So long, and Thanks for all the Borscht

by AthenasLilOwl

Summary

Catra is a very smart person.

Catra is a very valuable person.

Because Catra has a plan.

A very good plan.

She's gonna steal the stupid princesses' stupid borscht.

Catra and Scorpia sneak into Brightmoon to steal their borscht.

An r/OkBuddyCatra crack fic.

Notes

Standard disclaimer: This "work" is a stupid, imbecilic, infantile, immature, impolite, inconsistent, inconsiderate, out-of-character, rude, crude crack fic. Frankly, I'm not sure anybody should be reading this. That being said, please enjoy.

The writing style for this one was inspired by the hilarious Those Horde Kids Are Freaks, Yo. Go check it out if you haven't already.

- Inspired by Those Horde Kids Are Freaks, Yo by avulle

Catra is a very strong person.

Catra is a very smart person.

Catra is a very efficient person.

Catra knows this.

But.

But.

Despite all that, the war is not going well.

Catra knows this, too.

And Catra does not like this.

Stupid princesses with their stupid powers and their stupid friendships, Catra thinks.

Grumble grumble.

And their stupid borscht.

Grumble grumble.

They just looooooove their stupid borscht.

Catra knows it's just stupid red beet soup.

Stupid red beet soup that you can eat either hot or cold.

So you can eat it in summer and in winter.

With sour cream.

Maybe also with some fishies.

Stupid princesses with their stupid delicious soups.

Grumble grumble. Grey ration bars, grumble grumble.

Maybe.

Maybe Catra can use this to her advantage, Catra thinks.

Maybe that is the answer.

They just looooooove their stupid borscht.

Yes. Maybe that is the answer.

Catra is a very smart person.

Catra will steal the stupid princesses' stupid borscht!

That oughtta show them!

That oughtta demoralise them!

Hey, it could even win us the next battle! Catra thinks.

Or the war, for that matter, Catra thinks.

Hehe.

Yes.

Good.

Very good.

Catra is a very smart person.

Catra is a very valuable person.

Because Catra has a plan.

A very good plan.

She’s gonna steal the stupid princesses’ stupid borscht.

Catra will sneak into that big, stupid, shiny castle and steal all the borscht.

All of it.

And then.

And then she’ll escape their big, stupid castle.

Undetected.

With all their borscht.

Like a master thief.

And then she’ll laugh. And laugh.

And win.

(And then maybe she’ll have some of that borscht.)

(As a treat.)

(For winning.)

(And for being so smart.)

(She should remember to steal some sour cream too, while she’s at it.)

(And maybe some fishies.)

But yes. Sneaking. Sneaking into the castle.

Quick and silent.

Like one of those neen-dshas Entrapta keeps yapping about.

One of those things from those cartoon shows that she likes so much.

(That damn weeb).

Anyway. She'll sneak in like one of those thingies.

In the middle of the night. In the darkness.

Best to wear some camouflage, too, Catra thinks. So she doesn't get discovered while she's being all sneaky.

So she grabs her darkest, blackest set of clothes.

(It's the suit she got to wear for the next Princess Prom. She was looking forward to wearing it.)

(She was looking forward to being seen in it.)

(She wondered what face Adora would make this time when she saw it.)

(But for tonight, the point is to not be seen in it.)

(So that's okay!)

(She's allowed to wear it tonight!)

(Nobody will see. It'll remain a great surprise.)

As soon as she's slipped into the shirt and trousers, she hears it.

Clomp. Clomp. Clomp. Clomp.

Oh no.

Oh no.

Oh no no no.

It's her.

Only she walks like that.

“Hey, Wildcat,” Scorpia says as she enters without knocking. “How’s it hangin’?”

Catra hates Scorpia.

“Oh wow, you’re looking dapper,” Scorpia says, looking her up and down and sitting down on her bed.

(Without asking first whether she’s allowed to.)

(Grumble grumble.)

“Big plans tonight, Wildcat? Going somewhere fancy, are we?” Scorpia says cheerfully, as if she didn’t just walk into her room without knocking and wasn’t sitting on her bed without asking first.

Catra hates her so god damn much.

“On a mission,” Catra hisses.

“Wearing that?” Scorpia says.

“Yes,” Catra hisses.

“Cool,” says Scorpia.

Catra hopes she’ll go away now.

“Can I come?” says Scorpia.

“No,” says Catra.

“Why not?”

“Because it’s a top secret mission.”

“Oooooh, I love top secret missions!”

Catra hates her so, so god damn much.

“C’mon, Wildcat, let me come,” Scorpia says, “I can help!”

“No, you can’t,” Catra hisses.

“I know a secret entrance into Brightmoon,” Scorpia says.

“You what?”

