One Week To My New Life (colliding with my old one on the way there)

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/57700309.

Rating:
Not Rated

Archive Warning:
Creator Chose Not To Use Archive Warnings

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Adora & Catra (She-Ra)

Characters:
Catra (She-Ra), Adora (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Alternate Universe, Magicat Catra (She-Ra), Going with a transport theme, Trains, Adora's trying not to be Adora, Catra's can smell her out

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2024-07-27 Completed: 2024-10-01 Words: 33,980 Chapters: 8/8

One Week To My New Life (colliding with my old one on the way there)

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/57700309.

Rating:
Not Rated

Archive Warning:
Creator Chose Not To Use Archive Warnings

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Adora & Catra (She-Ra)

Characters:
Catra (She-Ra), Adora (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Alternate Universe, Magicat Catra (She-Ra), Going with a transport theme, Trains, Adora's trying not to be Adora, Catra's can smell her out

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2024-07-27 Completed: 2024-10-01 Words: 33,980 Chapters: 8/8

One Week To My New Life (colliding with my old one on the way there)

by masternoveller

Summary

> Catra is going across the country to start a new life - she's decided to take the lux train to do it as a way to start it off right.
> But who should happen to also be on that train...
>
> An AU that takes place on the train (based on watching too many train travel vids on youtube...)

Notes

> Tags will be updated later... when I figure out where I want to go with this fic.

See the end of the work for more notes

Departing

"All aboard!" The conductor calls out loudly and people start to file onto the train, ready to start the week long journey across the country.
Catra waits patiently in line to board for her carriage, bundled up warmly in a thick black jacket, a pair of black cargo pants and an old but well loved red scarf. She holds her ticket in her hand, the other hand holding onto the strap of her backpack, it's heavy but it carries basically everything she has in this world.
"Ticket?" The usher asks as Catra shows them the ticket to scan before being gestured to come aboard, "Welcome aboard. We hope you enjoy your journey with us."
Catra just nods in reply, her ears flick around now that she's inside the warm carriage as she makes her way to her cabin on the train, quickly finding it and sliding the door open and dropping her bag onto the lounge seating that converts into a bed at night. She looks around the small space that will be her home for the week, pulling open the only other door in the room to find a small ensuite included and she finds herself finally relaxing, shutting the door to the ensuite and to her cabin and taking a seat next to the window.
The train is still docked at the station as she looks out the window, there's still a lot of people waiting to board the train. She never realised how long this train was and finds herself trying to find the end of it, but to no avail. She's happy she's managed to snag this bargain of a lifetime, not that she's planning on ever coming back to the origin start point, but that's beside the point. She's got a new life to start at the end of this journey. A new city. A new life. A new… everything.
As she looks out the window, someone knocks on the door. The magicat gets up to answer it, "Hello?"
"Hello!" The woman replies, she's blonde, blue-grey eyes and in uniform for the train and oddly..familiar, "My name is Gwen. I'll be looking after you and the carriage next ddor for the rest of the week. I just need to check your ticket to ensure you are in the correct room and then take your order for any food or drinks before we depart from the station."

"Hey Gwen." Catra nods with a polite but forced smile, "You look familiar."
"Oh." The blonde giggles a little awkwardly, "I guess I just have that look."
Catra narrows her eyes at the blonde a little more, she looks really familiar but there's something off about her, instead the magicat shakes her head, "Sorry, I must be mistaken. I'm Catra." The magicat holds out her hand and Gwen takes it, shaking it politely with a smile, "I'm good for food and drinks thank you."
"Are you sure? I can get you a champagne or a soft drink or even a cold water." Gwen starts to list off, "Oh, and I still need to see your ticket Catra."
Catra pats herself down for the ticket before remembering she left it on the seat, she turns around to retrieve it and holds it out to Gwen, "Here. Am I in the correct room or am I getting kicked off?"
Gwen takes the ticket, not sure if Catra is joking or not about the last part, "Well, you are in the right place, Catra." The blonde confirms with another smile, "And no, you are not getting kicked off. Well… not until we get to our destination anyways." Gwen giggles at her own joke as Catra just smiles back awkwardly at her as the blonde snorts out a little as well, "Sorry, I am so sorry."
"It's fine." Catra waves her off and takes back her ticket.
Gwen wipes a stray tear from her eyes and clears her throat, "Are you sure I can't get you anything before we depart? It's complimentary after all."
Catra thinks about it, "Complimentary huh?" Gwen nods, "Uh, I'll just get that water if you don't mind."
"No problems!" Gwen beams back, "I'll be back soon with your water."
"Thank you, Gwen." Catra nods and then heads back to her seat, she looks over and sees the blonde still standing there, "Is, is there anything else?"
Gwen who seemed to be staring, chuckles a little nervously at being caught, "I was going to show you your room."
"It's pretty self explanatory." Catra replies as she points out the few items in the room, "Seat slash bed. Bathroom. Window. Door."

The blonde rolls her eyes at the magicat, “Smart ass.”
“Hey! You’re supposed to be nice to me.” Catra laughs out loud at making the train worker cuss at her, “What else do I need to know?”
“I’ll be nice to you when you aren’t being a smart ass.” Gwen teases back, crossing her arms over her chest before glancing down at her watch, “Oh, look, I still have another cabin to check and water to get you. I’ll come back to walk you through the rest of your cabin.”
“Sure thing, princess.” Catra sasses back as she sits back down on her seat to look out the window once more, “Shut the door, please?”
The blonde rolls her eyes and sticks her tongue out playfully despite the magicat not looking, her tail flicks playfully as her ears twitch towards the door, “I’ll be back with your water, Catra.”
Gwen shuts the door and Catra slumps down into her seat, breathing out, “I know her…”

“Okay, so your seat also transforms into a bed.” Gwen starts to explain as she sets the glass of water on the small table by the window now that the train has finally departed as Catra just watches her, “I bet you didn’t know there’s another bed in this room.”
Catra tilts her head and then points up, above her head, “Yeah, I think you just lost that bet, princess.”
“Ugh, okay yes. The second bed is up there.” Gwen says with a playful huff, “Do you want to know how to transform your ensuite into a shower?”
“There are instructions on the inside, behind the door.” Catra replies, “Unless you’re implying that I can’t read…”
Gwen faux gasps, “I would never!”
“Sure, you would.” Catra just shrugs, “You probably also think that I didn’t pay for my ticket too.”
Gwen just narrows her eyes at the magicat, confused and a little mad, “No. I didn’t think that at all. Why would I?”
“It’s fine.” Catra brushes it off, “I’m used to it.”
“No, it’s not fine, Catra.” Gwen reaches down to Catra’s hands before stopping herself, stepping back slightly, "Sorry, that was totally unprofessional."

"Can you even be professional?" Catra raises her eyebrow at her, standing up from where she'd been sitting and watches as the blonde gulps, "It's warm in here." Catra says as she unzips her jacket and takes it off, handing it to the attendant, "Where do I hang this up?"
Gwen slowly reaches out for Catra's jacket before perking back up, "Ha! I'll show you."
Catra chuckles, "Show away."
"So, over here, there's a small wardrobe space so you can store your bag and jackets or whatever so it's not just on the seats." Gwen explains as she opens the door to the small wardrobe next to the door, "Or, you can use one of these hooks conveniently situated right here."
The smug look on Gwen's face has Catra rolling her eyes, "Yep, that's perfect."
Gwen hangs Catra's jacket up, "Okay, so when you want your bed made up, just put this sign up when you head to dinner and I'll have it made up for you while you're away. Or if you don't plan to go to dinner or if you just want a turn down service, you can just press this button and I'll get the message."
"Wait." Catra holds up her hand, "Are you on call like 24/7? Are there no other attendants on this carriage?" The magicat whispers teasingly, "Are you here under duress?"
"No. I'm not under duress." Gwen baulks out with a little laugh, "And no, I'm not working 24/7. There are a few attendants that look after this carriage, but I only look after the 2 cabins on this carriage, another attendant looks after the other 2 on the same carriage."
"Lucky me." Catra says, her eyes looking softly at Gwen's, "Who's the second or third attendant looking after me then?"
"It changes nightly as they are only really on call between the hours of 11pm and 5am." Gwen replies, "And only if I'm not available."
"That's crazy." Catra blurts out surprised as Gwen just shrugs, "So… are you like… my butler or maid or… whatever?"
"I'm not a maid or a butler." Gwen says, "I'm just an attendant, besides it's not like I'm working all the time. Apart from a few jobs that I've got to do, the rest of the time is basically looking after the call bell."

"Uh huh." Catra just nods, "Where do you sleep then?"
"Why?"
"Just wondering."
"We've got quarters in another carriage." Gwen replies, "It's obviously not as nice as this and we can't exactly get drunk on here, but it's a pretty cool gig."
"Right." Catra nods and grins, "Okay, well, I hope the guy or girl next to me is just as annoying as me."
"Oh, well…" Gwen chuckles a little, "There actually isn't anyone next door. They didn't show up so it's currently unoccupied." The blonde smiles shyly, "That is unless someone wants to change or there's an issue with another cabin. But for now, it's empty."
"Good to know." Catra replies as Gwen just looks at her confused, waiting for Catra to elaborate, "I mean that I don't have to deal with a stranger snoring or their loud talking or whatever."
"Oh." Gwen laughs to herself, "I guess. These cabins are pretty sound proof, considering it's already pretty noisy with the sound of the train rolling on."
"Yeah, right." Catra says as she plays with her scarf a little before sitting back down and looking at the window.
Gwen clears her throat, "Did you want me to hang up your scarf up too?"
"No, it's fine." Catra replies still mindlessly playing with it in her fingers, "It never leaves me."
"Okay." The blonde nods back, "So, uh, lunch will be in the dining cart, 3 carriages down from here and, oh, here." She digs into her back pocket and writes something on it before handing it over to Catra, "This is your dining reservation. You'll need to bring it with you when you go into that carriage otherwise they won't seat you."
"Right. Thanks." Catra looks at the card with her cabin number on it, "What time?"
"For?"
"Lunch."
"Oh, right." Gwen chuckles a little embarrassedly, "There's 2 sessions. So you can pick from 11am or 1pm."

"Do I actually have to go to the dining cart or can I get lunch in here?" Catra asks, twirling around the card in hand, "I'm not really feeling up to meeting and talking to people."
"Yeah, yes of course you can have it in here." Gwen tells her, "I'll grab you the menu for lunch and then you can order and I'll bring it to you."
"Thank you." Catra says as she watches the blonde rush out of the room, sliding the door shut behind to retrieve the menu.

Catra hears someone knock lightly against her door and sees Gwen standing outside waiting to be let in. The magicat gets up and opens the door up, the blonde comes in holding up a tray and sets it up on the table.
"Sit." The blonde instructs and the magicat obeys, taking a seat by the table as Gwen starts to set up lunch for the magicat, "Here. Napkin."
"It's fine, Ad… Gwen." Catra says and Gwen stills for just a moment before continuing on, "I don't need all this."
"Hush you." Gwen scolds the magicat lightly, "This is my job. And if my boss or another worker walks past and I haven't done my due diligence…" she huffs, "I'm not getting in trouble because of you."
Catra laughs, "If and I do mean if, someone was to stick their head in, I would just tell them that I requested this."
"Doesn't work that way." Gwen groans, "Just… let me. Please."
"Okay. Fine. Do your job, princess." Catra rolls her eyes as Gwen sets the rest of the meal up.
"I forgot to ask, what did you want to drink?" The blonde asks after placing the napkin on Catra's lap and uncovering the food, "Water?"
"Water is fine." Catra picks up her fork and looks at it, "Do you want to join me?"
"Oh, I can't." Gwen politely declines.
"Why not?" Catra asks, "It's not like you've got any other passengers to look after." She pats the seat next to her, "Take a load off princess, and have lunch with me."

“I’m really not supposed to…” The blonde bites her bottom lip, clearly conflicted before she yelps a little when Catra stands up suddenly and moves towards her, “What… what are you doing?”
“Shutting the curtains.” Catra says, “That way we can have a little privacy. And you can have lunch with me without getting into trouble.”
Gwen watches as Catra moves back around the blonde, lightly touching her hips to get back into her seat and then gestures for the blonde to follow. Gwen sighs, a small smile on her lips as she takes a seat next to Catra, “This is against the rules, you know that right? I could get fired.”
“For what? Having lunch with me?” Gwen nods, “If that happens, I’ll just tell your boss I coerced you into it.”
Gwen snorts out a laugh as Catra grins back, teeth and all, “Like they’d believe that.”
“Eat.” Catra gestures to the food in front of them, “I’m not going to finish it so you may as well help me otherwise it’ll just go to waste.”
“I mean… if you’re sure…” Gwen says shyly.
“I’m sure.” Catra hands Gwen the fork, “I don’t eat much anyways. Never really had the stomach for it.”
“Oh.” The blonde says surprised.
Catra shrugs, “I just grew up that way is all I’m going to say.”
Gwen nods somewhat knowingly, “Okay.”
As they tuck in, Catra clears her throat after swallowing her bite, “Is there any more water?”
“Yes. I’ll go and get you some more.” Gwen goes to stand up but feels Catra’s hand around her wrist, “Unless you want something other than water?”
Catra shakes her head, slowing standing up as well. The blonde swallows hard as Catra’s hand moves towards her and then she feels the napkin tucked into her collar pulled out, “There. That’s a little more professional, wouldn’t you say?”
Gwen looks down and giggles nervously, not expecting that, “Thanks. I forgot that it was even there.”
Catra nods, releasing the blonde’s wrist as Gwen slides open the door to head out, “No worries, Adora.”
The blonde pauses for a moment, not turning around upon hearing that name. She slides the door shut again, making sure the curtain is still drawn as she finally turns around, "What did you call me?"

"Adora." Catra replies nonchalantly, "You can't fool me, princess. I'd know it was you no matter how much you think you've changed."
"You must be mistaken." The blonde replies, "My name is Gwen. Not Adora."
"Sure, princess." Catra goes back to picking at her plate, "Gwen. Adora. Call yourself whatever you want. Doesn't change who you really are."
"I… I'm going to go get you that water." The blonde turns back around and heads out the door, "I'll be back soon."
"I've heard that before." Catra replies a little angrily, "And I'm not holding my breath. Not this time."
The blonde frowns, but only nods in response as she slides the door shut and heads off to retrieve the beverage while Catra goes back to staring out the window and sighs sadly, fairly certain she wasn't going to see the blonde again for the rest of journey.

Watching The Sun Rise

Chapter Summary

The train stops for a sunrise excursion.

Chapter Notes

A fairly quick update for ya'll.
Enjoy!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Catra was right.
The blonde, Gwen or really Adora, hasn't come back despite the fact that she's supposed to be the attending for the magicat's cabin. It seems Adora has timed it so that whenever Catra is either in the bathroom or stepped out to stretch her legs, notes are left on her table to indicate dinner times or if there are any other requests or requirements.
As much as Catra wants to forget about the blonde. She really can't.
Everywhere she goes on this train, she knows exactly where the other woman is.
Her scent is still extremely familiar and it hurts that Gwen/Adora has decided to revert back to their formulative years or radio silence. Catra really should have gotten over this feeling by now, but when it comes to Adora… well, it's never simple.

The night rolls in and she decides to head to the dining carriage for dinner, changing into a nicer shirt and a pair of black slacks, the red scarf swung around her neck as she heads out, sliding and locking her door before starting to walk down to the next carriage when she remembers that she's forgotten her card that she needs to show for the dining cart to be seated.
She starts to make her way back to her cabin, pulling out her phone despite having no signal she bumps into someone, "Sorry. I should have… oh, it's you." Catra says as she looks up at Adora who is standing there like a deer in the headlights, "I just need to get my dining card."

"Oh, right." Adora quickly tries to get out of the way only to do an awkward sideways dance with Catra instead, the magicat grunts, holding Adora in place by the hips, "Hey!"
"I don't feel like dancing tonight, princess." Catra mutters out before adding, "Not on an empty stomach anyway."
Adora makes a noise like she's trying to hold back a giggle before clearing her throat, "I forgot to ask, do you want the bottom or the top?"
Catra quirks and eyebrow up at the blonde, licking her lips as she looks Adora up and down with a smirk, "I prefer to top."
Adora furrows her brow a little at the reply before it finally clicks in her head, "Stars! I was not referring to that!"
"Then what were you referring to, princess?" Catra picks up the dining card and slips it into her pocket, "Then again, you already knew my preference. Has yours changed?"
The blonde huffs with a blush, "For your information… it's none of your business. Now, answer my question. Top or bottom?"
Catra chuckles at the question, "If you are referring to which bunk I prefer, then I think I'll take the top. I do prefer to be up high."
Adora nods back, "Okay. I'll have it set up for when you get back from dinner."
"Sure, Adora." Catra replies, once again putting her hands lightly on the blonde's hips to get around her to exit her cabin, "Don't be a stranger. You might have changed your name, but your scent is something you'll never be able to change."
Before Adora can retort, Catra's already sliding the cabin door shut and walking away.

Catra gets back to her cabin a little later on, she met a nice woman that was seated on her table at dinner and they got talking and then they headed to the bar cart to continue chatting a little longer until the magicat started to yawn and they decided to call it a night.
As she stumbles towards her room, her hand on the door handle to slide it open when she hears someone scoff, her ears twitch in the direction of the sound before she turns around to see who's there.

"Oh, hey Adora." Catra grins at the blonde, "Come to read me a bedtime story? Is that a service I can request?"
Adora frowns back at the magicat wordlessly.
"What? What's wrong?" Catra tries to focus her eyes on the blonde, the alcohol clearly getting to her, "Okay, no bedtime story…" the magicat grumbles as she turns to grab her backpack and pulls out a pair of shorts and an old pale yellow long sleeve raglan shirt. Catra looks at Adora, the blonde still standing just outside her cabin, "I'm going to get ready for bed. Have a goodnight princess."
Adora huffs in response, catching the sliding door before Catra can slide it shut.
Catra sighs, "What?"
"Who were you with tonight?" She asks accusingly.
"Uh, I think her name was Crystal or Christy… something with Chris in it." Catra slurs out as she goes into her ensuite to get changed, a muffled "Why?" comes out as the magicat tosses her shirt out and onto the bench seat.
"Whatever. I don't care." Adora huffs again, doing her best to stay neutral.
"Uh huh." Catra says as she comes back out and looks at Adora questioning, "Does this place come with toothbrushes or toothpaste?"
"Yes."
Catra goes back into the ensuite and has another look before coming back out again, "I must have had more to drink than I realised… can you show me where?"
Adora rolls her eyes, pushing past the magicat into the ensuite to show her when she realises that the amenity kit isn't there, "Oh. Shit. I knew I forgot something."
"Huh?"
"Wait here. I'll be back." Adora says as she heads out of the cabin, gasping quietly when she feels Catra's hand on her wrist, "What?"
"You are coming back, right?" Catra asks shyly, her ears folded down as she looks away from Adora's eyes, "You're not going to ghost me again like this afternoon, are you?"

Adora sighs, shaking her head, “I’m sorry about that, Catra.”
“Oh, yeah. Cool.” A small smile twitches on the magicat’s lips, “Because… I really missed you, Adora.”
“It’s Gwen.” Adora corrects.
“No, it’s not.” Catra sits on the bench seat before kicking her feet up and laying down, “You’ll always be Adora to me.”
Adora narrows her eyes down at the magicat but she can’t be mad at her, not when Catra looks so content and happy, the smile on her face, while she closes her eyes has the blonde softening, “I’ll be back with your amenity kit, Catra.”
“Promise?”
“Yeah, I promise.” Adora confirms before heading out the cabin.

“Catra?” Adora knocks on the door to find the magicat fast asleep on the bench seat, “Catra?”
“Mm…” The magicat hums in response.
“I’ve got your toothbrush and toothpaste.” Adora whispers softly.
“Mmhm…”
“You need to brush your teeth, remember?” The blonde leans down and gently shakes the magicat by the shoulder, “Come on, up.”
“No.” Catra grumbles, “Comfy.”
Adora watches as Catra curls up into a ball, snuggling with the red scarf in her arms, as the blonde squeezes the magicat’s shoulder again, “Catra… come on. Your bed is up there, remember?”
“Don’t’ care. I can sleep anywhere.” Catra replies groggily, “No one cares if I don’t brush my teeth tonight…”
“I will.” Adora sighs.
“No, you won’t.”
“Yes, I will.” Adora replies, “I have to talk to you in the morning. And you’re going to have stinky breath.”
Catra just grins into the red scarf, purring up a storm that has Adora almost cooing at her, so she tries a different tact, “Catra!” she whines playfully and the magicat groans in faux annoyance, “Catraaaa! Get up!”
“No.”
“Come on, Catraaaa!” Adora repeats again, a small smile on her lips as she starts to tug the magicat up, Catra reluctantly gets into a seated position, stubbornly keeping her eyes shut, "Go, brush your teeth. I'll be right here when you're done."

"Don't wanna."
"Do you want me to brush your teeth for you too?" Adora threatens and Catra hisses out at her with no bite, "Because you know I will."
"Ugh! I'll get up on one condition." Catra negotiates, her eyes still closed as she says it.
"Name it."
A mischievous grin comes across Catra's face as Adora thinks to herself that it was a bad idea to agree to this. Her thoughts are confirmed when Catra says, "Have breakfast with me."
"Oh." Adora thinks and says out loud, "Uh… I don't…"
"I'm your only customer." Catra declares as she stands up on unsteady legs, "You serve only me."
Adora giggles at the magicat's declarations, "I do not serve only you."
"On this trip, you do." Catra's eyes sort of open as she braces herself on the wall as the train rocks from side to side slightly, "Mm… I like this power…"
"Get over yourself, Catra. You don't have any power over there." Adora rolls her eyes at the magicat, "Now, go and brush your teeth."
"Only if you have breakfast with me." Catra repeats more defiantly, "Otherwise I can go find Chrissy… or whatever. She seemed cute…"
"Fine. I'll have breakfast with you!" Adora cuts Catra's train of thought off, "But you need to go and brush your teeth. It's already really late and I'm tired."
"Oh." Catra's ears fold back down again in guilt at having Adora still up and looking after her instead of sleeping like most of the other attendants on the train, "Sorry, Adora. I'll… I'll go and get washed up."

