Coffee Shop

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/55788091.

Rating:
General Audiences

Archive Warning:
No Archive Warnings Apply

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Castaspella/Shadow Weaver | Light Spinner (She-Ra), Castaspella & Shadow Weaver | Light Spinner (She-Ra), Castaspella/Light Spinner (She-Ra)

Characters:
Castaspella (She-Ra), Shadow Weaver | Light Spinner (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Alternate Universe - Coffee Shops & Cafés, Alternate Universe - Modern Setting, Falling In Love, Holding Hands, Getting Together, Getting to Know Each Other, Blushing, Fluff and Humor, First Kiss, Castaspella works as a waitress at a Coffe Shop

Language:
English

Series:
Part 3 of AU Light Spinner x Castaspella

Stats:
Published: 2024-05-09 Words: 6,904 Chapters: 1/1

Coffee Shop

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/55788091.

Rating:
General Audiences

Archive Warning:
No Archive Warnings Apply

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Castaspella/Shadow Weaver | Light Spinner (She-Ra), Castaspella & Shadow Weaver | Light Spinner (She-Ra), Castaspella/Light Spinner (She-Ra)

Characters:
Castaspella (She-Ra), Shadow Weaver | Light Spinner (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Alternate Universe - Coffee Shops & Cafés, Alternate Universe - Modern Setting, Falling In Love, Holding Hands, Getting Together, Getting to Know Each Other, Blushing, Fluff and Humor, First Kiss, Castaspella works as a waitress at a Coffe Shop

Language:
English

Series:
Part 3 of AU Light Spinner x Castaspella

Stats:
Published: 2024-05-09 Words: 6,904 Chapters: 1/1

Coffee Shop

by Series_Shipper

Summary

Light Spinner is going to a specific Café every single afternoon and it didn't take her long to notice a certain waitress; Castaspella...

Notes

See the end of the work for notes

Light Spinner was sitting in a Café near her house, her laptop on the table, trying to focus on what to write next on her essay that her professor gave her a week ago and was due at the end of the month. And throughout this week she wasn't able to make any progress and was now getting frustrated by it.

She just felt like the topic didn't relate to her... It wasn't a difficult one, for most people at least... The topic of the essay was "What makes you happy?" What made her happy, though? She never cared to pay attention to what yet now how she wished she did. Happy... What made her happy, not her family, for sure... Her father had left her when she was two years old, and her mother never cared for her and was an alcoholic person, she was an only child, and the one person who cared for her and raised her; her grandmother, had died. So, what made her happy? Her friend, Oberon, maybe? It's been a while since she had last seen him, though...

At that specific moment, she wasn't even focusing on trying to be happy but, rather was focusing on passing her exams and getting good grades this semester, which was finally coming to an end, summer getting closer and closer. However, she had to finish this stupid essay or else she would fail the class. Why did Professor Norwyn choose this topic?! She tried to convince him to change it, at least for her, yet he declined. And she thought he liked her...

"Ugh, this is stupid!" Light Spinner exclaimed in anger after staring at the screen for half an hour without writing anything. And at that moment she saw a figure, which placed a cup of coffee next to her computer on the table. And saw brown eyes, looking her way; Castaspella. She was a waitress at the Cafè and after visiting the Cafè every day she was able to know her and had some small talks with her in those past few months. "Thank you." She replied, eyeing the coffee before stretching her hand and holding it to her lips, letting the black coffee slip through her throat before placing it again down and sighing, eyeing yet again the laptop's screen again.

"Don't thank me; that's my job." The shorter woman, Castaspella, replied softly with a little smile on her face before she towered over her, eyeing the screen too, and let out. "What makes you happy?" She read out loud, making Light Spinner look up and at her. "Well, that's rather an easy topic! You should see what my asshole of a professor gave us as a topic." Castaspella let out with a roll of her eyes. She was in school too? She was sure she had dropped or something, how did she manage to work and keep up with her studies at the same time? Light Spinner was beyond impressed, to be honest. " 'How did a movie or book affect your life?' Like what it is this year with those stupid personal questions as topics. Why would a movie or book affect my life?! Sorry, to disappoint you but, nothing of the two had any impact on me or my life in any way." Castaspella announced slightly annoyed with her professor as she herself, as Light Spinner, had made no progress on it...

