How Far is Heaven?

by Praxiteles

Summary

They like playing board games drunk at one in the morning like a bunch of nerds. They like riding out the high of their drunkenness in the safety of their own apartments. They like playing the games wrong because no one remembers the rules with their muddy brains.

She doesn't even know why she's thinking about this. She'll get a text in an hour that's just a blurry picture of Catra, sitting in a circle with monopoly set up wrong and three faces smiling into the camera, and that will be that. That's nothing to worry about. That's not why she's up in a cold sweat with her hand over her racing heart and her breath unsteadily increasing.

Adora had a nightmare and now she wants her girlfriend like she's a baby. What a joke.

Adora has a nightmare and Catra is drunk and in love.

Notes

I wrote this because I was just going through my notes app and I came across the last and only time I tried weed. it was a horrible experience for me. Totally stressed me out and If I let myself stew in silence for to long I would have an anxiety attack. so me and my friends, who were stone out of their mind, sat in a circle and they just let me ramble for like three hours.

anyway, while I was under the influence I wrote down everything in my notes app and I just read through it recently and had a laugh. im going to add some of them Into the comments for you guys to read.

anyway, I projected my anxiety onto Adora and my inability to stop talking onto Catra and wrote it about being drunk instead of high because I like getting drunk way more and this is what I got. I hope you guys enjoy!! let me know if you do! if you like it I have a couple more one shots on my page.

See the end of the work for more notes

I taste a liquor never brewed –
From Tankards scooped in Pearl –
Not all the Frankfort Berries
Yield such an Alcohol!

Inebriate of air – am I –
And Debauchee of Dew –
Reeling – thro' endless summer days –
From inns of molten Blue –

When "Landlords" turn the drunken Bee
Out of the Foxglove's door –
When Butterflies – renounce their "drams" –
I shall but drink the more!

Till Seraphs swing their snowy Hats –
And Saints – to windows run –
To see the little Tippler
Leaning against the – Sun!

Adora’s heart is racing. Her chest is constricting and she can’t seem to catch a full breath. She’s shaking and she really can’t help it. Glimmer and Bow are curled up together next to her, their blanket crumpled up around them.

The sight makes her heart ache. It really isn’t helping the fact that she really wishes Catra was here.

But Catra isn’t here. They agreed. Adora was going to be gone at the Best friend squad annual slumber part and wasn’t going to be back at the apartment untill tomorrow night

Catra was going to be out with friends.

At bars.

Catra likes to do that. She likes to hang out with her friends and dance, and drink. She likes that and Adora isn't going to hold her back from that no matter how much anxiety it causes her.

Adora doesn't even have to be around them when their drunk. She won't even be there. Not until their hang overs are gone and the smell of alcohol has been erased from Catra's breath and the feline is there with open arms and sober reassuring words to calm her anxiety.

That doesn't stop her from worrying about Catra. Not when so many people are going to be drunk and no one knows how someone will react when they're drunk and they'll be stranger's there that might be violent.

Someone could get aggressive and Adora won't be there to make sure Catra's alright. No one is there to make sure no one is taking advantage of them and making sure they're getting home safely.

It doesn't matter that the bar is barely three blocks away and they'll be home to play Board games drunk before 1 am like they said they would. Like they always are. It's not even a compromise because Adora gets nervous when Catra is out late and drunk and too far away for Adora to help her.

They like playing board games drunk at one in the morning like a bunch of nerds. They like riding out the high of their drunkenness in the safety of their own apartments. They like playing the games wrong because no one remembers the rules with their muddy brains.

She doesn't even know why she's thinking about this. She'll get a text in an hour that's just a blurry picture of Catra, sitting in a circle with monopoly set up wrong and three faces smiling into the camera, and that will be that. That's nothing to worry about. That's not why she's up in a cold sweat with her hand over her racing heart and her breath unsteadily increasing.

Adora had a nightmare and now she wants her girlfriend like she’s a baby. What a joke.

