Tonight You'll See The Real Me

by masternoveller

Summary

It's Halloween and Catra sort of invites Adora to a costume party at the Waste.
The kicker is - Catra's magicat costume isn't really a costume.

One shot - Fluff.

Notes

@Pinkstorm - this is from your comment the other day and I couldn't help myself and just started writing...
So... here we are.
Enjoy!

Also I'm taking a break for about a week when I head overseas at the end of the month... so I thought I'd get this out before then.

See the end of the work for more notes

“Hey Adora.” Catra greets the blonde as she comes past the security desk the brunette is working at, scanning her pass, “You’re all good to go. Have a great day.”

“Thanks, Catra.” Adora replies as she pockets her swipe card, “You too.”

The exchange is much too short as more people come through the security check point for them to have more than a few words. The blonde throws a few fingers guns towards Catra before turning around and heading to the lifts. Catra can’t help chuckling as she gives the blonde a small wave back before she deals with the next person.

After the morning rush of employees checking into the building, Catra leans back against the counter and sighs, “I could go for another coffee.”

“If you’re buying.” Lonnie says from her seat facing the surveillance camera screens, “I’ll grab my regular.”

The brunette rolls her eyes, “Is it my turn already?”

“I got it yesterday.” Lonnie sing songs, “Oh, grab me something to eat too.”

They pair share a laugh, “Whatever. I don’t mind. I missed breakfast so I’m starving.”

“What happened? Your boyfriends were too busy to fix you breakfast this morning?” Catra jests as Rogelio comes around to join them, “Finally. Guess I’m buying coffees all round, huh?”

Rogelio grunts out something and Lonnie nudges him, “Ro wants a toastie too.”

Catra rolls her eyes, “Sure, whatever. Hold down the fort and don’t let the building burn down.”

“We’ll be fine without you, Catra.” Lonnie replies, “It’s not like you need to micromanage us just because you’re our supervisor now.”

“I’ve been your supervisor for about half a year now, I think I’ve already proven to management that we have a very well oiled machine down here.” Catra says preening, “There’s talk about me moving to the night shift to kick their asses in shape too.”

“Oh, are you leaving us, Cat?” Lonnie says with a hint of concern in her voice.

“I told them they should get a better night shift manager.” Catra answers with a low chuckle, “I’ve done my time on nightshift. If they put me back on there, I’m just going to quit.”

“Tough words, Cat.” Lonnie says crossing her arms over her chest, Ro grunts with a nod, “We all know you wouldn’t just up and quit.”

“I totally would.” Catra mirrors Lonnie’s posture, “Besides I can get another job somewhere else if that’s the case. I heard private security pays a whole lot more.”

Lonnie faux gasps, “Like you would just leave us.”

The brunette shrugs, “I can be persuaded with money.”

The other woman raises an eyebrow as Catra shrugs on her jacket and pockets her wallet and phone, “What about Adora?”

“What about Adora?” Catra pauses her movements for a moment.

“If you left, you wouldn’t see her anymore.” Lonnie points out and then adds, “You haven’t had the guts to even talk to her outside of this place."

Catra shrugs, "It's just one person. I'm sure I can get over one person…"

"Sure, you can." Lonnie chuckles, "You've only been pining for her since the first day you scanned her in. How long ago was that again?"

"Five years, 4 months and six days." Catra replies and then quickly slaps a hand over mouth as Lonnie and Rogelio both break out laughing, "Yeah, keep that up and I'll make sure your coffee order is made is regular milk."

"You wouldn't." Lonnie suddenly stops laughing at the threat.

"I would." Catra quirks an eyebrow in challenge, "Alright, I'll be back soon."

The other two guards wave her off as she heads out for their morning coffee run.

Catra places her coffee and food order at the counter and then retreats to the waiting area, pulling out her phone and scrolling through a few work emails when she hears someone clear their throat. The security guard turns her head and sees a familiar blonde, "Oh, hey Adora."

"Hi Catra." The blonde beams back, there's a slight blush on her cheeks as she greets, "What brings you here?"

"Uh, coffee…?" Catra replies with a slight lopsided grin, "I mean, what else would I be doing in a café?"