Adora doesn't correct the magicat this time as she watches Catra go into the ensuite and listens to the sound of the magicat brushing her teeth. The blonde sighs as she waits at the door, ready to help Catra up to the top bunk if she needs it, otherwise she thinks she could just set up the bottom bunk for the magicat if she can't be bothered going up that high.

Her thoughts are broken when Catra reappears, using the sleeve of her shirt to wipe the dampness from her mouth and then stops to stare at Adora.
"Are you going to be okay to get up there?" Adora asks.
"Sure." Catra shrugs tiredly, "I'm always okay…"
"Okay." Adora repeats a little softer, staying put until she can see the magicat get into bed.
"Are you just going to stand there, princess?" Catra yawns, stretching her arms over her head, "Or did you want to get in with me? Just like old times…"
"No. I… I'm not allowed to." Adora replies crossing her arms over her chest, "That would be against the rules for sure."
"Uh huh. Like staff don't fuck passengers or the other way around." Catra chuckles to herself as she steps towards the ladder and starts to climb up with ease, "You are more than welcome to keep me company, Adora."
The magicat settles in bed finally and Adora moves to turn off the lights, "Goodnight, Catra."
"Night, Adora." Catra replies, feeling herself sobering up faster than she thought she would, "See you for breakfast. You know what I like."
Adora doesn't reply, sliding the door shut and leaving Catra to sleep.

Catra wakes to find the train has come to a stop.
Her head still feels heavy but she doesn't feel too bad as she slowly wakes up, swinging her legs over the side of the bunk towards the ladder and descending to find the curtain on her window had been pulled shut. She opens it up and is met with darkness.
"What the…?" Catra grabs her phone, "Oh, right. Sunrise."
She quickly gets dressed into her day clothes, wrapping her red scarf around her neck as she makes her way off the train to join the rest of the tired people out to watch the sunrise. The train staff have set up a bon fire not too far from the middle of the train, a small crowd of people mill around it, trying to get warm in the crisp cold morning air.

Catra finds a good spot to view the sunrise from and starts to make her way towards it.
It's up a small hill, something her eyes can see but not the humans and other hybrids on the train. She knows that the train won't take off anytime soon, since the itinerary did say it was a stopped here for the sunrise and then breakfast before some excursion time if people wanted to partake.
The magicat has no intentions on partaking on any excursions, she only managed to scrape enough money for this trip and would rather keep the rest of her savings… saved.
As she begins to walk off, she feels a hand on her shoulder and without turning around she says, "Hey Adora."
"It's Gwen." The blonde replies, "And where do you think you are going?"
"Exploring."
"No. You'll get lost and then get left behind then I'll get in trouble because you got lost and missed the train departing." Adora starts to ramble, "And I'm not getting in trouble."
"You won't, Adora." Catra simply says, shrugging off Adora's hand, "Besides, I'm allowed to move about as I please while the train is stationed."
"Catra." The blonde tries to be stern.
"I'm going. Follow if you want. But I'm going." Catra says, her eyes able to see the viewing area easier as a little light begins to appear from the sun beginning to rise, "I'm not going to miss this, princess."
"Ugh, fine." Adora grabs Catra's wrist, the magicat shaking the blonde's hand until it's in her own, intertwining their hands.
"Don't worry, Adora. It's still too dark for anyone to see." Catra grins as she pulls the blonde up the small hill.
They get to the top of the hill before the sun makes its full appearance, the light slowly illuminating the land beneath them as they watch the sun rise up slowly.

"You know, you shouldn't stare directly into the sun…" Catra muses as she turns her back to the sun, Adora's hand still in hers,

“Tell me, how long has Gwen been in this job?”
Adora giggles, “Gwen has been in this job for just over a year now.”
Catra nods as Adora uses her hand to shield her eyes from the sun’s rays, “Do you like it?”
“I like the travelling part of it.” Adora replies, “The customer service part… not so much.”
“Why not?”
“Well…” Adora starts before shuffling a little and inadvertently squeezing Catra’s hand, “Most patrons are pretty good and respectful, but then there’s some…”
Catra can’t help herself and growls out, the blonde quickly turning her head to face the magicat who’s got an angry look on her face.
“Hey… it’s fine.” Adora tries to reassure the magicat.
“Tell me who and I’ll kick their asses.” Catra grunts out, “If anyone lays a hand on you…”
“Catra.” Adora sighs, “You… We… We aren’t…”
Catra shakes her head, “I know we aren’t.”
Adora pulls her hand out from Catra’s grip, “I’m sorry, Catra.” The blonde looks down at her fellow workers and sighs again, “I have to get to work.”
“Yeah. Go.” Catra says sullenly, “I won’t miss the train.”
“Okay.” Adora nods, “Come get some breakfast?”
“Nah, I’m not hungry.” Catra grips onto the ends of the red scarf, squeezing it in her hands, “I’ll see you later, Adora.”
“Are you sure? Lunch isn’t for a while…” Adora says.
“I’m sure.” Catra replies looking back towards where the sun has lit up the surroundings.
“Okay.” Adora grimaces a little, waving back to her coworkers who get her attention to get to work, “I have to go.”
Catra nods, not looking when Adora descends back down to join the rest of the staff and patrons. The magicat sits down on a relatively flat rock, bringing her knees up to her chest and wrapping her tail around herself, thinking to herself, “What am I doing?”

Catra's in her room, she didn't ask Adora to put her bunk back in so she's now lying on top of it, her head propped up on a few pillows as she reads her book, her ears twitch when someone knocks on her door.
"Come in." Catra calls out as she turns the page of her book.
"Hi." A perky woman's voice says as the door slides open, "Good book?"
"Yeah." Catra replies as she closes her book and rolls to her side to get a good look at the woman standing in her cabin, "But… I bet you aren't here to talk about books, huh."
The woman shakes her head with a small grin on her face, stepping closer to Catra's face, "How'd you guess?"
"I don't remember telling you which cabin I was in…" Catra drawls, a confused look on her face.
"No, you didn't." She says seductively as she raises her arm up so the magicat can see, "But you did write it down on my arm last night."
"Hm… are you sure that's my handwriting?" Catra says narrowing her eyes at the woman's arm before replying boredly, "Nope, can't be."
"What the fuck?!" The woman swears, "What happened to all that shit you told me last night?"
"I was drunk, sweetheart." Catra rolls back over on her back and opens her book again, "I wasn't looking for anything serious." The magicat turns back over, taking a good look at the woman and realises why she had hit on her last night, she's blonde, tall-ish and has a ponytail, the magicat clears her throat, "Sorry for the misunderstanding."
"You… you jerk!" She shouts out, ripping the book out of the magicat's hand and throwing it back at Catra, "Asshole!"
"Excuse me. What are you doing in here?" Adora's voice comes across, she's glaring at the blonde woman in Catra's cabin, "You're not supposed to be in here."
The other woman just glares right back at Adora, "I'm leaving."
"Good. Please leave my guest alone." Adora puts her hands on her hips, "And if I see you on my carriage again, I will have you dropped off at the next stop and you can find your own way home from there."

The other woman narrows her eyes at Adora and scoffs, “I don’t plan on coming here again. Fucking mangy cat.”
“Hey! Watch your mouth.” Adora growls.
“Fuck off, Gwen.” The other woman throws back, pushing past Adora and back out of the carriage.
“Adora. Let it go.” Catra says as she moves to retrieve her book that’s fallen to the ground, “Its’ not worth losing your job over.”
“The nerve!” Adora grunts out, “Who was that?”
Catra shrugs once she’s got her book again and sits down under the bunk, her ears hitting the bottom of it as she slides down a little to get some clearance, “Cassy or Cassidy or fuck, I don’t fucking know.”
“Seriously, Catra?” Adora huffs, “What the hell?!”
“What?” Catra asks dumbfounded, “Nothing happened. She was just… company at dinner last night.”
“Just dinner, huh?”
“Well, dinner and then drinks after. Why?” Catra looks up at her bunk, “Hey, can you show me how to put this back in?”
“No. Who is she, Catra?!” Adora crosses her arms over her chest.
“I told you.” Catra groans, “I don’t, fucking, know! I was drunk when I met her last night, okay?” The magicat stands up, nearly hitting her head on the top bunk, “Fuck. Why do you even care, Adora? You’re the one that… fuck…”
Adora’s frown turns into one of guilt, “I… I didn’t mean to…”
“Yeah, well, you did.” Catra turns around to look at the bunk, trying to figure out how to put it back in, “Whatever. Just… show me how to put this back up.”
“Fine.” Adora relents, “You need to move all the pillows off the bed first.”
“You know what, you do it.” Catra grabs her scarf and puts it back on, “I’m going to get a drink.”
“Catra, wait!” Adora reaches out for Catra’s hand, managing to snag it, “Can you… just… I’m sorry.”
“Yeah.” Catra breathes out, “Can I go now?”
“No.” Adora squeezes Catra’s hand, “Are you still mad?”
“I… I don’t know.” Catra replies, “I could really use a drink.”
“I’m sorry.” Adora repeats.
“Yeah, I got it.” Catra says.

“Look, what if I brought you a drink?” Adora suggests instead, “That way you don’t have to accidentally run into that… person.”
“I can look after myself, Adora.” Catra grunts out, “I don’t need you to look out for me. Haven’t needed you since… yeah.”
“Please?” Adora says and then tries to lighten the mood, “I mean, what I did couldn’t really have been that bad if you’re still willing to talk to me…”
Catra growls lowly at the blonde, a snarl on her lips as she says, “What could be worse than you breaking my heart?”

Chapter End Notes

Hm... not a cliffhanger... right?

thanks for reading, kudos and commenting.

Breaks

Chapter Summary

The explanation part.

Chapter Notes

New chapter! Enjoy!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

"I… I broke you heart?" Adora says so softly that even Catra's ears strain to hear it, "When?"
"Doesn't matter." Catra scoffs back.
"Well, it does matter." Adora puts her hands on her hips, blocking Catra's means of escape, "Just… tell me when I broke your heart."
"I don't want to talk about it." Catra grunts back, turning her back to Adora and making her way back up to the top bunk, flopping unceremoniously onto it as she flips open her book once more, "You can go now."
"No." Adora replies defiantly, "I'm not going until you tell me when I broke your heart."
"No. Go. Now." Catra simply says.
Adora harrumphs, clearly not happy with the reply as she moves towards the door and slides it shut, pulling the curtains over it for privacy and locking the door from the inside before turning back around to climb the ladder to the top bunk, "Move over."
"What?! No!" Catra tries to shove Adora away, but instead finds herself pinned down by the blonde, "This is totally harassment."
Adora drops her full weight on top of Catra, "Tell me then!"
Catra huffs, turning her face so she's not looking at Adora, letting her body sink into the mattress further and then mumbling out, "You're crushing my book."
Adora moves her hand around, trying to feel out for the item, inadvertently touching the magicat under her, "Sorry... I didn't mean to feel you up…"
Catra just grunts in response.

Sighing, Adora manages to snag the book that just under her leg, "Aha! Got it!" she pulls it out and looks at it, it's a little creased from where she's accidentally lain on top of it, the fold going through the first quarter of the book as she tries to smooth it down flat, "Sorry about your book."
Another grunt from the magicat.
"Catra." Adora sighs again, dropping her head onto the magicat's chest, "I… I know you're sick of my telling you I'm sorry, but I really don't know what else I'm supposed to do. I can't fix this if you don't tell me… when."
"I don't want to talk about it." Catra grunts out.
"Please?"
"No."
"Catraaaa!!!" Adora tries a different tact, remembering how things used to be between them, looking up at the magicat with the biggest puppy dog eyes she can muster, "Please…"
Catra stays stoic, making sure she doesn't look into those grey-blue eyes staring up at her from her chest.
Adora knows this tactic, pulling herself up a little, gently moving Catra's cheek so she can look into her eyes, "Hi."
Catra furrows her brows, "Get off, Adora."
"No."
"Ugh, why are you like this?!" Catra grumbles, curling her hands into fists, "I'm over you. Just… let it go." The magicat breathes out the last word.
"You clearly aren't." Adora breathes out as well, "Did you really think I wouldn't remember that scarf?"
"So? It's mine." Catra grumbles out, "And yeah, I'm clearly over you."
"Don't make me laugh." Adora scoffs out unconvinced, "You aren't. And I'm not over you."
"What?"
Adora's eyes widen at the inadvertent admission, "I…" she thinks about whether to lie or just go with the truth, the latter winning out as she throws her head back as much as she can, "I'm not over you. I'm never going to be."
Catra's speechless. She never thought she'd ever hear Adora say those words to her. Not in real life anyways.

The silence makes Adora writhe around uncomfortably, swallowing down everything she's feeling right now as she thinks about whether to cut her losses and just get out of Catra's bed, her room and change with one of the other crew so that she's not still looking after this carriage. She's so lost in her thoughts, she doesn't even realise that Catra's running her fingers through her hair that's been let down and cascades around her on top of the magicat's chest.
Catra sighs, "It's fine. I don't blame you for leaving."
Adora looks up, confusion written all over her face when the memory finally comes flooding back, "I didn't have a choice."
Catra stays silent, "You just left."
"I tried to look for you." Adora says so softly that Catra's ears strain to hear it, "I left you a note. Did you get it?"
"Note? What note?" Catra's hand stills in Adora's hand, "There wasn't any note."
"I left you a note. It was all I could give you before I had to leave." Adora tells her, "They didn't give me much time to pack my stuff."
"You didn't even tell me you were leaving." Catra says sadly.
"I wanted to. I really did." Adora tries to wrap her arms around the magicat, "But I wasn't even sure if I really was going to be going at all."
Catra goes back to silence again in contemplation.
"I swear to you Catra!" Adora pleads, "I wrote it all in the note I left you in your room! I even put my address where I was going!"
"I didn't get a note." Catra repeats, "Why did you leave?"
"I was a witness to a crime." Adora whispers out, "I saw some things that I shouldn't have."
"Like what?"
"I… I can't talk about it." Adora rubs her cheek against Catra's shoulder, "It's still… under investigation… which is why I'm now Gwen."
"You… You're…" Catra tries to comprehend what she's just heard, "Are you in trouble, Adora?"
Adora shakes her head against Catra's chest, "Not exactly. The case is still ongoing but as long as I don't go back to the Fright Zone, I'm safe." The blonde pushes herself up slightly off the magicat, looking intently in Catra's eyes, "I never meant to leave you for so long. I didn't mean to break your heart and I wanted to go back for you. I just… I wasn't allowed to."

"You… it was you." Catra breathes out, "I should have known."
"What?"
"You were the one they were looking for." Catra resumes stroking Adora's hair, "They came looking for you after you left. Kept shouting out for the 'witness.'"
"They did?"
"Yeah." Catra recalls, "They found me instead."
"Oh… Catra…" Adora holds onto Catra a little tighter, "This is my fault!"
Catra sighs, "No. I… It's not your fault that I got the worst beating of my life, Adora." The magicat can feel her shirt starting to get wet, tears are coming from Adora's eyes as the magicat wraps her arms around the blonde, "I blamed you for so long… and… I was so, so angry that you left me to pick up all the pieces. That… that's when you broke my heart."
Adora starts to openly cry into Catra's chest, her hands fisting into the magicat's shirt, "I wanted to take you with me! They wouldn't let me!"
Catra sighs again, "I loved you. I thought you left me because you didn't love me back."
The confession has Adora stunned, pushing herself up to look into Catra's eyes to see if she's lying before furrowing her own, "You love me?"
"I loved you." Catra corrects.
"How about now?" Adora asks back softly.
"I… I don't know." Catra looks away before grumbling, "You never said it back."
"What?"
"I said, you never said it back." Catra says a little louder.
"When? I don't remember that…" Adora furrows her brows now, trying to recall that moment and failing, "When did you tell me?"
"The night I kissed you." Catra replies, "We were lying on the hood of my car, looking up at the stars and I leant over, told you I was in love with you and then I kissed you." Adora's eyes widen, the memory flickering up in her brain but then the sense of guilt takes over as Catra continues, “Then… you ran off. When I eventually got home after spending the rest of the night trying to kill myself with alcohol, I got the beating of my life.”

Catra tries to slide out from under Adora, the confession and subsequent embarrassment she’s feeling right now only for Adora to flop on her more, “Wait, Catra.”
“Why? I get it. I forgive you. You can go now.” Catra grunts out, “You’ve clearly moved on. So, let me do the same.”
“I haven’t.” Adora softly says, “I haven’t moved on.”
“Sure, you have.” Catra says, surety in her voice as her hand moves from Adora’s hair to the blonde’s cheek, “You’re not Adora anymore. You’re Gwen. Gwen the woman that works on these luxury trains. Gwen that… doesn’t love Catra because I am nothing more than another passenger on the train.”
“Are you done?” Adora frowns up at Catra, “Gwen is not allowed to fall for her passengers.”
“Yeah. Sucks, doesn’t it.” Catra throws her head back, “Also, Gwen. The woman who will definitely get in trouble for sleeping with her passenger.”
Adora narrows her eyes at Catra, she huffs out a chuckle when she sees the small smile on Catra’s lips, “Gwen is definitely going to get in trouble if she sleeps with her passenger…” Adora bites her bottom lip, “But Adora? Adora is… well, she’s an idiot for running away.”
Catra can’t help the laugh that comes out from her, “You are an idiot.”
“Yeah, I am.” Adora’s smile drops slightly, “But… I am also the same Adora that loves you. Back then and now.” She bites her bottom lip again, “Do you really not… love me anymore?”
“I’m still kind of mad at you.” Catra drops back down again, “I nearly died and no one even came to visit me. Not even you.”
“What?!” Adora pushes herself up, caging Catra under her.
“I told you. I had the beating of my life. What did you think that meant?” Catra scoffs before sighing, “The upside though…”
“Upside?”
“The upside to being unclaimed in the hospital was that I got assigned a case worker.” Catra says, “They couldn’t determine my age and I couldn’t tell them I was legally an adult, since I wasn’t exactly conscious… So, when I eventually was able to be discharged, I was put with an actual good family."

As Adora is about to ask more questions, there's a knock on the door.
"Oh shit! I can't be here if the door is locked!" Adora quickly gets up and off Catra, clambering down the stairs and looking for somewhere to hide.
Catra turns onto her side, "Hide in the bathroom, dumbass."
"Oh! Right!" Adora quickly opens the door to the ensuite, popping her head out, "Please don't tell on me!"
"Eh." Catra replies turning back over when the knocking on the door continues, "For fuck's sakes…" she grumbles before calling out loudly, "Hold on!"
Catra begrudgingly gets off the bunk and unlocks the door, sliding it a little harder than she means to only to find another attendant at the door looking sheepishly at her, "Sorry. I didn't mean to disturb your sleep."
Catra gives the female attendant with red hair a look of irritation, "Is there a reason you are interrupting my nap?"
"Oh, your name wasn't checked back in after breakfast." The female attendant starts to explain, "Your attendant, Gwen, have you seen her?"
"Yeah, I have." Catra replies vaguely, "Why?"
"Do you know where?"
"She's getting me a drink since I had a run in with another passenger." Catra leans against her door, crossing her arms over her chest at being interrogated, "She should be back soon."
"Great. Do you mind if I wait here?" The attendant asks, clearly not believing the lie.
"No. I would rather you didn't." Catra replies patting herself down and then groaning, "Fuck…"
The attendant holds back from telling the magicat off for swearing, wincing a little at the act.
Catra sighs, "Hey, since you're here. I think I left my dining card in the dining cart last night. Do you think you can check for me?"
"Yes, of course." The attendant says begrudgingly, "I'll pass it to Gwen to give it back to you."

“Great.” Catra nods, “Tell Gwen she’s fucking slow.”
“Uh, do you have some feedback you would like me to pass on to our manager regarding Gwen’s performance on your journey so far?” The attendant asks a little more interest as Catra tilts her head at the question, “Has Gwen not been up to standard so far?”
“What the… what are you talking about?” Catra breathes out harshly, “Gwen’s been fucking amazing. Letting me sleep in. Helping me with meals and drinks. Give the girl a raise in my opinion.”
The attendant doesn’t seem to like that answer, huffing out a little unhappily, “I’ll go check the dining cart for your card.”
“Thanks, darl.” Catra smirks as the attendant turns to walk away and then the magicat slides her door shut and locks it once more, “You can come out now. Cruella’s gone.”
Adora comes out cautiously, “Thank you. Betty is a pain the ass.”
“Whatever.” Catra says leaning back against her door.
Adora shuffles a little awkwardly in place, “Are we… are we okay?”
“Sure. I’m still your passenger and your still my maid.” Catra replies with a slight smirk on her lips, “You better get going before you get into trouble with ‘Madam Stick Up Her Ass’.”
Adora chuckles, glad that they can go back to relative normalcy, the blonde breathes out, “I better get going… before I really get in trouble.”
Catra steps aside, “Hang on. Let me check if the coast is clear.”
Adora rolls her eyes as Catra opens her door and does a quick walk up and down the carriage, pretending that she’s forgotten something before returning to her cabin. Adora’s eyes widen, “So?"
"You can escape now, princess.” Catra replies as she goes back into her cabin, “I think I’ll take lunch in here again.”
“Of course.” Adora nods, fixing up her hair, “Would you like to peruse the menus?”
“Won’t be necessary, just bring me whatever. I’m not picky.” Catra says as Adora stands outside her cabin, and then says just a little louder for anyone who may be lurking to hear, “And I expect you to join me for lunch, Gwen.”
Adora rolls her eyes at the magicat, “I’ll be back with your drink and lunch later.”

Catra's stepped out on to the open air part of the viewing carriage, watching as the sun goes down behind the mountain tops, she's got her hood up over her red scarf as she leans on the rail. Enjoying the sound of the loud train wheels on the tracks contrasting with the calming view of the sun setting and the vibrant colours that light up the darkening sky.
"Excuse me. This is area is closed now." The male attendant says politely, "It's for your safety as it gets dark here"
"What about those lights?" Catra points up at the string lights still visible above her, "Can you not turn them on thus eliminating the darkness?"
"Unfortunately, not tonight." He tells her with a consolatory smile, "If you come back tomorrow night, the lights will be on. If you head onto the bar cart, there's a trivia event tonight. If you aren't interested in trivia, there's our local musician playing in the dining cart once dinner service has ended."
Catra takes one last look at setting sun before turning back to the attendant with a nod, "I'll be back tomorrow then."
The attendant nods back, "Have a good night."
"You too."

