Day Zero

by LumaLord

Summary

College kicks up and Adora and Catra find themselves roped in with the Best Friends Squad. But as Catra and Adora turns sour, will Adora have anyone to lean on, and may there be more to the BFS than first thought

Notes

Hey, I've got a bit of a Glimmadora itch so I'm filling the void by writing my first thing on here, hope you all enjoy and I'm very open to criticism.

Chapter 1

The college year starts with gentle wind of Autumn blowing Adora's hair across her face. As she came into building she took off her coat and leaned against the wall. Soon after the person Adora was waiting for finally arrived, Catra. Catra flicked the taller girls forehead. "I thought you'd be waiting outside"
"Yea well it's freezing out there and this building is pretty warm" she defended, crossing her arms. Catra sighed and headed to the door of the canteen which had orientation rooms. "Welp, shockingly Political Science and literature aren't in the same room so I'll see ya at lunch" she said before placing a kiss on Adora's cheek. "Have fun with the professional book club!", and before Adora could retort, Catra was gone. That's the thing about Catra, she always got in her dig last no matter what but Adora didn't mind a bit of teasing.

Adora checked the listing and found the room she was meant to be in and after spending about 15 minutes fumbling around the college, she found it. Orientation had already begun and the blonde awkwardly waved at the lecturer. After not being scolded for dear life, she slotted in the middle of the lecture hall next to a rather uninterested looking woman. She leaned in and whispered "Hi, I'm Adora"
"Mermista"
Satisfied that she had made a new best friend she actually decided to listen to her lecturer. Her notebook was scrawled with roughly what the course would entail, broken up by doodles. Getting up to go to their next room, Adora listens to Mermista (her new bff for life) talk to another girl to sus out the dynamic. The other girl, another blonde looks at Adora and holds out her hand "Perfuma!" she says with a smile. Adora grips her hand maybe a little too tight and nods "Nice to meet ya, I'm Adora!". They all vaguely head in the direction of their room but upon arrival there isn't a convenient row of 3 seats for them to sit in.
"Uuugh whatever. I'll take the fall, you owe me Perfuma" Mermista said sarcastically (?) before sitting next to a girl with short purple and pink hair. Adora has to admit, she caught her eye.

Halfway through the class Adora found herself not having paid an ounce of attention, instead deciding to distract Catra through an onslaught of texts and videos. She gets a strange sense of satisfaction of seeing the "read" icon continuously popping up next to the videos. Even without Catra replying, Adora knows she's definitely distracting her, which is where all the fun is after all. She looked at her own notebook to find it blank, then looked to her side to see Perfuma had it perfectly laid out with dates of exams, class tests and what's expected, so not wanting to fall behind Adora diligently copies her layout and notes shamelessly. Once again the class ends uneventfully, Mermists saying goodbye to the new people she was forced to sit with and meeting back up with Adora and Perfuma.

Food. The canteen is ripe with chatter, people and the smell of freshly cooked food. As the three girls are all chatting amongst themselves Adora sends a quick text to Catra. "Hey, I'm at the canteen"
"I'm pissing can you come to the bathrooms?"
"Near the canteen?"
"Oh, no by the back"
"2 seconds"
Adora excuses herself and begins to walk down the hallway. "Oh hey…uhm Adora isn't it?" Adora looked confused before her eyes landed on a girl with short purple hair. "Uhm…hi…? Who are you?"
The girl looked a bit embarrassed as the boy she was with came up behind her. "Oh right yes, I'm Glimmer and this is Bow. You….are Adora right? Or are you the other friend Mermista was on about?"
"No you're right. I'm Adora, are you in my course too?"
She nodded "yea that's how I know Mermista, I love the little hair poof you have going on by the way"
Adora had a proud smirk on her face and nodded "Yea, it's kind of like my thing yknow"
"HEY ADORA!" she heard coming from the other end of the hallway. Bow and Glimmer turned to look and Catra walked over to her, wrapping her arm around her. “I thought you’d forgotten about me. Who’s your little buddies”

“Oh right, yes this is Glimmer and Bow, they’re in my course.” She then turns to Glimmer and Bow, both who are very confused. “And this is my girlfriend Catra” she said, pleased to now have a whole squad of best friends. “Fuck, lunch is almost over” Glimmer groaned. Bow looked at her a bit concerned “Have you eaten yet or are you operating off of spite again”
“Oh fuck off”
“I think that’s an answer…?” Adora said, hoping her banter wouldn’t be seen as awkward. Glimmer looked at her and let out a snort. “Cmon we have to go. It was nice meeting you Catra” she said before putting a hand on Adora’s shoulder “But we seriously got to go”. Catra stole a peck from Adora before letting her off. Adora waved back “Talk to ya later!” she waved before being pulled into a classroom.