Adora laughs awkwardly, she rubs the back of her neck nervously, "Uh, right. Right."

"I'm assuming you're getting a caffeine hit too?" Catra asks.

“Yeah. It’s my turn since Glimmer and Bow got the last two rounds.” Adora says pushing back a few stray hairs from her ponytail back behind her ear.

“Yeah, me too.” Catra holds up her receipt.

“I uh, are you getting moved to the night shift?” Adora asks fidgeting with the hem of her jacket and looking a little sheepish.

“Uh, not that I know of.” Catra replies and then narrows her eyes, “Why? Have you heard something?”

“No! No. I just… maybe overheard you talking back at the security desk.” Adora blush goes redder on her face, “Not that I was trying to eavesdrop or anything…”

Catra chuckles, “It’s fine, Adora. We do talk pretty loudly.”

That seems to quell the blonde’s concerns as she nods, “Are you looking for another job?”

“No…?” Catra replies unsurely and then remembers the conversation with her coworkers and chuckles again, “I was just saying that if I had to go back on night shift that I might look into working in the private security sector instead.”

“Oh.” There’s a hint of dejection in Adora’s demeanour.

“I didn’t say I was actively looking right now though.” Catra quickly adds, “It’s just like a backup plan.”

Adora nods, “Well, it’ll be a shame not to see you downstairs if that’s the case.”

Before Catra can answer, her order is called up, “Uh, that’s me. I’ve got to… yeah.”

“Oh, yeah, right.” Adora steps to the side so Catra can head to the counter to collect her order.

Just as the brunette passes by, she pauses, “Strange question…” Adora looks up, “Can I… I don’t know, grab your number?”

“You want my number?” Adora repeats a little shocked.

“Yeah…?” Catra slicks back her short hair, “I mean, you don’t have to. I just thought we could…”

“Yes.” Adora grins, “I’ll stop by the desk and we can exchange numbers?”

“Yeah?”

Adora nods, “Yes.”

“Cool.” Catra grins as her order is called again, “I better, uh, yeah. I’ll see you back at work, Adora.”

“Took you long enough, I thought I’d have to send a search party.” Lonnie grumbles as Catra pops back in, the tray of drinks placed on the small table to the side before distributing the goods, “Yes! Thank you, thank you!”

Catra chuckles as she watches her colleagues take sips from their coffee cups, “Anything happen while I was out?”

“Nope. Same old, same old.” Lonnie replies reaching over for her toastie, unwrapping it and grinning, “Awe, they shaped my toastie like a dead guy.”

Rogelio comes over and unwraps his and laughs as well upon seeing his toastie shaped into a scary face.

“You guys are easily amused.” Catra says as she shucks off her jacket and hangs it on the back of her chair, “You guys got plans for Halloween tonight?”

“There’s a party being held at Waste tonight, costume party if you know what I mean.” Lonnie smiles.

“Which means we can just go as ourselves then.” Catra points out with a chuckle, “Management would go berserk if they knew that the entire security team were made of…”

“Hi Catra!” Adora voice cuts through, cutting off the end of Catra sentence as the brunette turns around to see the blonde scanning her pass through once more and then waiting at the counter.

“Hey Adora.” Catra walks over, she grabs a pen and a notepad off the desk and sets it on the counter between them, “I see you got your coffee order. Must be some order if it took that long.”

“Glimmer insists on some ridiculous drink that takes the poor baristas a while to make.” Adora replies with an exasperated breath.

Catra grins back while holding the pen, “Uh, did you want to write it down or you can just tell me and I can write it down?”

Adora tilts her head to the brunette, “You’re so old school.”

“Not really.” Catra chuckles, “I’m not allowed to be on my phone when I’m at work. Policy and all.”

“Oh, right.” Adora nods, “Or you can give me your number.”

“I could… but your hands are kind of full.” Adora glances around remembers that her hands are quite full from the coffee run, “I can just write it down and then once I get to my next break, I’ll chuck it into my phone and then burn it the paper.”