“I know a secret entrance into Brightmoon,” Scorpia says.

“Why? How? Since when?”

“Everybody knows it except you,” Scorpia says. “It’s the one they tell us to use if we wanna desert.”

“They what?”

“You wanna know where it is, or not? I’m only telling if you bring me along.”

Catra thinks for a moment.

“Nah, it’s chill. I’ve been before.”

“You’ve been before?”

“Sure. Got me some nice borscht dinner in Brightmoon on my day off.”

“Well, fuck me,” Catra loses all faith in life.

“So, can I come?” Scorpia says.

“How do you know I’m going to Brightmoon, anyway?” Catra says.

“Catra. Darling. Pal. Friendo. Bestie. You’ve been jumping up and down and going ‘borscht borscht borscht borscht’ for the past five minutes. That's why I came to check up on you in the first place. And everybody knows that if you're going for some good borscht, you go to Brightmoon."

Catra groans.

"Fine, you can come," she sighs. "But this is a stealth mission. Be stealth."

"Awesome! I'll go get my stealth outfit!"

Scorpia runs off.

Scorpia returns.

In a massive parakeet costume.

It's bright green.

Bright.

Green.

With an orange beak.

Catra hates her so god damn much.

"No."

"But nobody ever recognises me when I'm wearing it!" Scorpia says underneath the parakeet head mask.

"It's stealthy!" Scorpia says.

"No."

"Yes!"

"No!"

Anyway.

Fast forward.

Catra and Scorpia are at the walls of Brightmoon Castle.

They're about to sneak in.

Scorpia is leading them to the secret entrance.

Scorpia is still wearing her god damn parakeet costume.

(There was no negotiating her out of it.)

(She wouldn't budgie on it.)

(Catra hates her so god damn much.)

Catra hopes there's no huge ancient spider-like evil in a cave on their way to the secret entrance.

(There isn't.)

Scorpia just walks up to a side door in the wall and opens it.

Okay.

Stop.

Time out.

First of all.

There is a god damn door.

Second of all.

It's god damn unlocked.

(How are we losing this war????)

But then.

But then.

There are guards inside.

Catra knew it!

It’s a trap!

The guards look at them.

One of them waves.

The guards turn away and keep playing cards.

What. The. Fuck.

How are we losing this war????

Catra doesn’t understand.

Even though Catra is very smart.

Even though Catra is very clever.

But it just doesn’t make sense.

It’s as if the Rebellion has some invisible shield or something.

Armour, even.

Perpetual Luck Obtaining Thingamading armour, perhaps.

(Catra’s sure that’s a thing.)

(And if it isn’t, it should be.)

(Maybe Entrapta can make one of those for her, too.)

(She’ll have to ask when she returns.)

Anyway.

They’re sneaking in.

They’ve snuck in.

(Turns out one does simply walk into Brightmoon.)

They’re in the castle.

Great.

Now, where’s the borscht?

“KITCHEN”, a big sign says next to an arrow pointing down a hallway.

It has a big bowl of borscht painted next to it.

Well, damn.

Fast forward.

They’re in the kitchens.

It’s dark.

Nobody’s there.

Except for the borscht.

Pots and pots full of borscht.

Perfect.

Catra and Scorpia start packing it up into the big bags they’ve brought.

They’re gonna steal all of it.

Excellent.

Just according to keikaku.

(Note: “keikaku” means plan.)

But.

But then.

There’s a noise.

Something’s rustling.

“Hush,” Catra hisses and freezes, “somebody’s here.”

Scorpia puts the pot full of borscht into her bag and looks around.

Catra picks up a pan.

Maybe she’ll get to whack a princess over the head with it, she hopes.

Lol.

As if.

As if a princess would make her way down into a kitchen.

(Catra is a very witty and funny person.)

Catra slowly sneaks around the corner with the pan in her hand raised.

And then she sees her.

The sparkly one.

She’s rummaging through the cupboards.

With her hands full of tarts.

And another tart stuck in her mouth.

Catra just stares at her.

Glimmer sees her too and halts in her tracks.

“I ain’t seen nothin’ if you ain’t seen nothin’,” she mumbles with the tart in her mouth.

“What?”

“What?” Then Glimmer snaps out of it. “I mean, halt! Thieves! Intruders!” she yells.

Within seconds, guards appear.

(Now they stop being lazy???)

(Stupid princesses with their stupid Perpetual Luck Obtaining Thingamading armour. Grumble grumble.)

Anyway.

Fast forward.

Catra and Scorpia are caught.

They bring them up the tower.

They put them in a bedroom.

(??, Catra thinks.)

(A bedroom??)

(I know, right??)

They sat them on chairs, sitting back to back.

They tied their arms behind their backs.