Glimmer and Bow sat next to a girl with short white hair who was honestly. She eagerly extended her hand out to Adora “Hi! I’m Scorpia! Are you part of our little group?” Adora took a second to respond. “Hi uh, yea I guess..I’m Adora…” she said before taking a seat next to Glimmer who whispers “She’s a total softie despite how she looks”, causing Adora to nod in agreement. Bow requested Adoras contact and when she gave it, she got a notification saying “You have been added to ‘The Best Friend Squad’ by Bow”. Maybe this new college life would actually be fun.

Best Friends Squad

Chapter Summary

> Glimmer POV. She reminisces over her first day at college and properly meets Catra.

Chapter Notes

> Thank you all for reading this fic, I had no idea it would gain any traction but here's chapter 2!!!

Glimmer spent her walk home with Bow rambling about the course, how cool the building is, Scorpia, Adora, how excited she is for classes, and most importantly the food. Bow was on board, enjoying her rambles filled with passion. Bow got a text and a frown grew onto his face.

“I hate to do this, but my dads are asking if I can come home today instead of to your place”

“Really? I mean I guess it does make sense, but you better call me the second you get the chance mister. I am not done!”

“I will I will. I’ll talk to you later Glimmer!”

And with that, Bow parted ways. Glimmer walked the streets of Brightmoon at a crawl, before landing before her home. She took in a deep breath, opened the door and-

“Glimmah!”

Angella, her mother, called out. Glimmer wordlessly followed the voice and entered her kitchen where her father Micah was sitting as well.

“How was your first day in big school?”

Micah asked, a teasing edge to his voice.

“It was fine, I’m just exhausted. Oh uh Bow couldn’t come over ‘cause of his dads”

Angella, not even looking at the girl replied with,

“I do not want you hanging out upstairs every day with him after college, you do need to study and that’s more important than your silly friends”

“Yes yes mom I know”

Glimmer had heard that a thousand times. It was all bullshit to her, how could some stupid test scores be more important than the friends you make. She elected to not tell her mother about Scorpia, and definitely not about that Adora girl she met. Her mother would never shut up about how both “its great to have friends that aren’t Bow” but also “watch your back and make sure they don’t drink or smoke or deal drugs”.

Glimmer ate dinner mostly silently, idly talking about the schedule for the course and her mother hammering home how utterly important study was every time the mention of the word ‘test’ escaped her lips. She was glad to head upstairs, throw off her clothes and get changed into something more comfy. Before she knew it, Glimmer was out cold leaving poor Bow without another 8 hour ramble.

Going to sleep early means one thing, waking up early. Glimmer arose at about half 5 and groaned. She sauntered downstairs as quietly as possible to sneak a bowl of cereal before she got ready, texted Bow good morning (and a sorry that she totally passed out), and picked out her outfit. The sun was sweltering so she decided on her short sleeve jacket with all the pins on it and some jeans before heading off. Was it too early? Absolutely. But if it meant no awkward morning talks with her mother then she’d make that trade.

She arrived at the college, sitting at an empty table in the canteen before someone else sat across from her.

“Hey Glitter”

Glimmers head perked up to see Adora’s girlfriend, Catra.

“Oh it’s Glimmer, Catra…right?”

“Literacy thank you. And Adora never mentioned what you studied”

“Political Science, I wanna do something useful out of this dump”

Glimmer cleared her throat, not wanting to make enemies with a new friends girlfriend, she shifted the conversation.

“So you and Adora, how long have you guys been a couple”

“Oh like uh, I think a year?”

“Uh, for your own sake I think you should know for sure”

Glimmer said with a bit of a chuckle, but also concern in her voice. Catra didn’t return any laughter but shrugged.

“Oh Adora isn’t the sentimental type. We don’t make a big deal out of stuff like that”

“Right. So uh, how’d you guys meet?”

“School. I thought she was hot and she was into me so….”

Glimmer nodded absently. Maybe it was just that Glimmer doesn’t know her. She’s bound to be different with Adora.

“What about you and crop top hm?

Glimmer looked at her a bit surprised. It took a second for the words to register in her brain.