Adora recites the numbers down while Catra jots them down, repeating them back to Adora just to be sure. And when that’s done, Adora grins, “Hey, what uh, what are you doing tonight?”

“Lonnie was saying there’s a party at the Waste tonight. I might go.” Catra replies and Adora nods like she’s contemplating it.

“Cool. Cool.” The blonde nods, “What time does that start again?”

“No idea.” Catra replies with a grin, “Lon?”

“Nine.” Lonnie replies without looking back, “We’re going to head there around eleven.”

Catra looks back at Adora, “Doors open at nine.”

“Text me later?” Adora asks with a hopeful look in her eyes, “Maybe we can meet up?”

“Definitely.” Catra replies and then adds, “Oh, and it’s a costume party. So, dress up.”

Adora nods and holds up her coffee order, “I uh, better get back to work.”

“Have a great day, Adora.” Catra says as the blonde quickly makes her way to the lifts.

“Ooh! Look at you! Our little Catra is finally getting some action!” Lonnie teases.

“I’m not little.” Catra rolls her eyes as she comes back and takes her seat next to her colleague, “I can’t wait to get this ‘costume’ off.”

“Yeah, us too.” Lonnie agrees as they get back to work.

At the Waste Halloween party…

“Quit looking at your phone, Wildcat. She’ll be here.” Scorpia says as she gently taps Catra’s hand with her pincer, “Gosh, it’s so nice not to have to constantly have that illusion spell on.”

Catra flicks her ears around and then nods, "Yeah, I hate hiding my ears. It's so uncomfortable."

"And so cute!" Scorpia adds unhelpfully as the magicat glares at her without any bite.

"So… Perfuma knows about this?" Catra gestures to Scorpia in her whole scorpini form.

"Uh, not yet. But I will tell her soon." Scorpia rubs the back of her neck awkwardly, "How funny is it that the entire security team is basically in costume? Like pretty much all the time!"

"Not the entire team." Catra corrects, "But most. I'm still not quite sure what Lonnie's thing is."

Scorpia shrugs, "Do you think Adora is like us?"

"Nah, she's too… human." Catra says after a beat, "A really… mmm…. Human…" the magicat shakes the thought of Adora out of her head, "When's flower girl coming?"

"She'll be here around ten, I think." Scorpia replies, "Apparently Halloween is a big night for florists too. Who knew?"

"I thought pumpkin sellers cornered the market on this day." Catra chuckles, "Okay, do you need another drink or is it just me?"

"You don't drink, Wildcat." Scorpia laughs out, "But if you're going to grab some water, I'll take one too"

"So, I take that as a yes, then." Catra grins back before high tailing it to the water station to grab water when someone taps her on the shoulder and she turns around to see Adora in a unicorn onesie and she can't help but snort out a laugh, "Stars… is that a costume or your pyjamas?"

"Okay, one, rude." Adora pouts out and then blushes when she adds, "Also, both."

After Catra stops laughing, the magicat looks Adora up and down and says, “It’s cute.”

The blonde reaches up and gentle touches Catra’s ears, they reactively swivel around and meld to Adora’s hand as the blonde’s eyes light up, “Wow. That is so cool…”

“What is?”

“Your ears.” Adora gently pets them and under her breath says, “So soft…”

A purr threatens to erupt from Catra’s chest as she quickly ducks under Adora’s fingers, the magicat instead grabs Adora’s hand in hers, “Want to get some air with me?”

Adora stares at their joined hands and bites her bottom lip in thought before nodding, “Okay.”

Catra quickly spots Scorpia, the scorpini grinning back at the magicat when she sees Adora’s hand in hers, “Woo! Go Wildcat!” Scorpia whoops and Catra rolls her eyes as she tugs Adora to the balcony upstairs to get some air.

“I like your costume.” Adora says as they step out onto the balcony, the magicat’s hand still in hers, “But what are you supposed to be?”

“What am I supposed to be?” Catra repeats a little slower and Adora nods her head with a small smile.

“I don’t want to offend you or anything… but you don’t exactly look like Catwoman.” Adora says and snorts out a laugh at her own joke, “You know, no tight leather spandex suit.”

