Drunk 'N' Love

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/60077692.

Rating:
General Audiences

Archive Warning:
No Archive Warnings Apply

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Adora & Bow & Catra & Glimmer (She-Ra)

Characters:
Catra (She-Ra), Adora (She-Ra), Bow (She-Ra), Glimmer (She-Ra), Entrapta (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Fluff, No Angst, well I'll try, Drunk Adora (She-Ra), Exasperated Catra, how is that not a tag?, Useless Lesbians, I'm Bad At Tagging, POV Catra (She-Ra), they're lesbians your honour, Established Relationship, Spoilers, Best Friend Squad (She-Ra), Marriage Proposal, Drunken Shenanigans

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2024-10-27 Words: 2,798 Chapters: 1/1

Drunk 'N' Love

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/60077692.

Rating:
General Audiences

Archive Warning:
No Archive Warnings Apply

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Adora & Bow & Catra & Glimmer (She-Ra)

Characters:
Catra (She-Ra), Adora (She-Ra), Bow (She-Ra), Glimmer (She-Ra), Entrapta (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Fluff, No Angst, well I'll try, Drunk Adora (She-Ra), Exasperated Catra, how is that not a tag?, Useless Lesbians, I'm Bad At Tagging, POV Catra (She-Ra), they're lesbians your honour, Established Relationship, Spoilers, Best Friend Squad (She-Ra), Marriage Proposal, Drunken Shenanigans

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2024-10-27 Words: 2,798 Chapters: 1/1

Drunk 'N' Love

by HDGKNG42

Summary

Catra is called to to the infirmary in Brightmoon by Glimmer. She was told that her girlfriend got into a bit of trouble while on a mission in space, but this wasn't what she had in mind.

Notes

Please note, I've written one shots before, but almost 2 years ago. So, I'm a bit out of practice with this. Most of my fics, apart from 3, are multi-chapter. So, this could end up being not very good. But, I'm taking a break from this massive one I'm working on, so I thought, why not give one shots another go? So that's what I'm doing. Catra and Adora are so fucking cute in this show, and Drunk Adora was so fucking funny, and not used nearly enough in that show. So, I wrote a fic about it. I will also try something new here, and writing this in the first-person. I have never done this before, so I hope you enjoy.

See the end of the work for more notes

When Glimmer told me that something happened with Adora in the latest space mission, I very nearly scratched her. Of course, the one time I couldn't come with them up to space was the one time something happened to that idiot. I dropped my nail file and shot up ~~and may or may not have let out a small cat's yowl. Don't judge me.~~ I followed the Queen out of my and Adora's room and down the halls of the castle. She, Glimmer, Bow and Entrapta had gone out to space again to bring magic to other planets ruined by Horde Prime. I normally went with them, but Scorpia requested I stay behind this time. She and Perfuma asked that I give them a hand with clearing out the last remnants of the Horde from Scorpia's kingdom, and Adora insisted that I go. "It'll be a great way to rekindle your friendship with Scorpia!" she exclaimed. "And we won't be gone long, I promise." Gods she's impossible to say no to. But now, I wish I did.

I followed Glimmer down the hallway, and demanded to know exactly what happened to my girlfriend. Glimmer looked like she wasn't sure she wanted to tell me. "Well, we were on this planet a bunch of plants," she began. "A bit like Etheria, except the plants looked weird. Anyway, we were investigating some of them when one of the plants started attacking us."

"Wait what!?" I demanded. "The plants started attacking you?"

Glimmer nodded. "Some of the plants came to life and began to attack us. Adora transformed into She-Ra, and fought it off. That's when we decided to leave and come back with better weapons. Bow didn't even bring his bow after all. But, as we were leaving, the plant scratched Adora after she transformed back. She seemed fine when we left the planet, but as we were flying home, she began acting... strange."