“Bow? Me and him are not like that at all. We’ve been friends since we were kids so we could not think of each other like that”

Catra cracked a smile and leaned on the table looking up at Glimmer.

“Oh you swing the other way don’t ya? I mean I should’ve guessed by the hair”

“I swing for both thank you very much. And what’s wrong with my hair?”

“Its just very colourful. Why are you embarrassed?”

Was Catra flirting with her? No. She was just misreading things right? Glimmer excused herself to go to the bathroom and texted Bow.

“Hey could you lmk if Catra does anything weird?”

“Whyyyyy?”

“Idk just my gut”

She said before letting out a deep sigh. After a few minutes Glimmer came back, Bow and Adora having joined the table. Catra was practically on Adora’s lap which soothed Glimmer’s mind yet, something still told her in the back of her mind that something wasn’t right that she couldn’t put her finger on. However, it wasn’t her place to interject in a relationship between two people she’s barely known a day. She sat down with them and tried to ignore that feeling but it wouldn’t go away.

Heading to classes Glimmer and Adora were a few steps of Bow who was engaged in conversation with Scorpia, who had arrived late.

“So I was talking with Catra earlier”

“Oh? What about”

“Just getting to know each other y’know? You’ve been with her about a year right?”

“A year and 2 months yea. Catra’s great, but don’t let anything she says get to you. She doesn’t mean a lot of it”

“Yea I get it. I can be a bitch when I wanna be”

Glimmer let out and awkward laugh and looked back at Bow concerned. He nodded, he heard the conversation. I mean, she trained Bow well to be a prime ease dropper when it was needed, and boy was it needed now. Her mind couldn’t shake this almost sinking feeling she got in her stomach. There was something odd about Catra, but what?

Chapter 3

Chapter Summary

Glimmer gets her first gay panic

Chapter Notes

I did not expect nearly a hundred people to read this but uhm, thank you!!!

A week into college and Adora has finally found her footing. She's found herself not hanging out with Mermista's crowd although she does talk to them when she can. Her days were mostly filled with Glimmer, Bow, Scorpia and the odd appearance of Catra at lunches. Due to this, her and Catra have made the effort to meet up after, so Adora has been staying in the heart of Hordeston.

"Hey Dora you cool to hang out with me 'n bow"

Adora looked down at her phone and then over at Catra, sprawled out on the couch with her heterochromatic eyes glued to whatever show had been put on for the night. She replied back,

"Uh, when are you thinking Glim?"

"We're thinking of having a movie night tonight. Scorps is coming down pleeeeeeeeease"

Adora’s smile grew as she thought about a proper movie night with friends. Catra’s eyes met her and she leaned up.

“Hey what’s gotten you all smiley hm?”

“Oh Glimmer wants me to come over to have a movie night”

Catra nodded, turning her attention to her nails as she continued the conversation

“Yea you should go, I’ll keep the bed warm for you”

“You’re not gonna come?”

Catra shrugged as she once again turned her attention to the TV.

“Being in that close proximity to glitzy and crop top isn’t exactly my idea of a fun night, but go”

Adora had a bit of a frown but leaned over and kissed Catra’s forehead,

“If you’re sure about it. Tomorrow night though is all us”

Catra nodded in agreement as Adora got her things. She shot a quick "love you" before leaving. The second she closed the door she decided it might be a good idea to text Glimmer she was coming, which was then followed up 5 minutes later with Adora realising she had not a clue where Glimmer lived.

Glimmer and Bow were preparing snacks, blankets, pieces of paper for the democratic movie vote (that can now happen seeing as it's more than the Glimbow combo) and the list. Scorpia arrived a bit early and had a scorpion plush snuggled beneath her arm. They moved into Glimmer's room and began the general chatting about classes and the course and whatnot until the doorbell rang again.

"IT'S OPEN, WE'RE UPSTAIRS"

Glimmer shouted. Adora let herself in, taking off her shoes before heading up to meet the rest of them. Candyman, Nightmare on Elm Street, Saw, Jigsaw. These were the four movies that Glimmer had expertly chosen. The voting was done and Glimmer tallied them up, she eyed up the voters. Glimmer, of course, did not vote to keep things as incorrupt as possible; very socialist of her. She announced the winner of the vote to be the 1992 Candyman. Adora let out a 'woo' and Scorpia high-fived her. Bow, however, looked less pleased with this outcome, his vote for Jigsaw being outdone. Glimmer squeezed in between Bow and Adora, excited. She adored this movie even though it scared her shitless. The movie got going as tensions rose, Glimmer found herself leaning on Adora, her grip tightening more and more and then…

“AH JESUS FUCK-“

Adora jumped as well, but not because of the movie but because of Glimmer. She put a hand on the girl's shoulder and looked down at her.