"What about that? I will write about your topic and you will write about mine, what do you think?" Light Spinner asked desperately trying to convince the other woman to agree and not have to worry about this stupid essay too. However, to her surprise, Castaspella firmly declined her proposition.

"No, sorry." Castaspella declined with an awkward smile while scratching the back of her neck, looking away, feeling bad for declining.

"Why?" Light Spinner asked curious, raising an eyebrow trying to understand why she didn't agree with her proposition. They both had made no progress, had the same due line and they liked the other topic better so why not? Why didn't she like the idea and turn it down? And she waited impatiently for an answer.

"Well, you see. To write this... It will be a challenge for you and me, both of us. Changing topics is the easy way and I don't want the easy way. Plus, you need to answer that question of yours." The waitress explained to the taller woman who raised an eyebrow, impressed on her points, this woman was full of surprises, wasn't she? However, she didn't like the last part of what she said.

"And may I ask why, I must answer it?"

"Because it's not that hard and it is concerning to not know what makes you happy..." Castaspella explained before walking off, to go and serve the other clients, leaving behind a confused Light Spinner who sipped her coffee and stared at her screen for about an hour more before packing her things up and heading home, where she lied on her bed, repeating the words Castaspella had earlier said to her on her head.

~~~~

The next evening after finishing all of her classes and being able to have a bath, she decided to go to the Cafè and try to write her essay.

However, she was just as stuck as she used to be and was sitting on the table, eyeing the screen with a frown on her face.

"It isn't going very well, is it now?" She heard a familiar voice say which made her flinch and then noticed a cup of coffee was served on her table before she heard the voice again making her look at where the song came from, which revealed Castaspella. "I am sorry, I didn't mean to scare you." The woman immediately apologized and Light Spinner just brushed it off, focusing on the cup instead. She hadn't ordered yet, did Castaspella mess up her orders? No, that wouldn't make sense... She never messes up; she is perfect at what she is doing. Then what happened and that cup was on the table? She decided to do what most people would and stretched her hand, holding and placing it on her lips, her eyes closed without realizing it, too scared of what it might taste like. And to her surprise, it was the coffee she always used to order; black coffee...

"I haven't ordered yet- How did you...?" She asked before her voice trailed off and decided to shut herself up as she saw the other woman's cheeks redden up.

"Well... ummmm... You know, you always order the same, black coffee... So, I just decided to take charge and make it..." Castaspella admitted, looking down and on the floor while fidgeting with her hands, confused about why she had become so nervous in such a short period of time. "It's okay if you don't like it. I will just make you another one, it was a stupid decision otherwise." She immediately apologized, feeling foolish for doing such a thing. She remembered so many clients who were really displeased with her decision to do so and got immediately embarrassed by the thought. However, Light Spinner was quick to stop her before she left.

"No, no. It's exactly what I was going to order, no worries." Light Spinner simply dismissed her with a wave of her hand and looked back at her screen before adding. "Thank you"

"Seriously, you don't have to thank me. Do I need to spell it out for you?" The shorter woman teased earning a snort from Light Spinner. "How do you even drink that thing?!" Castaspella asked, pointing towards her coffee, showing how disgusted she was only at the thought of drinking it. "It is so bitter. I literally put like the least five sugars on my coffee..." She murmured the last part mostly to herself, yet Light Spinner heard what she said and couldn't help but, let out a snort.

"Five? You have a sweet tooth, huh?" Light Spinner teased her back earning a chuckle from Castaspella.

"I sure do." The waitress, agreed before walking off and into the shop, leaving Light Spinner on her own yet again, this time with a little smile placed on her face.

~~~~

"Made any progress yet?" Castaspella asked appearing from behind her and placed her regular cup of black coffee on the table.

"What do you think?" Light Spinner complained, gesturing towards the screen which had nothing written on it except the title. "What about you?"

"Well, I did decide on what book my essay will be based on so that's a start." The shorter woman replied happily, before taking the chair next to Light Spinner and settling down, looking at the screen and then back at Light Spinner, who was looking at her with a raised brow, making her slightly chuckle. "You don't have to immediately write it. Just think of some things or people that make you happy and write them on bullet points, then choose the best ones, explain why and you will be done." Catsaspella easily explained with a smile painted on her lips. Does she always smile?