"You didn't stay for lunch, Gwen." Catra says as she slides her cabin door open, pulling the hood off and then looking at the blonde standing a few paces back in the narrow hallway of the carriage, "I'll have to take a star off when I do the feedback form."
Adora rolls her eyes at the magicat, "You're going to get me into trouble. Betty is being nosy."
"I am trouble." She raises her eyebrow at Adora, "And here I thought you already knew that."
"You are not trouble. But I am going to be in trouble if you keep being cheeky."
"Cheeky?" Catra says the word with a taste of disgust, "You did not just call me cheeky."
"I did and I will continue to call you cheeky if you keep that up."

Adora threatens politely, “Now, is there anything else you need before I call it a night?”
“I don’t know. Is there?” Catra asks right back as Adora rolls her eyes again and looks back at the magicat unimpressed. Catra chuckles, “No. Thank you, Gwen. I’ll see you tomorrow.”
“Goodnight Catra.” Adora nods back to the magicat before grasping the door handle to slide it closed when Catra stops her by putting her own hand over the blonde’s, “Is there something else?”
“Yeah.” Catra breathes out, coming in closer so they’re barely a breath apart.
“Catra…” Adora says with a shaky voice, “We can’t.”
“Can’t?” Catra repeats and Adora nods, her forehead slightly bumping into Catra’s, “Can’t you… wake me up for breakfast?”
“What?”
“Breakfast.” Catra grins, pulling back and smirking, “Wake me up for breakfast.”
“Oh. Right.” Adora straightens up a little, “Which time do you want to go to?”
“Neither.” Catra replies stretching up with a yawn, “I think I’ll have it in bed tomorrow.”
“Seriously?” Adora looks up at the top bunk, “You want me to serve you breakfast in the top bunk?”
“Nah, I’ll put the top bunk up tonight and set up the bottom one.” Catra replies eying the same bunk, “I wouldn’t trust you not to drop my food and drink on me if I was on the top bunk.”
“Oh.” Adora is taken aback, “Uh, do you want me to turn it down for you?”
“No, no.” Catra waves Adora off, “I think I should be able to manage.”
Adora isn’t convinced. Nope. Not one bit.
The blonde stands in place, just outside Catra’s cabin with her arms crossed waiting to be proven wrong when the magicat turns around to look at her, “What?”
“I want to see this.” Adora simply says.
Catra walks back up to the door and starts to slide it shut, “Goodnight, Gwen.” The magicat says loudly and just as the door is about to close she adds, “Goodnight, Adora.” In a whisper.

Adora hears the door lock once the door has slid shut and glares at the glass and then at the curtain that blocks her view of the inside of the cabin completely. The blonde sighs, whispering back, "Goodnight, Catra."

"Stars… what did you do?" Adora asks as Catra opens the door to her cabin after getting woken up for breakfast.
"I have no idea what you are talking about." Catra grumbles tiredly, "It's too early. Why are you here so early?"
"You never specified a time for breakfast, so I figured a 6am breakfast was probably what you were after." Adora smugly replies, "Or… was I wrong?"
"Ugh…" Catra rubs her face and takes a seat on the bottom bunk, "Good game, princess."
Adora looks at the mess of blankets that would be better classified as a 'nest' than covers, along with the pillows haplessly shoved in all corners of the bottom bunk. She looks up and sees the sheets sticking out from the top bunk and bordering on falling back out again. She looks down at Catra who decides to lie back down in her nest of a bottom bunk, "Alright. Move. I'm going to fix your top bunk so it's not going to drop and give you brain damage."
"I'm lying down. Doubt it'll hit me from there." Catra replies with her eyes closed, "But, by all means, do you job." Catra's eyes open, looking around her cabin and noticing something, "Hey? Where's breakfast?"
"In the dining cart." Adora replies as she pulls the top bunk down again and gets to work.
"Just leave it, princess." Catra groans, "It really doesn't matter…"
"It does." Adora starts to reset the bed, "If you get hurt or injured, that's going to be on me."
"I wouldn't tell anyone if I was hurt." Catra grunts out, "It's never done me any good in the past…"
Adora pauses her movements, before quickly finishing off making up the top bunk and putting it back in properly before taking a seat on the bed next to Catra's legs, "I'd help you if you got hurt." Catra grunts again.
"I'm serious, Catra." Adora reaches down and squeezes the magicat’s thigh.

Catra’s ears perk up at the act as she looks at Adora, “You’re going to get in trouble for sitting in my bed and touching me.”
“I don’t care.” Adora tells her, squeezing her thigh again for emphasis.
“You should care. Your best friend Betty is lurking not too far away.” Catra says sniffing the air and then scrunching up her nose, “Her perfume smells like puke.”
Adora laughs at that, “What do I smell like?”
The word leaves the magicat’s mouth before her brain can stop it as Catra answers, “Home.”

Chapter End Notes

Well... what does home smell like exactly???

Thanks for reading, kudos and commenting!

I'm on the road again for two nights so... yeah.
Got an 80m climb on Wednesday... can't wait... 🙃 😐
My forearms are already tired...

Glitter

Chapter Summary

Betty happens...

Chapter Notes

New chapter! Sorry for the wait!
Enjoy!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

"Gwen. There you are." Betty snarks up from behind Adora, "Where have you been?"
"What do you mean, Betty?" Adora questions right back, "I've been tending to my guest."
"Ah, yes. That… magicat." Betty says the word with a little disdain and Adora frowns back at the blatant racism, "Are you sure that is supposed to be in that carriage and not in one of the lower classes?"
"Do I have to report you to Gary?" Adora threatens, "You don't get to make assumptions about our passengers."
Betty raises an eyebrow at Adora, "Gwen, honey." She starts as her voice lowers, returning the threat, "You report me to Gary and I'll report you for sleeping with a passenger."
"I haven't!" Adora denies quickly, because, she hasn't and this is blatant lies, "And you've got nothing to prove it."
"Haven't I?" Betty challenges.
"No. You're lying." Adora puts her hands on her hips.
"Gwen, I've seen the way she looks at you." Betty steps up into Adora's space, "And don't think I haven't seen the way you have those… big, blue, bedroom eyes staring right back at her."
Before Adora can retort, a bell dings above them and it's like Catra knows the blonde needed to get out of this conversation as the pair both look up. The red light blinks at them, signalling that Catra's cabin has requested an attendant, Gwen.
Adora looks up and then narrows her eyes at Betty, "Looks like I'm needed for my very special guest." Adora turns on the spot, a few stray hairs whipping Betty in the face as she leaves, but before she does, Adora quickly turns around with a pointed finger back at the other woman, "Don't think I don't have dirt on you, Dirty Betty."

Betty gasps at that moniker before glaring back at Adora, "You better watch your back, blondie."
"Whatever." Adora huffs under her breath as she makes her way back to Catra's cabin.

"Oh, finally, princess." Catra slides open the door slightly flustered, "Have you seen my scarf?!"
"Uh… no?"
"Fuck… fuck!" Catra starts to rummage through the pillows and sheets in search for her prized possession, "Where the fuck?! I know it's in here somewhere…"
Adora looks around with Catra before hiding her chuckle behind her hand and clearing her throat, still watching the magicat frantically throwing things around the cabin, "Uh… Catra?"
"Yeah?" Catra replies gruffly without looking up, "What?"
"Catra." Adora this time openly laughs as she pulls the red scarf off the hook that the magicat's jacket is hung up on as well, "It's here."
Catra looks up, "Oh." Quickly snatching it out of Adora's fingers and balling it up, rubbing it against her cheek to comfort herself now that it's no longer lost, "Fuck… thanks Ad… Gwen."
Adora furrows her brow and then turns around when she hears a scoff from outside the door to see Betty looking in. Adora grits her teeth, "No problems, Catra." She steps back, "Is there anything else I can help you with today?"
Catra looks between Adora and Betty, a mischievous smile forms on her lips as Adora mouths to the magicat, "No!"
The magicat ignores Adora's advice, clearing her throat, "Yeah, can you send that other attendant in? I think her name was Betsy or Patty…"
"Why?" Adora frowns at the magicat.
"She's kind of cute. Reckon she's into magicats?" Catra asks cynically, not that Betty knows that, "I reckon she'd be wild and loud in bed…"

Adora almost gags on that thought, "No. I'm sorry but that… no."
"Oh, why not?" Catra pouts playfully, "She does look kind of flexible… reckon I could bend her over…"
"No. I'm sorry. But it is not appropriate for that kind of conduct to occur whilst the attendants are working." Adora replies stoically before adding, "But once you are no longer a passenger on this train, feel free to pursue her."
Betty makes a grunting noise before she can be heard stomping off, offended by the thought of being with a magicat as Catra smile turns into a laugh, "Wow… not into magicats?"
Adora looks back behind her and checks that Betty is actually gone and out of earshot before shaking her head, "No. She's definitely not into hybrids. Also, gross, I did not need that image in my head..."
"What me fucking her or her naked?" Catra laughs a little harder, before stifling it before asking seriously, "So… when I'm no longer a passenger… I'm allowed to ask you out?"
Adora blushes, "Catra!"
"What?" Catra shrugs, "Give me your number?"
"I can't." Adora turns away and Catra's heart sinks a little. The blonde must see it as she quickly grabs Catra's hands in hers tightly, "It's not that I don't want to, it's just that I don't have a phone."
"Really?" Adora nods, "Oh, in that case, I'll give you mine."
Catra starts looking for a pen as Adora bites her bottom lip, "Aha! I knew I had one." The magicat starts to look around for something to write on and then eyes her book, quickly grabbing it and writing into it before holding it out to Adora, "Here. For you."
Adora gingerly takes it, "I…"
"Just take it, Gwen." Catra shoves the book into Adora's chest, "Hide it or whatever, but don't open it until the train journey is over."
"Why?" Adora looks down at the book, "Journey to the centre of the Earth."
"Yeah," Catra nods when Adora reads out the books title, "It's a good book."

“I know.” Adora nods back, “You used to read it to me.”
“I did.” Catra acknowledges with a neck scratch, “Then you’ll know that’s my favourite book that you squished the other day.”
Adora blushes again, “I’m sorry about that…”
“It’s fine.” Catra waves her off, “I guess this way I know you’ll keep it safe.”
“You have my word.” Adora hugs the book to her chest, “Um… if there’s nothing else you need…”
“No, I think I’m good.” Catra smiles at her, “Unless you plan on… tucking me in after dinner…” the magicat whispers the last bit and Adora almost shoves her playfully, until Catra laughs, “No, thank you, Gwen. If you could turn down the top bunk for me when I head off to dinner, that’d be good.”
“Top bunk?” Adora asks to confirm.
“Yeah.” Catra replies and then looks at bottom bunk that’s still in bunk mode, “Can you leave my bottom bunk the way it is?”
“Are you sure?”
“Yeah. Just in case I don’t feel like getting into the top bunk.” Catra replies as she sits back down on her bottom bunk, “I’m planning on having a few drinks tonight.” She sees the slight grimace on Adora’s face as she quickly adds, “Don’t worry, princess. I don’t plan on bringing anyone home tonight.”
“Are you going to be ‘home’ tonight?” Adora asks shyly.
“Yeah. I am.” Catra replies, “Since I expect you to be here to tuck me in later.”
Adora rolls her eyes, “You are so going to get me into trouble, you know that, right?” Catra nods, “Betty is gunning for me.”
“Betty is probably harmless.” Catra shrugs, “Besides, is this like your dream job or something?”
“Pfft, no.” Adora laughs, “I don’t dream about being a train attendant for the rest of my life.”
“No?” Catra pretends to be surprised, this time Adora does shoulder bump her as she sits down next to the magicat on the bed, “What do you want to do?”
Adora looks back at the open cabin door and sighs, before looking back at Catra, “I… I don’t know.” she looks back at the door again, “How good are your senses?”
“Very good.” Catra grins, “Trust me, her puke perfume is pungent enough I could smell her coming from two carriages down."

"That bad, huh?" Adora laughs feeling a little more settled knowing that Catra would be able to warn her if someone was approaching, "How are your senses with other… people?"
"Princess. I can pick up the scent of everyone here." Catra rolls her eyes at the blonde, "And trust me, everyone smells like puke compared to you."
Adora laughs, patting Catra on the thigh, "You're cute."
"Shut up." Catra grumbles nudging Adora with her shoulder, "Now, get out of here before you get in trouble with Glittery Gary."
"You met Gary?" Adora laughs again as she stands up and Catra nods, "He's not even glittery."
"Oh, yes. He certainly is." Catra replies with quirked eyebrow, "Man is gay, princess. Like.. so gay."
Adora thinks about it before the realisation hits her, "Oh… no wonder he looked so awkward whenever I've mentioned women that looking at him… speaking of… why were you looking at him?"
"I wasn't." Catra shrugs, "He's a nice guy and he seemed like he needed a little help the other night when a cougar tried to make moves on him."
"Uh…"
"And trust me, it surprised the hell out of me to realise that the cougar hitting on him, was no other than your best gal pal, Betty."
Adora's jaw drops, "And… pretty sure she was blackmailing him for being gay."
"Really…?" Adora looks taken aback.
"Really. You should probably go talk to Gary." Catra quickly says as she stands up from her bed and clears her throat, "Thank you, Gwen, for finding my scarf."
Adora furrows her brows at Catra before she hears footsteps approaching and realises why Catra had changed her tone, "Oh, no problems. Whatever you need."

"Knock knock!" Gary announces himself, "How is my favourite magicat?"
"I'm great Gaz." Catra genuinely smiles back at him, "How's your… Betty problem?"

“Still a pain in the ass. Oops!” Gary quickly covers his mouth as he looks at Adora, “Apologies Gwen, I should not be speaking disrespectfully of our fellow crew.”
“Oh, it’s okay, Gary.” Adora replies before adding, “But I totally get it.”
“Phew! It sucks being supervisor with Betty on crew.” Gary says dramatically, “But, lets keep this amongst friends, right?” he winks at Catra and the magicat laughs while Adora just nods, “Okay. I just wanted to drop in and let Catra know that I’ve managed to get you a very special meal prepared for dinner tonight.”
“Oh, you didn’t need to do that, Gaz.” Catra rolls her eyes fondly at him, “I don’t need special treatment.”
“Yes, you do.” Gary quickly dispels Catra’s reservations, “Out of all the journey’s I’ve been on with this train and crew, you have been the only one that’s helped me out instead of just brushing it off like it didn’t matter.”
“Wait, what?” Adora frowns, “She’s done this before?”
Gary nods, “Many times. She thinks she can ‘cure’ me.”
“Gary. If I knew…” Adora starts to say a little angry that she didn’t know.
“I know, Gwen.” Gary pats her on the shoulder, “You’re one of the good ones.”
Adora nods with a sigh, “Betty…”
“Betty can fuck the right off.” Catra says off the cuff, making Gary laugh heartily, “You be you, glitter and all, Gaz.”
“Thank you, Wildcat.” Gary pulls Catra into a hug, “Now, dinner is at 7pm so you’ve got a few hours. I’ve even got you your own table for tonight so no need to mingle with other people. Unless…”
“Unless what?” Catra tilts her head at him as he steps back with a sly grin.
“Unless you want to have it in here with Gwen.” Gary waggles his eyebrows at the pair of them knowingly before laughing, “You two are not subtle. Its lucky Betty is fairly dense.”
Catra laughs as Adora cringes.
The blonde turning to Gary, “Wait, you know?”
“Well, duh!” Gary shakes his head, “Also, on the downlow, please don’t have sex until at least the last night. I don’t want to spend the rest of the trip with Betty being all… smug.”

Adora blushes at the word 'sex', "We, uh, I…"
"Don't worry, Gazza." Catra pats him on the shoulder, "I can hold back my primal urges, I guess."
Gary laughs again, "Good." Before looking at the magicat seriously, "So… dinner in the dining cart or dinner for two in here?"
"How would that work, exactly?" Catra asks suddenly very interested, "Won't Betty be Betty about this?"
"Don't you worry about Betty. Let me take care of it." Gary replies confidently, "Besides, like I said, Gwen is one of the good ones. She's always doing extra and always get fantastic reviews, despite how overbearing some of the passengers can be." He turns back to Adora, "Gwen, you've been a real team player since the first day you started and I know this company doesn't always recognise the good ones, but trust me, you are. So, if Catra is happy to share this meal with you tonight, I'm happy to turn a blind eye."
"I'm happy to share dinner with you tonight, Gwen." Catra shrugs as she sits back down, "Unless you don't want to…"
"No." Adora says quickly, "I mean, yes." She turns to Gary, "Are you sure? Isn't that breaking the rules?"
"You've literally got the one person to look after on this trip. Enjoy the freedom of it and be thankful that your passenger is actually pretty cool." Gary tells her as Catra smirks.
Adora rolls her eyes, "Don't inflate her ego, please."
Gary grins, "Sorry, can't help it."
"Gaz is a cool dude, Gwen." Catra says, "So? Dinner or no?"
Adora thinks about it for a moment longer, turning back to Gary, "Are you sure I'm not going to get in trouble for this?"
"You won't get in trouble." Gary reiterates with an eye roll, "Just leave it with me."
"Well… if you're sure." Adora shuffles a little awkwardly before addressing Catra, "And as long as you're okay too?"
"Yes. Have dinner with me." Catra groans, "But… I expect you to dress up a little."
"Uh…" Adora looks to Gary in question.
"Take the night off, Gwen." Gary just shrugs, "I'll cover if you get any other calls, which you won't since you'll be attending to your only passenger already."

"Thanks Gary." Catra grins at him, "You're an absolute legend."
"Make sure to leave me a positive review and we'll call it even."
Gary holds his hand out as Catra takes it and shakes on it, "Great, thanks Wildcat! I look forward to a glowing review."
Catra laughs, "Yeah, I'll write you up a hand written review if you give me something to write on."
"I'll get you some postcards or something." Gary tells her as he makes his way out of the cabin, "I'll have dinner here by 7pm by yours truly."
"Awe, Gary!" Catra teases, "Such service!"
Gary grins right back and looks at Adora, "You're off the clock at 630pm. That should give you enough time to get ready?" Adora nods dumbly, "Great. See you in a few hours."

True to his word, Gary brings over Catra's special prepared meal, setting it down on the table and filling up her glass with water.
"Where's Gwen?" He asks.
Catra shrugs, "Running late?"
"Maybe." Gary replies as he puts out the cutlery, "I'm sure she'll be here soon."
Adora stumbles in, almost falling over as she grabs onto the door frame to steady herself as Catra's jaw literally drops to the flood, an almost silent, "Woah…" escapes the magicats lips at seeing how stunning Adora looks out of uniform, her hair down with a very sexy red dress on.
Adora shyly nods to Gary, a little embarrassed for him to see her dressed up as well as nearly falling over and being late, "Hi."
"Gwen. To drink?" Gary asks as he gestures for Adora to take a seat.
"Water is just fine. Thank you." Adora sits down and smiles up at him, "Also, if you want I can clean this up afterwards."
"Nonsense." Gary waves her off, "I'll be back in two hours to collect everything And I expect your dress to be in one piece."
That last part completely directed at the magicat who puts her hands up in surrender, "I promise not to rip her clothes off, Gazza."

Adora makes a few stuttering noises before blushing as Gary just nods, “Good. Because just because I’m gay, definitely means I do not want to see that.”
Catra laughs as Adora glares at him with a shake of the head, “You can go now, Gary. Thank you.” Adora tells him as he leave the pair alone for their dinner.
Catra turns to Adora, a wicked grin on her lips, “You look fucking hot, princess.”
“Catra!” Adora hides her face in her hands feeling the heat rising up in her chest and on her face, “Stop.”
“What? I’m not allowed to compliment you?” Catra asks pulling Adora’s hands off her face, “Now, that’s better.”
Adora looks over Catra, “You’re not dressed up.”
“I am not.” Catra replies, “My room. My rules.”
“Stars…” Adora groans, “Can we eat now?”
“Sure.” Catra smiles back, “Want me to feed you?”
“Why?”
“Seems a lot more romantic that way.” Catra replies.
“Uh… no.” Adora shakes her head, “I’ll probably miss and drop everything all over my only nice dress.”
“Take it off then.” Catra suggests with a smirk and then watches Adora’s face look at her a little horrified, the magicat chuckles, “I’m joking, princess. It’s fine. I won’t feed you.”
“Thank you.” Adora nods as they start to dig in.

“Oh my stars!” Adora laughs so hard she snorts a few times, “I remember that! I can’t believe that you got away with that!”
“What can I say? I am super charming.” Catra drawls and then laughs along with Adora, “Besides, I returned the car, didn’t I?”
“Yeah, with a few dints in it!” Adora adds with another laugh, “Like those dints were caused by hail… it wasn’t even raining!”
“Eh.” Catra shrugs again, “It still worked. Besides, I ended up buying it off them anyway a few years later.”
“How much did it cost you to repair it all?” Adora asks as she picks up her glass and takes a sip.
“Too much.” Catra breathes out before turning to Adora, “So… tell me, how did Gwen become… Gwen?”

“Really? You want to do this now?” Adora asks exasperated.
“Yeah, why not?” Catra shrugs, “Or you can tell me after Gary picks up the tray.”
“After.” Adora says quickly.
“Okay. After.” Catra repeats, “I’ll hold you to it.”
“Sure.” Adora replies looking away.
“Uh huh.” Catra says knowingly as the mood changes.

