Strands of Pain

by AutisticValue

Summary

Entrapta has always been a reserved person and never knows how to handle emotions well.

When Hordak finds her alone, mask down and caressing her long pigtail, he knows that's never a good sign. He soon learns just how the Mermaid princess treats her at Castle Brightmoon.

Even Entrapta has limits, especially if you pull her extra sensitive hair.

Notes

See the end of the work for notes

Sitting in her Lab, Entrapta had her welding mask down as she slowly caressed one of her pigtails. Entrapta had her moments of vulnerability, not wanting to burden Hordak with her thoughts or feelings. But she really couldn't hold it together this time.

"Entrapta….?" Hordak came in, seeing Entrapta in this state. He knew when she had her mask down and was putting her fingers through her hair that something was obviously wrong. Immediately but slowly, he approached Entrapta, sitting down next to her. "Entrapta? What's wrong??? I won't know to help unless you tell me, Starlight." He turned to her as she continued to caress her hair with the mask down.

The last thing Entrapta wanted was to trouble Hordak, but seeing him full of worry like this, it was inevitable. She sighed, putting her pigtail behind her back as she lifted the mask.

What Hordak saw filled him with sorrow and rage. Entrapta was crying. Hordak rarely saw this, but when he did, he would always comfort her as best he could. This was no exception.

"Please tell me what's wrong. What happened? How can I help, starlight?" Hordak stated, caressing Entrapta's cheek. In response, Entrapta went into his hand like a touch starved puppy. She figured she should tell him now and get it over with.

"Okay…. Promise you won't get mad?" Entrapta stated, looking at Hordak.

"Of course not, Starlight." Hordak stated in response.

Entrapta sighed, gathering her thoughts. "Okay, well…. It first started at Bright Moon castle…."

Walking through the halls of Bright Moon castle, Entrapta was focused on her pad, working on a new project for Bright Moon and began running the calculations. She then walked past Mermista, who watched her doing her thing as usual.

"Hey Tech Princess." Mermista called out to her. "Hey! Tech Princess!" She yelled out again, to no avail. "ENTRAPTA!!!" She yelled again. Still nothing as Entrapta was focused on her pad. "Ugh!!!" She groaned, looking at Entrapta and getting an idea.

Immediately, Entrapta felt a shooting pain throughout her hair, like a million needles stabbing her head. "AHHHH!!!" She screamed in pain, turning around to where Mermista was pulling one of her pigtails.

"Finally, now I got your attention. Look tech princess, I wanted to talk to you about the rebuilding of Salineas. Discuss a few changes and stuff." She stared toward the purple haired princess, who was now gently rubbing her pigtail.

She looked at Mermista, wanting to say something about what she did, but decided not to.

"Yeah, sure…. We can discuss it after the meeting, I guess…." Entrapta replied.

"Great, see you later." Mermista said, turning around and leaving.

Entrapta sighed, going in her own direction, still rubbing the pigtail that was pulled. It hurt, it really did. Unbeknownst to everyone else, her hair was very sensitive, so pulling it was extra painful. She really wished Mermista would have just tapped her or found a better way to get her attention than pulling her hair.

This continued throughout the day, Entrapta being distracted and in response, Mermista pulling her hair to get her attention, each time Entrapta screaming with pain. She did it so often now, even Frosta started doing it. To say Entrapta was getting sick of this was an understatement. But she didn't want to confront anyone. She wasn't the type for confrontation, only letting her frustrations out in her work or other means. But this wasn't something she could ignore.

Soon after, there was another meeting being discussed and of course, Entrapta was distracted on her pad. When it was her turn to speak, she didn't hear them call her name. So, in turn, both Mermista and Frosta pulled her hair in their seats next to her. Once again, a shooting pain she couldn't ignore. At that point, Entrapta had enough.

"ENOUGH! STOP IT! THAT HURTS!!!" Entrapta immediately yelled, slamming her hands on the table, leaving both princesses taken aback. "How would you like it if I pulled your hair?!?! My hair is sensitive! I can feel every single strand! It's like you're tearing me limb from limb!!!!" She yelled loudly.

She huffed with anger and frustration. Then, when she finally calmed down, she noticed everyone at the meeting looking at her with shock. Blushing with embarrassment, she put her welding mask down and left, gathering her stuff and quickly leaving.

It was then that everyone else turned their attention back to Mermista and Frosta, though mostly Mermista. From their faces, it was obvious what they thought. Eyebrows furrowed and angry. This time, it was Mermista to blush in embarrassment.

Back in the present, Hordak sat in silence, processing what she had told him.

"I see…." He stated. His thoughts filled with nothing but anger at what Entrapta endured. He knew the mermaid princess could be cruel and unjust to Entrapta with the way she treated her, but this was on another level. He knew how sensitive her hair was, he was probably the only one she would tell. He forced every fiber of his being not to confront the princess himself. But he sighed, promising his partner not to be upset and if Hordak was anything, he was someone of his word.

"I am…. proud of you. You stood up for yourself and said what needed to be said. There is nothing else you could do." He turned to her, putting his hand to Entrapta's cheek once again. "Be proud, Starlight."

Entrapta smiled at this, leaning into his hand. "Thanks Hordak, you always know what to say." She said, lifting herself up to kiss him. She then quickly got off her seat, her usual upbeat self. "Right then! No time to be moping around! We have lots to do!"

She was about to start getting to work when she heard the doorbell go off. She installed one in her castle so that no one could enter and get lost but instead she could come get them.

Making her way to the castle entrance, Entrapta opened the metal doors and found Mermista there, waiting.

Immediately her hair lowered, looking at the ocean princess.

"Oh….hello…." Entrapta stated, looking nervously.

Mermista also looked around nervously, like she was trying to find the right words to say. "Listen Tech-"

"What are you doing here?!?! After all the grief that you have caused Entrapta, you DARE to come here, to our home and continue your abuse?!?!" Hordak interrupted, seeing who was at the front entrance. He had promised Entrapta not to get mad, but he had promised the water princess no such thing.

In response, Mermista groaned, rubbing her face. "Look, I'm trying to-"

"Enough! Leave at once before I-"

"Hordak stop" Entrapta interrupted this time. "Let her finish." She said, turning to Mermista. "Go on."

“Oh uh….” Mermista said nervously, groaning in her usual way. “Ugh….Look, I’m sorry Entrapta. I should’ve realized pulling your hair was not a great thing to do. Back when I did it the first time, when we were trying to find glimmer’s signal at one of prime’s locations, I guess it was the only way to get you to listen to me, but I guess I should’ve listened to you too. Since then, I’ve pulled your hair to get your attention a lot and I’m sorry. Frosta’s sorry too, she was just copying me. I promise I’ll find a better way to get your attention from now on.” Mermista stated.

Entrapta stood there a moment, processing her words. She put her hair over her shoulder and began to rub it in thought. She then looked toward Mermista, smiling.

“I forgive you…” She stated. “Would you….like to discuss those changes to your kingdom now? I have the blueprints in my lab.”

Mermista smiled. “Yeah….That would be great.
Thanks….Entrapta.”

She then walked inside the castle as the doors closed.