"Strange?" I asked, growing more worried by the second. "Strange how?"

the answer to that question came when Glimmer opened the door to the infirmary. Adora was lying on one of the beds, with Bow trying to hold her down because she kept trying to get up. Entrapta was floating around the room, audio log in on of her strands of hair, while she messed around with some tools. "Fascinating," she said. "It seems like there's some kind of poison in the spikes on the plants roots. This poison made Adora go floppy, just like with the red disk! Now, if I could just draw some blood and run a few tests..."

"No, no, NO!" I shout, running up to Entrapta and pulling the devices in her hair away. "You will not be experimenting on Adora!"

Bow nodded in agreement. "Look, all we need to do is keep her here until she can recover!" he said. "She needs to rest while the poison works through her system."

"I don' need rest," Adora called, her voice going all funny. "I'm fiiiiiiine. I'm She-Ra!" That's when she locks eyes with me. They widened, as though she only just noticed I was there. "Kittyyyyyyyyyyyyyy!" she called. "Hiiiiiii. Hey, when did you get four heads? I wanna kiss 'em!" She starts puckering her lips and reaching out to my face in order to kiss me. Despite the fact that she was clearly not in the right headspace, seeing her do this still caused me to blush a bit.

Entrapta looked at Adora, then shook her head. "Actually, we don't know what kind of poison this is," she pointed out. "For all we know, it could just work through her system. Or, it could be slowly killing her." That idea caused fear to course through me. "The only way we can know for sure is if we run some tests." Entrapta turned to me as she said this. "I promise I won't do anything to hurt her. I just need to get a reading on her blood to ensure that she there aren't any pathogenic viruses or anything that can cause irreparable damage to anything in her system." When we all looked at her with blank stares, she simplified. "I need to test her to see if it is really bad."

Adora watched all of this happen and giggled. "I don' need tests, I'm fine!" she said. She tried to stand up, but immediately spun around and fell. I ran forward and caught her before she hit the ground. "Heh heh, Hi kitty," she said when she looked up at me. "This feels comfortable." It's only then that I notice our positions. I was holding her by the armpits, with her back against my chest. Her head lay just under my neck, right where.... I blushed, and dropped her. She made a small noise of pain, then giggled some more. "That was fun," she said. "Do it again."

"No, let's not do that again!" Bow said, picking her up and laying her back on the bed. "Entrapta, just run those tests. And try not to hurt her!"

"No promises," Entrapta replied, before grabbing a few gizmos with her hair. I had no idea what they did, but seeing them made me glad I wasn't in Adora's situation.

Entrapta's experiments didn't end up taking very long. Once she was done, she quickly configured the data and from there managed to work out what the poison was. "Ok," she said. "So, as it turns out, this poison isn't fatal, nor does it contain anything pathogenic."

"Patho... what?" Glimmer asked.

Entrapta sighed. "It won't spread anything bad," she simplified. "However, it's not something that her body will be able to fight off either. The only thing that can cure her is a special root only found on that planet."

"So, we just take her back to that planet and find the root," said Glimmer. "Problem solved." A giggle from behind us confirmed that this was easier said than done. Adora was once again sitting up in bed, poking at one of the machines. Everytime she did, she wince, then giggle again. "heh heh, pointy," she said.

"Yeah, I don't think she's in any shape to be travelling through space," said Bow. We all nodded in agreement.

Then Glimmer just had to suggest the worst plan possible. "Bow, Entrapta and I will head out as fast as possible and get that root. Catra, you stay with Adora and keep an eye on her."

I went bright red at this. "Why do I need to look after her?" I demanded. "You guys are responsible for her state. One of you should do it!"

"But you don't know where to find the root, or even what the planet looks like," Glimmer replied. "Besides, someone needs to stay here and keep an eye on Adora. And my teleportation, Bow's arrows, and Entrapta's knowledge of the ship are needed to get this root. So, you're the only one who can." I blushed at the thought of all of the things Adora may end up saying to me while in this state. But then I looked at her and saw that, despite how 'floppy' she was, she was still my girlfriend, and I needed to keep her safe. So, I sighed and nodded my head.