Adora shakes and tries to place her head between her knees to calm herself down but it’s really not helping. Her mind is reeling and she feels like she can’t keep a thought in her brain for more than a second before she’s racing to the next thing and can’t even remember what she was thinking about before.

She really wants her girlfriend. She wants to be curled up in bed with her and listening to her twitch and purr and trill in her sleep. She wants to be comfortably warm as the furred body curls around her like a koala. She wants to be breathing in that scent that is unmistakably Catra.

She can’t do that. Catra is having fun with her friends and even if Adora had the strength to call her and ask her to come home, Catra would smell like alcohol and that would no doubt make Adora feel ten times worse.

But Adora can’t stay here. She loves Bow and Glimmer but this isn't her home. It isn't her apartment and the unfamiliarity of it, even though Adora is here nearly everyday, isn't helping her calm down.

Adora climbs to her feat, conscious stepping around the open packages of snacks and popcorn to keep the room quiet. She reaches the remote and shuts of the tv before navigating her way through the dark and towards her shoes.

Glimmer wines a bit as she ties her laces and Adora freezes. Watching as the girl stretches in her sleep and then turns to dig herself deeper in Bow’s arms. Adora relaxes when she goes back to her deep breathing.

She pulls the collar of her shirt up to her nose to breath in the scent. It's Adora's, the one she got for being on the BrightMoon hockey team. It has Rebels splayed across the front and her last name written across the back. It’s the one Catra likes to steal and cuddle up in as she studies her unresonabily hard biology text books in.

It still smells a bit like her and it helps Adora calm her breathing enough to slip silently out the door and lock it behind her.

The trek down the block home is cold but worth it when she opens the door and feels impossibly better. The apartment smells like her own shampoo and Catra. That’s all Adora needs to securely lock the door and collapse onto the couch.

Adora wasn’t supposed to come back early. Or at all. She was supposed to spend the night in Glimmer's apartment. She shouldn’t be surprised when she hears the giggling in the hallway. She doesn’t know how long she lays there before she hears it but it can’t be long because it’s still before one in the morning.

The door thumps and Adora jerks, her eyes flying to the knob as it jiggles. The scrapping of a key and quiet swearing leaks through the door. It’s a drunken speech that she hears and it has Adora muscles locking up and her previously fading anxiety coming back in full force.

She shouldn’t have come back. Not before morning. She’s a complete idiot that understands that she shouldn’t be in the apartment. That no one was expecting her to be here because that’s what they agreed. Yet here she is. Like an idiot.

The door opens with a creak and Catra stumbles in, laughing as Scorpia follows. Lonnie has an arm thrown around the bigger girl's waist to hold her up. Catra plants her hands on her knees and leans over to wheeze a bit more.

Their stumbling has Adora shrinking back against the corner of the couch. They’re laughing but Adora has blood rushing through her ears and it could be screaming.

“It’s not funny. It’s so not funny” Catra says, incapable of holding in her giggles as looks back at her friends. She’s slurring her words and her eyes are clearly unfocused. She hasn't noticed the blonde, curled up on the couch and trying not to be.

"It's not funny" She points at Scorpia and tries to keep herself from laughing.

It's a look Adora has seen before. Many times though rarely on Catra's face. It tightens her chest, dread settling low in her stomach.

Lonnie and Scorpia are laughing too but clearly not as hard. "We know that" Scorpia slurs, gesting to her and Lonnie before pointing at Catra. "You're the one who's been laughing for the last hour"

Catra, who had held in her giggles for a solid couple seconds. Long enough to straighten again, bursts into laughter. She starts to whip at her leaking eyes. "It's so funny, it's so funny"

Lonnie rolls her eyes dropping the arm she has around Scopria's waste after making sure the girl was steady. "That guy slipped one time and didn't even hit the floor." she cleary isn't as drunk as the other too but still over corrects as she tries to turn herself towards the couch. She's nearly sitting down when she finally notices Adora.

