Summary

"Adora… what are you doing?"

"Just- watching! Just in case!"

Laughing, Catra took a seat next to Adora, wrapping an arm around her shoulder, "Perfuma didn't use her magic on these, princess. They're gonna grow slowly- that's kinda the entire point of the exercise." Glancing over at the red and orange flower pots, Catra could see tiny seedlings starting to poke out of the dirt. One was a slightly more saturated green than the other, each glistening in the sun from being recently watered.

"I know, I just… don't want to miss anything!"

Smiling, Catra kissed her girlfriend's cheek, "I love you, you know that?"

Notes

Prompt number two for the SPOPtacular Summer event: Gardening! Also another short and sweet ficlet, but the ones in the coming weeks will be a bit long and from AUs you may recognize... ;)

Anyway! These have really been helping me get back into writing, so thank you for doing this again, Tippen! <3

See the end of the work for more notes

"This is stupid."

"It is not, Catra. Just- try it! You haven't even given this a chance!"

"Perfuma- you can literally grow plants from your fingers, why do I need to plant seeds?"

Adora sighed, watching her girlfriend and friend go back and forth. Perfuma had decided the two of them needed a new activity to help them relax now that the war was over, and apparently that activity was gardening. The princess had brought some seed packets, pots, and some tools to use. Since Catra's allergies made it difficult to do this in the Brightmoon gardens, Perfuma had improvised, determined to get the two 'green thumbs'.

"I still think it's dumb."

"Come on, Catra. Just- give it a shot? Please?" It took five and a half seconds of Adora's puppy face and a fee pets behind Catra's ear to get her to cave with a groan and a roll of her eyes.

"Fineeeee. But you're cleaning any dirt that gets in my fur off me later!"

"Thank you, Adora." Perfuma smiled, sitting down in front of the two pots, gesturing for the couple to sit as well, "Now, I brought you both flower seeds that match your aura. Adora has sunflower seeds and Catra has tiger lily seeds."

"Tiger lily?" Catra raised an eyebrow, while Adora giggled.

Perfuma hummed, a grin playing on thr corner of her lips, "Yes." Catra shook her head, but didnt say anything else about it, letting Perfuma move forward with explaining what to do, "Now, the idea is you'll plant these, and watch them grow, and once they're done, you get to be proud of all the hard work you did nurturing the flower and helping it grow nice and strong."

"Yes, give the most impatient person ever a multi-month task." Catra chuckled.

"You have patience, Catra!" Adora assured, "Just the other day you-"

"-I was talking about you, princess."

"...oh."

Catra cackled, patting Adora's head.

Perfuma took a deep breath, before shaking her head, "Well, yes, it will take a while, but it's not something you have to focus on every day. Just water them on schedule and let the sunlight do the rest. But first, you need to plant them." She handed Catra and Adora each their seed packets, "First, just dig a little hole in the soil of your pot, and then drop your little seeds in!"

Adora picked up the miniature shovel off the ground and dug a small hole in the center of the pot. Then she handed the shovel to Catra before tearing open her seed packet, carefully pouring the seeds in and using her hands to cover them back with dirt. She looked over to see Catra doing the same, though she used the shovel to cover her seeds, doing her best to avoid getting any dirt in her fur if possible. She was worse about it when it came to sand, or grainy ingredients like sugar or salt, but Adora understood. It made Catra feel itchy, unclean, and uncomfortable.

"Perfect, now watering is different for each flower. Adora, you need to water your sunflower everyday for the next week until the seedling pops out of the dirt, then slowly move down to just one a week, maybe twice or three time if it gets particularly hot. Catra, tiger lilies, you just wanna mist the soil for a while, make sure it's damp, but not wet. Once it's a seedling, you can water it a little more frequently, just be careful not to overwater it. Once they've grown, once a week-ish on each should be plenty."

Catra couldn't help but chuckle when she looked over and saw her girlfriend was literally taking notes in her journal, her tongue sticking out slightly in concentration. Adora looked up when she felt Catra's tail lightly smack against her arm, "...what?"

"Nothing. You're just cute, princess."