“You’re such an idiot.” Catra chuckles, “And no, I’m not Catwoman.”

“That’s what I mean. You’re more…” Adora waves her free hand in the air while looking for the word and then settles on, “Furry.”

“I am furry.” Catra replies with a grin and then shakes her head, “I’m a magicat.”

“I… I don’t know what that is.” Adora replies with a little chuckle, “But it’s a cute costume.”

“Yeah… costume.” Catra says looking away and into the distance from the balcony before looking back at the blonde, “Did you come here alone, Adora?”

The blonde shakes her head, “No. I came with Bow and Glimmer. They’re downstairs mingling and getting drunk.”

“And why aren’t you?” Catra rasps out with a raised eyebrow.

Adora points to herself, “Designated driver.”

“Ah.” Catra nods.

“Also, I don’t really drink.” Adora adds, “I’m not good with alcohol.”

“Don’t need to drink to have a good time.” Catra says and the blonde looks at her with a smile.

“You don’t have a drink in your hand…” Adora points out.

“I do not.” Catra says.

“Are you a lightweight too?” Adora blurts out before slapping a hand over her mouth and groaning, “Forget I said that…”

“Too?” Catra smirks and then chuckles, “I don’t know about being a lightweight… but alcohol and my insides don’t generally mix well.”

“Yeah, severe stomach cramps.” Catra points to her gut, “The stabbing sort.”

“I’ll remember that.” Adora says squeezing Catra’s hand, “I uh… I’m glad to see you out of the workplace.”

“Yeah, same.” Catra agrees, “Though I did not think I’d be seeing you in your pyjamas this early on.”

Adora shoves the magicat lightly and laughs, “Whatever. Just because I don’t have a cool and very cute magicat costume, besides, this is multiuse.” The blonde gestures to herself, “So, it’s an absolute bargain.”

Catra laughs, “Do you like Halloween?”

“It’s okay.” Adora shrugs, “I never really got into it growing up. Didn’t do the whole trick or treating thing or toilet paper on people houses schtick.”

“No?” Adora shakes her head and the magicat gets an idea, “Well, what are we waiting for?”

“What?”

“Come on, Adora.” Catra tugs Adora forward, “Let’s go ring some doorbells and get sugared up!”

“You’re ridiculous!” Adora says laughing but lets Catra drag her out, “Oh! I need to let my friends know first and that they might need to call me to get a ride home later.”

“Yeah, me too. Not so much about the designated driver bit, but yeah.” Catra says as she reluctantly releases Adora’s hand, “Meet me outside in ten?”

“Okay.” Adora agrees and they quickly part ways.

Ten minutes later…

"Hey Adora." Catra greets again when Adora exits the party.

"Where did you get those?" Adora says eying to two bags in Catra's hand, the magicat passes one to the blonde, "When did you even have time?"

"I scared a couple of kids into giving them to me." Catra deadpans as Adora gapes at her, "I'm kidding, princess."

The blonde's face softens and she shoves Catra again as the magicat cackles, "Hey!"

"You should have totally seen your face!" Catra laughs out.

"Shut up." Adora faux pouts.

The magicat takes a few deep breaths, "No, I didn't scare a couple of kids to get them."

"Then?" The blonde holds up her bag and Catra rolls her eyes.

"Maybe I already had them." The magicat says.

"You were totally planning this, weren't you?" Adora probes.

"Maybe." Catra repeats, "Okay, can we go now? Time's a wasting and I want to get as much sugary goodness before I have to get back into costume."

"What?" Adora says a little confused at the statement.

"Nothing." Catra says as she grabs Adora's free hand and starts walking them down the street.

"Okay…" The blonde shrugs and lets herself be pulled down the street.

Catra yawns, plopping their quarter full bags of sugary treats down behind them on the ground, "Man, I haven't stayed up this late in ages."

"Geez, how old are you? Like fifty?" Adora jokes as they take a seat on the front porch of Adora's place, "It's not even midnight yet, Cinderella."

Catra looks over with tired eyes and grins, "Whatever you say, princess."

The blonde laughs but there's a slight blush on her cheeks, "Are you working tomorrow?"