"Jesus shit!" she swears, jumping, stumbling and falling to the floor. Adora jumps just as hard but she stays in her seat on the couch, legs bunch up before her like a shield. Her hands are shaking.

Scorpio jumps to, reaching out to Lonnie as if she can catch her from across the room. Catra jerks up from her laughing stock, shocked out of her giggles as Lonnie moans on the floor.

"Adora?" she asks, straightening up, her ears are flattened to her head, her tail fluffed up quite a bit.

"Hey" Adora whispers, knotting her fingers and warily watching the girls around her. Lonnie is still on the floor. Hands holding her up as she clearly looks at Adora. Her head is tilting in a circle as she watches the blonde.

“Where the fuck did you come from” Lonnie asks, jerking a bit to help her sit like a child. Her legs spread out in front of her. Adora winces at the swear. Lonnie hadn’t said it meanly. More like she was drunk enough to want to swear in every sentence. Adora knew that. She knows that. It doesn't help her breath any easier though.

“Alright” Catra stands and takes Scorpia’s arm. “Night’s over, go to Scorpia’s house”

“Oh come on!” Lonnie slurs, making her way to her feat drinkily. She stumbles in Adora’s direction and doesn't notice the way Adora plasters herself harder to the arm of the couch.

“Scorpia’s apartment is up the stairs” Catra says, gesturing for Lonnie to follow. No room for argument.

“The nights just started, wildcat” Scorpia says, patting Catra’s arm but allowing the feline to push her out the door. “I have to beat your ass at scrabble”

Beat your ass . Adora screws her eyes shut and listens to the stumbling of three drunk girls as one pushes the rest out the door. The whispering isn’t very quiet but Adora has stopped listening all together. She wraps her arms around herself tighter.

She doesn’t notice that they're gone until the door closes with a thunk. Still she doesn’t open her eyes. Not until the last stumbling feet in the apartment make their way to her.

There's a soft thump on the carpet as Catra drops to her knees before the blonde, hands on her thighs.

Adora looks up to Catra blearily looking at her with a tilted head. Her eyes are still unfocused but her expression is relaxed and far from angry. Adora braves a smile.

“You alright?” Catra asks. It’s still slurred but it’s quiet and genuine and Adora nods. Catra nods with her as if she can’t help it. Her head tilts forward slowly until it rests against the couch cushion Adora is curled up on. Her ears flicking.

Adora’s hand flinches away just a bit, she can’t help it. She tucks them beneath her armpits and looks away. She’s trembling, she knows it and she knows that Catra can feel it through the couch cushion. The feline doesn’t say anything and makes to move to… well, move.

Adora watches, just a bit wary, as Catra’s ears twitch sluggishly. Listening. Waiting. Catra made the first move and she’s waiting for Adora to be comfortable enough to respond.

“I’m sorry” Adora whispers, watching the way Catra focuses when Adora finally speaks. She keeps her forehead to the couch cushion but her muscles and tails relax. She slides her legs out from under her and slowly lifts a hand and rests it on Adora’s ankle.

“Nothing to be sorry about” Catra says, running her thumb soothingly against Adora’s calf. her tail flips uncomfortably. “Sorry, I'm drunk”

“There’s nothing to be sorry for.“ Adora repeats. “ You told me you would be.” Adora takes a small step out of her comfort zone and places a tentative hand between her ears and tangles her fingers in Catra’s beautiful locks. “I knew you were going to be when I decided to come over. ”

“Still” Catra sighs, leaning into Adora’s hand and letting loose a trill that Adora just knows is involuntary. “Did you text me? I should have had my phone on” she reaches for her pockets and starts patting herself down until she finds her phone. Then she starts digging in her pocket with a sluggish hand.

Adora smiles for real. She can’t help it. Catra just kicked out her friends for her. On her night. She had made the plans months in advance to make sure Adora would be comfortable with it. Made sure to plan it on a day Adora wasn't there so she didn't even have to experience it.