Gary comes back and collects the empty tray and glasses and bids the pair goodnight as Adora stands as well to make her exit.
The magicat pulls the blonde back down, standing up and sliding the door shut and locked and then closing the curtain for privacy before leaning up again it, “Well? Spill.”
Adora pouts, crossing her arms over her chest as Catra just waits patiently at the door. The blonde looks over at the magicat, “I can’t. What if someone overhears.”
“Doubt it.” Catra scoffs.
Adora sighs when she stands back up again, she really doesn’t want to talk about this, so she tries a different tact. Sauntering the short distance over to the magicat, swaying her hips that has Catra licking her lips at the blonde. Adora throws her arms around Catra’s neck, “Can we talk about something… else?”
Catra looks down Adora’s dress, the blonde’s cleavage on full display as the magicat’s eye reluctantly move back up to stare back into Adora’s eyes, “What are you doing?”
“What do you want to do?” Adora whispers into Catra’s ear, “Do you want to… rip this dress off me?”
Catra growls at that thought as she clenches her eyes shut, trying not to think about it or how it’s making her feel, “No.”
“No?” Adora repeats breathily, “You don’t want to?”
Another growl, “Stop changing the subject.”
“Come on, Catra…” Adora rubs her cheek against Catra’s, her lips press gentle kisses along the magicat’s face before returning to Catra’s ear, “Fuck me.”
Catra’s eyes open when she hears that, grabbing Adora by the hips and pushing her back to the bottom bunk and pinning the blonde down before diving into her. Her rough tongue licks up and down Adora’s neck making the blonde gasp and wrap her arms around the magicat tighter.

“This is not how this conversation was supposed to go.” Catra thinks to herself along with, “Sorry Glitter Gary…”

Chapter End Notes

Hm... sorry Gary...

Also, chapter count is gonna increase... most probably.
And yes, we will have Adora's 'story' probably in the next chapter or so...

Thanks for reading, kudos and comments!
If you are a new commentor to my multichapter fics, I generally only reply when I post up the next one as I don't want to give away the next chapter... so yeah...

Spinning

Chapter Summary

Did they do it?
Did they disappoint Glitter Gary?

Chapter Notes

Sorry for the wait people!
But, here's the new chapter... enjoy!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Adora's hands slid up and down Catra's back as the magicat marked up the blonde's neck. But then, everything stops and Catra pulls back, her eyes dilated and she's panting out heavily as she stares down at Adora under her. Guilt starts to creep through Catra's body as she slowly and carefully slides off Adora and lowers herself to sit on the floor.
"I'm sorry." Catra breathes out, "I… I can't. I can't take advantage of this. Of you."
Adora doesn't respond, but there are tears welling up in her eyes at the rejection.
Catra hears a sniffling noise above her, she knows Adora is trying to keep it together right now. The magicat doesn't look up, instead she reaches up, holding her hand up for Adora to take. Nothing happens for a while as Catra's hand remains untouched and just as she's about to pull it back when Adora's fingers finally intertwine around her own and the magicat breathes out in relief.
"Catra?" Adora's voice so soft, if it wasn't for the magicat's superior hearing, it would have been missed.
"Yeah?"
"Did you… did you not want to… you know…?" Adora's shaky voice conveying an air of nervousness and sadness, "I know I haven't… I'm not…"
"Adora." Catra breathes out a little irate, "I want to do this. I've always wanted this. But… I can't… we can't fuck if you aren't going to be honest with me. I've been hurt before. I… I don't think I can survive if you're the one that hurts me."

Adora sniffles again, there's shuffling on the bench seat as the blonde rubs the tears off her face, the blonde's legs sliding over the side of the bed and then Catra is joined on the floor by Adora, their hands still joined.
"Why can't you just tell me?" Catra asks and Adora looks away guiltily.
There's a long beat of silence in the carriage between the pair as Adora turns her attention to Catra's claws, playing with them like she used to back in the day as Catra sits back and waits patiently.

"Gwen." Adora finally speaks, she says the name with such disdain, "I hate being Gwen."
Catra just nods but doesn't say anything.
"Just so you know, I didn't pick that name." Adora turns her head slightly to see the side of Catra's before looking back in front of them when she doesn't get a response, "That Spiderman movie was playing in the background and that Gwen Stacy character came onto the screen when they asked what name I wanted and someone shouted out Gwen. So… that's how I got the name."
"You know that's not what I'm asking you, Adora." Catra says gruffly.
"Be patient. I'm getting to that." Adora scolds lightly, a small smile on her lips when she can see Catra huff a little but doesn't let go of her hand, "That night… the night I left…"
Catra ears perk up as her claws slip out slightly but remains quiet.
"After we kissed…" Adora swallows, gathering up her confidence, "I freaked out. Believe me, it wasn't because I didn't want you. It was because I did."
"Okay…"
"I witnessed a crime, Catra." Adora admits quickly.
"I know that already." Catra replies frowning at not getting any new information, "You haven't even told me what the crime was."
"I saw someone get killed." Adora whispers, gripping Catra's hand a little tighter, "I saw the murder of Octavia."
Catra's eyes widen upon hearing the name of her lifelong bully, "Octavia…"

“It was a week before I left town. Left you.” Adora sighs, “I was walking home after my shift to meet you when an argument broke out at the bar. I was kind of caught up in the middle of it and then all of a sudden Octavia and her gang pulled out guns at each other.”
“They killed one of their own?” Catra asks quietly, squeezing reassuringly on Adora’s hand, “Why would they do that?”
“From what I heard in the ruckus, Octavia was trying to take over the group.” Adora sighs.
“What happened then?”
“I was practically in the middle of this gun fight.” Adora says, “They hadn’t fired any shots yet, but if they had… well, I wouldn’t be here right now.”
“How did you get out?”
“The police arrived and I thought I was saved.” Adora squeezes Catra’s hand again, “I thought they were going to break up the fight and arrest everyone. But… they were crooked cops.”
“Oh…” Catra lets go Adora’s hand and the blonde slumps down thinking Catra had enough but then gasps when she feels the magicat’s arm wrap around her shoulder, pulling the blonde into her, “I’ve always hated cops.”
“Not all of them are bad.” Adora says leaning into Catra’s warmth, “The one’s that got me to safety are not bad.”
The magicat just scoffs in return.
Adora turns to really look at Catra, “Who… who attacked you?”
“Cops.” Catra replies softly, “Crooked cops.”
Adora nods, rubbing her cheek against Catra’s collar bone, “I’m sorry. I should have told you. Should have insisted that you come with me.” Adora shakes her head in anger, “But they wouldn’t let me.”
Catra sighs, her hand gently stroking Adora’s head as she rubs her cheeks against Adora’s temple, “That was the night you didn’t come over.”
“Yeah.” The blonde breathes out, “I… I ran. They… They tried to kill me too.”
Catra sighs again, her fingers running through the blonde’s hair soothingly.
“Octavia tried to use me as a human shield.” Adora says, “I elbowed her in the ribs and then headbutted her before making a run for it."

"Fuck, that's awesome!" Catra blurts out in surprise before clearing her throat, "I mean, yeah, it's good that you got away."
"I know she was always mean to you, Catra." Adora says as she grabs Catra's free hand and intertwines their fingers again, "She hurt you. A lot."
"Doesn't matter." Catra shrugs, "I got her to stop bullying me a long time ago before she was killed."
"Did you?"
"Yeah." Catra replies, "Why do you think she started wearing that stupid eye patch?"
Adora furrows her brows as she tries to think of a reason and then realisation hits her and she abruptly turns to look at Catra in the eyes in surprise, "You. You did that?"
"I will neither confirm or deny any accusations you are planning to throw my way." Catra smirks back a response, "You watched her get shot?"
"Yeah." Adora says, "It happened so quick."
"Who shot first?" Catra asks, "Was it like an all out gun fight or execution style?"
"Why do you want to know?" Adora frowns.
"Why not?" Catra shrugs, "Who shot her?"
"One of the crooked cops." Adora recalls, "Her own people didn't have the guts to shoot her. It happened all so fast. One minute I'm heading butting her and the next she's been shot after one of her people tried to run interference and ran straight into one of those cops."
"So?"
"So… when they ran into the cop, when he fell back, he's gun went off and it went straight through her…" Adora swallows hard, frowning down, she feels Catra give her hand a squeeze reassuringly as she finally finishes, "head."
"Gross." Catra simply says. The comment has Adora cracking a little smile, knowing there's no malice in the magicat's words, "Better her than you, I guess. Did you get splattered on?"
A bewildered look appears on Adora's face at the question, "For your information…"

“Oh, you totally did!” Catra laughs out, “Gross.”
“Please… don’t remind me.” Adora groans.
“Is that why you didn’t meet me that night?” Catra asks.
“One of the reasons.” Adora answers, “The other reason was because I was being chased…”
“And you didn’t think to come to me?” Catra says a little disappointed.
“Catra.” Adora breathes out the magicat’s name, “I wasn’t about to go and put you in danger.”
“Too late.”
“You know what I mean.” Adora leans back into the magicat again, “If I had gone straight to you, I would have led the whole gang there and…”
“It would have been bad.” Catra concludes, “Where did you end up going?”
“Angella.” Adora replies sheepishly.
“Seriously, Adora?!” Catra scoffs out, “Of all people. You went to Angella?”
“She’s the only one that could help me, Catra!” Adora tries to reason, “I couldn’t go to the police by myself, they would have thrown me to the wolves.”
“You could have at least told me, Adora!” Catra tries not to yell, “You couldn’t even tell your best friend? But you were more than happy to tell Sparkles’ mum? Unbelievable…” Catra shakes her head in anger, “Did Sparkles and Arrows know too?”
Adora bites her bottom lip knowing the magicat would not be happy with the truth, but it was time, she’d withheld the truth for too long. “Catra.”
“Just…” Catra almost shouts out before calming herself, “Did they know?”
“Yes.” Adora softly says, looking over at Catra’s reaction, “I had to.”
Catra pulls her hand away, removing her fingers from Adora’s hair, “I think you should go, Gwen.”
“Catra, wait.” Adora pleads.
“No.” Catra shakes her head, “Just… leave me alone, Adora.”
“It’s not what you think!” Adora tries again, “I had to tell them!”
“Yeah? Good to know where I really stood.” Catra scoffs, “I get it now. I really do. I was nothing more than convenient person for you, wasn't I? Just your stupid little sidekick or whatever."

"You weren't! You're not!" Adora grabs onto to Catra's hand, the magicat's limb limp and unresponsive, "Catra. You have to believe me. I was just… just…"
"Just what?!"
"I was just trying to protect you, you idiot!" Adora shouts out, before she shrinks back into herself, "But I screwed that up too. You got hurt anyway."
"I would have taken a million beatings for you, Adora." Catra turns her head, "But you know what hurts more than that?"
"…Catra…"
"What hurts more is that you didn't come to me, didn't trust me." Catra breathes out, shaking her head again, "Instead, you went running to… them. I didn't even know where you went or even what happened to you."
"I left you a note." Adora tries again, 'I swear, I did."
"Well, I never fucking got it." Catra seethes, "Doesn't matter anyways. You trying to protect me only got me beat up. So, thanks. Thank you so much for protecting me, Adora."
"They told me that you were going to be safe. That you'd be looked after." Adora sullenly says, "They lied to me too."
"You could have at least given me a heads up, so I could have actually defended myself." Catra tells her, "Instead, I got jumped by the cops. They broke down my fucking door yelling SWAT. Then I'm being hauled away in a fucking blacked out van to stars knows where, tied to a fucking chair and pistol-whipped while being asked questions about your whereabouts."
Tears run down Adora's cheeks, "I'm sorry…"
"Save it, princess." Catra snarks, "I don't want your apologies."
"What do you want then?" Adora asks wiping her cheeks and rubbing her eyes, "What can I do?"
"Nothing." Catra says plainly, "There's nothing you can do now. When I get off this train, I'm starting my new life. Away from all the shit from my old life."
"What about that family that took you in?" Adora sniffles back, "I thought you said…"
"They've already moved. I'm meeting them when I get off this train in a few weeks.” Catra tells her, “At least I can rely on them.”

Adora nods sadly, “I’m sorry.”
“Yeah. I’ve already heard that.” Catra looks away before she’s suddenly drawn back when Adora moves to straddle the magicat, the blonde suddenly in Catra’s lap as Adora rests her forehead on the magicat’s, “What are you doing?”
“Making it up to you.” Adora replies pressing her lips to Catra’s chastely, “I know there’s nothing I can do to change the past, but there is one thing I can give you.”
“And what’s that?” Catra looks away again.
Adora gently cups Catra’s face, gently shifting it so she can look into the magicat’s eyes, “Me.”
Catra quirks an eyebrow, “We’ve already been through this. I’m not fucking you.”
“No. You’re not fucking me.” Adora sighs, “Because… I wouldn’t expect you to just… fuck me.”
Catra looks at Adora confused, waiting for the blonde to reiterate.
“I’m giving you, me.” Adora says, “All of me.”
“I can’t.” Catra pushes Adora back but the blonde wraps her arms around the magicat’s neck, “Adora. We’re not doing this.”
Adora leans back in, her eyes staring into Catra’s, “Would you want to? Later?”
“Yes.” Catra quickly answers, “Not right now. We’re both… not thinking… straight.”
Adora sighs, nodding in understanding, “We may not get another chance on this trip.”
“Doing it on the train is probably not the best idea.” Catra says, “Betty might catch you and report you.”
“I don’t care about Betty.” Adora admits, “I just meant, there’s not a lot of time left before you get to your final destination.”
“Don’t you get a layover once you get to the last stop?’ Catra asks, shifting slightly under Adora’s weight.
“Are you still mad at me?” Adora asks instead.
“I… I don’t know.” Catra admits, “It’s going to take some time.”
“I really did want to tell you. I swear I did.” Adora wipes her eyes again, “That note explained everything.”
“I told you, there was no note.” Catra repeats again, “Who did you give it to? Or where did you put it?”

"I gave it to Glimmer to pass on to you." Adora recalls, "She said she shoved it under the door when you didn't answer when she knocked on your door the day after I… after I left."
"Whatever Glitter told you, she fucking lied." Catra seethes, "There was no knocking and there was no letter."
"That's… no. I don't accept that." Adora frowns down at her hands, "She wouldn't do that."
"In case you didn't notice, Sparkles never liked me." Catra shakes her head, "And she was totally in love with you."
"She was not!" Adora argues, Catra just stares back at her in disbelief, "No. She didn't. She's with Bow."
"Yeah, now she is." Catra says, "But she wasn't back then. Was she?"
Adora thinks back before her eyes widen in the realisation, "… well, that explains a lot…"
"Yeah, like why she didn't deliver your stupid letter." Catra scoffs, "You know what… whatever. I don't care." The magicat pushes herself up, stretching her limbs out as Adora falls over slightly, "I don't want to hear about you and her fucking or whatever."
'We didn't!" Adora shouts out before quickly covering her mouth and then repeats a lot more quietly, "We didn't. She…"
"Nope. I don't want to hear this, Adora." Catra groans, "For the love of the stars, spare me the details. I really don't want to know."
Adora stands up quickly, grabbing Catra by the hands, "No. Listen to me. Nothing happened. Not with her. Not with anyone."
"Wait, what?" Catra's ears perk up, her eyes scanning Adora's to see if she's lying or telling the truth, but when she sees no lies, "Why are you telling me this?"
"Because I need you to know that you've always been the only one for me…" Adora admits shyly, looking away at the end of the sentence, her grip loosening from Catra's hands and waiting for the next rejection, "I know I hurt you. And I wish I could go back and have told you everything that happened and taken you with me. Insisted to take you with me. But… but I can't change the past."
"Yeah? And what are you doing to change your future?" Catra's question takes Adora off guard, "Because what's the point of either of us going through all of this shit for nothing good to come out of it."

"Well… what are you?" Adora asks as she tries to buy some time, "What have you changed?"
"I stopped letting the world move without me." Catra replies vaguely, "Decided I should be part of the world spinning for once. And you?"
"I…" Adora pauses for a moment to think, there's really only one thing that comes to her mind as she replies, "I'm Gwen."

"Ahem!" The door slides open abruptly and Betty stands in the doorway, "What are you doing in here so late? And dressed… like that?"
Adora looks down at herself, feeling naked despite the fact she is definitely wearing clothes as Catra growls out turning towards the other woman, "Get the fuck out of my cabin, Betty."
"Excuse me!" Betty huffs back, "How dare you speak to me like that!"
"I can speak to you this way when you intrude into my cabin." Catra glares at the woman, "Now, I'm not going to ask you again."
"Gwen." Betty ignores the magicat, "Enjoy this while it lasts. Because you won't be working here much longer. So, if I was you, I'd have my bags packed before we get to the last station."
"Fuck off, Betty." Adora spits out, not caring anymore that she's probably going to lose her job.
Betty glares at Adora for a moment before turning to Catra, "Sorry for the intrusion. I thought I heard a disturbance in here." She flashes the pair a fake smile before dropping it and storming off.
"Fuck! I'm so fucked!" Adora starts to panic, "I'm going to lose my stupid job and my stupid cover! Micah is going to kill me!"
Catra rolls her eyes, "So what? Just get them to find you another stupid job."
"Did you not just hear me? My cover's going to be blown by that bitch, Betty!" Adora starts to panic, "That's bad! This is really bad! I need a phone. I need to call Micah. Right now!"
"Calm down, princess!" Catra grabs Adora by the shoulders, pulling her attention back to her, "We are in the middle of nowhere on a fucking train. There's no reception. Not until we get to the next town."

"I'm so fucked!" Adora collapses into Catra's arm, sobbing into the magicat's neck, "They're going to find me… they're going to…"
"Hey…" Catra tries to calm the blonde down, wrapping her old friend into her arms tightly, "What… what can I do?"
Adora shakes her head against the magicat's body, "I need… I need to call my contact."
"Hang on." Catra reaches into her pocket and digs out her phone, bringing it up and behind the blonde, "No signal."
Adora sighs, sniffling back, "Fuck…"
"I have no idea where we are or how far the next town is." Catra groans as she stares at the window that just reflects the light inside her cabin due to being pitch black outside, before sighing, "It's nearly midnight, princess. Want me to walk you back?"
"I can't go back." Adora quickly says, "Betty's gunning for me."
"So… what are you going to do?" Catra asks, "Do you want me to see if Glitter Gary can help you out with Bitchy Betty?"
Adora giggles quietly at the nicknames, "I wish you had a better nickname for me."
"What's wrong with the names I give you, Gwen?" Catra replies faux seriously before cracking a smile.
"Ugh, that's the worst one yet." Adora groans still in Catra's arms.
"Not my doing." Catra points out quickly.
"Which is why it sucks, big time." Adora adds and smiles into Catra's neck, "Catra?"
"Yeah?"
"Can… can I…?" Adora starts before retreating slightly, "You know… don't worry. I'll just go."
"Adora." Catra breathes out a little irritated, "Just ask me what you wanted to ask, princess."
Adora takes a breath in and nods, "Can I stay here, with you tonight?"
"You want to stay… here?" Catra asks softly and Adora nods, the magicat clears her throat, "Uh… yeah. But you'll need to make up the second bunk then, maid."
Adora laughs and pushes Catra back, "You ass!"
"Hey! I'm your one and only customer on this train. You're supposed to be nice to me and be my maid and slave.” Catra laughs as Adora shoves her again playfully, before the she pulls Adora back into her, pressing her lips on the blonde’s and after a brief moment, Catra pulls back, “Oh, fuck. I… I shouldn’t have done that. That was…”

Adora grabs Catra by the collar and presses her lips back onto the magicat’s, deepening the kiss before pulling back, “Fuck…” she pants out leaning her forehead on Catra’s, “Have you always been such a good kisser?”
“You should see me in bed.” Catra jests but the joke falls flat as Adora takes a step back, a frown on the blonde’s face as the magicat tries to recover, “What? What did I say?”
Adora wraps her arms around her body, using it as protection, “I… I should go.”
“Adora.” Catra calls out as Adora starts to make her way out, grabbing the blonde by the wrist, “Where are you going to go?”
“Oh.” Adora mouths the words and realises she’s in a predicament, “I… I don’t know.”
“Fucking, just stay here tonight, would you?” Catra pleads exhaustingly, “Fuck. I’ll make the beds.”
“You don’t know how to.” Adora says softly before moving across and looking around where to start to get the bunks set up, “Guess I’ll take the bottom bunk, then.”
“Adora.” Catra tries again, but Adora’s busying herself with the bunk, “Adora?”
“I’ll need to get some more sheets.” Adora blankly says as she starts to move around the small cabin, putting some of Catra’s things away to make some more room.
“Adora.” This time Catra physically stops the blonde, “What the fuck is going on?”
“Nothing.” Adora huffs out completely untrue.
“Yeah, right.” Catra scoffs, “If you want to keep lying to me again, go ahead. But after tonight, I don’t want to see you anymore.”
“Wait, what?” Adora frowns out.
“You heard me, princess.” Catra looks at her with a slight anger in her eyes, “I don’t want to see you again if you plan to keep lying to me.” The magicat shakes her head, “If you aren’t going to tell me the truth, then… after tonight… I don’t want to see you again."

"But…"
"No. I can't do this again." Catra sighs, "I just got my life back together. And I'm not going to let the world start spinning without me again."
"Fine." Adora frowns, "I… ugh! This is stupid."
"Sure."
"I don't even know you'd even care." Adora huffs again, looking away, "Fine. I was, I might have been… jealous."
"Jealous? Of what?"
"You, being with someone else…" Adora grumbles under her breath.
"You're jealous of me being with other people?" Catra narrows her eyes at the blonde.
"People?!" Adora's eyes go wide at the plural version of that word, "There's more than one?!"
"Uh… why do you want to know?" Catra asks, "It's not like you were around."
"So, you just forgot about me and slept with other people?" Adora huffs out.
"I didn't forget about you." Catra grunts out, "You fucking left me, princess. It's a little hard to forget about the girl I fell in love with and then fucking left me after I kissed her."
That seems to change Adora's demeanour, "I didn't want to leave you…"
"Yeah, well, you did." Catra crosses her arms, "So, you don't get to judge me on how many people I've slept with trying to get over you."
"Wait, what?" Adora stops in her tracks again, "Get over me?!"
"It… it doesn't fucking matter now." Catra grumbles, "And now you keep offering yourself to me. What the fuck, princess?"
"I…"
"I mean, look at you!" Catra gestures to Adora, "Just when I thought I was over you, you fucking come back into my life looking like… like that. "
"What's wrong with how I look?" Adora looks down at herself.
"Nothing! Everything." Catra spouts out, "You can't come sauntering back in my life, looking all… sexy like and then expect me not to fall in love with you all over again."

