by TheSofterGentlerMe

Summary

Sea Hawk is a counselor at Camp Bright Moon who's in charge of the boats. The outcome is about how you'd expect.

Micah stood on the dock as he watched the burning canoe slowly float downstream.

"Sebastian…"

"It's Sea Hawk, remember?" Sea Hawk said confidently.

Micah nodded as he remembered the camp nickname Sea Hawk had given himself.

"Sorry, Sea Hawk, why is that canoe on fire?" Micah said.

"It's a long story," Sea Hawk said.

"It's aluminum," Micah said.

"That's part of the long story," Sea Hawk said with a nod. "You see, it all started this morning…"

Micah heard him starting up into a song and shook his head as he said, "No, no song. I know you think best that way but just give me the best summation you can."

Sea Hawk started talking and didn't stop for five minutes. Micah just nodded along, making occasional noises of understanding but he was pretty sure he could have just turned his back and it wouldn't have stopped Sea Hawk.

"So then the rubber duck fell, hit the duck decoy, which caused the spark, and then ignited all the turpentine, which then…," Sea Hawk said before Micah finally just shook his head and held a hand up.

"OK, no, I'm good. Thank you," Micah said.

"I did keep the dock mostly flame free though," Sea Hawk said.

"And I appreciate that," Micah said. "Although the scorch marks are going to take some work to get out."

"I can do that," Sea Hawk said and Micah managed not to shudder at the thought of him trying.

"No, that's alright but I am going to take you off dock duty," Micah said, as he watched the burning canoe run aground on a sandbar and roll over. Sea Hawk's eyes went large, and his mustache drooped as his mouth fell in sadness.

"But, boats…," Sea Hawk said.

“I know,” Micah said. “You love the boats but I have something better for you.”

“What is it?” Sea Hawk said.

Micah knew he’d regret this but he had to admit, the guy had the ability for it.

“You’re in charge of evening announcements at dinner and you’ll run all the campfires from now on,” Micah said. He normally would do that but he had a feeling Sea Hawk could handle it himself and would enjoy it. Micah’s belief was confirmed as he saw a light kindle in Sea Hawk’s eyes.

“I can lead the campfires!?” Sea Hawk said.

“Yes,” Micah replied.

“I can program anything I want!?” Sea Hawk said and Micah started getting nervous.

“As long as it’s tasteful. This is a summer camp for kids after all,” Micah replied.

“You will not regret this! I just got a new book of shanties and I think the kids will love them!” Sea Hawk said in glee.

“Um, try and work some other stuff in as well,” Micah said.

“Of course! Skits! Skits about adventure! ” Sea Hawk shouted.

“OK, yeah, that’s fine,” Micah said. “Can you start tonight?”

“Yes!” Sea Hawk said. “I’m going to my cabin and practicing right now!”

Micah watched the man go running down the dock. He wasn’t sure what was going to happen but he was sure it would at least be different. Then he started getting a boat ready to go and retrieve the still burning canoe.

End Notes

This is part of the whole church camp AU thing but you know, minus the religious angst, repression, and drama. I just had an idea of Sea Hawk being in charge of the docks and how he'd lose that. Also, the idea of setting an aluminum boat on fire with just normal stuff is hysterical to me. I probably have a few of these in me but we'll see.
