The Best Friend Squad blink into existence inside Brightmoon's mess hall at the middle of the breakfast shift. Catra wasn't expecting the teleport and is a bit queasy. Adora holds her and gently rubs her back.

Glimmer is just jumping at their side, unable to contain her giddy joy. She happily skips towards a table, completely unaware of the panicked expression Catra and Adora share.

"Party! Yeah!! Where are you going to celebrate it? What're you gonna wear?! Oh, oh! When are you going to celebrate it?!"

Bow just massages his temple trying to think of something to do to contain his wife's excitement.

He notices Catra's lack of color. Even at the labyrinth in the Heart of Etheria she wasn't this pale.

"Glimmer, dear." He tries not to sound too exasperated. "Our friends just got engaged. Maybe cut them some slack?"

Adora desperately tries to escape the situation, hoping to offer some relief to her fiancé. "Give us a couple of months to think about it, Glimmer. You do know we were asleep in bed, like, fifteen minutes ago, right?" She nervously chuckles, hoping it was enough to satisfy the queen for now.

"Oh, right, right, sorry. I get excited with these things, you know? It's not every day your best friends get engaged!"

Adora smiles back at Catra as she does in kind, earning them a couple of "awww"s from their friends. Catra just gives them the finger in response as she pulls Adora in by the collar for a passionate kiss.

Glimmer decides to give them a moment as she scurries around Bow to sit down at the table, ordering breakfast for the group. She can't help but feel ecstatic about how much fun they are going to have organising everything.

Bow notices his wife visibly starting to glow with magic and can't avoid a chuckle. "Dear, you are doing the thing again"

Glimmer attempts to dismiss her husband, with no luck, as he just continues to grin."What are you talking about, don't be stupid, I don't glow!" She protests.

Catra and Adora join their friends just as the glow subsides.

"What was Sparkles sparkling about? Are you alright?" Catra questions with concern in her voice.

“I don—” Glimmer sighs, defeated as she rubs her temples, “I was just excited about helping you plan the wedding and apparently —” Glimmer looks around a little worried. The waiter carrying their order is still some meters away and luckily lizardfolk hearing is not one of the best out there. She continues in a lower tone, trying to hide her blossoming blush. “Bow has noticed that sometimes when I’m excited I start to sparkle a bit.”

Catra hides her smirk by taking a sip of the coffee being handed to her while Adora looks at her friend with a surprised expression that moments later ends up turning into a shit-eating grin.

“Do you mean that… when you and Bow, you know… get busy , you sparkle and glow?” Adora asks.

Glimmer tries to hide behind her hands as Adora looks around trying to understand if she made some kind of mistake.

Catra barely manages to look away before spitting out her coffee in a fit of uncontrollable laughter. “Oh, stars, Sparkles!! You are not living this one down!” Catra says, still laughing.

A member of the kitchen staff, the lizardfolk from before, approaches them and proceeds to clean Catra’s mess.“Is everything ok? Was the coffee too strong? I always advise to sweeten it a bit for magicats.”

“Don’t worry, everything is perfect. Catra just… had to sneeze,” Bow tries to defuse the situation, taking attention away from his wife. Catra is still dripping with coffee, drying herself up with Adora's help.

The lizardfolk turns to Catra. "Is everything ok then, miss? Don't worry about the mess, we'll take care of it. Do you need anything?"

"Just another coffee please, and some napkins maybe?"

With a nod, the waiter returns to the kitchen.

"It's coming out of your nose, Catra, you look so gross," Glimmer teases.

"Like you are one to talk, Sparkles," Catra says to Glimmer with a mischievous grin. "The Beacons are lit!—" Adora just barely manages to slap her hand over her girlfriend's mouth to muffle the next words. "The Queen is horny!"

If looks could kill, Catra would have exploded right then and there thanks to Glimmer's newfound laser vision. The Queen looks around for prying eyes, but luckily no one else spilled their coffee in a fit, so she proceeds to scold Catra through gritted teeth.

"Hey, it's not like that! It's only when I get enthusiastic about something, not… sexualy, like Adora was implying. So… zip it, coffee nose!"

Catra's attempts to flee from Adora's muffling prove unsuccessful. She tries to tickle Adora into releasing her, but somehow she's always able to resist tickling as if she was expecting it. So, she decides to resort to other methods. She starts licking the hand Adora is using to keep her quiet, making her squeal.

"You can lick my hand all you want, love, do you think that grosses me out? I'm not releasing you until you promise to behave," Adora says, giving a stern look to her girlfriend. "This is not the place to scream about bedroom stuff. Will you be good?"