Adora came in and ruined it. She didn’t even give Catra a heads up with a text.

Catra should be mad. She should be screaming and frustrated and angry. Anyone else would be. Catra had one day to go out with her friends and Adora ruined it. Adora wipes at her eyes with her other hand. She was hoping it was quiet and unnoticeable but Catra notices.

Catra lifts her head and watches Adora sniffle for just a moment. Adora chuckles wetly at her cute, drunken, expression. “Don’t cry.” Catra whispers, running her whole hand up and down Adora’s leg now. “Don’t cry, there’s nothing to cry about”

“I’m sorry- I’m ruining your night, I’m just going to go-” Adora moves to stand, dropping her feet to the floor and dislodging Catra’s hand from her leg. Before she can frantically stand, Catra drops her head in her lap.

Adora’s freezes, her hands awkwardly held above the drunk girl. Catra’s is purring. It’s supposed to be soothing but it follows a silly, obviously drunk rhythm.

“Don’t go” Catra whispers, her dislodged hand finding Adora’s thigh and her other hand abandoning its mission of finding her phone to link around Adora’s ankle again. Not trapping her, never trapping her, but a steady pressure that soothes Adora just a bit “I’m interrupting her night, I shouldn't have come. I don't know what I was thinking. I’m sorry” Adora says, she shifts to stand again but then Catra trills sadly and she can’t help but stay where she is.

“You can always come here. Come to me” Catra slurs, running her thumbs soothingly in circles. “I’m sorry I wasn’t here to hold you”

Adora squeezes her eyes shut against the sting that over takes them. Her hands trembling where they are still awkwardly held out before her. Catra’s ear flicks against her leg. A silent request and Adora sniffles just a bit when she rests her hands back on Catra’s head.

Catra hums and relaxes further into Adora lap, her legs stretching along the couch, her hands abandoning their soothing ministrations as they move to rest against Adora’s hips.

“You shouldn’t have to be worried about me 24/7” Adora says, shaking her head and petting down Catra’s short locks. Her tightened chest loosen just a bit each time Adora finds that spot behind her ears that makes her melt.

“I’m always thinking about you” Catra slurs, rubbing her face into Adora’s thighs and sighing happily. “24/7, 365.” Catra swallows and smacks her lips. “I'll be thinking about you for the rest of my life and into the next one”

Adora doesn't get a word in as Catra continues her ramble in a drunk hurry. “I think about your pretty eyes, and your gorgeous hair, and those strong arms.. and - and sometimes I’m walking down the street and I smell something that smells like you and I have to follow it only to find myself at the campus bakery drooling over those delicious honey bons with the cinnamon crust.” Catra swallows thickly. “And then I’m sitting there thinking about you and how hungry I am but I don’t buy any because I know they're your favorite and that you like to be there when their purchased so their as fresh as they can be-”

Adora chuckles wetly, curling her fingers around Catra’s ear. She doesn’t know when she started crying again.

“So then I text you and wait until you're walking through the door and- and then! I buy them. So you can’t fight me on who's paying-” Catra lifts her head to drunkenly smile at Adora. her eyes widen in horror as she watches tears track down Adora’s face.

“Why are you crying?” she gasps, getting back to her knees and crawling up Adora’s body to sit in her lap. It should scare her. It should make her shrink away and flinch when Catra finds her face but she doesn't. Her heart does lodge in her throat but that’s because she’s crying and Catra is so gentle with her. Even while she’s drunk and inebriated and has bad hand eye coordination and her hands find her neck before they can caress her cheeks.

“Don’t cry” Catra rubs her face gently against Adora. Either to rub the tears away or scent mark her. Acora thinks it’s the latter because after Catra sits back with heavily blinking eyes and gently rubs away the tears with her thumbs.