“Glim, are you sure you like horror movies..?”

Glimmer goes stiff, her eyes meeting Adora and she goes to speak but can only offer a nod followed by a dry “uh huh”. Adora was very satisfied with this answer and regained her focus on the movie but something in Glimmer changed. Her heart was pounding in her chest her face felt hotter and her hands were practically dripping sweat but it wasn’t the movie, it can’t be…

Adora and Scorpia headed home after the movie and Glimmer was still tense. Bow looked across at her, he didn’t say a word yet asked a million questions. She face planted onto her pillow and groaned.

“Do you think they enjoyed it? Was I a good host?”

“That’s not what this is about”

Glimmers lips pressed together. She hated that he could read her like this. Why did he have to be so observant with his stupid brain and stupid little tendency to be a good friend, it was frustrating, this whole night seemed to be turning that way.

"I'm just…I worry about Adora. Don't you think it's odd Catra didn't show up? She didn't even ask if she could-"

"Glimmer-"

"-like I dunno it just seems like she wants nothing to do with Adora. Do you get that?"

"Glimmer-"

"She doesn't spend lunch with us, hardly replies to the girls texts. I mean what's up with that?"

"Glimmer, please"

"Hm?"

Her eyes finally met Bow's, completely unaware of the tangent she'd just gone on.

“Look, I know Adora is our friend but we can’t go making bold statements about Catra. We’ve known the girl a week and you’ve barely spoken to Catra like at all”

“Not like she gives me much of a chance”

“Don’t”

Bow’s words were firm yet Glimmer knew he was right. She couldn’t go meddling in Adora’s love life because of a hunch. She let out a deep sigh and nodded.

“Sorry, please don’t tell Adora”

“I won’t. And I’m sure if Adora needed us to help her she’d come to us”

Glimmer nodded as she got into bed and Bow pulled out the spare mattress that might as well be his own bed. It was odd; usually the feeling in Glimmer’s stomach would have been gone by now, that knot untied by the reminder that Adora is fine yet something still bugged her, something she can’t explain. She decided to try to ignore it and get to sleep, it has to just be the popcorn she ate…..right?

Sleepover

Chapter Summary

Catra is grumpy, Adora is sleepy and Glimmer is very gay.

Chapter Notes

SO SORRY I ABANDONED THIS BUT I'M BACK WITH A VENGENCE. I THINK MY WRITING HAS IMPROVED SO ENJOY

Adora snuck in, trying to not wake Catra who, at this point, was hopefully asleep. She placed her keys in the bowl and headed up to her bedroom. She closed the door slowly, trying to keep quiet.

"Hey, Adora. Nice of you to come home." Catra said, her eyes now piercing the darkness. Adora looked at her a bit confused.

"I said I was gonna be out all night, did you miss me that much?" Adora retorted, the last part having a bit of sarcasm tacked on.

Catra hummed in response, giving Adora a look, a look Adora knew all too well. Something was brewing. Catra was tired and grumpy and Adora was not...not in the form to deal with a whiny Catra right now. She had a good night with her friends, she wanted to come home and go to sleep.

"Just didn't realise it would be all night but, fuck me I guess."

"Catra, please..."

"No. It's fine Adora. It is." Catra lied back down on the bed. Adora's brow cocked, hoping Catra was way too tired to do this now.

"But like, a text would be nice you know?"

Oh if only Adora could be so lucky.

Adora let out a heavy sigh, pinching the bridge of her nose. If she concedes, she's not going to hear the end of this for a week but if not...then she'd be camping out on the couch. And as far as Adora can tell, Catra has already positioned it so it wont be her.

"Look, Catra. We both knew I was gonna be out, right? Let's not turn this into a thing."

"A thing?"

Here we go...

"Yes, a thing! It doesn't need to be a whole production that I went out. You could have come you know?"

"Oh so it's my fault is it?" Catra spat back sitting up on the bed. She was in 'fight mode' and now theres no turning back. Adora either retires to the couch early or stands her ground.

"Catra, that's not what I'm saying. I just don't get why you're so pissed off."