"No. Thank the stars, no." Catra breathes out happily, "I'm going to need the weekend to get over tonight's late night."

Adora giggles at that, "I get why you don't want to go back to night shift."

"Yeah, I just got my body clock back into a semi normal routine since getting off night shift." Catra admits, "And I don't really want to go back to it. I felt like a vampire."

"So… are magicats like… werewolves?" Adora asks with a giggle as she shoulder bumps Catra next to her and then yawns, "Oh man, I think you're rubbing off on me."

Catra chuckles under her breath, "No. Magicats are like… fulltime werewolves. Just… with magic and can exist with or without the full moon."

"Sounds made up, Catra." Adora rests her head on Catra's shoulder and the magicat instantly starts to trill, the blonde giggles upon hearing it, "Wow, you're really committing to this, huh?"

The magicat chuckles, her trill turning into a purr, “What can I say? Gotta go all out on Halloween, right?”

Adora smiles, her head still on Catra’s shoulder, “What does that say about my costume?”

“That you’re a horse girl.” Catra quips and then cackles when Adora slaps her on the shoulder with a faux glare before relaxing back on Catra’s shoulder, the magicat mumbling under her breath, “This is crazy…”

“What is?” Adora asks softly.

“This.”

“Hm?”

“I’ve been… stars, this is humiliating…” Catra groans to herself softly.

“Please. Go on.” Adora says trying not to laugh, covering her face with her hand in the process.

The magicat groans out, “I’ve been wanting to talk to you for ages…”

“Yeah?”

“Yeah.” The magicat nods, “But you know, with work and you working it’s kind of hard.”

“Really?” The blonde quirks an eyebrow up at Catra, “Why?”

“Because it wouldn’t be professional to ask you out while I’m working at the security desk.” Catra replies with a chuckle, “And I guess every time I saw you out of work I kind of… I don’t know, chickened out of talking to you.”

“You mean magicat’d out?” Adora snorts at her own joke as she lifts her head off Catra’s shoulder, “For the record… that was me

“Yeah?”

“Yeah.” Adora nods, “You’re kind of… intimidating.”

“Cool.” Catra nods trying to act nonchalant about it, but her tail thumps happily next to her as the blonde giggles at it, the magicat quickly grabs onto the traitorous appendage and clears her throat, “I like hanging out with you, Adora.”

“I like hanging out with you too, Catra.” Adora rests her head back onto Catra’s shoulder, her hand reaches out for Catra’s tail, “Can I?”

“Sure.” Catra holds it out to Adora, “Just… gently.”

Adora nods as she carefully takes Catra’s tail into her hand and starts to pet it, her fingers running along the end of it as it wriggles and moves around in her light grasp. The blonde whispers, “How are you doing this?”

“Doing what?” Catra asks as she rests her cheek against the top of Adora’s head.

“Your tail and your ears are just so reactive.” Adora says, “How did you do it? Is it some kind of animatronics?”

“You’re not going to tell me your secrets, are you?” Adora teases playfully as Catra’s tail wraps around her wrist.

Catra turns her head and sighs, “What time is it?”

Adora pulls out her phone and looks at the time, “Nearly midnight.”

“When it’s midnight, you’ll see.” Catra replies and Adora just laughs, “And no, it’s not like a Cinderella sort of thing. Or maybe it is. You tell me when it happens."

"Should we have a countdown or something?" Adora asks with another yawn.

"No. You won't need one." Catra says, "Trust me."

"Okay." Adora reaches up and starts playing with Catra's ears, the magicat closes her eyes and lets her purr out, she can hear the blonde cooing softly next to her, "So cute…"

Catra lets out a low chuckle as they wait for midnight to hit.

Midnight…

"What the…?" Adora sits up straighter as she looks around for Catra's costumed tail that's suddenly vanished, "What happened to…?"

"My tail? Or… my ears?" Catra asks as she returns to her human form, she lets her magicat features fall away to the glamour spell now that Halloween is now officially over, turning to Adora with a slight sad smile, "Ta da?"

"I don't… what?" Adora's face stares at her confused, "What… what are you?"

