Hehe. Magic - it does a body good. Remember, it’s still just me, okay?”

Kyle nodded. “O-Okay.”

Mermista’s smirk wouldn’t leave her face. “You realize how lucky you are, dude? You know how many people would kill to be in your position?”

She-Ra rolled her eyes. “Ugh, don’t remind me.” Sensing Kyle’s confusion, she added, “Well, let’s just say there’s a lotta weirdos on Etheria who want me to do… THINGS to them that I don’t feel that comfortable with. One of the downsides of being famous; everyone wants a piece of you.”

“Right… and this?” queried Kyle. “Is this, uh, comfortable?”

“It’s bearable. You’re not scared of me, are you? Some folks, they tend to be a little scared.”

“Uh… a-a little bit. To be honest, I’m more scared what Catra’s gonna do to me if she finds out about this.”

She-Ra put a hand on Kyle’s shoulder and gave him a reassuring look. “Hey, she’s not like that anymore. She’s taking anger management classes. You haven't seen her progress."

"Well, still, just don't tell her, okay? I don't wanna take the chance she'll rip my cock off and stuff it in my mouth."

"Ooh, can I watch?" teased Mermista.

"Nobody's telling Catra anything," declared She-Ra. She got down on one knee so Kyle could reach her face, bringing her hand to his chin and holding it tenderly. "You're gonna be fine."

Kyle gazed into She-Ra's eyes, wondering if they were always that blue and pretty. "Really?"

"Really really!" A slow beat, then, "Ready?"

A nod from Kyle gave She-Ra permission to lean in. The resulting kiss was strange, but in a completely different way; maybe it was just the magic, but Kyle could swear he was at peace now, no longer so anxious about something going wrong. His mood was improving and his spirit felt rejuvenated, not to mention the weird giddiness that came with being this close to the most powerful Princess WITHOUT her trying to kill him or his friends.

She-Ra pulled away after about ten or so seconds, then her face returned to the same unsure-but-polite expression she'd done before and after the last kiss. "Uh… how was that?"

Kyle needed a moment to figure out how to describe it, absentmindedly letting Entrapta check him again. "I feel… better? L-Like some big weight got lifted from my shoulders, or like I was having a bad dream and I just woke up and everything's fine. Was… was that your magic doing that?"

She-Ra shrugged as she stood back up again. "Maybe? There's still a lot I don't know about my powers."

"Fascinating," said Entrapta, recording the results. "Subject appears more serene than with Perfuma's kiss. Heart rate stable, pupils almost fully dilated. This suggests kissing a magical being affects one's emotional state more; must investigate further."

She-Ra raised an eyebrow. "Uh, yeah, no. You're not investigating that. And don't say 'It's for science'." She turned away from a disappointed Entrapta and looked down at Kyle again. "You really feel better?"

"Yeah," answered Kyle. "My soul's all warm and fuzzy or something. I… thank you." His gaze was like that of a sad puppy wanting attention.

"Somebody's in looooooove," Mermista taunted.

"No, he's not," snapped She-Ra. "It's just mild, innocent infatuation. There's a difference. Besides, it's probably just brain fog from a magic kiss. You should see Catra when I'm done with her." She noticed Entrapta getting a little excited. "No, you can't study her." That deflated the scientist's enthusiasm.

Kyle put his fingers on his lips, the taste firmly imprinted in his memory. "Y-Yeah… it's probably just the magic thing."

She-Ra's body flashed again and she shrunk back down, returning to being regular old Adora. It was clear she still felt bad for him. "Umm… look, you know nothing can ever really happen between us, right?"

Kyle scoffed. "Yeah, I know that." Even though he was never truly pining for her, it still stung a little to hear; it was like being told he'd never be a great chef or something, reminded of something he COULDN'T do.

"Yeah. I mean, if you wanna, like, cuddle or touch or something, I'm your girl. Physical affection's not outta the question, but anything REAL… no hard feelings?"

"Nope. No hard feelings." Kyle had to remind himself that whatever this was couldn't be love, given how long he'd spent hating her and being afraid of her. This was just very brief infatuation, destined to fade, and that wasn't even mentioning how her offer was obviously motivated by pity. "Wait. What do you mean 'not outta the question?'"