“I know, I’m sorry” Adora says, wrapping her arms around Catra’s waist and pulling her closer even though she smells like tequila and sweat from the dance floor. Catra’s still purring as she presses her chest into Adora’s.

“No reason to be sorry” Catra whispers, her hands rubbing at Adora’s shoulders. She cuddles into Adora’s neck, nuzzling her nose against her pulse point. It’s so soothing and Adora doesn’t even mind that Catra is still covered in a bit of glittery make-up and is no doubt rubbing it into her shoulder and shirt. “Why are you crying?”

Adora hides her face into Catra's shoulder. “It’s childish” she says.

“I don’t mind” Catra pulls back a bit to look her in the eyes. “We had cruddy childhoods and I think it’s only fair we get to be childish for a bit longer”

Adora likes that she doesn’t swear when she’s drunk. She didn’t know this about her because Catra swears like a sailor when she’s sober. A curse in every other sentence but apparently, when she’s under the influence she develops the grammar of a 12 year old boy. She even hesitated on the word cruddy like she would get in trouble for saying it.

“What’s wrong?” Catra asks, cupping Adora’s face just below the jaw and making her look into Catra’s hazy eyes. It’s so soothing and makes Adora feel so loved that she breaks down.

“I had a nightmare-” Adora sobs, feeling oh so stupid and completely ridiculous. Catra gasps like it’s the worst thing she’s ever heard and hurriedly pulls Adora back in for a hug. Her purr stutters and she scent marks soothingly into Adora’s neck.

“Oh no” Catra says, rubbing her hands into the blonde’s black as she sobs. “I'm so sorry, that really freaking sucks.” she swallows, no doubt her mouth is dry. “That must have been so scary, I hate nightmares”

Catra is starting to ramble and Adora really doesn’t mind. The girl is usually so withdrawn and silent. A girl of few and usually cutting words when it comes to anyone but Adora. Even with Adora she tends to keep quiet and let the other girl talk.

“They suck cuz most of the time you know it’s a dream but you're still stuck in this scary place. And sometimes they're even downright silly. I used to have this nightmare about the lake behind Weavers house-”

Adora starts to chuckle. She knows this one. Catra has told it to her before. Late at night as they shared a bunk under Weaver's strict care.

“And instead of water the lake was full of these rubber duckies, which is so stupid because” Catra pauses to take a breath like she’s about to dive into a pool of water. “I’m scared of the lake, not tub toys. And in the dream I fall in and the ducks start moving and trying to eat me but their rubber and don’t have mouths that can open and they start pecking at me with their rubber beaks”

Adora digs her face into Catra's neck and lets the drunken quality of her voice sooth her heart.

“And it doesn’t even hurt but I'm so scared and I can't get out and then I wake up” Catra’s arms slacken around Adora’s and rest leisurely around her shoulders. The only thing keeping her from slipping off the couch is Adora's tight hold.

"And then I'm awake and it's ok because you're there and I really love you" Catra straightens a bit and pulls away to smile a very silly smile at her. "I really, really love you' her head drops forward and she rests her forehead back onto Adora's shoulder and starts to giggle.

"In conclusion" she says like she's ending an essay, still shaking with laughter, "I'm sorry you had a nightmare"

Adora doesn't think she's ever heard Catra apologize this much in her life. She also doesn't think she's ever heard her talk for so long without a break. Shrink so many words together in one go. There wasn't even a joke in the middle to break up the tension.

"It's alright" she chuckles, and she finds that it really is. She had a nightmare and it's alright because she's with Catra and she really loves Catra. Even if Catra is drunk and a little uncoordinated.

"Are you feeling better? Still scared?" Catra runs a hand over her hair as if petting her. Smoothing down Adora's pony tail and scratching her nails lightly into her scalp.

"Yes" Adora chuckles, leaning into the soothing touch. Her chest is still a bit tight and she can't help but cringe at the alcohol on Catra breath but she's feeling much better then she did when she stumbled into their apartment an hour ago.