Scorpia pokes Catra in the back with her claw.

“Hey, Catra,” she whispers. “Hey. Hey. Hey. Hey Catra. Hey. Hey. Hey. Hey Catra.”

“What?” Catra hisses.

Scorpia pokes her in the back again.

“I’ve got your back,” Scorpia sniggers.

Catra hates her so god damn much.

Anyway.

No time to deal with Scorpia right now.

The door bursts open. In comes Angella. And Adora.

“Hello, me queer birds,” Angella says. “You called?”

“I’m a parakeet!” Scorpia chirps.

Catra hates her so god damn much.

“I found them in the kitchens,” Glimmer says. “They were stealing our borscht.”

Adora looks at Catra.

She looks confused.

Yeah, take a good look, Catra thinks.

Bet you wish you had a nice black suit like this, Catra thinks.

Instead of that stupid red dress you had, Catra thinks.

That one that left your shoulders free so I could see all your muscles on your back, Catra thinks.

And that wrapped so tightly above your hips, Catra thinks.

And its hem swung so far while we were dancing, Catra thinks.

Making you look like a butterfly, Catra thinks.

An angry, red butterfly, Catra thinks.

“Is that right?” Angella says.

“No, it’s not! Her red dress was not pretty!” Catra yells.

“What red dress?” Angella is confused.

“I mean, yes. No. Maybe. I don’t know. Can you repeat the question?” Catra stammers and blushes.

(Adora blushes too. Her face is red like borscht.)

(Got ya, princess.)

(Winning. Catra’s definitely winning. Definitely.)

Angella clears her throat.

“You have committed crimes against Brightmoon and her people,” she says. “What say you in your defence?”

“Sparkles over there was stealing too,” Catra says, nodding at Glimmer.

Now Glimmer blushes.

“I only got a midnight snack,” she says. “That’s not illegal.”

“So it’s fine if a princess does it? That’s some royalist bullshit right there,” Catra says.

“The history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles,” Scorpia adds helpfully.

“No, it’s indeed not fine,” Angella says. “We’ll talk about that later.”

Glimmer stares daggers at Catra.

(Winning.)

“Why were you stealing our borscht?” Angella continues. “Do you suffer hunger, child?”

“I suffer fools,” says Catra. “Daily.”

“I can empathise,” Angella says, side-eyeing Glimmer. “But we cannot have you steal from us.”

You steal too, Catra thinks. You stole Adora.

“Hm, what shall we do with you two?” Angella asks nobody in particular.

“They should be our prisoners!” suggests Glimmer.

“Or, we could make them defect the Horde?” Adora suggests, “And then, I dunno, make them do the dishes, for like a week?”

Angella nods.

“And so, the struggle to free myself from restraints becomes my very shackles,” Catra says.

(Catra is metal like that.)

“I don’t think I’d be very good at it with these claws,” Scorpia says and pokes Catra in her back again. Three times.

“What would you be good at, child?” Angella says.

Scorpia leaps out of her chair and grabs one of the bags of borscht as she runs for the window.

(She had cut their restraints with her claws.)

(Snip-snip. Just like that.)

(The rebellion dumbasses forgot that the lady with the claws can cut through rope.)

(How is the Horde still losing the war????????)

(Catra still does not understand.)

(But Catra has no time for that right now.)

Catra hurdles after Scorpia and grabs the other bag of borscht while she's at it.

"Leap of faith!" Scorpia yells and grabs Catra.

Then Scorpia jumps.

Out.

Of.

The.

Fucking.

Window.

Catra hates Scorpia so god damn much.

They are falling.

(Yeah, no shit, duh.)

From the fucking tower.

(Well, fuck me.)

Scorpia is clutching her tightly.

Catra is clutching the bags of borscht.

They keep falling.

Catra hates Scorpia so god damn much.

They fall into a tiny cart filled with hay.

They get up.

Unscathed.

Unscathed?

“What the fuck,” Catra says, checking that all her limbs are still in the right places and at the right angles.

(They are.)

“It was a million-to-one chance,” Scorpia says. “Exactly a million-to-one. I calculated it. Those always work out. It is known.”

“What is this, Circularly Plane Universe?” says Catra.

“No, this is Patrick,” says Scorpia.

Catra hates her so god damn much.

But.

But.

There is no time for that now.

They need to get away.

So, they pick up the bags and run.

“So long,” Catra yells at the tower and waves, “and thanks for all the borscht!”

And so, Catra and Scorpia escape into the night.

With the borscht.

All according to keikaku.

(You should know by now what that means.)

“Great, they got away,” Glimmer says, looking at the two disappear. “Now what?”

“Feat not,” Angella says. “We can always cook more borscht.”

And then, they did.

The end.