After everyone else left, I decided it would be easier to keep an eye on Adora if I took her back to our room. I tried to wrap her arm around my shoulder and hoist her to her feet, but whatever poison was in her system clearly decided that she shouldn't walk. Every 5 steps we took, she tripped and almost fell. Then, she'd mutter incoherently and laugh. After moving only 5 feet in about 5 minutes, I got tired of this and changed tactics. Ignoring how warm my face had gotten, I picked Adora up bridal style ~~completely ignoring the images that started appearing in my brain,~~ and carried her the rest of the way.

Adora looked around at the position she was in and beamed. "Oooooohhhhhh, are we getting married!?" she asked.

My face felt warmer, if at all possible. "No, Adora, we aren't," I replied. "You're sick and I'm taking you to our room."

"But I'm fiiiiiiine," she insisted, before lazily wrapping her arms around my neck, not that I'm complaining of course. "Do you wanna get married?" she asked, her eyelashes fluttering.

I froze in my tracks. No way she just said that. There's absolutely no way she just said that! I looked down at her, and saw that she was looking at me expectantly. With a jolt, I realised she was waiting for an answer. I ignored the question and carried on, hoping that I could dodge the question. Unfortunately, Adora seemed to take my silence the wrong way.

"Y-y-you don't want to get married?" she asked, tearing up.

I stopped moving and looked at her, panic filling me. "Of course I do," I said. "But not while you're like this! I want our proper proposal to be while you're conscious, and can actually remember it, ok?" Adora nodded, her tears subsiding. "Ok, now, let's get you to bed." Adora nodded, then her head lulled backwards, and she began to snore.

I brought her back to our room and deposited her on the bed. Then, I slumped down onto the seat I was sitting on when Glimmer burst through the door. I considered falling asleep myself after carrying Adora all the way through Brightmoon castle, but figured it would probably be best if I didn't. As I sat there, I heard Adora mumbling to herself. "She said yes, she wants to marry me!"

I giggled and sighed, then did something quite out of character for me. I got up and sat down on the bed. I lifted Adora's head and placed it on my lap. She began to grin and opened her eyes. "Your legs are comfy," she commented, still in that weird stupor. Then, her eyes darted to my back, and she saw that my tail had begun to wag. Gods, as if this day couldn't get any worse! She laughed with delight at this and began to reach out for it, playfully trying to hit it like, well like a cat with a piece of string, for lack of a better simile. As she played with it, she giggled like a toddler.

"It's so swishy," she said happily. "I wanna play with it more often!"

I sighed. "Maybe when your better," I replied. "For now, you should get some sleep. The others should be back soon."

Adora nodded, but didn't stop playing with my tail. Then, she started giggling harder. "Hey Catra," she said. "I have a tail to tell you!" Then, she began to roll with laughter on my lap. I resisted the urge to slap her. But maybe I should've, because she kept going. "Catra, you look meowvelous today!" "I'll love you furever!" "Thank you for CATching me!"

After a bit more playing and awful cat puns, she fell back asleep. I shifted her head off of my lap, then was about to stand back up, when I noticed something. Adora's other hand, the one that she wasn't using to swat my tail, had clasped onto mine. And by the looks of it, she wasn't going to let go. So, I resigned myself to my fate, and decided that maybe it was time for a cat nap. Dammit, now I'm making awful cat puns! Gods this woman will be the death of me! Or my pride, and I don't know what's worse! I lay down on the bed next to her, and found myself falling asleep.

I woke up to the sound of giggling, and thought that Adora had woken up and begun telling more bad jokes to herself. But when I opened my eyes, I saw that she was still asleep. At some point during the night, she rolled over and ended up snuggling me in our sleep. I heard the sound of laughter again and looked around. To my utter humiliation, Glimmer, Bow and Entrapta were back, and they were staring at us.