"Easier said than done."

"Okay, what about that? I will try to help you, alright?" Castaspella announced, clapping her hands together in such a childish way it took everything in Light Spinner to not burst into laughter. However, soon enough she got curious about why she would do such a thing for her, and what was the benefit of doing so. Also, didn't she have work to do?

"Don't you have to... I don't know, make more coffees or something?"

"Oh, no, don't worry about that! I have a half an hour break. So, I will be here and torturing you for the next thirty minutes trying to convince you to write the essay." She joked with a devious smirk and at that moment she couldn't hold herself any longer and burst into laughter, making Catsaspella start laughing too. After some time they were finally both finished laughing and Castaspella took a more serious look. "Now, what makes you happy?"

"That's the problem, I don't know!" Light Spinner exclaimed in frustration, throwing her arms in the air before grabbing the cup and drinking some coffee, which was luckily still hot.

"Okay, listen, it doesn't have to be something complicated or too deep. It can be something that feels stupid but, makes you happy nonetheless." Castaspella explained, placing her hands accidentally on top of Light Spinner's while talking, and when she noticed she immediately pulled them away, blushing. "Sorry." She whispered and surprisingly Light Spinner had slightly blushed too...

"No worries... But, like what?"

"Okay, I will go first. I know it may sound lame so don't judge me!" She was saying before she got interrupted by Light Spinner.

"I can't promise anything." She replied with a smirk, leaving Castaspella open-mouthed.

"What a bitch!" She exclaimed, making both herself and Light Spinner chuckle before she continued more seriously. "What makes me happy is knitting. It is a fun activity for me and I can make things useful for me and gift them to friends and family." Castaspella explained to her, before adding. "Sounds good? Now your turn!" She requested, crossing her arms and looking at her directly in the eyes.

"Knitting, huh?" Light Spinner repeated with a smirk, trying to waste as much time as possible before giving her an actual answer.

"You are not supposed to comment!" The shorter woman complained with a pout on her face. Such childish behavior, yet it was hilarious seeing such a sight.

"I never agreed on that." Light Spinner defended, crossing her arms now too with a smirk she didn't bother to hide.

"Whatever... Your turn!"

"I don't know what I am supposed to say!"

"Just think of something. Okay, let me put it that way. What do you do when you get back home?" Castaspella asked, eyes full of curiosity looking directly at her, making Light Spinner look the other way, feeling her cheeks changing color to a more pinkish one.

"I sleep." Such a lame answer she knew. She didn't immediately sleep but that's what she first thought and came out of her mouth without thinking it too much.

"Sleep, that's all you could think of..." The waitress exclaimed and face-palmed, trying to not lose her patience. This was going to be extremely difficult, wasn't it...

"I mean... I don't immediately sleep. But, what I do it's going to sound so lame." She shyly admitted, not daring to look her way feeling she had revealed too much and made herself look vulnerable...

"More lame than drinking black coffee every single day?" Castaspella teased her trying to make her feel more comfortable seeing that she looked distressed...

"Yeah, well, at least, I don't drink my coffee with 5 sugars or more!" Light Spinner pointed with a smirk, making Castaspella roll her eyes with a smile still placed on her face.

"Fair enough. But, it can't be more lame than your first answer..." She pointed out with a smirk, smiling more as she Light Spinner was getting more and more comfortable with each minute passing.

"Says the one, who said knitting!"

"Knitting is fun and it is not lame!" The woman immediately defended herself. "Now, tell me! I won't judge you, I promise!!!" She promised raising her little finger to her, making the other woman look at her with a brow raised before she hesitantly locked her finger with hers as Castaspella said "Pinky promise"

"Fine." Light Spinner finally agreed letting go of Castaspella's finger. "I like gardening. I have some plants in my house and like a small garden on my balcony." She admitted, looking away feeling embarrassed and Castaspella was left open-mouthed. She had never thought the woman next to her would do such an activity, especially gardening. However, it felt right and fit for her...