"Wait, what?!"
"Is that like your new catchphrase or some shit, princess?" Catra starts to say when Adora pulls her in for another kiss, before quickly breaking it and running off towards the door, "What the actual fuck, Adora?!"
"Sorry, sorry!" Adora rushes back after sliding the door back shut, locking it form the inside and pulling the curtain over, "I don't want to be interrupted again by that bitch, Betty."
Catra watches with wide eyes as Adora pulls her back in by the collar of her shirt for another bruising kiss, "Adora…?"
"Hm?" Adora replies looking dopey from their makeout.
"What are we doing?" Catra asks with a tilt of her head.
"I'm making you forget about all those other… people…"
"Women." Catra interrupts.
Adora glares at the magicat before rolling her eyes, "Women. You're going to forget about all those other women."
"Why?" The magicat challenges.
"Because."
"Because?"
"Because I love you." Adora declares, "And clearly, you're still in love with me."
"And?"
"Wait…" Adora stops herself from saying 'what' this time, "And, you're not going to fight me on the loving me part?"
"No. Why would I?" Catra shrugs.
"Fuck…" Adora breathes out in relief at finally knowing Catra is still in love with her, "Can we just go sleep?"
"Just sleep?" Catra quirks an eyebrow.
Adora nods, "I don't think I'm ready… for that… not yet."
Catra pulls Adora into her, sitting down back on the bottom bunk, the blonde landing in her lap, "Okay."
"Okay?"
"Okay." Catra nods as she gestures to Adora to lie down with her, "Just sleep."
"Okay." Adora agrees, snuggling into the magicat before she groans.
"What's wrong, princess?" Catra whispers.

“The light is still on.” Adora grumbles and the magicat chuckles and then feels the blonde get up and switch off the light before coming back right back and snuggling right back in, “Mm… better.”
Catra breathes Adora in, “You have no idea how long I’ve dreamed about having you fall asleep in my arms…”
“Mm…” Adora mumbles into Catra’s chest.
Realising the blonde has probably fallen asleep, the magicat sighs, pressing a soft kiss in Adora’s hair, “I am so fucked.”

Chapter End Notes

I've upped the chapter count - yep, no surprise there...

Anywho, thanks for your patience.

Thanks for reading, kudos and comments!
I'm on the road again this week, but if I'm not too tired from climbing, driving or droning... I'll be working on the next chapters.

Last night on board

Chapter Summary

It's the last night on board the luxury train.

Chapter Notes

Sorry for the wait!
Enjoy!

CW: Spicy stuff

See the end of the chapter for more notes

There's a constant knocking on the door of Catra's cabin as the magicat's ears flick around, whacking Adora in the face enough to make the blonde sneeze. The action jolts the magicat up as she realises that Adora had actually fallen asleep with her and is still in the mist of dreamland.
"Adora." Catra whispers as the knocking continues.
The blonde grumbles and tightens her hold around the magicat, her eyes remain shut as she continues to sleep.
Catra sighs as she gently slips out of bed and stretches out her limbs before pulling the blanket back up over Adora's shoulders as she peeks around the curtain of the door and sees Gary. He smiles at her and she tilts her head as he mouths, "Open up, please."
Catra rubs her eyes first before unlocking the door and quietly sliding it open a little, "What's up Gaz?"
"Good morning, Wildcat." He greets with a cheeriness that seems too much for the time of morning and then leans in to whisper, "Is… uh, is Gwen still here?"
"Maybe." Catra replies with a slight nod and Gary nods back holding out some clothes, "What's this?"
"It's for Gwen." He whispers again, looking around to make sure no one is listening in, "Figured she wouldn't want to walk back to her room at this time of hour."
Catra takes the clothes and then asks, "What time is it?"

"It's nearly 6am." He tells her before winking, "She's meant to start at 630am."
"Oh. Right. Thanks Gary." Catra yawns again as Gary nods again and then waves before sliding the door shut again. The magicat flicks on the light in the cabin and Adora groans as she makes her way next to the bed, crouching down next to Adora's face. She gently cups Adora's cheek and the blonde snuggles into it, "Hey, Adora. It's time to wake up. You've got work."
"Mm… don't want to work." Adora grumbles, "Too sleepy."
Catra smiles down at the blonde, rubbing Adora's cheek gently with her thumb, "Well, Gary went through all this trouble to get you your uniform…"
"Gary?" Adora eyes slowly open and she smiles at the sight of Catra, "Gary's great. I like Gary."
"Yeah, Glitter Gary is great." Catra agrees, "Now, come on. Up you get. Apparently you're supposed to start work in half an hour."
"Gary brought me my uniform?" Adora asks as she sits up and yawns.
Catra looks at the clothes and holds them out towards Adora,
"Guess so." Adora takes the clothes offered with yawn as Catra stands, "You can get changed in the bathroom."
Adora looks down at herself and then realises something, "I don't have a bra."
"So?"
"So?" Adora rolls her eyes, "I'm not working without one. These shirts are so thin, it's obvious that I'm not going to have one on. And I don't want Betty to have more ammunition."
"Okay." Catra nods, the magicat doesn't wear bras as they usually pinch her fur so she doesn't have any to offer Adora, "Uh… what can I do?"
"I'll just dip back to my room and get one real quick." Adora gets up, "I'll just get changed first."
"Go for it." Catra steps out of the way so Adora can get to the bathroom, except the blonde doesn't, "Princess. The bathroom is through that door."
Adora shrugs, "It's nothing you haven't seen before."
Catra's eyes widen as she quickly turns around as Adora starts to strip off to get changed, a low growl emanating from the magicat as Adora throw her dress over Catra's shoulder, the magicat grabbing it and squeezing it in her hands, "Are you done yet?"

"Nearly." Adora replies with the sound of a zip being pulled up, "You can turn around now."
As soon as Catra does turn around, she immediately turns back, "You haven't done up your buttons, Adora." Catra growls out even though she didn't really see anything as the sides of the shirt hid most of Adora's torso, everything but the centre.
Adora laughs, "Since when have you been so shy?"
"I'm not shy." Catra grunts out as she waits for Adora to really finish getting dressed, "Stop teasing."
The blonde laughs a little more softly, "Okay, okay. I'm sorry. I'm really all dressed now."
Catra turns around and is happy when she sees Adora's shirt buttoned up, "Okay. I'm going to get changed and then I'm going to go get breakfast."
"Oh, you don't want breakfast here?" Adora asks.
"Not this morning. I think I want a proper table to eat at and not one I have to angle myself at." Catra replies.
Adora nods, "Don't forget your dining card."
"Yep. It's somewhere around here." Catra gestures to the entire cabin, "I don't have to make a reservation, do I?"
"No, I'll make sure you've got a seat." Adora replies stepping around the magicat and into the ensuite, "Can I borrow your toothbrush?"
"Go for it." Catra starts to go through her bag for some fresh clothes, "Do you want my jacket or something to go over your shirt? I can walk you back to your room so you can grab a bra."
"Uh… are you sure?" Adora asks halfway through brushing her teeth.
"Yeah. Just hurry up so I can get ready too." Catra grumbles and the blonde just smiles back at her, foam and all, "Gross."
Adora tries not to laugh as she finishes up and steps out, "All yours."
"Thanks." Catra goes in and gets ready.

“Thank you for the jacket and walking me.” Adora hands the jacket back to Catra who promptly puts it back on, “Well… this is me…”
Catra quirks an eyebrow at the blonde, “Gwen. It was my pleasure. I’ll see you later?”
“Yes. Count on it.” Adora grins as she pops into her room and shuts the door.
Catra nods, turning around to head to the dining cart.
On the way there, someone taps her on the shoulder, “Hey.”
The magicat stops and turns back, she knows who it is from their scent and sighs as she sees Betty, “Yeah?”
“You’re not supposed to be in here.” Betty crosses her arms over her chest and narrows her eyes at Catra, “This cabin is for staff only. That’s why there’s a sign.”
“Sure.” Catra shrugs and starts to walk away.
“Hey!” Betty grabs her shoulder to stop the magicat from walking away further, “I can have you thrown off the train for this.”
“Sure.” Catra repeats, shaking off Betty’s hand, “I’m going to get breakfast. Do you want to stop me?”
Betty glares at the magicat and then says, “Don’t think I don’t know all about Gwen.”
Catra just looks at her blankly and quite frankly bored.
“Or should I say…” Betty leans in with a smirk, “Adora.”
As soon as Betty says her name, Catra’s grabs the woman and shoves her hard against the wall, “What did you say?”
“Adora.” Betty repeats, face still smug, “Don’t think I don’t know who she is really.”
“What do you know?” Catra grits out, doing a quick check to see if anyone is around before shoving her just a little harder into the wall, “Speak!”
Betty winces a little as Catra’s claws come out, pricking Betty’s arms, “Let’s put it this way.” Another smirk, “Gwen is going to need another alias and a new life after I get through with her. Maybe another name that suits her… I don’t know, maybe she should change her name to Bimbo.”
“You will do no such thing.” Catra threatens angrily, “Or you will have me to deal with.”
“And who are you? Her protector?” Betty laughs, “She’s going to be dead once we get to the last stop. You can count on that."

Catra growls loudly, her claws digging in further into Betty's arms as the other woman winces and hisses, trying to get free, the magicat calms herself down, 'When's the next stop?"
"Why?"
"Just wondering." Catra replies.
"Oh, don't think you're going to get her off this train so she can start running again." Betty threatens, "She's not going to get very far at the next stop. That much I can tell you."
"Where is the next stop?" Catra asks as she slowly releases her grip on Betty, "Maybe I want to get off too."
"Good luck with that." Betty rubs her arms, "Langstone is a ghost town. The only people that stop by are the people on this train. Also, you ripped my shirt."
"Bill me." Catra pushes Betty back against the wall one more time, "Stay away from Gwen."
Betty doesn't reply, just smirking back at the magicat.
"I mean it." Catra warns her, "Stay away from her."
"Enjoy your breakfast." Betty replies sweetly when the door opens and another staff member walks in.
"Fuck off, Betty." Catra grumbles as she exits and heads to the dining cart for breakfast.

The train comes to a stop once they reach Langstone for a rest stop and excursions for those that have booked them. Catra gets off the train to breathe the fresh air and stretch her legs.
Betty was right about this place being a ghost town.
It looks like a town from way back when, most of the buildings are old, paint peeling off the timbers and signs fading. Though for the most part, someone must be maintaining this place.
The grass and trees look like they get mowed and pruned on a regular basis, but the streets are empty and void of both cars and people for the most part.
Catra watches as 3 buses load up with patrons, taking off for a tour around the surrounding areas as she goes to explore on her own.
Someone reaches out and touches Catra's arm, the magicat doesn't need to turn around as she can smell who it is and the sound of panting clearly identifies them, "Hey, Gwen."

"Catra! Where are you going?" Adora asks as she catches up to the magicat, "Don't go too far or the train will leave without you!"
"I've got literally 4 hours before the train takes off, Gwen." Catra rolls her eyes, "Pretty sure that's more than enough time to get back." She looks at Adora, "Should you be out here too?"
"Well, you're my only… passenger?" Adora replies with a small smile, "Besides, I've never actually been here before."
"Oh. Yeah. Ghost town, am I right?" Catra replies flatly and gestures at their surroundings.
Adora chuckles, "Yeah, it's really eery here."
"Well, yeah. It should be." Catra shrugs as she walks towards a park, "But someone's doing upkeep around here."
"Apparently there's like 10 people that actually live in or around this place." Adora tells the magicat, "I'm not too sure where though…"
"They probably live just outside of this town." Catra says, "There's nothing even open here."
"Yeah." Adora agrees, "I guess it used to be quite a coup when the trains used to frequent this place a lot more regularly back in the day."
"Probably." Catra nods, "Anyways… since you're here…"
"What's up?" Adora gestures for them to sit down on a bench.
Catra looks around to check that they are alone before speaking, "Betty."
Adora frowns, "What about that… bitch?"
"She's threatening to blow your cover." Catra tells her, "And she apparently knows who you really are?"
"But, how?!" Adora furrows her brows angrily, "I don't get it."
"No idea." Catra shrugs, "But… watch your back."
"Thanks for telling me." Adora takes Catra's hand and squeezes it, "Do you have your phone?"
"Yeah." Catra pulls it out, "Here. There's like 2 bars."
"Can I make a call?" Adora asks as she gingerly takes the phone out of Catra's hand, "I'll be really quick."
"Go for it." Catra replies, reaching over and unlocking her phone, "Do you want some privacy?"

“Is that alright?” Adora asks shyly.
“Yeah, I’ll just go over there.” Catra points to the old boarded up shops across the road, “Take as long as you need.”
“Thank you.” Adora says gratefully as the magicat gives her space, watching as Catra’s attention turns to the writing on the walls as the blonde taps a few times on the phone before putting the phone up to her ear.

“All aboard!” The head usher shouts out, alerting any stragglers to get back on the train, “This is the last call! Last call!”
Catra hops back on the train and nods to the usher, “Can I chill here for a while?”
“All good with me. Just stay behind the yellow line or you might risk falling out.” He tells her with a smile and Catra nods as the door finally shuts, the attendant is off checking the rest of the carriage for the last of the passengers to board.
“Well, look what we have here.” Betty’s snarky voice catches Catra’s attention, “Oh, don’t worry. I’ve already called my contact and Adora’s going to get hers when we get to the last stop.”
Catra growls out before she turns to Betty, flipping them so the attendant’s heels are on the yellow line, “Tell me, Betsy…”
“It’s Betty, you dumbass.” Betty chastises.
“Whatever, Bumpy.” Catra rolls her eyes and before the other woman can snap back, the magicat asks, “What happens if I push this button?”
“Wha…? Ah!” Betty shouts out as the door behind her opens and Catra shoves her out of the train, pulling the door shut to stop the alarms from going off. Betty starts to bang on the door as the train starts to move, “Hey! Hey!”
Catra glares back at her as her cries for the train to stop fall on deaf ears once the sound of the wheels starts thundering down the track, “Good riddance, Butthead.”

“Hi Wildcat.” Gary ducks his head into Catra’s cabin, “Ready for one more night on the train?”

“Yeah, I actually am.” Catra smiles back, “I can’t wait to start my new life.”
“That’s so great to hear!” Gary genuinely says, “Oh, you haven’t seen Betty around, have you?”
“Betty?” Catra asks, her ears flickering and her tail would give her away if Gary knew what to look for, “Can’t say that I’ve seen her since the last stop at the ghost town.”
“Oh. Okay.” Gary nods, “I just thought she might of come in here to harass you again.”
“Nope. Not yet. But should I be expecting her to?” Catra asks.
“I’ll try to keep her away if I see her.” Gary winks at the magicat, “Okay, well, have a great night. Don’t forget there’s a party for the last night on board in the last carriage.”
“Not really into parties, Gazman.” Catra replies as she holds up the book she’s reading, “But thanks for the reminder.”
“No worries.” Gary nods, “Goodnight, Catra.”
“Night, Gary.”

About an hour later, someone knocks on Catra’s door. The magicat looks up and waves Adora in.
“Hey.” Adora grins down at the magicat, ‘Why aren’t you in the party cart?”
“Busy.” Catra replies going back to her book before doing a double take of Adora’s attire, “Why aren’t you in uniform?”
“I’m off the clock.” Adora replies playing with the red scarf around Catra’s neck, “Plus this is way more comfortable.”
“Well, sweats will generally be comfy.” Catra agrees as she gestures down to herself, “As you can see, I’m also comfortable.”
Adora laughs as she sits down next to the magicat, “Betty’s been MIA.”
“No shit.” Catra deadpans, “Someone slip her some sleeping pills or something?’
“No. I don’t think so.” Adora leans against Catra, “Gary’s been trying to find her.”
“I know.”
“You know?”
“Yeah, Gazman came around earlier.” Catra tells her, “He was looking for her and thought maybe she was in here harassing me.”

“Oh. Has she?” Adora asks still leaning against the magicat, unwrapping the scarf and putting it around her own neck, “Mm… this is still so soft.”
“Can I have it back?” Catra asks and Adora just sticks her tongue out at her, “Fine. You can borrow it for now.”
“Yay!” Adora cheers, “Anyways, I hope she isn’t hiding out somewhere, ready to kill me or something.”
“Doubt it.” Catra replies going back to her book, “What brings you in here?”
“M’bored.” Adora replies playing with the ends of the scarf, “I don’t want to hang out with the other staff tonight.”
“Oh?”
“Plus… it’s the last night on the train…” Adora says softly.
“Yep, it sure is.” Catra turns a page.
“Want me to lock your door and shut the curtains?” Adora asks nonchalantly, “Maybe turn off the lights?”
“With you in here or outside?” Catra asks as she flips another page, deliberately not paying attention.
“Well, with me in here preferably.” Adora replies with a shy smile, tucking a few strands of hair back behind her ear, “I mean, if you want me to stay…”
“Stay.” Catra says leaning back in her seat, “As long as you don’t get in trouble.”
“It’s the last night. I’m not going to get in trouble unless…” Adora looks around for a moment, “Unless Betty decides to show up.”
“I wouldn’t worry about Bugsy.” Catra replies flipping over another page before putting in her bookmark and closing the book, turning to face Adora, “She threatened you. You know that right?”
“My contact said that could be a possibility.” Adora sighs, “My contact is already arranging a new cover for me.”
“Do I get to know this new cover?” Catra asks, “Or are you planning on trying to ‘protect me’ again.”
Adora shuffles awkwardly before finally answer, “I’m… I’m not allowed to.”
“That’s bullshit. And you know it.” Catra scoffs, throwing her book on the floor, “If you are planning to just up and leave, just, just do it already.”
“Catra…” Adora says pleadingly.

“No, Adora. I can’t do this.” Catra frowns down, “Just tell me the truth. You never loved me. You don’t now and you didn’t then. At least be truthful about it. And then we can stop this game that you keep playing with my heart.”
“That’s not fair, Catra.” Adora stands up abruptly and turns around, her back to the magicat, “I’m just trying to protect you!”
“I don’t need you to protect me.” Catra spits out, “Your contact is only looking out for you. You. Not me. Whatever happens to me after you leave me…”
“No. Stop right there.” Adora crosses her arms over her chest and takes a breath, “Let me… let me just shut the door first.”
“Whatever.”
Adora slides the door shut, locking it and then drawing the curtain for extra privacy. She switches off the lights and then pads back towards Catra, taking a seat back next to the magicat, “I don’t have a choice in this, Catra.”
“Whatever.”
“You have to believe me.” Adora grabs Catra’s limp hand and grips onto it, “I love you.”
Catra scoffs at that.
“It’s true! I do! And I know you love me too.” Adora forces out, “But I don’t have a choice. My contact is meeting me before the last stop and… as much as it hurts me to do this… I have to go.”
“Then go. What are you waiting for?” Catra turns her head to look out the window, staring at the reflection of her eyes staring back at her, “Don’t let me stop you. Never has.”
“I don’t want to leave things like this.” Adora says exasperated.
“Well, it’s not up to you. Is it?” Catra seethes, “You can go now. This ends now. Right here. Right now.”
“I’m sorry.” Adora sighs.
“Yeah. I’ve already heard it.” Catra shakes her head pulling her hand back into her own lap, “And here I thought this trip was going supposed to be relaxing.”
Adora takes a deep breath in, “Okay. I’ll… go.” She gets up to her feet, slumped forward in defeat as she trudges towards the door, “I love you, Catra. Even if you don’t love me back.”
Adora stands unmoving at the door as Catra sits there silently, still staring at the window, the only movement from the magicat are her ears flickering back and forth in indecision.

"Okay. You'll never have to see me again." Adora finally breaks the silence, "It… it was good to see you, Catra."
Catra knows it's a bad idea.
A really bad idea.
But… when has she actually made that many good decisions in her life?
Well… lately she's made quite a few good decisions, but those seemed to have all happened before setting foot on this fateful train.
She sighs out and rolls her shoulders, "Adora, wait."
Adora sniffles back, her back still to Catra as she hears the magicat pad towards her, waiting for Catra to tell her to tell her that she's stopped loving her, doesn't want to see her and regrets ever having known her. Except, it doesn't come. Instead, she feels Catra's hands on her, spinning her around and pushing her up against the door, claws pricking slightly into her arms and all she can stutter out is a pathetic, "Catra?"
"Stop talking, idiot." Catra growls out before pressing her lips onto Adora's in a fierce and intense kiss that has the blonde seeing stars, the magicat breaks the kiss and then mumbles out, "This is a bad idea."
"What is?" Adora asks breathlessly as she feels Catra's lips on her neck.
"This." Catra pulls Adora off the door and throws her onto her bed that she was using as a seat, "This is a very bad idea."
"Mm…" Adora whimpers as Catra starts to trail more kisses along her jaw and neck, "Catra…"
"I know you're going to break my heart all over again." Catra breathes out into Adora's neck, "But all I really want to do is…" she licks up Adora's neck making the blonde whine out, "wreck you."
"Fuck…" Adora breathes out as she feels Catra's hands slide under her top and in one swift motion, pulls it up and over her head, before making short work of the blonde's bra as well, "Catra…"
"What?" Catra grumbles as she starts to work over Adora's chest, the blonde whining and writhing under the magicat, "Tell me to stop."

"No."
"Then tell me to keep going" Catra huffs out in between Adora's breasts.
In a whisper, Adora breathes out, "Keep going."
Adora whines louder as Catra's hands move all over her body, the blonde tugging at Catra's clothes, trying to get them off too, only to receive a low growl in response, the reaction has Adora surrendering to Catra's whims.
Catra slides off Adora's pants and underwear in one go, leaving the blonde in nothing but her white socks as she spreads Adora's legs apart and then leans in to press kisses along the blonde's inner thighs, "Relax, Adora."
"Can you…" Adora grabs the blanket and covers her torso with it, "Can you take your clothes off too?"
"Not yet." Catra throws the blanket off Adora's body, "Not until I'm done with you. Until then, you're mine."
"Always yours." Adora quickly repeats as Catra finally tastes the blonde she's been in love for so long, the sounds above her motivates her to work the blonde over more, keeping the promise to wreck her. "I love you."
"Mm…" Catra replies as she dives in, eagerly tasting and licking up Adora's slick before plunging her tongue inside her.
"Oh fuck!" Adora arches back, nearly bucking Catra off, "Fuck! Fuck! Fuck!"
"Shh…" Catra chastises as she wraps her arms around Adora's thighs and brings her back down, "I don't want to be interrupted because you're screaming bloody murder."
"I'm… oh fuck… not…" Adora says a lot softer as she tries to find something to hold onto before settling on the pillow under her head, "Stars…"
Catra replaces her tongue with a finger and eases it inside Adora, the blonde gasps but doesn't tell her to stop as the magicat slowly pumps it in and out, moving her focus to Adora's clit, "Mm… can you take another?"
Adora pants out, shaking her head, "Not… not yet…"
Catra nods and goes back to her task of making Adora unravel under her, feeling the tension in the blonde's muscles as well as her inner walls tightening around Catra's finger. Feeling Adora get closer, Catra speeds up her movement of both her tongue and finger before slowing down just as Adora is about to burst.