I immediately shot up and woke Adora up in the process. Adora looked around wildly, and for a second I thought she was back to normal. But then she tried to stand up and immediately fell back down. "The floor keeps pulling me!" she complained. "Catra tell it to stop!" She looked up and saw our guests, then grinned at them. "Hey guys!" she said. "When did you all get twins?"

Bow and Glimmer helped Adora to her feet, while Entrapta showed me the root. It was a small green stick with a few grey spikes growing out of it. "This will help Adora get back to normal," she explained. "I just need your help with it."

"Of course," I said quickly. "What do you need?" She held out a petri dish under the root. "I need your claws to slice it," she said. "All we need to do is extract the juice from the root, then rub it on the spot where Adora was scratched. Then she'll be cured."

Without another word, I extended my claws and sliced the root. Entrapta squeezed it and managed to extract a large quantity of a vile green liquid. She looked like she really wanted to study it, but I shot her a death glare to make sure she put it to the correct use. She turned to Adora, then had Bow roll up the left leg of her trousers. She rubbed the liquid on the wound, and it seemed to glow for a second before disappearing into the wound. Adora let out one last giggle, before she slumped in Glimmer and Bow's arms.

I immediately rushed over to her. "I thought you said this would help her!" I shouted.

"It did," Entrapta replied. "This is a completely normal reaction according to the data I collected. She should be up again in a few hours." I nodded, then followed Bow And Glimmer as they carried an unconscious Adora back to the infirmary.

Sure enough, Adora reawakened a few hours later. I was alone with her at the time. Entrapta needed to make some repairs on the ship, supposedly the plant wasn't too happy with them taking one of its roots, and Bow and Glimmer went off by themselves. I don't know what they were doing or why, I never asked.

When she opened her eyes, the first thing she said was, "Hey beautiful. What's got you so worked up?"

I scoffed at that. "You you dummy!" I told her. "You just had to go and get yourself poisoned on the one time I couldn't go with you didn't you!"

Adora sat up and grabbed my hand. "Sorry to worry you," she said. "But I'm better now. And this time I mean it."

This caused me to become worried. If she remembered the amount of times she assured us she was fine before hurting herself, then what else did she remember. Deciding to play this cautiously, I asked, "So, what do you remember from your experience being poisoned?"

Adora shrugged. "Bits and pieces," she admitted. "I remember messing with your tail a bit, sorry about that, I remember Entrapta needing to use some machines, but that's about it." I sighed with relief at this. Clearly she didn't remember what I told her while I was carrying her through the hall. But then she got a smug look on her face, and I instantly realised I may have been wrong. "There's one other thing I do remember," she admitted.

"Uh, what's that?" I asked.

"I remember I asked you something," she said, standing up as she did. "And you replied that it should wait until I was sound of mind once again." At this, she began to fiddle with her wing pin on her belt. "Well, I'm sound of mind now, so I think it's safe to ask." Then, she got down on one knee and held the pin out. "Will you marry me Catra?"

I froze for ages, unsure what to think. Did I want to go through with this. I thought about it long and hard, and imagined a life married to Adora. Actually, the choice wasn't even too difficult. "Yes!" I exclaimed. "Yes, of course I will!" Adora beamed at this, then put the pin on my shirt. The two of us embraced, then began to kiss each other deeply. We both knew that we were going to have to tell the others about this, then start planning our wedding, but for now, neither of us cared. We were together, and Adora was better, and that's all that mattered to me just then.

End Notes

Ok, for my first time writing in the 1st person, I think I did quite well. I'm pretty proud of how this turned out, especially since this was my first one shot in nearly two years. Now, as for the pin thing, I read in a fic that that was how people on Etheria proposed to each other, so I went along with it. It helps that you can see that very pin on Catra's shirt in Adora's glimpse into the future. But yeah, that was fun to write, and I may write more for this fandom in future.

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!