The alcohol on Catra breath is sweet. She must not have been drinking beer and that helps Adora more than Catra knows. Whatever she was drinking must have been full of sugar or fruit or both. Adora isn't sure if that is the reason that even though the alcohol is unmistakably there Adora still wants to kiss her.

But then Catra's head is falling back on her shoulder as if Adora is the only thing keeping Catra up and the feline is humming with approval. She sighs against Adora's neck.

“I'm sorry I’m drunk” Catra says, her hands sliding clumsily around Adora’s front. Not even sexily, more like she can’t hold them up any longer. They fall into her lap and rest there. “I know you don’t like it when people are drunk. And I understand that, of course I do. I was there, too. We were both there. Together. I just don’t have anxiety around it like you do-”

Catra jerks in her lap. More a twitch as she realized what she said. “-not that there’s anything wrong with that! I know that, I get anxious about other stuff and of course you know that. Like with the loud noises and the water. It’s no big deal. Well, it is a big deal! It’s just something we handle together, you know.”

Catra sighs and lifts her head and leans back to look at Adora. She leans a little too far back and would have fallen off Adora’s lap, hitting her head on the coffee table, if the blonde hadn’t been there to catch her.

“I'm sorry,Ii'm rambling- I’m drunk” Catra’s head tips forward a bit but then her eyes widen and she slaps a hand over her mouth so quickly that Adora flinches a bit. “I smell like alcohol,” she whispers. Then she’s out of Adora’s lap so quickly that Adora can’t catch her to pull her back.

“You don’t like the smell of alcohol” Catra is mumbling as she stumbles her way to the bathroom. Adora is quick to follow, her hands held out to catch Catra if she falls. She stumbles and tilts so much that Adora just plants her hands on Catra’s hips to keep her steady as they stumble towards the bathroom.

“Oh no” Catra wines, leaning heavily against the bathroom door and Adora before she crashes into the bathroom sink. “You’re never going to kiss me again”

Adora laughs, holding Catra up around the waist as the feline fumbles for her toothbrush and squeezes a disgustingly large helping of tooth paste onto it.

“I wouldn’t worry about that” she says, scrunching her nose as Catra sticks the globe of toothpaste in her mouth and starts furiously scrubbing her teeth and tongue. “I was thinking about kissing you barely a minute ago.”

Catra pauses. Her eyes widening and her mouth still opening to show the foam and globs of toothpaste. “You were thinking about kissing me?” she asks around her full mouth. It doesn't really sound like words to be honest but Adora has decoded what Catra sounds like around a mouthful of food enough times to get the jist.

“Yes” Adora says, closing Catra’s mouth with her fingers and watching as the feline starts brushing again, slower this time. “But you should still brush your teeth because you smell so surgery I’m positive you have cavities”

Catra’s face relaxes into a sloppy version of her signature smirk. The toothbrush is still in her mouth and lips covered in foam. Adora finds it impossibly charming.

“You think I'm sweet?” Catra asks, pulling the toothbrush from her mouth and not noticing the swing of slobber that follows. Adora shakes with laughter, smiling hard when Catra pouts and tilts her head.

“That usually makes you blush” She mumbles around her toothpaste. She seems to forget her tooth brush is in her hand and nearly smears it down her front. Adora takes it before Catra can start making art with it and turns Catra around to face the sink again.

“Spit” she says and Catra quickly follows direction. Leaning over the sink and smacking her lips. She runs her tongue around her teeth and spits again, her face scrunching with displeasure at the strong taste. Adora laughs and runs the girls brush under the water before setting it next to hers again in the cup next to the sink.

Catra leans into her front and nuzzles her nose into Adora's neck as the blonde washes the spit down the sink. "Can we cuddle tonight?" she asks, slurring but no longer talking around a mouth of toothpaste. Adora smiles and directs Catra out the door and towards their bed.