"Because you didn't tell me when you were coming home."

Adora stood there for a second in silence, trying to collect her thoughts. I mean Catra had a bit of a point but there was no need to have such a row over it. No, she'd stand her ground. She told Catra she'd be home late. Hell she didn't even know when she would be home.

"Look, I didn't know when I was coming home. It's not like I planned to stay the night y'know. Or else I would've let you know."

"Maybe you should stay the night, since you seem to like your 'best-friend squad so much!" Catra's voice had a venom to it. A venom that Adora hadn't heard from her in the entire time they had been dating.

"Is...is that what this is about. Catra are you jealous?"

"Jea...? What? Adora...." The rage in Catra's face was reaching a boiling point. And then the floodgates burst.

"Jealous?!? Why would I be!? Are you fucking hiding something from me? Yknow what, I don't fucking care. I...Go stay with glitter or whatever her fucking name is!"

Adora was...taken aback. "Fine..." she said before grabbing her things and storming out. She felt her throat tighten and her stomach pulling itself into knots. She got in her truck and gripped the steering wheel. She swallowed her tears, her feelings, and turned on the ignition. The car came to life and Adora waited a second before backing up, letting the car warm up.

Glimmer's phone rang in the middle of a conversation with Bow.

"Who's that?" He asked peaking over her shoulder. Glimmer saw Adora's name and answered immediately. "Adora. What's up?"

There was a pause, a noticeable pause, and then Adora spoke. "You'll never guess what happened. I forgot my keys and Catra fell asleep so Im totally locked out of my apartment. If it's no trouble..."

Glimmer had peaked out of her window and saw Adora's car. She let out a sigh, cutting Adora off. She knew she was full of shit. Adora had her keys, she saw them. "Get out of your car and come in. I'll make hot chocolate and get you something to sleep in." She said, frankly a bit more flat than shs would've liked to but, she couldn't change it now.

Adora hung up and awkwardly walked in. Everything Adora did seemed to be a bit...awkward. It was endearing in a weird, dorky way. A weird way that made Glimmer smile. "C'mon. Let's get you warmed up."

Glimmer elected to ignore the obvious gaps in Adora's story for now. If she wanted to tell her, she would have. Clearly something happened and right now Glimmer's main priority was cheering Adora up. She made Bow help her brew up the hot chocolate, and while he was finishing it off, Glimmer ran to her bedroom to grab some of her PJ's. She went over to Adora and handed them to her.

"Here, I just hope they fit." Glimmer said a bit nervous. Adora and Glimmer couldn't have more different bodies, a fact that was currently making Glimmer feel very self conscious.

Adora leaned forward, wrapping her arms around Glimmer. Glimmer was...suprised but wasn't going to complain that she was able to indulge in this. She wrapped her arms around Adora like a vice grip, being totally enveloped in her warmth, her touch, and her scent. Adora let out a long sigh, before resting her head on Glimmer's shoulder.

"Thanks Glim..."

Glimmer gave a soft hum in response, before rubbing the back of Adora's hair. If she didn't think something was up before, she knew there was now. After a while of just, holding her, Glimmer spoke up.

"Your keys are in your jacket aren't they?"

Adora gave a nod in response.

"Wanna talk about it?"

She shook her head.

"Okay. You're okay Adora. Just...let me know if I gotta kick someone's ass okay?"

Adora let out a soft laugh and took a step back. "Thanks Glim. And no, I'm not going to have you beating anyone up." Glimmer gave a dramatic sigh in response.

"All my talent in hand-to-hand combat is going to waste." She said before turning to walk out. She looked back at Adora and couldn't wipe the smile off her own face. "Get changed, 'kay? I'm going to make sure Bow isn't burning the hot chocolate."

Adora nodded and Glimmer headed downstairs. She was equal parts ecstatic and pissed off. She went down to Bow (who had not burnt any hot chocolate) and spoke in almost a whisper.

"It's Catra, I know it is. That bitch"

"Glimmer again?" He asked, his face pleading with her to stop. She refused.

"Yes, think about it. Adora has her keys, she shows up here needing a place to crash. I reckon they broke up." She said, sounding confident in her assessment.

"No..." Bow said, his voice warning Glimmer to stop that train of thought. "No, no. You need to operate on the assumption that her and Catra are doing well. Okay?"

Glimmer nodded, she knew he was right. She couldn't afford to be selfish here it wasn't right.