"That's really nice and not lame at all!" Castaspella immediately assured her, placing her hands on top of hers and squeezing them before pulling them away, leaving Light Spinner with a small blush on her face. "So, what kind of plants do you have in your garden?" She questioned, wanting to know more information about that little hobby of hers she just learnt about.

"Well, rosies, daises... You get what I mean."

"That's great. See it wasn't that hard, now write it. And let's move on and try to find another one." The waitress announced and Light Spinner immediately typed 'gardening'.

In these thirty they were able to find three things that made her and they were both really satisfied with their work.

- Gardening
- Reading
- Painting

"Well, I believe that is good enough. Let's move on to the people that make you happy, shall we?" Light Spinner was about to agree when she heard a voice calling for Castaspella who immediately stood you and looked in the direction the voice came from.

"Castaspella, your break is over. No more time for chit-chat, we need you here!" The voice yelled from the door of the shop and Catsaspella nodded and turned to Light Spinner.

"My break is over. Try to think about the people that make you happy and we will talk about it tomorrow. Bye..." Castaspella goodbyed and noticed she in fact had no idea what the other woman's name was... Oops, that means she will have to ask tomorrow... And then Castaspella walked towards the shop and disappeared from Light Spinner's sight...

Light Spinner then stayed up until three in the morning trying to find people who made her happy, however, she could think of Oberon and maybe her grandmother when she used to be a child... Defeated she lied on her bed and soon enough fell asleep.

~~~~

"So, did you think of anyone specific?" Castaspella asked her, settling down on the chair next to her after she gave Light Spinner her usual, as Castaspella called it, black coffee. Since when does she even have a usual? And why did she even care if Castaspella called it her usual?!

"The only one I could think of is my childhood friend. Oberon is his name, we don't talk as much but, I consider him a person I can rely on to make me laugh." Light Spinner explained to her and Castaspella looked her eyes full of curiosity. It was something in this woman that was drawing her in and all of her attention and she didn't know why...

"Well, that's a start for sure. Write his name on the computer and if you want you can tell me why you think he does so, so I can help you. Sounds good?" She questioned, placing her hand on her shoulder and just letting it rest there; a blush creeping down her cheeks and she couldn't understand why she was blushing and why she even placed it there to begin with...

"Well... I wasn't able to make friends easily and somehow I was able to meet him and we matched immediately... Soon enough we became best friends and were hanging out with each other every day without even realizing it. When I was sad he would always tell me jokes to cheer me up and when I was happy he used to throw a party at anything that I succeeded in. We don't talk as much now as I said before but, I still consider him as my friend." Light Spinner explained with a big genuine smile on her face, remembering the memories of these days and how easy life was then and how free they were without even realizing it, without responsibilities... And Castaspella smiled too, feeling her cheeks changing color while looking at how happy Light Spinner for once looked, it was such a rare yet beautiful sight to see and she felt special for being able to see her like that before she heard her clear her throat as she composed herself, her smile disappearing as soon as it appeared.
~~~~

"Well, that's great. We've got one only two left to go." Castaspella encouraged her while she was typing his name. "See, it's not that bad." The shorter woman exclaimed and gave a squeeze at Light Spinner's shoulder with the hand she had forgotten, she placed there minutes ago... However, Light Spinner's expression turned into a serious one and Castaspella was now worried she shouldn't have done what she did.

"I don't get it though. Why are you helping?! What do you benefit from this?!" Light Spinner questioned her angrily, letting her words come out harsher than she expected as she let out the thoughts that had been wandering around her mind for a while now. And Castaspella was utterly surprised and retrieved her hand and placed it on her lap.

"I don't benefit anything. I just wanted to help you. You have been coming here for... like a year and I don't know, I guess I kind of grew familiar with your presence and wanted to help you even though we are not friends, if that is what you are wondering." Castaspella immediately explained and for reason, her words hit harder than expected. Even though we are not friends. Of course, they weren't... She knew so... Then why did it bother her? It shouldn't bother, Castaspella was a complete stranger, yes, that's what she was...

"Thank you... And sorry for the 'attack'." Light Spinner was able to say, trying to collect her thoughts again.