"Magic." Catra replies, her body sagging a little in defeat at the look on Adora's face, "Well, magicat, when I don't have this spell on."

"Spell?" Adora repeats dumbly.

"Yeah." Catra pulls back slightly, "This is my actual costume, Adora."

“Can… can you go back to the other one? Your… not costume?” Adora asks as she stares at Catra, the one she knows from work and since the first day she’s seen her, “I just… want to check?”

“You want to check?” Catra drops her gaze and her voice, “Why?”

“Well, I kind of like...” Adora’s cheeks turn red before she can finish her sentence.

“Like?”

“Like the Halloween version…?”

Catra holds back a laugh, “You mean the furry version of myself?”

“Shut up.” The blonde buries her head in her hands, “I am not a furry!”

“Uh huh.” Catra does laugh this time as she gently pries Adora’s hands away from her face, “You can look now, princess.”

The blonde puts on her best glare but that quickly dissipates when she sees Catra back in her actual form and she can’t help herself but reach out, “Wow…”

“Total furry.” Catra says as she ducks under Adora’s hand and lets the blonde pet her ears once more, “I take it that you’re not really a unicorn in disguise?”

Adora laughs, “No. Definitely not. But…”

Catra looks up and then sees Adora’s eyes shine bright blue before quickly going back to normal and her eyes widen, “No way…”

“Yes way.” Adora nods, “You’re not the only one who’s got to put on a costume every day, Catra.”

“Yeah, but yours isn’t as obvious as mine.” Catra crosses her arms defiantly, “What are you anyway?”

The blonde smirks, “Take me on a real date and maybe you’ll find out, Magi-Catra.”

The magicat grins, “Terrible, truly terrible. Never try that again.”

Adora snorts out a laugh and Catra can’t help herself, as she leans in further and presses her lips onto Adora’s before realising what she’s done and quickly pulls back, “Oh, uh, sorry… I should have-mmrrp!”

Adora pulls Catra back in for real kiss, not just the one sided surprise one and when they break apart, they rest their foreheads against each other and sigh, “Sorry. Was that too much?”

“Stars no.” Catra grins back as her tail wraps around Adora’s waist making the blonde giggle, “Hey Adora?”

“Hm?”

“Are you free tomorrow?” Catra asks staring into the blonde’s eyes.

“Mm…” Adora pretends to think, “Maybe, why?”

“Can I take you out on a date tomorrow?” Catra asks softly.

“Why not tonight? It’s already past midnight…” Adora asks back with a small grin.

“Because it’s way past my bedtime, princess.” Catra replies with an eye roll, “And I’m going to need to bring my A game to get to your secrets.”

“You’re such an idiot.” Adora giggles, pulling Catra in for another kiss and then adds, “Fine. Tomorrow. Only because I’m tired too.”

“Whatever you want, Adora.” Catra grins as she leans in for one more kiss and then steps back, not bothering with her glamour spell as she mock bows to the blonde, “Tomorrow.”

“It’s a date.” Adora waves to Catra as she makes her way to her door, the magicat watches her unlock her door and then go in, “Goodnight, Magi-Catra.”

“Goodnight Adora.” Catra replies with a wave of her own.

Once Adora shuts her door she hears a very happy “YES!” on the other side of the door from Catra and she can’t help but find herself glowing brightly against her door, a wide smile on her lips as she feels her phone buzz.

Security Cat-ra: Can we up the date to breakfast? I don’t think I can sleep tonight.

Adora grins into her phone as she types back, biting her bottom lip.

Adora: If you can’t sleep, maybe you should just come back to my place so we can stay up together…

The blonde sends the message without a second thought and then giggles to herself and then…

KNOCK KNOCK!

Adora turns around and opens the door and sure enough, Catra is standing there in all her magicat glory.

“So… are we going to make some magic tonight?” Catra asks leaning against Adora’s doorframe trying to act cool.

Adora rolls her eyes but pulls the magicat in by the shirt and kisses her before slamming the door shut.

“So… I take that as a yes…” Catra grins into the kiss.

Adora giggles, “You’re such an idiot. And yes.”

And then Adora kisses her again.