Catra drops her brows and ears as she looks at Adora's blue eyes before finally nodding. Adora releases Catra, but not before mischievously whispering in her ear. "If you don't behave… I won't shut your mouth up in other ways I know you enjoy, love".

Catra manages to control her blush, but can't prevent her ears from twitching. She's looking at Adora who's ignoring her with the widest grin on her face as she devours the muffins served to them.

Catra decides to let the argument rest until tonight. She turns back to the Queen. "Okay, Glimmer, I'll drop it and you drop the coffee nose. Deal?"

Glimmer agrees to end the argument, but just for the sake of breakfast. "Deal."

The rest of the day goes by in a blur.

Glimmer insists they all make some video calls to the other princesses to let them know about the engagement. Then, she makes them answer what feels like thousands of questions about stuff they haven't even begun to think about.

Catra almost gets violent over one suggestion. "I'm not going to wear a dress!" However, she mentally surrenders when she sees Adora's puppy dog eyes. She can't help but smile warmly every time she catches Adora playing with the pen in her hands, smiling in kind.

Bow just tries to get her wife off of Catra and Adora's back, but fails miserably. She keeps following the couple and trying to show them " a few files with ideas you can use! " on her trackerpad, eloquently talking about the collection of binders she calls Wedding Research that they were blissfully unaware of until now.

Adora tries to help Catra through the day. It isn't a particularly bad one, but lots of people parade by with congratulations and lots of questions about a wedding they haven't started planning yet… that's not how Catra was hoping for her day to go.

Adora can tell, so when Catra can't keep her fur from bristling at another attempt by Glimmer to make them agree on some other detail at the dinner table, she knows it's time to call it a day.

She's barely listening to the conversation, just trying to ground Catra with one hand on her leg, while resting her chin on the other when she decides to offer her fiancé an escape route.

She feigns exhaustion, starting with closing her eyes slowly, breathing deeply, relaxing her muscles, letting her head slip off her hand... until she finally headbutts the table.

“Adora! Are you okay? You are falling asleep,” Catra says, suddenly jumping to the rescue, checking on Adora’s forehead, placing a healing kiss on it.

Either Adora’s stupid plan works or Catra is more than willing to take the out she has been given. Catra decides, “I think it’s time for us to go to bed, or next time princess here will headbutt a fork and that won’t be pretty”

Glimmer yawns, suddenly becoming aware of her own depleted energy.

“Yeah, we can continue this tomorrow. How am I so tired so suddenly?”

“Gee, Sparkles, I don’t know. You’ve been talking about weddings non-stop since breakfast. Have you ever stopped for a breath?” Catra tries to play it cool with a joke but some of her annoyance filters through.

Glimmer either doesn’t care or doesn’t notice. “I’m sorry, I’m just too excited about you two getting engaged! You are right, though,

I think it’s time for bed,” Glimmer offers her hand to her husband. “King Bow, will you do me the honor—”

“Of doing you? Yeah yeah, I’m sure it’ll be a real chore. Right, Arrow Boy?” Catra tries to get a blush out of Glimmer, but the only thing she gets is a raised eyebrow.

“You know we can hear you too, right, Horde Scum? Sometimes you leave the windows open and the waterfall off and-,” Glimmer puts her wrists together like she is wearing handcuffs, hands just above her head. “ Oh mistress, I know it’s too much to ask but will yo— ” She gets tackled by Bow just in time and they both end up on the floor. Glimmer is trying to wrestle free of her husband who is looking haphazardly at Catra and Adora.

“I’m sorry, she was drinking with some friends today and doesn’t know what she’s saying. Anyway, see you tomorrow?” Bow says, trying to fix the situation with a nervous laugh, just before glaring back at his wife. “Glimmer, our room. Now.”

With that, the rulers of Brightmoon blink out of the mess hall.

Catra and Adora can barely look at each other, a deep flush growing on their faces by the second. Catra takes Adora’s hand and begins pulling her toward their room. “That. Did not just happen. We won’t talk about it again. Ever”

Magic of the Woods

Chapter Summary

> Catra goes to the Wispering Woods to clear her head, but unbeknownst to her, she is being followed.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Catra took the morning to go for a walk through the Whispering Woods alone.

The Woods, which were once a threat, a scary breeding ground for princesses and evil; are now the place she goes to calm her mind. She feels connected to Adora through the woods magic. She isn't able to explain it, but somehow, it always feels like Adora is walking the woods with her.