"Hey, don't get any ideas. Nothing horny," answered Adora, trying not to laugh. "And only when I'm She-Ra; feels less weird that way."

"So, like, being picked up? Held? Rubbing limbs and abs? Or hair-touching? It's just, your She-Ra hair is really pretty."

"Sure thing, dork. Sure to all that, but keep it safe for work. Soooo, Entrapta? You done with your… experiment?"

"Done with the first stage, yes," chirped Entrapta. "Wanna hear the results?"

Everyone was curious now. "Sure," answered Perfuma.

"Well, our subject had the strongest responses to something gentle. Feeling like the other person really cares for him keeps him calm and happy throughout the process, probably due to lack of physical affection throughout his life. Pupil dilation indicates Perfuma and She-Ra were the most effective at easing him, though She-Ra's kiss was magic in nature, a factor that wasn't in play for the rest of us."

"What do you think, Kyle?" asked Perfuma. "Who'd you like best?"

Kyle didn't want to be on the spot anymore. The last thing he wanted was to hurt anyone's feelings. "I-I don't know…"

"Oh, come on," groaned Mermista. "Just tell us."

Kyle rubbed the back of his neck. "W-Well, I think… Perfuma did it best."

"Aww, thank you," giggled Perfuma, pleased with herself.

Mermista rolled her eyes. “Of COURSE you like her best. You’re like Bow and Glimmer, all lovey-dovey and insufferable.”

“Don’t tell me you’re jealous,” joked Perfuma, grinning.

“What, you think I want him? I’ve got Sea Hawk. Take him, I don’t care.”

Perfuma laughed. “Very well, then. I will.” She winked at Kyle, who blushed like a schoolboy.

Entrapta typed some final reports on her report. “Alright, that’s the first stage done. Now onto the next stage: GROPING.”

Kyle and the other Princesses all immediately responded with a loud “No!” or “Oh, HECK no!”

“But it’s-“

“For science. Yeah, we know,” said Adora. “We’ve already done enough experimenting tonight, let’s just… get some sleep.”

“Sounds good to me,” said Mermista. She started tucking herself into her sleeping bag. “We should invite more twinks to these things.”

Kyle got into his own sleeping bag, hoping that by tomorrow, they could all put this behind them. He’d kissed five Princesses, all of whom already had partners, and had his first ever slumber party; all things considered, this hadn’t been nearly the horrible disaster he expected going in.

Perfuma positioned her sleeping bag near Kyle’s and laid down beside him. “I’m sensing a change in your aura. There’s this air of… calm around you, like a grassy hilltop when the wind is low.”

“Well, I don’t know about auras, but this has definitely been better than I thought.” Kyle chuckled softly. “All my life, the Horde said the Princesses were evil and wicked. Nobody ever said they’d be, you know… s-sweet and stuff.”

Perfuma did a light giggle. “I imagine there’s a lot of things they didn’t tell you. But you don’t need to worry about them anymore. You’re with us now. Soooooooo, do you wanna come by my kingdom tomorrow?” Her hand rested on Kyle’s cheek, her thumb gently rubbing under his eye. “My offer still stands.”

“You’re sure I’m not, you know, muscling in on Scorpia’s turf?”

“You have nothing to worry about there. She knows who I am, what I like. There’s plenty of me to go around. The heart can belong to many.”

Hearing that comforted Kyle. “Wow. Is it alright if I bring my friends? They’re not bad people or anything, they just-“

“Of course you can.”

Kyle grinned. He’d secured a home for himself, Lonnie, Rogelio and Imp and all he had to do was attend a slumber party. As he laid still, he hoped he’d be invited to the next one; who knows what could happen?

Just as long as Entrapta isn’t there. He wasn’t eager to be groped “for science”.

Glimmer materialized in a puff of sparkles, wiping her lips. “Okay. I’m back. Did I miss anyth… Entrapta?!”

Kyle looked up and noticed Entrapta staring at Mermista, who was already unconscious somehow. Mermista wasn’t kidding; she really DID like watching people when they slept.

Classic Entrapta.