"Yeah. I just...she's not doing well. I can see that." Bow nodded in agreement with her as he grabbed two of the mugs.

"I know. I'm worried too but, she'll tell us in time. Now grab her drink, lovebird"

Glimmer sighed. "I am not into her. Just worried!"

Bow just laughed in response with infuriated Glimmer. She decided to drop it for now and headed up to Adora, Bow following behind her. Thankfully, Glimmer's PJ's fit Adora, and she looked very comfy.

The night went on pretty smoothly, drinking their hot chocolate and idly chatting. Bow fell asleep first and the two girls got quieter, not wanting to wake him.

Glimmer looked over at Adora, who's mood had seemingly sullen. "You...wanna talk about it yet?" She asked, scooting a bit closer to her.

Adora let out a groan. "Catra..." she began.

I fucking knew. I fucking CALLED it!

"...it's like she was jealous? She's never been jealous like that."

That...shocked Glimmer. "Jealous? Of what?"

Adora shrugged. "Throughout all of our fights, I've never seen her like that. It was weird."

Glimmer nodded, taking in what, Adora was saying. She didn't want to overstep but...she had a million questions. "Do...you guys fight often?"

"Every couple fights, right?" Adora looked like she was asking for approval more than making a statement. Glimmer shook her head.

"People say that but I don't think that's true. I think good couples talk to each other you know?"

Adora slowly nodded. "Catra...isn't the type to talk about her feelings much."

"Maybe you need to worry about you a bit more then." Glimmer said, then immediately regretted. The silence fell over them again and Adora rubbed her eyes. "What...do you mean by that?" She asked. There was something sincere in Adora's voice.

"I...maybe. I mean I don't know your relationship perfectly but...maybe. If you can, stop making excuses for Catra and...focus on making you happy. Ask yourself if you're living the life you really want to." Glimmer had not meant to lecture Adora but the words came falling out of her mouth.

Adora nodded. "Maybe. Thanks Glim. I'm gonna try get some sleep now." She said, giving a small smile.

Glimmer nodded and turned over. "Goodnight then.."

"You need to operate on the assumption that her and Catra are doing well. Okay?"

He knew. Of course Bow knew, Glimmer knew too. Why did she have to have a crush on the one girl who's taken?

Relaxation

Adora headed into college with Glimmer and Bow the next day. Her head was fuzzy, going over a million different ways that seeing Catra could go. Glimmer and bow could sense how tense she was, her back stiff as a board and eyes darting every which way, they didn’t have to guess who she was looking out for. Heading into the canteen, Adora spotted her, their eyes met. The shorter girl hopped up and walked over to the group.

"Hey, Adora~!" Catra almost whispered. It was odd, Adora was expecting to be ignored, or worse.

"Uh, Catra! Hi. I didn't think..." Adora began, confused as to her girlfriends nonchalant demeanour. Catra cut her off with a cackle.

"Adora, do you think I'm still mad? You're so fucking dramatic sometimes you know?" She said before wrapping her arms around Adora's upper arm. Adora felt stupid, like she had gotten all worked up over nothing. Part of that was relief that there wasnt a fight so Adora elected to focus on that. She let out a sigh.

"I guess so, huh?" Adora said giving Catra a smile. She looked over at her friends beside her, Bow looked relieved but there was something about Glimmer's face. Glimmer looked up at Adora and smiled but it felt off, like she was fighting the urge to scream.

The group sat down, Catra basically clinging on to Adora like a baby ape. Adora was glad the drama's were over at least.

"Well, I'm starving. Anyone want anything?" Glimmer asked, standing up. Glimmer didn't eat too much for breakfast today, partially because there wasn't enough there for all three of them which Adora felt pretty bad about. She shook her head. "All good Glim, go eat."

Catra sneered and Adora looked down at her a bit curious. "You okay Catra? You did eat today didn't you?"

Catra looked away from Glimmer and up at Adora. "Hm? Oh yeah. Of course I ate, why?"

Adora nodded, "Just checking in." There was a scheme forming in Catra's head, Adora was nearly sure of it. She just couldn't figure out what. Her thinking was cut off by the sound of crinkling plastic being placed in front of her. She looked down and saw a chocolate chip cookie, like the type you'd get at Subway that they served at the canteen. Glimmer looked at Adora, flashing her a proper smile.

"Glimmer..." Adora whined. "I said I was fine."

"You're a big girl." Glimmer said, which wasn't untrue. Adora was the tallest out of the group. "A single egg and a slice of toast isn't going to sustain a big girl like you."