"Cat… what?" Adora's eyes widen when she looks down and watches Catra stare back up at her, face covered in the blonde's slick as the magicat slowly inserts a second finger, "Oh… fuck…"
"Is that okay?" Catra asks as she buries her fingers inside of Adora and waits, enjoying the feeling of the blonde's inner walls pulsing around them. While she waits, she traces kisses back along Adora's thighs before licking up and over Adora's clit and letting her purr vibrate through it.
Unconsciously, Adora starts to work herself on Catra's fingers and tongue, "Keep… keep going… please…"
Catra grins at hearing Adora say please, not holding back this time as she slowly pulls her fingers out before roughly shoving them back in.
"Fuck!" Adora curls forward, the blonde's hands on the sides of Catra's head as the magicat starts to fuck her harder, "Ca…Catra… oh… stars!"
Catra grins back up, her mouth still hard at work as she watches Adora's body bounce from the force of her fingers pumping in and out of her and it's not long before she feels Adora's legs tighten around her, but she doesn't stop, won't stop, not until Adora taps out.
Adora comes with a high pitch whine, nearly crushing Catra's head if not for her shoulders acting as a barrier, this time the blonde starts begging out, "Stop. Stop. Stop! I can't…"
Catra nods, stilling her fingers inside the blonde and pressing one last kiss over Adora's clit before leaning her head against Adora's thigh, "First time?"
Adora breathes out a shaky breath, a slight relieved chuckles escapes her, "I didn't…"
"Didn't what?"
Adora gasps when Catra shuffles a little and her fingers move slightly inside, "Didn't know it could feel so good…"
"Haven't you ever fucked yourself before?" Catra asks as she presses a few more kisses along Adora's thighs.
Adora blushes at the thought, despite the fact that Catra has just literally fucked her, "I've never done that before with… anyone."

“Mm…” Catra hums, “Can I pull out now?”
“What?” Adora looks down at Catra’s smug expression on her face.
“You’ve still got me in a vice grip down here.” Catra chuckles with an air of lightness, “Also… seriously? Never?”
“I told you.” Adora hisses a little when Catra pulls her fingers out, wiping the slick on the blonde’s stomach, “I’ve only ever wanted you.”
“Cute.” Catra replies as she gets up and stretches her arms out and then yawns.
Once Adora’s caught her breath, she reaches out, grabbing Catra and pulling the magicat into her, nuzzling her face into the magicat’s neck, “Mm… can I return the favour?”
“Do you even know how to, princess?” Catra taunts back as she shuffles to the side so she can spoon Adora from behind, her arm wrapping around Adora’s waist, pulling her in closer and then sniffs the blonde’s hair, “You still smell the same.”
“What do I smell like?” Adora asks and it feels like déjà vu, “Wait… I’ve already asked you that before.”
“Do you remember what I said?”
Adora nods and breathes out, “Home.”
“Yeah.” Catra confirms, letting her fingers trace along Adora’s skin.
“Mm…” Adora moans softly, “I love you.”
“Mm.” Catra hums from behind, her fingers tracing down towards Adora’s lower curls and then she feels Adora’s hand move over hers, holding it place, “What’s wrong?”
Adora turns over so she can face Catra, looking dead into her eyes and repeats a little louder, “I love you, Catra.”
Catra breaks their eye contact, “Mm.”
“Catra.” Adora cups Catra’s face and the magicat stares down at the blonde’s bare chest, “Catra?”
The magicat sighs, taking a few breaths before looking back up into Adora’s eyes, “What do you want from me, Adora?”
Adora frowns, anger in bubbling inside her at how stupid she was, had been, letting Catra have her like this. She doesn’t know what to do with herself, so she huffs and then decides to slide out and leave while she still has some shred of dignity, that is, until Catra’s arm tightens around her.

The magicat growls, “You’re such an idiot.”
“Am I?” Adora snaps back angrily, weakly trying to break out of Catra’s grasp before she scoffs, shaking her head, “Of course I am. How could I not be an idiot? I just… gave myself to you and you don’t even love me.”
“Of course I fucking love you, you idiot!” Catra growls out, “But you’re going to fucking leave me again!”
“I don’t want to!” Adora shouts back, “I never wanted to leave! I don’t have a choice!”
“You never have a choice.” Catra grumbles out bitterly, “And I always end up broken up over you.”
“Where’s your phone?” Adora asks, changing the subject and totally putting Catra off balance, “Where is it?”
“Why?”
“Catra!” Adora groans, “Just tell me where it is.”
Catra shoves her hand into her pants and digs out her phone, “Wait, hold on.”

CLICK!

“Catra!” Adora tries to cover herself up, “Delete that, right now!”
The magicat chuckles, “Fine.” She clicks delete on the photo and holds the device out to Adora, “Take it.”
“Thank you.” Adora accepts the phone and then opens up Catra’s contacts.
The magicat quirks an eyebrow up at Adora, “Really, princess?”
“What?” Adora says as she types in a phone number under the name PRINCESS , “This is me letting you into my world of mess.”
Catra stares at the phone, still open on the contact page that Adora had just saved her number on, “Uh, thanks.”
“Don’t… don’t uh, text me until after you get off this train.” Adora looks at the magicat seriously, “I mean it. Promise me. Please.”
“Okay, I promise.” Catra nods, “I… I’m sorry about before. I do love you.”
Adora cups Catra’s face, pressing a soft kiss on the magicat’s lips, “I love you too.”
“Yeah, I know.” Catra smiles genuinely, “It just… it’s just been… hard.”
“Yeah.” Adora nods and then she lets her hands run down Catra’s cheeks and onto the magicat's shoulders, "You know what else is hard?"

"Are you making a dick joke?" Catra asks incredulously and Adora goes red before laughing, "Because if anyone should be making a dick joke, it's me."
Adora rolls her eyes, her face still feeling hot, "Whatever. Now, why aren't you naked too?"
"I'll get naked." Catra starts and Adora's hands start tugging at her clothes, "But…"
"But?"
"I'm in charge." Catra smirks as Adora rolls her eyes again, "Say it."
"Fine. Whatever. You're in charge." Adora gives in as she pulls Catra's top off and then stares at the magicat with wide eyes, "Wow…"
"Yeah, wow." Catra pushes down her pants, kicking them off as she pushes Adora back over, "I'm not done with you yet…"
"Mm… fuck." Adora leans back into Catra's arms, "I love you."
"I know. I love you too." Catra whispers into Adora's ear as her hand descends down between the blonde's legs again.

Catra wakes up alone in bed. Adora nowhere to be found along with the blonde's things. The magicat looks up and sees her wallet wide open, all her cash is gone as well as her red scarf. She sighs as she flops back down, reaching out to grab her phone and opens it before sitting up abruptly, "What the actual fuck, Adora?!"
She scrolls through her contacts to find the PRINCESS contact deleted and nowhere to be found, she growls out wanting to throw her phone at the wall, but no, she needs the stupid thing so she takes a breath and sets it down.
That's when she realises it. Adora left her. Again. She should have known better than trust Adora to have really loved her back.

Chapter End Notes

Yep... that happened.
I've also upped the chapter count for you observant folks out there.

Apologies for the wait, I've been on the road this week with a newbie... so it's been a little exhausting.
Though... I think the worst part of this week was doing a 100m guy mast climb, double hooking all the way up and down.
My forearms are still sore...

But, enough with my work rants...
Thanks for reading, kudos and commenting!

End destination

Chapter Summary

The fallout.

Chapter Notes

Wow! A quick update!
Enjoy!

See the end of the chapter for more notes

"I hope you had an enjoyable journey." Gary reaches out to shake Catra's hand, before adding, "I know you're not a hugger, Wildcat."
Catra laughs, her mood coming up slightly as she shakes Gary's hand, "It was… interesting."
"Hm." Gary nods like he understands, "Well, onwards to bigger and better things then."
"Yeah." Cara sighs, "Better."
"Don't worry, Catra." Gary pats the magicat on the shoulder, "Gwen loves you. She didn't want to leave but she had to. Here."
Catra looks down at the piece of paper in his hand, 'What is it?"
"A million dollars." Gary deadpans and Catra tilts her head at him in confusion before he laughs out, "It's a note, you dope. Gwen asked me to pass this to you when you got off the train."
"Oh. Thanks. I guess." Catra gingerly takes the piece of paper and just turns it over in her hands a few times before pocketing it, "I'll read it later." She finally settles on, "Thanks Gary. Take care."
"You too." Gary replies with a small smile, "Also… I'm sorry."
"Why are you sorry?" Catra furrows her brows at him.
"I didn't want to do it, but she asked me to as a favour." Gary says, making zero sense.
"Do what, exactly?"
"Delete her contact in your phone." Gary admits guiltily.
"Wait, what?" Catra growls out, "How did you even unlock my phone?"

“Gwen figured it out.” Gary shakes his head, “Anyways, I’m sorry.”
“Right.” Catra replies angrily before turning abruptly and walking away, she can’t look at him knowing that he’s betrayed her trust as well as she scoffs under her breath, “Whatever.”

“Catra! You’re here!” Entrapta rushes over and wraps the magicat in a hug, Catra chuckles at her friend’s enthusiasm, “You have so much to catch up on! Work wise!”
“I do? I literally just got here…” Catra rolls her eyes as Entrapta releases her before she’s all of a sudden engulfed in another hug, “Oof… uh, hey Scorp…”
“Wildcat! I missed you so much!” Scorpia squeezes the magicat just a little tighter, “I’m so glad that you’re finally here!”
Catra taps on her friend’s arm frantically as she manages to grunt out, “Can’t… breathe…”
“Oh, gosh! I’m so sorry!” Scorpia quickly releases Catra and then pats her on the head, “But really, it’s so good to see you!”
“Right back at you.” Catra slumps over, trying to catch her breath, “Thanks for picking me up.”
“No problems, Wildcat!” Scorpia grins, taking the magicat’s backpack off her so she can carry it, “Is this all you’ve got?”
“Yeah.” Catra replies, “I don’t have a lot of stuff.”
“Where’s your favourite scarf?” Entrapta asks looking around the magicat like Catra might be hiding it, “You didn’t leave it on the train, did you?”
“No.” Catra replies sharply, “I… I don’t have it.”
“Did you leave it behind?” Entrapta probes a little further.
“No.” Catra says a little irritated and wanting this conversation to end, “Can we get going?”
“Sure.” Scorpia picks up on the magicat’s mood, “Come on, we’re parked over there.”

“This place is nice.” Catra looks around her new place, it’s a little house that she can afford on her own with her friends living on either side, “I can’t believe I could even afford this.”

"Well, you shouldn't be surprised." Entrapta says as she starts to tinker around with the alarm panel, "Oh, I've left you a swipe card and keys for the warehouse on the table for you."
"Thanks." Catra walks over and picks up the items, "I can't believe I'm really here."
"Believe it, Wildcat." Scorpia pats the magicat on the shoulder, "We all worked really hard and we got lucky it's paid off."
Catra nods, "Do I have a bed or is that something I still have to get?"
"I sorted everything out already." Entrapta beams happily, "Going off the data, I think I've got everything that you'd like."
Catra walks around the house, testing out the chairs, the bed and checking out the bathroom before walking back out to see her friends making themselves comfortable on the armchairs in the living room, "It's perfect." She goes to check her fridge, "Hm… guess I better get some groceries…"

Two weeks go by and Catra is happy for the first time in a long time.
She's got friends. A cool job that's flexible and one that she actually likes. Her adopted family only lives half an hour away and she meets with them every Sunday for dinner.
Yep. She's living the life.
Except.
There's something missing.
As much as she hates to admit it, that it, is more like a person.
And the thing she hates more than admitting that, is that she knows who is missing.
A growl escapes her lips as she thinks about it when someone nudges her foot under the table, her eyes refocus and she grunts out, "What?"
Spinneralla chuckles as she turns to her wife, "Cat's got it bad for someone."
"Definitely." Netossa replies smugly as she quirks and eyebrow towards the magicat, "Well. Out with it, kid. Who's the lass that's got you looking so longingly at Spinny's roasted vegetables?"
"It's no one." Catra grunts, crossing her arms over her chest and promptly looking away from her adoptive family, “Besides, she’s gone. Again.”

“Again?” Spinnerella repeats softly as she looks to her wife once more, “Oh… you’re talking about…”
“I don’t want to talk about it. Or her.” Catra grunts out, “It’s over. She’s made that clear. Again.”
“Oh, dear.” Spinnerella gets off her chair and wraps her arms around the magicat from behind, “Are you okay?”
“Yeah, I’m great.” Catra replies flatly, “Nothing to complain about.”
“Don’t lie to us, kid.” Netossa points her fork at the magicat, “Don’t forget, we can still ground you.”
That makes Catra laugh, which in turn makes the other two women laugh. Once Catra’s caught her breath she looks Netossa dead in the eye, “Yeah? You’ve never been able to keep me grounded through, have you?”
“Oh, don’t threaten me.” Netossa smirks but laugh immediately after, “I’ve missed you, Cat.”
“I missed you guys too.” Catra sighs, picking up her fork again to restart eating, “What have you been up to?”
“Oh, this and that.” Spinnnerella gives Catra one more hug, “Oh, speaking of this and that. This came for you.” Spinnerella quickly grabs a piece of paper from a pile on the desk not too far away, “It looks like someone had hand delivered as there was no envelope or address on it. Just your name.”
Catra furrows her brows as she takes the paper from Spinnerella, “Thank you. I’ll read it when I get home, if that’s alright.”
“That’s fine.” Spinnerella pats the magicat on the shoulder once again, “Are you going to be okay to get home?”
“Yeah, I’ll be fine.” Catra nods, “Can I finish dinner first before you kick me out?”
“Of course.” Spinnerella says as she sits back down in her chair, “Now, tell me about this project you and your friends are working on.”

After a hearty dinner, Catra takes her time walking home, putting her headphones in to take her mind off the paper in her pocket from Sunday night dinner. She finally gets home, places her keys on the table and takes off her coat before sitting down on her couch.

Catra reaches into her pocket and pulls out the piece of paper in her pocket from Netossa and Spinnerella's place before she realises there's two separate pieces in her hand. She leans back a little on her seat on the couch and just stares at both folded pieces of paper.
The magicat sighs as she stares at both pieces just a little harder, like they'll magically open themselves and be read.
One is from the train, the paper looks new and crisp.
The other is older, yellowing and a little dog-eared.
"Keep it together. It's only letters." Catra tells herself gruffly, "She's not here. Just… just throw them out."
The 2 letters stare back at her mockingly as Catra growls out and opens the older looking one.

Catra,
I have to leave. I don't want to but I don't have a choice.
I don't have much information on where I'm going to be.
I love you.
Yours. Always.
A
C4A@ethermail.com

"Fuck me." Catra folds the notes back up again, "She was telling the truth. Fuck."

Catra places the read note onto the table in front of her before picking up the newest note that Gary had handed her, a little angry at him still as she unfolds it.

Catra,
I love you.
Please don't be angry with Gary.
I asked him for this favour.
I'm sorry.
Hopefully this letter reaches you this time.
I have your number and will contact you once I'm safe.
I love you.

Your idiot.
A

"Fucking idiot." Catra scoffs with a watery smile, "You better not be fucking dead, princess."

Another two weeks pass and still no contact from Adora.
Catra's starting to think the blonde's letter was nothing more than an empty gesture, something to make herself feel better and give Catra false hope.
How long does it take for her to be safe?
Surely her 'contact' is supposed to be a professional and should have already got Adora settled.
This is bullshit.
Adora's letter is bullshit.
Catra feels the anger simmering inside once again, mixed in with the feeling of hopelessness and stupidity.
How can she be so stupid to believe Adora's letter?
Did she even mean what she wrote in the letter?
Probably not.
It's Adora's hero complex once again. Thinking she's protecting the magicat again.
Idiot.

Another 2 weeks pass and Catra is out with her friends at a bar just outside of town.
Scorpia and Entrapta both have their respective partners there too and Catra feels like the fifth wheel.
"That girl over there keeps looking at you, Wildcat." Scorpia nudges the magicat and Catra turns her head to see that her friend is right, the girl in question is cute and Catra really should get over herself and go over and talk to her, "Go talk to her." Her friend encourages Catra to go.
Catra laughs, taking another sip of her drink, "Maybe later. I'm not drunk enough yet."

“Okay.” Scorpia pats the magicat on the shoulder, “Oh, me and Perfuma are going to go dance!”
“Go for it, big gal.” Catra grins at her friend, “Hey, where’s Traps?”
“Oh, her and Hordak left a while ago.” Scorpia casually mentions, “Something about a new experiment she wants to get started out.”
“Oh, yeah.” Catra nods as she takes another sip, “I think she might have said goodbye to me in her own Entrapta way…”
They pair share another laugh as Scorpia leans in, “Do you want to join me and Perfuma on the dance floor?”
“Nah, I’m good.” Catra lifts her bottle up with a grin, “You two have fun.”
“Okay.” Scorpia smiles back before heading to the dance floor to join Perfuma.

Catra sighs and finishes off her drink when she feels someone tap her shoulder, the magicat turns her head and sees the cute girl standing in front of her with a smile on her face.
“Hi.” She says, “I’m Lily.”
“Hey.” Catra checks Lily out, her eyes roaming up and down the woman’s body as she smiles, “What, uh, what can I do for you, Lily?”
The cute girl with long brown hair, loose and flowing freely over her shoulders, pushes a few strands back behind her ear, “Can I get you a drink?”
“How’d you know?” Catra raises an eyebrow as she looks at her now empty bottle, “I’m fresh out.”
Lily smiles back at Catra, “I didn’t get your name…”
Just as Catra’s about to answer, Scorpia comes rushing back, throwing an arm around Catra’s shoulders, “Hey Wildcat!”
“Perfuma kick you off the dance floor already?” Catra jokes before remembering she was sort of in a conversation, “Oh, Scorp, this is Lily. Lily, this is Scorpia.”
“It’s nice to meet you.” Lily politely says to Scorpia with a small wave.
“Oh gosh, it is really nice to meet you too!” Scorpia replies with such enthusiasm, Catra has to hold her back from giving the newcomer a crushing hug too, "Sorry about the interruption but I gotta talk to Wildcat about something real quick."

"Uh, sorry. I just…" Catra starts to say when the other woman just smiles.
"That's okay. My friends are about to head off." Lily says, "I was wondering if you wanted to hang out sometime?"
"Oh." Catra's eyebrows go high in surprise at how forward this woman is, "Uh, yeah, sure. Why not?"
Lily giggles a little before pulling out a business card and handing it over to the magicat, "I hope this is okay?" the brunette rubs the back of her neck, "My phone broke like literally this afternoon and this is what I've got…"
Catra accepts the business card, slipping it into her pocket without looking at it, "Thanks. I guess I'll be seeing you."
"Count on it!" Lily smiles even wider, "I look forward to hearing from you, then." She looks around and then quickly leans in and presses a quick kiss on Catra's cheek, "See you soon, Wildcat."
Catra laughs, "Bye Lily. Get home safe."
"Bye!" Lily manages to shout back as her friend carrel her out of the bar.
"Oh. My. Stars. Wildcat! I'm so happy for you!" Scorpia pulls Catra in for a bone crushing congratulatory hug, "Who knew you were such a smooth talker? Well, I knew, of course, but… that's so awesome!"
"Uh… Scorp?" Catra taps her friend's arm, "Need to breathe…"
"Oh, sorry!" Scorpia lets her go again, "Anyways, Perfuma has some romantic anniversary thing planned for tonight at her place."
"Uh huh." Catra deadpans before smirking, "Go. Go have sex."
Scorpia goes a bright red as Perfuma snakes her arms around the larger woman, a look of confusion on her face at the sight in front of her, before quickly coming to the realisation of what Catra is insinuating, "Yes, yes." Before she squeezes her arms around Scorpia, "Come on, sweetie. I have some very special toys I want to play with."
"Oh." Scorpia's eyes widen as Catra starts to cackle, turning to her girlfriend and then beaming back at her, "Oh! Yes! Let's go!" just as she's picked up Perfuma, the large woman turns to Catra, "Are you going to be okay? We can take you home first if you want, or just… hang out a little longer.”

“Nah, I’m all good.” Catra replies with a smirk, “I can get myself home. You two have fun tonight.”
Scorpia nods vigorously before turning to Perfuma, “Ready?”
“Yes.” Perfuma grins back and then laughs as Scorpia practically carries her out of the bar, leaving Catra laughing at them as they leave.

Catra watches as her friends run out of the bar like teenagers as she shakes her head with a smile and then decides it’s probably time she left too. But a bathroom stop is in order first before the walk home.
Wiping her hands on her pants as she walks out of the bathrooms, she looks over at the bar and sees a familiar head of blonde hair, an even more familiar scarf wrapped around that neck as she narrows her eyes forward, her feet taking her towards the bar.
She spots the blonde who doesn’t seem to have noticed her yet as Catra walks up to the bar and pulls up an empty bar stool. When they lock eyes, Adora eyes widen in surprise and shock. Not sure what to do, the blonde quickly leans into one of the other bar staff and whispers something into her ear before dashing off. Catra frowns down as she goes to follow Adora who is trying to escape out the back.
“Hey!” Catra shouts as she follows her outside into the cold night, snow beginning to fall around her as Adora stops in her tracks, the magicat making up the difference, “You left me. Again. What happened to texting me when you were safe?”
“I’m sorry.” Adora replies without looking back.
“Tell me you didn’t mean anything you told me on the train and your note.” Catra demands from behind Adora, “Tell me it meant nothing to you, and I’ll leave you alone.”
“Why?” Adora whispers out, her breath coming out like smoke in the cold.
“I need to hear it. From you.” Catra says, “Tell me you don’t love me. Tell me you never did and all you did was play me over and over again, so I know I was really a fool all along. I’ll leave you alone after that."