Blushing, Adora looked away, her eyes closing momentarily when Catra brushed her bangs behind her ear.

Smiling at the couple, Perfuma slowly got to her feet, "Alright, just leave your pots out here on your balcony so they have enough sunlight, and eventually you guys will have beautiful flowers you grew yourselves!"

"Thanks, Perfuma. We'll keep you updated." Adora smiled.

"Please do!"

.1 Week Later.

Catra couldn't help but laugh when she walked onto the balcony to see Adora staring at their flower pots like they would magically sprout up any second, "Adora… what are you doing?"

"Just- watching! Just in case!"

Laughing, Catra took a seat next to Adora, wrapping an arm around her shoulder, "Perfuma didn't use her magic on these, princess. They're gonna grow slowly- that's kinda the entire point of the exercise." Glancing over at the red and orange flower pots, Catra could see tiny seedlings starting to poke out of the dirt. One was a slightly more saturated green than the other, each glistening in the sun from being recently watered.

"I know, I just… don't want to miss anything!"

Smiling, Catra kissed her girlfriend's cheek, "I love you, you know that?"

Adora giggled, "I love you too. I guess I should stop staring at the seedlings huh?"

"Probably for now, yes. Come on, we're having lunch with Bow and Sparkles today."

The word 'lunch' made Adora's eyes light up and she smiled, "Okay!" She got to her feet, taking Catra's hand as they headed inside to meet their friends in the dining hall.

.1 Month Later.

Catra smiled as she wandered onto the balcony. Both flowers had started really growing now. Neither had an actual flower on it yet, but they both had stems growing and little bulbs. She grabs the watering can and waters them both gently. It was supposed to rain later, but she wanted to add just a little water beforehand just in case the weather changed. She smiled as she set the can down before taking a seat on one of the lounge chairs they'd set out on the balcony months ago. Both of them liked reading out here, but Catra also enjoyed napping in the sun with Melog, and Adora's hand running through her hair. Just the thought of that made her feel warm.

"Catra?"

"Yeah?" She called, looking back as Adora stepped into the doorway.

Adora smiled, stepping over and sitting next to Catra, "Just wasn't sure where you went after the meeting, that's all." She gingerly wrapped a arm around her, which the brunette immediately leaned into, "Looks like the flowers will start blooming kinda soon."

"Eh, I'd still give them another month at least before that happens, but yeah." Catra wrapped her tail around Adora's waist, purring quietly, "I love you."

"I love you too." Adora smiled, kissing her cheek.

.2 1/2 Months Later.

“Catra! Catra!”

“What? What is it?” Catra sat up, blinking as she was jostled out of her mid-morning nap. She saw Adora peeking inside from the balcony.

“Come here! We have flowers!”

Smiling, Catra dragged herself out of the window seat, petting the still sleeping Melog before making her way over to the balcony. Her smile widened when she saw both of their flowers were fully grown. One bright yellow sunflower and one red tiger lily, “You think she knew she gave me a red flower?”

“She definitely knew. We’ll have to let her know they finally bloomed!”

Catra nodded. She grabbed Adora’s trackerpad off their desk inside before returning and taking a photo of the flowers, sending it to Perfuma, who replied with a simple, ‘Congratulations! They look beautiful!’

“What now?” Adora asked.

“Now you keep them alive, dummy.” Catra smirked, laughing when Adora playfully shoved her shoulder.

“Shut up!”

“You know I’m the one who’s been doing most the watering! You always forget!”

“Do not!”

“Do too!”

Before either of them realized it, they were on the floor of he balcony, laughing and playfully wrestling. Once they calmed down, the two stayed on the floor, Adora holding Catra to her chest as they stared up at the flowers, “They really are beautiful.”

“Yeah, they are.” Catra purred, kissing Adora gently. The blonde happily reciprocated, the two slowly parting and giggling before returning their gazes to their flowers. They were perfect.

End Notes

Yes, I'm aware cats aren't supposed to be around a lot of plants, but Catra is a hyrbid! I only HC her to be allergic to daises, if you know, you know.

Anyway! I hope you enjoyed and I would love to hear what you think in the comments!