"It's okay, you were just being cautious. Trusting people these days is hard, I get it. However, try not to act like that whenever someone does something good for you and tries to help you, alright?" Castaspella encouraged her, placing her right hand on top of hers squeezing it while giving a little smile, and at the moment Light Spinner was beyond confused; She could feel her cheeks and neck heat up and she felt like she had a stomachache... Why was feeling like that? Why did Castaspella look so cute in that moment she couldn't handle it anymore, making herself look away. Making Castaspella chuckle slightly before she started talking again and this time she could feel the awkwardness in her voice. "Ummm, I know this will sound so weird and out of context but... I may not know your name... Sorry..." Castaspella finally let out her cheeks red with embarrassment as she chuckled awkwardly and Light Spinner turned to face her, feeling a little better.

"I guess I never introduced myself. The fault is all mine, no worries. My name is Light Spinner." Light Spinner introduced herself, caressing Castaspella's hand with her thumb and when she understood what she had done, she immediately pulled her hand away, cursing herself under her breath.

"Light Spinner." Castaspella tested the sound of her name coming out of her mouth before she commented. "Quite an odd name, no?"

"Like Castaspella is any better. Casta-a-spell, really?" Light Spinner commented with a smirk, chuckling before she quickly added.

"Sorry, that was rude." Light Spinner apologized however, Castaspella didn't look mad but, rather... embarrassed?

"I know, not the best name I could think of... My real name is Esmeralda." Castaspella decided to reveal and she felt herself blush trying to understand why she revealed her true name to that woman. She was driving her mad and she didn't know why. Or maybe she suspected why but, was in denial...

"Esmeralda. That's a wonderful name, why would you change it?" The taller woman questioned raising her eyebrow. She loved the sound of that name and she couldn't understand why the other woman decided to change it. Making her wait impatiently for her answer however, she was stunned when she saw Castaspella just shrug her shoulders.

"I don't exactly know... I just changed it and after a certain everyone was used to calling me Castaspella so, I just went with it. It doesn't bother me that much to be honest. " Castaspella casually explained and Light Spinner just stared at her impressed and was now debating whether she should tell her true name or not? She was just a mere stranger, why would she reveal her real name to her?! Castaspella had said it herself, they are not friends...

"My actual name is Beatrix. But, don't you dare even mention that ever again!" Light Spinner quickly let out a serious look painted all over her face while blushing. And Castaspella nodded, holding up her hands as if surrendering.

"Don't worry I know nothing." Castaspella assured her, singling with her hands that she zipping her mouth, promising to not say anything.

"Good." However, before Light Spinner could say anything she heard a ringing sound and Castaspella immediately searched into her pocket where she found her phone ringing and turned the alarm off, standing up.

"Sorry but, my break is over. I will see you tomorrow though, try to think about someone while you are home, will you? Bye, Bea." Castaspella explained and goodbyed her using a nickname for her and Light Spinner had turned red. Why was she even caring so much? It was just a nickname, a nickname made of her real name, that only she uses for her... And the more she thought about it the more she felt herself blushing. However, after she got home she was able to think of something else than Castaspella and typed the name of her grandmother as a person who makes her happy. And she lied on her bed however, she couldn't sleep, her thoughts were replaying the events that happened today and every one of her interactions with Castaspella. And soon enough realization hit... She then immediately grabbed a pillow and placed it on her face not so gently and groaned, her cheeks all red; she had fallen in love with Castaspella...

~~~~~

And this continued for about two weeks, with Light Spinner visiting the Cafè every afternoon and Castaspella helping her with her essay. However, this time Light Spinner stopped by her house first and then went to the Café as she used to all these months.

She was sitting on her couch with her laptop placed on her lap as she stared at the screen her cheeks all red, debating whether she should write Castaspella as a person who made her happy. Sure she was funny to have around, and she decided to help her even though she didn't even know her name, she was sweet and caring and such great company. However, she wasn't sure, she didn't want to jump to conclusions yet. And the worst part of all was that Castaspella would see it... What if she found her weird? What if she never talked to her?! After all, she made it clear to her that they weren't friends...

"Fuck." Light Spinner cursed before shutting down her laptop grabbed it and placed it into her bag before leaving for the Café.

~~~~~

"Come on, think Bea ." Here it was that stupid nickname that was driving her mad. Was she overthinking all of this? Probably... It was just a nickname, just a nickname however, she couldn't help herself from blushing.