Catra let out a chuckle at Glimmer's comment. Adora groaned and took the cookie. "I'll pay you back, promise Glim"

"Oh my god, Adora, pay me back by eating the thing." She said sitting down. Glimmer looked all too pleased with herself as Adora began eating her cookie. It was good, she just wished Glimmer didn't have to stick her neck out so much for a girl she barely knows. At least the dramas had stopped. Catra actually seemed to be enjoying Glimmer and Bow's company.

The clock struck 10am and Adora, Glimmer and Bow got up. "Ok Catra, we're off. I'll talk to you at home?" She asked, trying to see if she was still permitted to sleep in the apartment she payed for.

"Yeah, see you then Adora. Later losers" she remarked. Adora waved at her and walked to her first lecture. Glimmer and bow were a few feet ahead whispering about something. She, admittedly, was curious. However, if they wanted her to know, they'd tell her.

The rest of the day was uneventful. Adora arrived back at her apartment and heard a strange voice. A head poked out of her and Catra's bedroom, a girl with a sandy-brown complexion with long purple hair strung up into pigtails. "Oh, hi! Adora, right?" The girl said running over to Adora. She grabbed her hand shaking it. "Entrapta, I'm doing a project with Catra!"

Adora nodded. She talked...fast. Adora composed herself and smiled at Entrapta. "It's nice to meet you. Where's Catra?" And on cue, Catra emerged. She looked like she had just woken up, her hair was a mess.

"Hey, Adora. Sorry I forgot to tell you I'd be having guests. Assignments you know?" Catra's voice had a hint of teasing to it. Adora's stomach was feeling weird again but she didn't actually know why.

"Yeah uhm. Y'know, if you want I could uhm, keep busy to give you two space to work?" Adora said a but unsure. Catra looked like she lit up with excitement.

"Really? Adora thank you, you're the best!" Catra said, admittedly more excited than Adora had seen her in ages. She grabbed her things and some money before heading out.

Adora drove to a take out place. Got an order of chicken and drove to Glimmer's place. She knocked on the door and Glimmer answered, Bow noticeably absent. Glimmer looked at Adora...strangely.

"Someone order food?" Adora asked, a goofy smile on her face. Glimmer let out a laugh. "Come in, come in, you fucking dork." Glimmer said letting Adora come inside.

Adora nodded and set down the food. There was way too much for the two of them. Regardless, they began eating. It was good, and for once Adora didn't feel like a parasite.

"So where's Bow?" Adora asked, curiously.

"Oh he's at home with his dads, they said they could use an extra pair of hands at home. Repainting it" Glimmer explained. Adora nodded, continuing her food. After a few minutes, Glimmer perked up.

"What brings you here? Shouldn't you be with Catra?" Glimmer asked, her brow raising.

Adora nodded. "Yeah...an assignment came up. Kinda a group thing you know so she has her partner there."

"You don't look too happy." Glimmer noted.

"I...Im fine just..."

Glimmer let out a sigh. "Talk to me. Cmon its not good to let this stuff fester."

Adora nodded. "I think she knows I'll overthink it. It's fine, teasing is in her nature."

"Not when it makes you feel this bad." Glimmer argued. Adora knew she was partially right but, it was just how Catra was.

"It's fine Glimmer. Don't worry about it. This is her way of getting back at me for last night."

"But you didn't do anything last night!" Glimmer protested.

"Glimmer. It's fine. I'm okay. Entrapta knows about me so it's not like she's cheating." Adora said defensively. Glimmer, reluctantly, agreed to drop it. The more she learned about Catra she less she liked her. But if Adora was sure, she wasn't going to try change her mind.

The two girls had ended up falling asleep on Glimmers couch. Adora heard the buzzing of Glimmer's phone. She groaned and woke up, careful not to disturb Glimmer. She went to Glimmer's kitchen and checked her fridge. Eggs and bread. Time for eggy bread.

By the time Glimmer had woken up and Adora put a plate of french toast in front of her, draped in syrup. Glimmer groaned. "I did shopping yesterday, glad to see you're putting it to good use." She said before taking a bite. Adora let out a chuckle. Adora looked at her phone reluctantly and saw a message from Catra.

"Hey, Adora. You probably fell asleep. Traps stayed over last night so it worked out. See you at uni"

Adora breathed a sigh of relief, there was no drama. She could relax.
