Kisses Worth Waiting For

by Princess_Cyra

Summary

The door opened, the magicat in question stepped through inaudibly and pressed her face against the blonde's back, arms wrapped around her neck. "You left…" Catra mumbled, wrinkling her nose and rubbing her face against the blonde's shirt when she realised that Adora didn't smell like her.

"I'm sorry, I wanted to change out of my clothes and brush my teeth," Adora replied, pressing a gentle kiss into Catra's hair. "I was going to join you right after."

Catra huffed as Adora turned around and wrapped her own arms around the feline's waist, nudging the brunette to pull her in for a kiss when Adora's face lit up with a crimson blush.

Adora's head was pounding, and as she opened her eyes, the light filtering in through the curtains made her hiss and shove her face into the pillow. She pulled the blankets on top of her, trying to bury herself in the covers so that no light could penetrate her sleep, but now that she was awake, her stomach began to grumble at the lack of food in it.

Yeah, there's no way I'm going to sleep now… Adora thought to herself, shaking her head and finally deciding to get her ass out of bed.

As she slowly pushed herself up, Adora turned around and found the brunette face down in pillows, purring quietly while her blankets were brought up all around her like a cocoon, shielding her from the rest of the world, at least temporarily. Melog was curled up in the corner of the room on their own pillows, laying on their back and exposing their belly to the rest of the room, the perfect trap for belly rubs.

She couldn't help it, the blonde over to the sweet kitty and digging her nails into their fluffy belly, cooing when the feline began to purr and slowly open their eyes, their tail wagging at the sight of Adora smiling and petting them.

"Good morning sunshine…" She whispered as Melog flopped onto their belly, shaking out their fur before moving over to headbutt Adora with a soft "mroww…~". Adora brought her hands up to Melog's face and immediately began to pet them, before leaning down to press a kiss to their head. It left a messy kiss imprint, which made Adora's eyes go wide. She got up and walked over to the mirror, only to find her lipstick and makeup in general extremely smudged.

Let me clean up and go brush my teeth. Adora thought to herself, rifling through the drawers for the makeup wipes, only to find nothing there.

Huh, that's odd. This is where we always keep them.

Adora began to look through the order drawers, growing more confused when she realised that her makeup wipes weren't in them.

I swear they were in there yesterday when I was getting ready for the party. Did I move them and forget? Honestly wouldn't have been surprised, she'd been very scatterbrained yesterday while assisting Glimmer to host yet another celebration. Catra was doing much better than her, since she'd opted to sit this one out.

"I don't think I can stand another one. This is the sixth party just this month! I need a break, princess," Catra said with an eyeroll, before nudging Adora's shoulders. "You should go, though, since you're She-Ra and whatnot."

"Are you sure you'll be okay here?" Adora asked, moving her hand down to rub the soft fur of Catra's belly. They were laying together on the bed, the blonde had just been about to enter the bathroom to shower. Her girlfriend had flopped down on Adora's lap, dressed in a purple sleeveless top paired with matching shorts, which gave her free room to pet her wherever she wanted.

Catra began to purr loudly, she'd been doing that a lot more now that she'd begun to feel safe in Brightmoon, safe around Adora. They'd grown apart during the years of war, and now that they were together, they were trying to find solid footing together, not just as partners, but as friends. In some ways it was easy, considering that they knew each other better than they knew themselves, and in some ways it was hard.

Physical touch was, unsurprisingly, something they fell back into naturally. It was how they expressed their affection back in the horde, but it still felt so monumental to have Catra in her arms, while she ran her hands through her soft fur, while her lover purred and pushed into Adora's touch eagerly.

"I'll be fine, princess…" Catra responded, rubbing her cheek against Adora's thigh. "I have Melog, and I have my novel."

It seemed casual, nonchalant, but Adora could see the slight cracks in her facade. Catra's ears drooped when Adora asked if she'd be okay alone, and her confident smirk didn't quite reach her eyes. It was confirmed when Catra pressed her face against the blonde's hips.

"Don't stay out too late?" She whispered.

"Without you? I won't be able to," Adora assured, leaning down to pull her girlfriend in for a kiss.

Maybe Catra kept it somewhere else, she'd ask her when she woke up. Adora grabbed a change of clothes since she hadn't even changed out of the dress she'd worn to the party, deciding to take a shower later in the day with Catra. She wanted to spend more time with her girlfriend since she'd spent the entire evening away from her.

Her stomach was queasy, her head still aching, and with no memory of the night before besides entering the party, it wasn't rocket science what happened. Adora had drank too much, and all she could hope was that she hadn't caused too many problems for her loved ones, she was quite a handful when she was inebriated.

When Adora opened the bathroom door, she was surprised to find the makeup wipes on the counter beside the sink. Well, that explains it, she thought to herself, opening the container and pulling one out. She began to remove her smudged makeup off slowly, making sure she didn't miss a spot, while grimacing at the thought of sleeping in it.

Well, there's a first time for everything.

The rest of her routine went as usual, she brushed her teeth before pulling off her usual red dress and tossing it in the laundry basket, changing into a tank top and simple shorts. Her hair was already left free, considering the fact that Catra had refused to let Adora leave until she did something different with it.