"I already told you. I don't know!" Light Spinner defended herself in frustration and Castaspella gave her a soft look and placed her hand on her shoulder squeezing it.

"Just think, okay? Oh! What about this? It used to always help me and it still does, to be honest."
~~~~~

"What am I supposed to do?" She questioned, raising an eyebrow, suspicious.

"I want you to close your eyes and take some deep breaths. It will help you relax and think more clearly." Castaspella explained and retrieved her hand from her shoulder. Light Spinner was hesitant for a while before she finally closed her eyes and started taking deep breaths. "Yep, exactly like that." Castaspella encouraged her whispering before she added. "Does it work?"

"I feel calmer. But, I still can't think of anyone..." She admitted and opened her eyes again to see Castaspella looking at her with a sympathetic look.

"Well-" The shorter woman was about to say before she heard an alarm, specifically her phone's alarm; her break was over. "Darn it. We can always work on it tomorrow." She encouraged her however, it didn't work as Light Spinner groaned.

"I have only one week left! There is no way I will be done until then!" Light Spinner complained, making Castaspella give her another sympathetic look.

"We will finish it, don't worry about it! Now, I better get going, see you Bea." The waitress goodbyed and walked towards the door of the Cafè before opening it and disappearing from Light Spinner's sight.

~~~~~

The days before her due line passed quickly, too quickly, and before they both knew it, the day had finally arrived and Light Spinner hadn't visited the Cafè since their last interaction, a week ago. Making Castaspella worried about why she decided to disappear all of a sudden, especially now. And as she didn't show up on Sunday, the day it was her essay's due line, she accepted the fact that she might have made things worse for Light Spinner rather than helped her...

"Okay. And sent." Light Spinner exclaimed and closed her laptop, letting out a deep breath she didn't know she even held. She had made it, she had written it. Without Castaspella's help... It wasn't that Castaspella wasn't a good helper, rather the opposite however, she had decided to make a decision she was too embarrassed to share with Castaspella. She had written her as a person who made her happy and after she decided to do so about a week ago she didn't dare to show her face in the Cafè but, rather ordered coffee and drank it in the comfort of her house while writing her essay. She was so happy at the specific moment that she wanted nothing else than to run to the Cafè and share the news with Castaspella. However, she didn't do so... She was going to face her, yes. Just not right now, she wanted to wait for the results to come in and then announce the news to her. And show her what she actually wrote. But, that had to wait for now...

~~~~~

A month had passed and Light Spinner still hadn't stepped foot on the Cafè, making Castaspella more and more worried each day passing. Was she okay? Had she messed up? Was she able to write her essay? Does she hate her?! Was all she could think of at night and days too and this time she accidentally spilled out some hot coffee for the fifth time this week.

"Aouch!" Castaspella exclaimed and shook her hand quickly, the cup slipping out of her hands and breaking up as it hit the floor, making Castaspella curse under her breath which turned the other employee's attention to her.

"Are you okay, girl? I think you should take a break... That's the fifth time this week! And it's already Wednesday..." The cashier suggested to Castaspella who gave her a reassuring smile and started cleaning up the mess she created.

"Don't worry about me. I am fine. I was just too lost in my thoughts! Nothing to worry about!" Castaspella brushed it off, throwing away the pieces of glass that were spread all around the room.

"That's the problem though. You never get lost in your thoughts! You are too distracted, girl. You need a break!" The girl insisted, earning the same reply from Castaspella which meant she had to take things a step further for the sake of Castaspella and the store's too. They couldn't have a waitress who was messing up orders and breaking up cups all day long!

"Again, I'm fine. No need to worry. I don't need a break!" She brushed it off again. However, by the end of the day the manager had called her into his office, explaining the situation and that he could give her a break so she relax and return to her normal self again as something was clearly bothering her. She obviously declined but, she had no choice but to obey as he insisted...

~~~~~

The results had finally come in and she had got a ninety-seven percent! She was so happy and finally decided to visit the Cafè the next day to tell Castaspella about the big news! And also to reveal who the third and mystery person was to Castaspella. She knew Castaspella might just laugh it off and ignore her for the rest of her life but, she had to tell her. Maybe she wasn't brave enough to ever reveal her true feelings about her but, that much she could. After all maybe if she still stayed her friend, she could one day confess to her? Not likely but, not impossible too! She had to stay positive!