Her anxiety is nearly soothed to the back of her mind. Her tense muscles finally relax and she can't help but play along with Catra's banter.

"Only if you promise not to lick me"

Catra rolls her eyes and allows Adora to hold up most of her weight. "That was one time." she turns her face and whispers into Adora's ear. " And you like it when I lick you"

Adora doesn't even mind that it's slurred and hot. She still blushes head to toe as she leans Catra against the bed and moves to grab the feline's pajamas. She tries to ignore that Catra even says that as she reaches for the zipper of her pants but Catra is still looking at her with those eyes. The smug, self righteous ones.

Adora raises an eyebrow and bites the bullet. "I love when you lick me during sex-" Catra wiggles her eyebrows with such adorable incoordination that Adora can't even be embarrassed about what she just said.

"I don't like when you lick me to 'clean me' in the middle of the night"

Catra finally lets Adora take off her pants and doesn't complain when she trades them for soft shorts.

"You like it when I do it to any part of your body besides your face" Catra argues, raising her arms to let Adora take off her shirt. "You like it when I wake you up that way"

"That's because that rough tongue of yours is sexy and then I'm turned on. Now if you licked my armpit-"

Catra scrunches up her nose in disgust, leaning against Adora as her bra is unclipped and cast to the floor.

“Exactly”

Adora pulls the covers back for Catra and helps her crawl into the bed. Catra takes the spot next to the wall because she likes it best and know’s Adora hates it. She cuddles in the covers and watches Adora get in after.

“You know-” she slurs, placing a hand clumsily but sweetly on Adora’s cheek. “If you were into that; I’d do it for you. I like it when your turned on”

Adora laughs and presses a kiss to Catra’s mouth. It’s quick and tastes incredibly strongly of toothpaste and a bit like alcohol but Adora doesn't mind. She leans back and presses her forehead into Catra’s.

“That is such a sweet thing to say but I’m really not into armpit licking”

“Thank god” Catra mumbles, wrapping her tail sluggishly around Adora’s leg and scent marking into her neck. “I’d do it but you would owe me big time. Like lots of orgasms and doing my homework big time”

“Go to bed,” Adora laughs, tucking the covers around them and relaxing into Catra’s arms. She still feels a bit of anxiety. Catra still smells a bit like a bar but she mostly smells like toothpaste and her perfume and like herself.

Adora feels better than she did when she woke up barely an hour ago and now she has a purring girl in her arms and she is falling impossibly deeper in love with her even if she does smell like alcohol.