Adora stays silent, still unturning as Catra hears a sob.
"Just. Just give me that, Adora." Catra says, her voice almost begging, "It's the least you can do. You already stole everything from me. My money. My scarf. My heart."
"I'm sorry about your money and your heart, Catra." Adora sighs, "But the scarf? That's mine. Always has been."
"So's my heart apparently too." Catra sighs out and that makes Adora turn around, "Did you really think I wouldn't have remembered you? That I wouldn't remember the girl that broke my heart back then?"
"You already knew that…" Adora starts, "Why are you here?"
"Because you broke my heart!" Catra shouts out, "Again! And then when I thought you'd change and your… your stupid letter… you know what? This is stupid. I'm stupid. I should have learnt from the first time. But I'm an idiot when it comes to you. Take my money. Take the stupid scarf and you can keep my fucking heart. It's dead anyways."
Catra turns around as Adora reaches out, "Catra, wait!"
Catra doesn't turn around, "I've said what I've had to say. I'm going now."
"No." Adora runs and stands in front of the magicat, "You're not stupid. Or an idiot. That's me. All of that. I'm stupid and an idiot. I keep hurting you."
The magicat's eyes look down at the ground, unable to bring herself to look into those blue-grey eyes, "Yeah. And I keep coming back."
"I'm sorry." Adora says.
Catra wipes the tears from her eyes, "I knew you would never love me the way I love you."
"No. That's not true… I'm not sorry about loving you." Adora tries to explain but Catra keeps her eyes down, "I mean, I'm sorry for leaving like that. Both times. I just... I didn't have a choice."
Catra scoffs.
"It's true. My contact came early and I had to get off the train." Adora tries to justify, "But I… I do love you. I meant every word of what I said."
"Then whey the fuck did you just leave?!" Catra growls out angrily,

“Why did you take my money and my scarf?! You could have at least woken me up!”
“I couldn’t risk losing you, you idiot! I had to make it look like that!” Adora shouts back, “My cover was blown. By Betty…”
“Betty?” Catra says that name with so much anger she growls, “I threw that bitch off the train.”
“Wait, what?! You threw her off the train?!” Catra nods, “Fuck… Still. She blew my cover and I couldn’t risk you being a target too.” Adora explains, “I had to get out of there once we got to the last stop. My contact just got to me earlier than expected. I didn’t want to just up and leave.”
“Fuck this.” Catra grunts as she starts to walk off, “And fuck you, Adora. Or Gwen or whoever you are now.”
Adora chases after the magicat, “Wait!” the blonde grabs Catra’s wrist that’s shrugged off harshly as she runs in front instead and wraps her arms around Catra’s shoulders, effectively stopping the magicat from getting away further but not without the resulting growl and hiss at her, “I’m sorry! I really am!”
“You’re always sorry, Adora.” Catra growls out, shoving Adora back from her just enough so that the blonde’s body is not on her back.
“You don’t… you don’t understand…” Adora tries.
“Oh, I understand plenty.” Catra scoffs, “Now, let go before I… oof…”
Catra’s body tightens up before going slack and then limp in Adora’s arms, “Catra?”
The magicat’s turns slightly and her eyes stare into Adora’s wide, pain radiating in her features as she looks down wishing she wasn’t wearing dark clothes as a warm fluid starts to roll down from her chest to her abdomen. Wearily reaching up to touch it, she pulls back to get a better look in the moonlight and realises the fluid is blood. Her blood. Catra looks back at Adora, “A-Adora?”
Adora catches the magicat before she can fall to the ground, “Catra!” Her hand searches for the source of the bleeding, finding it and putting pressure on it with one hand while reaching for Catra’s phone in the magicat’s pant pocket, “Hold on, Catra!”
Catra groans out in pain with the added pressure on her chest that Adora is providing but otherwise remains still.

Adora pulls out Catra's phone and unlocks it with the passcode she knows the magicat has is her birthday and dials emergency services before quickly hanging up and calling her contact, "Detective King!"
"Adora?" A groggy voice answers the phone, "What's wrong?"
"They're here! Catra's been shot!" Adora shouts into the phone trying not to cry, "Help! Help her! She's dying!"
The call is cut short, the last sound Detective King hears is Adora struggling and screaming against somebody before the line goes dead.
"Adora!" Detective King shouts into the phone, before running outside, getting dressed hastily while making another phone call, "Entrapta! I need you to trace a number for me! And get my team there as well!"

As Detective King homes in on the signal, he stumbles upon someone lying on the snowy ground and is surpised to find a magicat lying in a pool of blood and no sign of Adora, "No…" he gets down and starts to put pressure on Catra's wound, "Stay with me, kid."
"Micah! Is everything… oh no." A man's voice can be heard saying as sirens start to get closer to them.
"Bow, go wave them down." Detective King asks as he takes hold of the situation, "Now!"
"Yes, sir." Bow nods and quickly runs off to meet the emergency services.
"Stay with me kid. No giving up. You hear me?" Micah tells Catra, trying to keep her awake, "Help is coming. Just, hold on."
Catra's eyes flutter open for a moment and look into the strange man's eyes, "A-Adora… they got her…"

Chapter End Notes

I know! Another cliffhanger for the final chapter.
But come on, you had to be expecting that!
Especially @Liseo and @PinkStorm!

Thanks for reading, kudos and comments.
I'll have the next chapter written and out as soon as I brain it and put it into words!

Oh, and by the way, this was actually one of the first chapters I wrote when I first writing this fic... crazy isn't it?

Am I dead?

Chapter Summary

Did Catra make it?

Chapter Notes

Last chapter!!!
Enjoy

See the end of the chapter for more notes

"Finally, we've got you." A familiar yet ghostly voice says as the blindfold is taken off Adora's eyes and the blonde's face drains of colour, the woman behind the voice smirks, "You look like you've seen a ghost."
"Octavia?" Adora whispers out unbelievably, she's tied down to a chair and the ropes are tight, so tight that it feels like they might be cutting off circulation, "No." Adora shakes her head in disbelief, "You're dead! I saw you die!"
"You saw what you wanted to see." Octavia replies, tilting Adora's face to look her in the eye.
"What do you want from me?" Adora looks around for a way to escape before returning her focus back on the formerly dead woman, "How did you even find me?"
"Oh, it was easy." Betty steps out from the shadows, a smug look on her face before she saunters over, "And you can thank me for killing your lover."
"What?!"
"Betty here pulled the trigger on that mangy cat girl you call your friend." Octavia says with amusement, "She's actually a pretty good shot."
"Thank you." Betty grins at the larger woman, "Awe, don't look so surprised Gwen."
Adora glares at Betty, clenching her hands into fists as she grits her teeth and tries to hold back the tears on the verge of spilling out that Catra might be actually dead.

“You can call us even now after she abandoned me at the second last stop.” Betty says with a slight grin, before feigning shock or surprise, “Oh, do you think she’s alive still?”
Octavia bursts out in a loud laugh as does Betty as Adora tries to charge at Betty only to be held back, “I’ll kill you!”
“No, you won’t.” Betty replies dismissively, “Because I’m going to kill you first.”
Octavia stops laughing and puts her arm out to stop Betty advancing forward, before disarming her of the gun she had pulled out, “This is not part of the deal, Betty.”
“Screw the deal!” Betty growls out angrily trying to get her gun back, “She’s made my life hell for the last year! I should get to kill her!”
Octavia slaps Betty down, “No. You killing Adora is not part of the plan.”
“Screw your plan!” Betty stands back up, clutching her reddened cheek in her hand, before swiping the gun out of Octavia’s hand and cocking it, bringing her arm up to shoot at Adora, “I’m going to enjoy this.” She says as Adora’s eyes widen in shock before shutting them in anticipation of her end.

BANG!

The sound of a body dropping to floor echoes around the room and the smell of a gun being fired fill the room as Octavia walks over, tapping the body on the ground with her foot and holstering her own weapon, “Bitch.” She says, “Now, where were we?”
Adora opens her eyes and then turns her head away from the sight of Betty’s body on the ground and bleeding out from her head, probably, because she’s not planning to look at where Octavia actually shot her but from the way the blood is pooling, it definitely is around the head area.
“Does she have anything on her?” Octavia asks and one of her crew shakes their head, “Did you check properly?”
“I did.” Her crewwomen replies with a snarl at the accusation, “She had nothing on her apart from a few dollars. Probably tips from that shitty bar she was working at.”
Octavia tilts her head down at Adora, pulling out her knife she had hidden on her belt and slashes at the ropes keeping Adora tied down and then tugging the blonde up to her feet and grinning down at her, “No phone? No wallet? My, you really have gone off grid.”

“Not far enough.” Adora seethes, “What do you want from me?”
“You. I don’t want anything from you.” Octavia simply says, “This has never been about you.”
“Then… why?”
“This is between us and the police.” Octavia replies, “Thanks to you, we’ve managed to find who’s been outing my implants in the police force.”
“What?”
“Detective King. That son of a bitch has been a thorn in my side since day one.” Octavia huffs out, pushing Adora to sit back down in her seat, “You… thanks to you we managed to find out it was him that was fucking up our plans from the inside. And you, sweet, innocent Adora… I knew he wouldn’t be able to resist some innocent and dumb blonde needing help after witnessing a potential gang related crime.”
“No…” Adora looks down in defeat.
“Yes.” Octavia lavishes in her small victory, “Now, you’re going to draw him out and then we’ll finally be rid of that goody-two-shoes detective once and for all.”
“No. You can’t make me.” Adora says defiantly, “I won’t do it. You might as well just kill me!”
“Such fire…” Octavia quirks an eyebrow, “Fine.”
Adora breathes out in relief, but it’s very short lived.
“Have it your way.” Octavia smiles back evilly and then turns to her crew, “We take them all out tonight. King, his wife, his daughter and that boyfriend of hers.”
“What? No! You can’t do that!” Adora quickly gets to her feet to protest, but is shoved back down onto the chair, “Please! No!”
“No?” Octavia chuckles, “I gave you the option, no sorry, I gave you the opportunity, but you said no. So, this is plan b.”
“No!” Adora shouts out, “You can’t do this!”
“I can and I will.” She turns to crewwoman from before, “Kel, gag her. I don’t want to hear her right now.”
“Wait!” Adora pleads before shouting out, “Fine! I’ll do it! Just… please. Don’t hurt his family.”

Octavia holds up her hand to signal Kel to hold off, instead clicking her fingers as the woman digs out a phone and hands it over to Octavia, “Here. Call him.”
Adora looks at the phone held out to her before gingerly taking it, “What… what should I say?”
Octavia shrugs, “Tell him you escaped and to meet you at the Birdsville Warehouse.”
“Okay.” Adora swallows hard and nods and just before she starts punching in the numbers Octavia covers the screen with her hand, “What?”
“Don’t try anything.” Octavia narrows her eyes with the warning, “Or we’ll go to plan b instead. Got me?”
Adora nods.
“Good. Off you go then.” Octavia removes her hand, but her eyes are still serious with the warning.
Adora swallows hard again as she deletes the numbers she had just put in, tapping in the digits and then holding the phone up to her ear.
“No. Put it on speaker.” Octavia tells her as the call connects and Adora sighs, lowering the phone and tapping on the speaker icon, “Good.”
The phone starts to ring.
Once.
Twice.
Three times.
On the fourth time, “Hello?”
Adora has never been so thankful to hear that voice, “Detective King! Micah! It’s Adora!”
“Adora?” Micah’s voice asks sounding very surprised, “Stars! Are you alright?!”
Adora looks around the room before replying, “Yeah. I’m okay.”
“Where are you? I’ll come and get you.” Micah asks, the sound of him pulling out a notepad and clicking a pen noticeable in the background, “Are you hurt? Are you safe?”
“I’m okay.” Adora repeats trying to sound normal, “I’m not hurt.”
“Good. Good.” Micah sounds relieved, “Where are you?”
Adora looks over at Octavia, who just raises a challenging eyebrow at her as she says, “I’m at a warehouse. I think it’s called Birdsville or something."

"Hold on, let me triangulate the call." Micah starts before Octavia cuts the call short.
Adora frowns as she stares at Octavia's finger on the phone, the large woman curling her fingers around the device and taking it back, "Careful there, Adora."
"What…? I didn't do anything." Adora scoffs back, crossing her arms over her chest, attempting to hide the seething underneath, "He's not going to come."
"Yes. He is." Octavia smirks before turning to the rest of her crew, "Get ready to move out." The large woman shouts out the order, "The pigs are coming to us, it seems."
"Please! Don't hurt him!" Adora quickly stands up, "Please!"
"Sorry." Octavia replies, "But no. He will die tonight."

"That was Adora!" Micah shouts out in the hospital room despite how small the area is, "She's okay! I think…"
"Sir, Detective King." Bow interrupts, "She didn't sound… right. I think it's a trap."
"Most likely." Entrapta replies as she sits in the corner of room, her leg jittering since she doesn't have any of her devices on her as she waits for Catra to come out of surgery, "Can I please have something to tinker with?! I'm dying here!'
"Actually…yes." Micah throws the phone to Entrapta who looks at it in recognition, "I need you to find where Adora was calling from."
"You don't believe she's really at a Birdsville warehouse?" Bow asks as he watches Entrapta hold the phone that Micah gave her carefully in her fingertips, "Are you okay, Entrapta?"
"I… I have a funny feeling inside of me." Entrapta says with a frown, "It's, it's not a good feeling. I don't like it."
"What do you mean?" Bow asks as he stands in front of her.
"I kept something big from her for years…" Entrapta admits with another frown, "And it doesn't feel good."
"I'm pretty sure that's guilt." Bow says, "You feel bad because you lied to her."
"Yes! That's it!" Entrapta points to Bow like he is guilt, before slumping back down again, “Why does it feel so… not good?”

Bow sighs, “Because it means that you’ve hurt someone you care about. And you probably feel bad because you might not have a chance to tell her the truth.”
Entrapta nods, “So, what do I do?”
Bow shrugs, patting Entrapta on the shoulder, “I’m sure you’ll figure it out. You’re like the smartest person I know.”
“Not in this stuff.” Entrapta sighs as she stares at the device in her hand, “This is Catra’s.”
“Why would Adora call Micah on Catra’s phone?” Bow asks.
“It’s quite simple.” Entrapta says with much less enthusiasm, “She doesn’t want the gang to get hold of Micah’s number. And she knew that he would be holding onto Catra’s phone. So, it makes sense, I guess.”
“Okay.” Bow nods, “Can you find out where Adora is?”
“Yeah. Yeah, I… I can do that.” Entrapta squeezes her fingers around Catra’s phone for a moment and then goes to unlock it.
“How do you know Catra’s unlock code?” Micah comes over and has a look.
“It’s Adora’s birthday.” Entrapta replies flatly as she starts to scroll through Catra’s phone and then begins tapping on it with both hands, tongue stuck out as her eyes focus harder on the screen, “I know where Adora is.”
“Great!” Micah claps his hands together, “Where is she?”
“Ahem.” The sound of someone clearing their throat has the trio turning to the door, “Sorry, can you please make some room. Incoming!”
Micah and Bow quickly move against the wall as a bed is rolled in along with a few orderlies and a doctor and a nurse close by as the magicat is transferred onto the empty bed in the room and then the nurse quickly hooks everything up while the doctor goes through the paperwork. The orderlies wheel out the empty bed and only the doctor and nurse remain.
They whisper things between themselves as the nurse nods to the doctor and walks out, leaving the doctor in there to scribble down the rest of the notes and speak to the occupants in the room, “So, Detective, isn’t it?”
“Detective King. Micah.” Micah introduces himself, “How is she?”

“She’s stable.” The doctor replies, “She lost a lot of blood and we don’t exactly have a lot of magicat blood on hand. So, we’ll see how she goes with the mix of human and hybrid bloods that match hers.”
“Oh, is there anything we can do to help?” Micah asks.
“Should we be in here?” Bow sticks his arm up to ask the question, “Seems like she should be in ICU or something…”
“That would be true if she were human.” The doctor replies as Entrapta continues to tap away on Catra’s phone, “Her magicat abilities mean she heals a lot faster than humans do. And with quick intervention, she has a good chance to recover fully. They are a resilient species after all.”
“That’s good news.” Micah sighs, “Very good.”
“Yes. We’ll be keeping a close eye on her. The monitors will alert us to any irregularities.” The doctor gestures to the machines in the room, “The nurses will be back to do their rounds every half hour.”
“Thank you, doctor.” Micah says gratefully as the doctor nods and leave the room. He steps forward and looks down on Catra lying on the bed with machines hooked up to her and bandages around her torso, “Catra. You’re safe here.”
Catra’s ear twitches slightly but other than that, there’s no other reaction.
Entrapta jumps up and off her seat, her hands hovering over Catra as she looks her over and then watches her intently before sighing out in relief, “She’s breathing on her own.”
“Yeah, she is.” Micah wraps an arm around Entrapta’s shoulder comfortingly, “You said you knew where Adora is?”
“Adora…”
The trio all whip their heads around to look at the magicat, who’s still looks asleep, nothing giving her away that she might be awake as they all stay silent. Only the sound of the machines in the room fills the silence.
Bow whispers to his companions, “Did she just speak?”
“I think so.” Micah whispers back as Entrapta steps forward to better inspect Catra.
“Catra?” Entrapta pokes Catra’s shoulder and then repeats, “Catra?” this time she pokes Catra’s cheek, there’s no response as Entrapta turns back to the pair, “Strange…”

“It must be a magicat thing…?” Bow suggests and Micah and Entrapta both shrug.
“I don’t know enough about her species still, but I would assume so.” Entrapta explains, “Now, back to Adora.” She turns her head to Catra to see if the magicat is going to repeat the blonde’s name but this time, there’s no echo in the room as she sighs, “I’ve got the location for Adora. I’ve got it on Catra’s phone but I’ll quickly send you the pin so we can go. I’ll leave Catra’s phone here with her in case she wakes up.”
“Isn’t that evidence?” Bow asks Micah.
“She’s not dead.” Micah replies.
“No. But she is a victim of a shooting.” Bow says, “We still need to find her shooter.”
“And we will when we find Adora.” Micah says confidently and then his phone pings, he pulls it out and sure enough, Entrapta has forwarded the location pin to him, “Thank you. Now, come on, Bow. We need to get a team together, fast.”
“Yes sir. I’m on it.” Bow nods before quickly exiting the room in haste, his phone up to his ear to start gathering a team together as Micah steps towards the bed and looks down at Catra, shaking his head and sighing.
“Are you feeling that bad feeling too?” Entrapta asks as she rubs Catra’s forearm closest to her, avoiding the tubes attached to it.
“Not exactly.” Micah smiles a little sadly, “I’m just… sad, I guess.”
“Oh.” Entrapta thinks to herself but doesn’t understand, “Why?”
“She didn’t deserve this.” Micah sighs again, “Adora didn’t deserve this either. They were just kids. And… from what you’ve told me, Catra hasn’t had an easy life.”
“No. She hasn’t.” Entrapta agrees, “But, she’s also extremely strong and stubborn. She’ll get through this. I know she will. I just hope… she doesn’t hate me for keeping this secret from her.”
“You had to. If she knew about Adora, they would have turned her against her best friend.” Micah explains, “Though, keeping them apart seems to have done that as well.”
Entrapta just nods.

Adora paces up and down, unable to keep still knowing that Detective King, her best friend's father and her contact that has kept her safe since this all started was going to be walking into a trap. Octavia has put a wire on the blonde to make sure she doesn't alert the detective when he finally arrives as she constantly looks around only for the large woman to growl at her to stop doing that.
She's got the phone from before in her hand.
She thinks about using it to text Micah that it's a trap, but the phone refuses to send the message or make any phone calls, seems like Octavia thought ahead as Adora glares down at the phone in her hand.
Just as she's cursing herself again, she's startled when the phone rings in her hand. The number that comes up is private as she contemplates answering it or not.
"Answer it, blondie." Octavia orders from where she's hiding, "And if you tip him off, we are going after his family too."
"Okay, fine." Adora huffs out and answers the phone call, "Hello?"
"Adora." Micah answers a little breathless, "Where are you? I can't see you."
Adora looks at Octavia who just nods at her and the blonde sighs out, "I'm inside."
"Can you come out?"
Another glance to Octavia, this time the large woman grins and shakes her head, "I… I can't."
"Okay…" Micah breathes out, Adora can tell that he knows that something is up, "Wait there for me. Stay somewhere safe, okay?"
"Okay." Adora replies sullenly, knowing that Micah is going to be walking into a trap. As she contemplates whether or not to warn her contact, she jumps when the phone is taken from her and the call ended. She turns around and glares at Octavia, "Did you have to do that?"
"Yes. I did." Octavia smirks as she snaps her fingers to signal her crew to get into place.
Adora's head whips around when she sees the figures moves to their positions, guns at the ready and in hiding, "Please. Don't do this." The blonde's pleads fall on deaf ears as Octavia grabs Adora and pulls her towards the back room, shutting the door behind them and locking it for good measure, the wire coming loose, "What are you doing?"

"Keep your mouth shut." She warns and then flicks on the television set up in the room, flipping the channel until it plays the live footage from inside the other room, "Watch. Enjoy your front row seat."
Adora glares back at her, "You're evil."
"Thank you." Octavia grins, taking it as a compliment.

"DK, I've got video feed!" Entrapta shouts into the earpiece as Bow winces next to her, "Sorry…" she whispers harshly in realisation, "Did you hear me, Micah?"
"Yes. Thank you." Micah replies, "How many and where?"
"Wait for me." Bow says over the earpiece, "Don't go charging in without me. I couldn't get anyone else to come on such short notice."
"No. Stay where you are, Bow." Micah instructs, "I need you to be ready to pull Adora out when this is over. So, move into position now, please."
"Micah, I can't let you just walk into a trap." Bow pleads, "Just, give me 2 minutes."
"He's right." Entrapta agrees, "It's a trap. You can't go in alone. They'll kill you as soon as you step foot inside."
"Why would Adora do this?" Bow asks as he makes his way towards Micah, "It's not like her to do something like this."
"My guess. They've threatened all of us." Entrapta answers, "Probably not me though. I'm not a close and personal friend. But you and Glimmer and Glimmer's family are all fair game."
"That's… that's just so evil." Bow whines out before breaking into a run, "DK…" Bow giggles at the nickname Entrapta had just come up with, "I'm nearly there."
"Okay. Be careful." Micah warns, "There might be a few sneaky ones out here."
"Copy that." Bow replies, shrugging off his jacket for more comfort and before he knows it, he's righty by Micah's side, panting and trying to catch his breath. "Hey… what's the plan?"
Micah smiles at Bow, patting him on the back, "I'll go in the front as they are expecting me to. You take the back. See if you can sneak in first and then you can cover me."