Thursday finally came and first thing in the morning she went to Cafè to talk to Castaspella. However, when she was greeted by another waitress she was confused and scared at the same time. Was she mad for not showing up for about a month and a half and decided to act like she wasn't there? Time passed and as she was not able to spot Castaspella anywhere she finally decided to ask the waitress if she knew anything about it.

"Excuse me miss. But, do you happen to know where Castaspella is?" Light Spinner asked all embarrassed as she realized what she had done.

"Castaspella will be absent for a week, sorry." The girl replied and was about to leave before the sound of Light Spinner's voice stopped her.

"Do you maybe happen to know how I can contact her?" Light Spinner asked desperately, she was finally brave enough right now and had no idea if she would be an hour later, and she at that specific moment decided to take a break!? Did the universe hate her that much?!

"I don't have her phone number so..."

"Please it's something really important! If you know anything please tell me!" Light Spinner begged, she actually begged to be able to contact Castaspella! Oh, when she will find her she will have some explaining to do!

"But, I do know her address..." The waitress added hesitantly. "However, I don't know if I should trust you."

"Please I just need to talk to her. It's an emergency!" She tried to convince her and finally did.

"Fine, that's her address, weirdo." And she gave her a paper with an address written on it and then disappeared.

Light Spinner immediately grabbed it and read it, she then quickly got into the car and started driving.

After about ten minutes she was outside the apartment the waitress had given her the address to go to. She took a deep breath and knocked on the door. First, the door didn't open and Light Spinner was about to admit defeat when the door suddenly opened, revealing a Castaspella all dressed up in pajamas with a shocked expression written all over her face.

"Hi, Castaspella." Light Spinner greeted awkwardly and Castaspella nodded opening the door wider, letting Light Spinner in.

"Hi." Castaspella replied dryly, closing the door behind her and following Light Spinner into the living room.

"Nice house, you have here." Light Spinner observed when she entered the living room where she awkwardly sat on a sofa.

"Thank you..."

"Ah... Yeah, my visit was kind of unexpected... And you are probably wondering how I got your address and what I want." Light Spinner pointed out and Castaspella nodded and sat next to her on the sofa, signaling for her to start speaking. "Well, I wanted to announce you something and I started talking with one of the waitresses and I asked her if she had your phone number or something similar. However, she told me she didn't but, then she admitted she had your address... So, here I am!" She awkwardly announced and Castaspella gave her a weird look which she couldn't understand what it meant.

"So, let me get that straight! You just disappeared for about two months and then you show up here like nothing happened?!" Castaspella exclaimed in frustration, her voice going higher as she spoke an angry expression painted all over her face. And Light Spinner was taken completely out of guard...

"Are... are you... mad at me?" Light Spinner hesitantly asked and Castaspella chuckled bitterly.

"I don't know, what do you think?!" It was a rhetorical question but, Light Spinner felt like she had to answer... However, she never got the chance to as Castaspella started speaking again. "Of course, I am mad at you-"

"Why?!"

"Why?! Because all of a sudden you just disappeared for so long and I couldn't do anything other than just worry all the time! How much logic does it need to understand that?!" And Light Spinner was left speechless and was just looking at her, trying to think of what to say next. Why did she care so much? It felt unrealistic, nobody except Oberon and her grandma had ever cared for her...

"Why do you care so much?" She decided to ask hesitantly and Castaspella sighed before she started talking.

"Listen, I know I said we are not friends... However, I think I have may changed my mind since then. Or maybe even had lied then too." She murmured the last part to herself before she shook her head and took Light Spinner's hands on her own. "What I mean to say is, I have come to see you as my friend whether you do or you don't see me as such..." Castaspella shyly admitted all flustered while caressing Light Spinner's knuckles with her thumb.

"I-" Light Spinner tried to say but, caught herself off. She then looked away for some seconds took a deep breath and looked at their joined hands. "I see you as my friend too." She admitted, all flustered too and she soon felt arms getting wrapped around her, startling her at the beginning but, soon enough she hugged Castaspella back, resting her chin on her shoulder while caressing her hair. "Sorry for worrying you..."