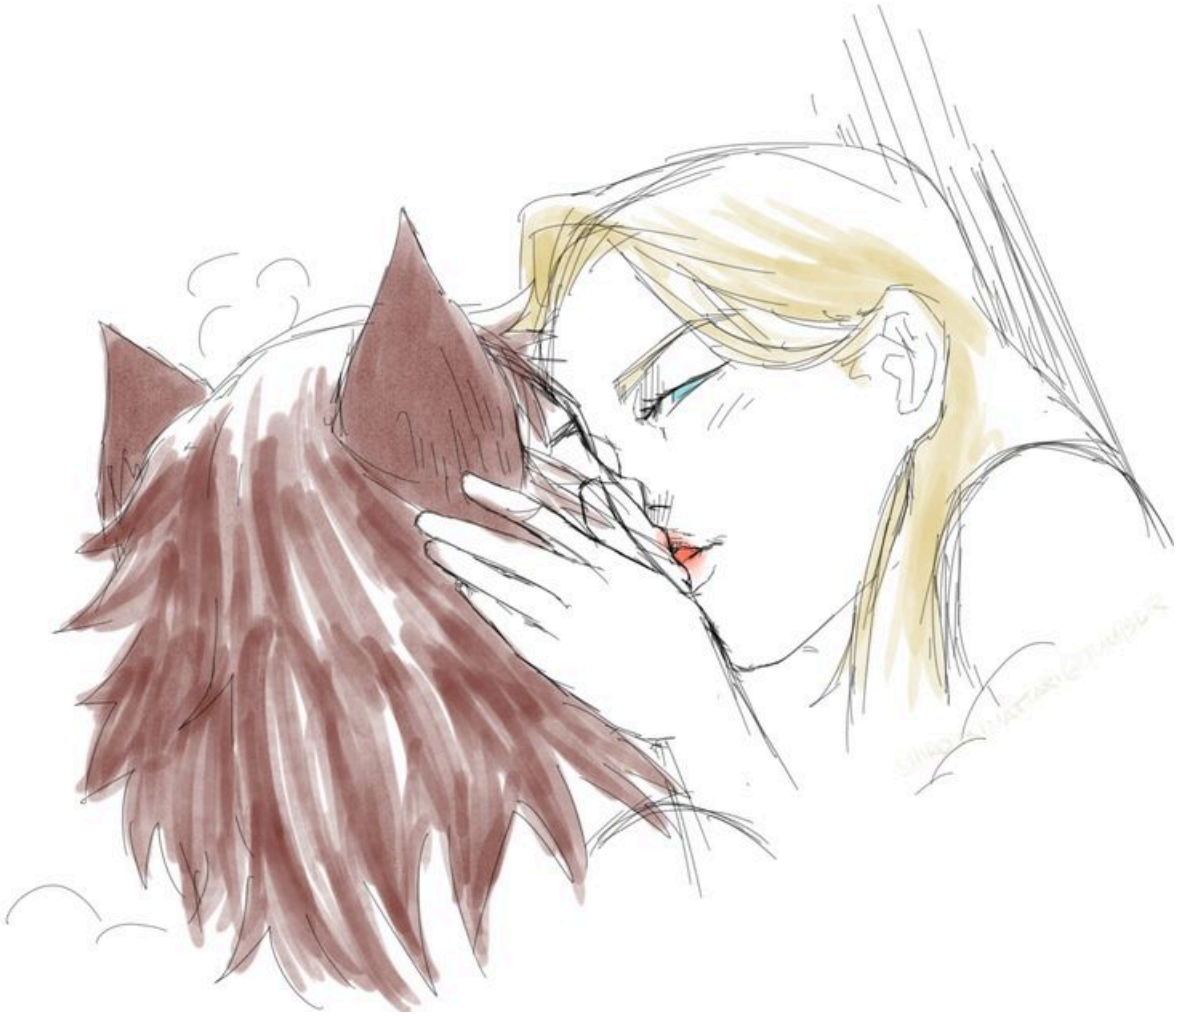

Maybe Adora has a better memory surrounding drunk loved ones to think back on when she smells it.. But she'll still be worried about Catra when she’s out at night because even though not everyone gets aggressive and violent when they drink, some people do.

Shadow Weaver ruined a lot of things for her but Catra makes Adora feel brave enough to try them. Maybe one day she'll join them with their nerdy board games and fruity drinks that don't smell like beer. But it doesn't really matter because right now Adora feels like she could burst.

She has the strength to take care of her girlfriend when she's drunk and that's a step she never thought she would be able to take. Even though Catra is drunk that doesn't change who she is. That doesn't change the sweet and soft girl underneath Catra's tough exterior.

Adora cuddles in deeper and listens to Catra mumble under her breath about a man at the bar who slipped but didn't fall all the way down and how it really isn't funny but it was also so funny they were asked to leave the bar.

End Notes

I got the title inspiration from the song Heaven by Los Lonely Boys. My dad sent me the song and I really fell in love with it. We haven't always gotten along. My family Is very religious. but me and my dad have always bonded over a love for music and reading. No one tell him I write fan fiction though.

anyway I hoped you liked the read. let me know if you do by a kudos or a comment. really the comments are what I do it all for. LIFEBLOOD. ill see you guys. next time!

shout out to zmbyyy for reading all my fics they are a real one. <3 <3 <3