Bow nods before whispering back, "Be careful. Glimmer will never forgive me if something happens to you."
A bright smile appears on Micah's face at hearing his daughter's name, "As will I if something were to happen to you."
"Agreed." Bow says with a small smile, "I'll let you know. Don't go charging in just yet."
"And I'll let you know from here!" Entrapta happily provides from where she's set up just a street down from the warehouse, "Be careful!"

Meanwhile… back at the hospital

"Doctor! Doctor!" The nurse calls out to the doctor doing the rounds, "Doctor!"
"What is it, Penny?" The Doctor rushes over to the frantic nurse, "What's wrong? There's no code."
"She's gone!"
"Who's gone?"
"The magicat! She's gone!" The nurse pulls the doctor into the now empty room, "Please tell me you discharged her…"
"No. I didn't." The doctor looks around at the empty room, "There's no way… she wasn't even conscious when we brought her back."
"Hey! What's that over there?" Penny points down at the red droplets leading out of the room, "Do you think…?"
"By the looks of things… our patient just… walked out." The doctor says, "There's no sign of a struggle. Only these blood droplets and a footprint or two."
"Should we call the police?"
"Yes" The doctor scratches her head, "And then call the cleaners about the blood."

Back at the warehouse…

“What is taking him so long?” Octavia growls out at the video feed, before grabbing Adora up by her shirt and up and off the ground, “You told him.”
“I didn’t!” Adora denies, “You were there the whole time!”
“You did!” Octavia declares angrily, throwing Adora down to the ground, “He knows!”
“I did exactly what you asked!” Adora tries to shuffle back, but Octavia stomps her foot down on the blonde’s back, pushing Adora into the floor with a grunt.
Octavia pushes down just a little more and Adora hisses out in pain, “Deals off, bitch.”
“Wait! No!” Adora’s pleads as she’s pushed down again, “You can’t!”
“I can.” Octavia gets on radio that was tucked onto her belt, “Plan B, boys and girls.”
“Copy that.” The head crewwoman confirms.
“Kill them all.” Octavia growls out over the radio before looking down with a grin, “Oh, and make it hurt.”
“Yes, boss.” From the other side of the door, Adora hears the leader of the crew outside yell, “Time to play!”
“Whoo!” The crew whoop and cheer, “Kill them all!”

“DK! There’s a problem!” Entrapta panics and shouts into the earpieces, “Don’t go in! Abort! Abort!”
“Too late! I’m already in the back!” Bow’s voice getting higher by the second as gun fire starts to ring out, “What’s going on?!”
“They’re going berserk!” Entrapta starts to tap away frantically into her device, “I’m getting backup!”
“Entrapta! What’s happening in there?!” Micah backs away from the door, “Who’s shooting? Is Bow, okay?!”
“He’s in trouble! They’ve found him in the back!” Entrapta says through the typing, “I’m getting backup now!”
“Okay, watch my back! I’m going to go get him!” Micah instructs.
“Yes, sir!”
Micah runs to the back door that’s still open from when Bow entered, leaving it that way for a quick exit but it seems he never got the chance to use it yet. He pulls his gun out and goes in cautiously, hiding behind walls and staying in the shadows as more gun fire rings out and then…

"Ah!" Someone screams and then another scream and another and another and another.

And then… silence.

Micah draws in a deep breath, closing his eyes and gathering the last of his courage before running out into the room, "Police! Put your weapons down and surrender…" he looks around as he finishes his sentence and his eyes widen, "What the…?"
"Ugh…" Bow grunts out from under the pile of bodies on top of him, "Ow…"
"Bow!" Micah rushes over, clicking his earpiece on, "Entrapta! Get the medics here too!"
"Yes, sir! On it!" Entrapta replies.
"Bow! Are you hurt?" Micah pulls him out from under the bodies and does a quick once over, "What happened? Did you do this?"
Bow sits up with Micah's help, "I wish I could say I did." He breathes out, "Ow! Micah, move!"
Micah grunts out as Bow pushes him out of the way, shielding him in the process as they both crash through a wooden table, the younger man pulling them behind a couch before grasping his arm.
"You've been shot!" Micah puts his gun down and rips the sleeve off his jacket, tying it around Bow's arm to put pressure on it, "Stay down. I'll go see what's going on."
"No! Stay down!" Bow pulls him back down with his good arm, wincing in the process, "Entrapta? Report!"

THUMP

"Catra!" Adora voice screeches out as the magicat stands in the shadow of the moonlight and over the body of Octavia, her claws dripping with blood as she glares back out. Despite all of that, Adora rushes over and wraps her arms around the magicat, "Stars! Catra! I thought you were dead."
Catra pulls back to look Adora in the eyes, "Am I not dead?"

“No.”
“Oh, good.” Catra breathes out before crashing her lips onto Adora’s in a messy kiss and then pulls back for a second time, “Hospital.”
“What?” Adora asks confused as she feels Catra lean into her more.
“Hos…pit…al…” Catra eyes roll up and then roll back as she collapses fully into Adora’s arms.
“Catra! Catra!” Adora shouts out as Micah runs over.

2 days later…

Catra wakes up in a white room, the artificial light is dimmed and there’s one that flickers as the magicat finally comes back into the world of the living. The sound of a machine beeping next to her in a constant rhythm, the light chatter from outside her room and then she notices one more thing. The sound of someone sleeping very close by.
Grunting, she tries to move but seems to be pinned down by something or someone.
“Mm… quit moving…” Adora’s voice of displeasure grumbles out next to her, “Mm… soft…”
A trill escapes Catra’s throat without her meaning to as she feels Adora’s hands petting her ears and then she growls out before wincing in pain, “…fucking stars…”
“Mm…” Adora mumbles something before wiping her mouth and leaning back into the magicat, “Catra… stay…”
“A-Adora?” Catra tries to speak, but her throat is too dry and hoarse, she tries to clear her throat, but it makes her cough out, spluttering out loudly and setting off the machines, “…ugh… loud…”
The door bursts open and a few medical staff come rushing into a very bemused Catra who sits upright and stares at them.
The head nurse, Penny, waves the others away as she turns up the lighting in the room, Catra shields her eyes with one hand, “Sorry.” Penny apologises and dims the light again, the magicat lowering her hand and the nurse comes closer, “Hi. My name is Penny. I'm a nurse here at the Bright Moon hospital." As she steps closer still and then she notices Adora in bed and still asleep, despite the ruckus from before, Penny frowns, "I told her not to get into the bed with you. But she kept insisting on staying in the room with you."

"It's… it's okay." Catra grimaces and puts her hand on her throat.
"Water." Penny calmly tips some water into a glass and hands it to Catra.
Downing the entirety of the contents in one go, Catra holds the glass out and Penny takes it, setting it back down on the table, "Thanks, Penny."
Penny nods and picks up Catra's chart and flips it over, taking out a pen and adding a few more notes, "How are you feeling? Pain-wise?"
Catra thinks about the question, "Out of 10?"
"Sure."
"It only hurts when I breathe." Catra replies dramatically and Penny rolls her eyes at not getting a number.
"Okay. Anything else?"
"Can I get more happy drugs?" Catra asks with an air of amusement in her voice.
"You haven't had any since you were reemitted into the hospital." Penny replies flatly, "And if it hurts when you breathe, you don't seem to be showing any signs of distress. So, tell me, how do you really feel?"
Knowing she's already been found out, Catra sighs, "Two."
"Two?"
"Yeah. Only hurts if I touch it." Catra replies as her ears go flat, Adora's fingers resume petting behind her ears and she suppresses the purr that wants to come out, she looks over at Adora, pulling the blonde's hand away from her much to the blonde's displeasure, "When can I go?"
"You ripped your stitches when you self-discharged the first time." Penny scolds, "So, until your stitches heal a little more and you don't go doing something so stupid again, I'll let you leave."
"I can't afford to be in here." Catra admits sheepishly.
"Yes, you can!" Entrapta bursts in through the door, jumping on the bed and wrapping her arms around Catra in an awkward hug,

“I’m so sorry!”
“Why?”
“Because I lied to you!” Entrapta starts to sob into Catra’s neck as the nurse looks at the magicat with a do you need help? look on her face.
Catra shakes her head and Penny nods, going back to checking the machines, “What are you talking about, Traps?”
“I lied to youuuuu!” She sniffles, pulling back, wiping her eyes and then stares into Catra’s, “I knew about Adora and I never told you!”
Catra tilts her head at her friend, her brows furrow and she rolls her eyes back at her friend, “I know, you knew.”
“What?”
“I knew.” Catra repeats.
“When?”
“When I was rooting around your stuff back in the Zone.” Catra replies, “You’re not as squirrelly as you think you are.”
“Oh.” A few tears roll down Entrapta’s cheek, “Why aren’t you angry at me?”
“I know why you did it.” Catra sighs, “Why do you think I booked that train trip specifically?”
“Oh…” Entrapta hiccups a little, using her arm to rub her nose, “You planned this?”
“Yeah. I did.” Catra smiles wryly, “Call it even?”
Entrapta smiles back wetly, “Yes!”
“Also… thanks for watching my back.” Catra says, “You could have ratted me out when I know you saw me on your cameras.”
Entrapta nods and leans back into Catra’s neck.
“Okay…” Catra pats Entrapta awkwardly with a hand, clearing her throat, “Are you good?”
“Are we good?” Entrapta asks, her words muffled in Catra’s neck.
“Yeah. We’re good.” Catra replies with a slight nod.
“Excuse me.” Penny interrupts, “Sorry to break up… whatever this is, but you can’t be on the bed.”
“Adora’s on the bed.” Entrapta points out and Penny looks back at her unamused, “What? It’s true.”
“Off.” Penny crosses her arms, “Adora isn’t on top of Catra’s IV tube.”

“Oh!” Entrapta quickly gets off the bed and back to her feet when her phone beeps, “Oh! That’s DK! I’ll see you later!” She doubles back towards the bed, stopping herself form bumping into it, “I’m covering your medical costs too! No arguments!”
“Hey!” Catra calls out but Entrapta’s already disappeared from the room, “Ugh!”
Penny checks the IV in Catra’s arm, happy that it’s still intact and not damaged or moved, “Okay. Do you want me to try and get that one off the bed too?”
“Nah, you can leave her.” Catra replies, “She’ll keep me from bolting.”
Penny laughs before turning serious, “You better not. I can’t have you do that to me twice.”
Catra grins back, “So… about those happy drugs…”
“No.” Penny sternly says, “I don’t want you to get addicted to it.”
“Fine.” Catra dramatically groans out, “How about something to eat? I’m starving.”
“Well, you’ve been asleep for nearly 2 days.” Penny tells her, “I’ll go see if there’s anything available for you.”
“Thanks.” Catra says and closes her eyes again, Adora still snuggled up to her, her arm wraps around the magicat’s middle, holding her closer like she’ll never let her go. The feeling has Catra suppressing another purr as she finds herself falling back asleep.

The smell of food has Adora waking up, her hand wrapped around Catra’s middle as the magicat purrs softly. She finds herself smiling at the feeling under her cheek and then yawns, stretching out her limbs in the small bed.
Catra starts to stir too and Adora’s eyes widen, not sure where to fight or fly when the magicat’s eyes open and then focus on her. She feels like a stunned rabbit caught in the headlights under Catra’s gaze and then swallows hard when the magicat doesn’t say anything right away.
The silence feels heavy in Adora’s mind as she finds herself shuffling nervously.
“Hey Adora.” Catra’s raspy voice finally breaks the silence. She doesn't look angry or anything as Adora just stares back, still unsure of what to do, "I can hear you thinking, princess."

"Oh, yeah." Adora chuckles nervously as she untangles herself from Catra, "Sorry… I shouldn't have… uh…"
Catra pulls Adora in for a kiss, it's sloppy and pretty much one sided as Adora's brain pretty much explodes at whatever is happening, Catra leans back after the kiss, "You're an idiot."
"I… am." Adora nods slowly, "You… you kissed me…"
"Yep, still an idiot." Catra repeats.
Adora frowns, "I know!"
The pout on Adora's face has Catra grinning, "I got shot for you."
"I know!" Adora repeats, pouting even more before it softens, "I… stupid Betty!"
"Betty shot me?" Catra asks and Adora nods, "I'm going to kill her."
"Hold up there, kiddo!" Detective King walks in and Catra holds Adora in place from getting off the bed, "Don't go to admitting things that I can't unhear."
"You saw me… mmphf!" Adora's hand covers Catra's mouth.
Micah laughs, "Thank you, Adora."
Catra rips Adora's hand off her mouth, "Come on, you saw me… mmphf!"
"Catra!" Adora scolds, "Stop!"
Catra rolls her eyes as Micah steps closer to the bed, "I'm not here to take your statement. So, please do not make any."
"Ugh!" Adora pulls her hand off and wipes Catra's salvia back on the magicat's gown, "Really? You really licked my hand?!"
"Yes, really." Catra deadpans, "Now, where is that bitch, Betty?"
"She's dead." Adora quickly answers, "Octavia killed her."
"Damn." Catra visibly disappointed, "Oh well." She looks up to Micah, "You're that cop, right?"
"Detective. King. Micah, King." Micah introduces himself with a soft smile, "And what you did the other night was reckless and irresponsible." He starts to scold as Catra just looks at him a little amused at everything he's saying before he sighs, "But, you also somehow managed to neutralize Octavia and her crew. And go unnoticed by me, Bow and Entrapta."
"Oh, she knew. She just didn't say anything." Catra says matter of factly, “Don’t think I didn’t know it was you who was Adora’s contact all along.”

“What?” Micah asks completely stunned.
“Entrapta.” Catra says her friend’s name and Micah simply nods in understanding, “Did you really think I wouldn’t know?”
“Uh…”
“Wait! You knew all along!” Adora slaps Catra on the shoulder, “What about all that stuff you said?!”
“What about it?” Catra shrugs, “You fuck with me, and I fuck with you.”
“Catra!” Adora whines out, “Are you kidding me?!”
“No.” The magicat replies, “It’s not my fault that you decided to get into bed with me.”
Adora’s face goes red and she swallows hard, Micah turns his gaze away, “You lied to me.”
“You lied to me.” Catra retorts back.
“Was any of it true?” Adora asks with bated breath.
“Of course.”
“Which parts?”
“Uh, I think I’m going to go.” Micah cuts in but the pair aren’t paying any attention to him, “Alright, I’ll just go then…” as he is about to leave, he doubles back just like Entrapta did earlier and taps Adora on the shoulder, she turns her head to him quickly, “Bow’s fine too.”
“Oh. Thank you for letting me know.” Adora gives him a small smile as he quickly backs away when Catra cuts back in.
“I saved your boy friend’s life!” Catra starts to say.
“He’s not my boyfriend!”
“I didn’t mean it that way.” Catra rolls her eyes, “Besides, give me back my scarf.”
“No. It’s my scarf.” Adora argues.
“No, it’s not!” Catra argues right back, “It was mine when you left it in my car and then left my life.”
“That’s so not fair!” Adora scoffs, “I left you a note!”
“Yeah, and your girl friend decided not to deliver it.” Catra scoffs, “Real good friend.” The magicat say sarcastically.
“I left you another note!” Adora declares loudly like a trump card, “And I know you got it because I gave it to Gary to give to you.”

“Yeah? Well, I still fucking love you!” Catra growls out.
“Well, I still fucking love you too!” Adora retorts before they just stare at each other with heated looks, “Wait, what? You… you actually really do?”
“Yes, idiot.” Catra scoffs again, “I love you.”
“I love you too!” Adora repeats, grabbing Catra’s cheeks and kissing her, “I’m never fucking leaving you ever again!”
“You better fucking not!” Catra threatens before her face softens and she leans back in for more kisses and when they pull apart, she sniffs Adora, “Hey Adora?”
“Yeah?”
“I know I said you smell like home but… You could really use a bath.” Catra says with a shit eating grin before Adora shoves her away by the face, making the magicat break out in laughter, “Me too. Maybe nurse Penny can come back and give me a sponge bath.”
“Not happening!” Penny shouts out from just outside the door as she walks past, stopping in the doorway, “Also eat your food! I had to use a favour up for that!”
“Okay!” Catra shouts back before turning to Adora, “Join me for… whatever meal this is?”
Adora looks over at the tray, “Ooh! I call dibs on the pudding!”

One year later…

“I call top bunk!” Catra says as she walks into the cabin of the luxury train heading back to Bright Moon from the Zone, “Hey, princess. You remember how to set the bed up, right?”
“I’m not working, you ass!” Adora shoves a laughing Catra before bringing the magicat in for a kiss, “Mm… I don’t think I’m going to ever get used to that.”
Catra looks around the cabin, “Reckon this is the same mattress from the time we fucked on it?”
“Stars… Catra!” Adora blushes into her hands as someone knocks on the cabin door.
The pair both turn around as a familiar face greets them, “Ah! Wildcat and Gwen! It’s so good to see you again! Also,” he turns to Catra, “I hope you don’t still hate me…”

“You’re all good glitter Gary.” Catra brushes him off and he breathes out in relief, “It’s, uh, good to see you too.”
He smiles back, “So, I won’t actually be your attendant on this trip. But when I saw your name on the itinerary, I had to come see for myself.”
“All good, Gaz.” Catra walks over and pats him on the shoulder, “Also, meet Adora.”
“Adora.” Gary repeats with a smile, “Welcome aboard, Adora.”
“Thank you, Gary.” Adora goes over and hugs him, “Really, thank you. For everything.”
“You got it.” He smiles wider upon seeing the pair, “Okay! Well, I hope you have a great trip!”
“See you around, Gaz.” Catra says and he nods to leave.
“Why are we back here, Catra?” Adora asks as she pulls the magicat to sit down on the seat next to her, “We could have just flown back and it would have taken much less time and money.”
“I never got to experience this properly the first time.” Catra replies, “Plus your friend Sparkles, owes me big time as does Traps. So, I’m not turning down a free trip with all the bells and whistles.”
“Uh huh. So, you’re just taking advantage of our friends…” Adora concludes.
“No, not just that.” Catra replies as she pulls the red scarf off from around Adora’s neck, “I thought it’d be nice to actually experience and enjoy this trip without you working or being harassed by Betsy.”
“Betty.”
“Butthead.”
“Whatever. She’s a bitch.”
“Was.” Catra corrects.
“Was.” Adora agrees, “So… what do we do now?”
“Well…” Catra smiles mischievously, “How about you show me around my room?”
Adora laughs, “You’re ridiculous.”
The magicat just raises an eyebrow before goading the blonde, “Well, unless you’ve forgotten…”
“I have not!” Adora replies petulantly before straightening up,

“Fine. I can’t offer you a drink but… It’s pretty self explanatory.” Adora says mockingly in the way Catra had said to her the first time as she points out the few items in the room, “Seat slash bed. Bathroom. Window. Door. Do you need me to show you how the ensuite turns into a shower?”
“Now, who’s the ass?” Catra grins, pulling open the top bunk to reveal the bed before climbing up onto it and pulling Adora on it too.
“Catra! We can’t have this bed out this early into the trip!” Adora says as she tries and fails to get off the top bunk, “We’re going to get into trouble!”
“So?” Catra smirks, “Live a little, Gwen.”
“Ugh. Don’t call me that.” Adora groans.
“Fine. Live a little, Adora.” Catra repeats correctly, “And live the rest with me.”
“I plan to.” Adora leans in for a kiss and Catra grins wider, “But we really should get back down.”
“Nah. Gary will be fine with it.” Catra says as Gary walks past, peeking in and then shutting their door behind him, but not before poking his head back in, “Try to keep it PG until the train starts!”
“Just blame it on Gwen!” Catra calls back with a grin before she looks at a pouting Adora, “Don’t worry, princes. We’re going to sully Gwen’s name so bad, she’ll be fired before the end of the trip.”
“Gwen isn’t even working on this train.” Adora rolls her eyes.
“Eh, whatever.” Catra shrugs, “Gwen can go fuck herself. Let me fuck Adora.”
Adora laughs with a blush, “You heard Gary, not until after the train starts moving.”
“Ugh! Fine.” Catra flops back down onto the bed.
“Come on.” Adora pulls Catra off the top bunk, “I want to show you a really special feature of this cabin…” Catra quirks her eyebrow up at the blonde in curiosity, “But first… I need to lock the door and close the curtain… and…”
“And?”
“Put this do not disturb sign on the door.” Adora finishes with a glint in her eye.

“Are you the special feature?” Catra asks with a sly smile, “Because I think I already seen that feature.”
“Mm…” Adora leans in and presses a kiss on Catra’s lips, “I guess you have… but… how about an encore?”
“Yes please!” Catra nods enthusiastically, “I’ll even give you a standing ovation as long as you don’t disappear in at the end of the trip.”
Adora grimaces for a moment before Catra starts to cackles and pulls Adora in for another kiss.
The blonde takes a deep breath in, “I love you, Catra and I am never leaving you ever again.”
“I love you too.” Catra leans her forehead on Adora’s, “So... when do I get this… encore?”

Chapter End Notes

Well, I hope the twist at the end wasn't too much of a whiplash...
Side notes:
- Octavia didn't die but she's in prison with her crew for a really long time
- Bow survived the gun shot and recovered
- Glimmer apologised and offered to pay for all of Catra's 'vacation' bills and maybe some other stuff.
- Entrapta upped her security so Catra couldn't break into it (it didn't work)

Thanks for reading, kudos and comments.
It's been a long slog... and now I'm back to one fic left to finish...
Until then... wow, this year has gone real quick...

End Notes

Thank for reading!

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!