"You always wear your hair in a ponytail!" Catra complained, wrapping her arms around Adora's waist from behind and resting her head on the blonde's shoulder. "Aren't you bored of it!?"

"No. It's just convenient," Adora replied with a shrug. She'd never thought about changing her hairstyle, and it was thoughtless the way she always threw it into a ponytail. Catra, meanwhile, wasn't standing for it. Her hand moved up to her hair, claws coming out as she cleanly sliced the hairtie into two, and watched with a grin as her blonde hair spilled free onto her shoulders while all Adora could do was gasp.

"Catra!" She hissed, but the feline didn't react, carding her fingers through her hair to remove the knots and style it. Adora complained about it, but she didn't tie it back up, because when Catra was done, she'd pressed a kiss to Adora's shoulder and mumbled 'you're so pretty, princess'. When her friends pointed out the change in her hair, she simply blushed.

The door opened, the magicat in question stepped through inaudibly and pressed her face against the blonde's back, arms wrapped around her neck. "You left…" Catra mumbled, wrinkling her nose and rubbing her face against the blonde's shirt when she realised that Adora didn't smell like her.

"I'm sorry, I wanted to change out of my clothes and brush my teeth," Adora replied, pressing a gentle kiss into Catra's hair. "I was going to join you right after."

Catra huffed as Adora turned around and wrapped her own arms around the feline's waist, nudging the brunette to pull her in for a kiss when Adora's face lit up with a crimson blush.

Her lover's face was just littered with messy kiss marks, one on her forehead, her cheek, her lips, and multiple on her neck. Adora didn't know if she was supposed to feel flustered, or amused as her eyes went wide and she opened and closed her mouth, unsure of what to say.

“Is something wrong?” Catra asked, tail swaying behind her as she glanced at her partner with a confused look.

“I-I must’ve been really drunk last night…” Adora whispered, and it took Catra a second to realise what she was talking about. When she did, she started to blush as well, her ears drooping against her hair.

“I forgot to take it off…” She mumbled, utterly horrified as she pulled away from Adora to grab the makeup wipes.

“Oh my goodness, wait!” Adora grabbed her girlfriend and pulled her away from the counter, gripping her and spinning her around to admire her adorable face. “What happened last night? You have to tell me!”

“No I don’t!” Catra mumbled petulantly, looking away in an attempt to hide her face, but Adora cupped her cheeks and made the brunette look back at her.

“Oh stars above, you look so cute!” She was physically restraining herself so that she wouldn’t outright smother the brunette, but she couldn’t help it! Catra looked so beautiful and Adora felt blessed to gaze at her when she was like this.

“N-No I don’t! I’m not cute!” The brunette insisted, her tail fluffing up as she managed to blush an even darker shade of red.

“I’m not letting you go until you tell me what happened,” Adora declared, tossing Catra over her shoulder and leaving the bathroom, closing the door behind her while her girlfriend slammed her fists into her back.

“Put me down asshole!” Catra growled, shoving her face into Adora’s neck to hide her flustered expression, but none of her words had any actual venom behind them.

Adora dropped Catra onto the bed before joining her and pulling the brunette into her arms, dropping kisses into her hair as the feline purred along, reluctantly rubbing her face against the blonde's neck.

"You were really drunk last night, and when you got back here you were very excited to see me. I was trying to help you inside and get you dressed in more comfortable clothes when you grabbed my face and began to kiss me before I could get you to stop. Then you crashed into the bed and fell asleep," Catra explained, her tail tip wagging behind her as she looked away, still very embarrassed. "You looked too comfortable to wake up…"

If that wasn't enough reason to have a cuteness overload, the next answer was pretty much a gun to Adora's heart. "And you didn't take it off because…?"

Catra's ears shot up just as her tail fluffed up once more before the brunette could stop herself. "I-I forgot! I was sleepy and I fell asleep next to you that's why!" She hissed, blushing all over while crossing her arms over her chest and looking away with a huff.

"Okay okay…" Adora whispered, pressing a kiss to the base of Catra's ear. "…you have to let me take a few photos before you wipe it off."

Her lover started to grow more flustered at that, and for a moment Adora thought she wouldn't allow it (She wouldn't have minded if Catra said no, the image of her girlfriend sleep ruffled and covered in lipstick marks was already burned into her head), but eventually Catra told her she could take two photos. Adora was sure she'd never reached for her tracker pad that fast in her life.

After ten minutes, Catra ended up cross legged on the bed as Adora used a makeup wipe to remove the lipstick from her fur, compensating for it by pressing kisses into the now clean spots of fur. Melog eventually joined them on the bed, placing their head pointedly on Adora's lap so that the blonde would remove the lipstick mark on them too. She did, but not before she took a few photos of them as well.

Catra ended up asleep twenty minutes later, her head on Adora's chest while the blonde quickly switched out her lock screen for the picture she'd taken. Not for the first time since the war finished, Adora wondered what she'd done to deserve Catra in her life. The brunette was just perfect for her, both as a formidable nemesis in the field, and a complimentary lover in their domestic life.

As she gazed upon her sleeping form, she imagined their life together, getting married, having children, growing old together. It was too soon, the war having only ended a few months ago, and they still had a lot to work through, but she knew they would. She knew that one day, they'd be standing in front of each other, promising to love and cherish one another in this life and the next.