"Just never do it again."

"I will try..."

"Enough for me..."

"Es.." Light Spinner decided to call her by her real which was something she had never done before but, now it felt like the right thing to do. She had to tell her about her essay and now she knew she didn't have to worry about Castaspella not wanting her as her friend. However, she still felt very nervous...

"Hm?"

"I got the results from my essay back..." And after hearing that Castaspella's eyes immediately lit up while she squeezed her hands too.

"What did you get?!"

"Ninety-seven."

"I am so proud of you!" She said pulling away from the hug only to just hug her again after hearing the news.

"Yeah..."

"Can I read it?! Can I read it?! Pleaseeeeee!!! Pretty pleaseeeeee!!!" Castaspella begged, pulling away from the hug and Light Spinner was kind of disappointed when she did so as she would have loved to stay there for a little longer...

"Fine..." The taller woman agreed and took the paper in her hands. "Just please don't judge me..." She pleaded before handling to her.

"I would never." Castaspella assured her before giving her whole attention to the paper on her hands, which she immediately started reading. And she was nearly at the end when she noticed her name being written on it and she immediately started reading that part, feeling her heart beating faster as she did so.

Another person who makes me happy is someone I met about... a year ago... Her name is Castaspella. However, we didn't use to talk that much. That soon enough changed as she decided to help me with this essay and I can easily say she is the reason I have written this whole essay and haven't given up on it to begin... I was negative from the beginning however, she was always positive and tried to cheer me up when I wasn't feeling good. She stayed patient with me and dealt with every single one of my stupid attitudes. I had been harsh to her but, she stayed. I was sad and she always made me smile and laugh. All in all, she was always there for me. As I said before I haven't known her that much but, she is a person I can trust and I couldn't imagine my life without her anymore! She is the person who makes me happy and I couldn't choose another person than her!

Castaspella was left speechless and was just staring at the paper in disbelief. There was no way she had affected her life that much... Was it? However, Light Spinner wasn't a person who would fake niceness, whatever she said and did, she meant it. Castaspella knew as much so, this only led to one conclusion, she had meant every single word.

At that point, she didn't know how to react, what to say... She felt the same things, she loved her and she wanted to tell but, a part of her was holding her back... After all, she decided to do what felt right to her and she pushed herself forward, wrapping her arms around Light Spinner, pulling her into an embrace which Light Spinner returned.

She then took a deep and said what she wanted to say months ago; there was no turning back now...

"I like you." Castaspella finally admitted, all red and she felt a weight getting lifted out of her after she finally let out what she felt. And for a second she felt the embrace loosen up, making her heart skip a beat, knowing Light Spinner probably didn't feel the same way and she had just embarrassed herself... However, after some seconds which felt like an eternity to her, she felt arms wrapping around her tighter before she heard Light Spinner whisper too.

"I like you too." And they fell into silence after that, into each other's arms. It wasn't an awkward silence this time; It was surprisingly comforting... "So, what does that mean?" Light Spinner hesitantly asked, earning a chuckle from Castaspella seeing how shy she had become in such a short period of time.

"What do you want it to mean?" Castaspella decided to ask instead of answer as she pulled away from the hug, to see Light Spinner's face which was all red.

"I... Do you maybe want to be my... girlfriend?" Light Spinner collected all of her strength and shyly let out.

"I would like that." Castaspella admitted and smiled, making Light Spinner smile too. Before they started chuckling for no reason at all... Oh, well... After they finally stopped chuckling Light Spinner noticed Castaspella was looking at her a little weird and she decided to ask about it.

"What-" However, she was interrupted by Castaspella pushing herself forward and crashing their lips together into a kiss. It took a second for Light Spinner to recover her senses and when she did, she wrapped her arms around her waist, pulling her closer to her, kissing her back while Castaspella cupped her right cheek, caressing it with her thumb.

It was not what they both had expected to happen when Light Spinner first stepped into the apartment. However, it was better than anything they would had...

End Notes

Thank you so much for reading!!!

And I would love to hear your thoughts!!!

Have a nice day or night!!! \ (^-^) /

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!