Catra came to love the place, how it works to soothe her mind and how Adora's energy seems to wrap around her the same way she does in bed. It is one of the few places in Etheria where Catra feels safe.

While she loves the last few years of changes in her life, she still gets the feeling that everything was too hectic from time to time. Like sometimes life traps you in a whirlwind. She missed the quiet of being alone. Well maybe not alone, but just with Adora.

After her proposal to Adora and the subsequent BFS breakfast, Glimmer is becoming more annoying by the day. She had fun organizing her own wedding - too much fun if you ask Catra - and now she's trying to manage theirs. They want to get married, but don't know how or when or where yet and Glimmer keeps popping around corners of the castle with huge binders full of suggestions in her arms. It has been an overwhelming couple of weeks.

Lost as she was in this train of thought, a gentle shake of the tree she's sitting on top brought her back to reality. Someone is climbing it.

Catra's first response is to sneak to the canopy above and remain hidden. No one knows she's there. Adora knows she's in the woods, but on that tree? No way.

As Catra ruffles some leaves and branches rushing to her hiding spot, the climbing stops. A gentle breeze blows and she suddenly can hear Adora's soft whisper in her ear.

"Hey love, are you feeling ok? If you want to be alone for a bit more I can go to another tree."

Catra looks around but only sees tree branches, green leaves and the Brightmoon Castle in the distance. She finally looks down to find her mystery climber.

"Adora? Is that you? Come on up, dummy!" A smile builds up in her lips. "I may want to be alone, but that never includes you"

Adora grabs Catra's branch, and with a jump—because she's a show-off—she is sitting beside girlfriend.

"Hey Adora." Catra can't help but melt any time those blues look back at her. "How did you find me? And how did you whisper to my ear from down there!?"

"What do you mean 'how did I find you'?" Adora seems offended at the question. "You told me you'd be at the woods, plus I'm an excellent tracker sooo-"

Catra looks at Adora with a stern face. She just raises an eyebrow for an answer.

"Even if all of that were true, that doesn't explain the whispering thing."

“Okay, okay… The woods told me. Or more precisely, I could feel you in the woods, and I didn’t whisper, the woods did it for me.”

“Wha- Wait the woods-?” Catra shakes her head in confusion. “What do you mean?”
Adora hugs Catra by the waist as she rests her head on her shoulder. Catra caresses along Adora’s arm as they talk.

“Magic. You’re telling me you didn’t notice?”

“Notice what, love?” Catra can feel Adora’s smile at the pet name.

“How does it feel when you walk the woods alone?” Adora asks.

“I feel calm, safe, warm. Like-”

“Like when I hug you in bed?” Adora says, getting ahead of her fiance. Catra recoils back lightly, not leaving the hug but trying to get a look at Adora, who is smiling lovingly.

“That was oddly specific.” Catra breathes in deeply, willing herself to share her feelings. Even with Adora these kinds of things take effort. “How do you know? Have you been following me?” Catra says curiously. She closes her eyes as Adora kisses her behind the ear.

“In a way.” Adora falls silent for a bit. Catra can tell that it’s a bit difficult for her to talk about this, but she usually opens up if she gives her a moment. After some soft cuddles, Adora continues. “Do you know how the woods are one of the nexus points for magic in the planet?”

Catra nods; they have talked about this before. Adora continues rambling. “And how She-Ra is the protector of Etheria and is connected to all the magic?”

Catra grabs Adora’s hands and kisses them softly. “This may come as a surprise to you, Love, but I actually listen when you talk about this stuff, you know?”

“Well, what you probably don’t know yet is... that I channel magic through emotion and more specifically, our love.” Catra smiles as Adora hides in the crook of her neck while mumbling these words.

Catra reaches to scratch Adora’s head with one hand. “Hey, don’t tell me you feel embarrassed about love powering your magic. I mean, we used it to save the universe, remember?” Catra Catra places her finger on Adora's lips and smirks cheekily. “Best universe saving kiss ever, right here.”

Adora laughs softly at the comment and comes out of her hiding place. She plucks Catra’s finger away. She leans in and proceeds to kiss Catra softly.

“So wait… every time I’ve come into the woods you’ve used magic to follow - auch!” Adora bites softly at Catra’s shoulder. “Me?”

“It’s not like that, you know I respect your privacy. It’s just-” Adora’s voice is reduced to almost a whisper as she nudges into Catra’s shoulder. “Every time you walk in the woods I’m able to sense you. I can’t read your mind but I can feel your emotions. I know it’s… a bit intrusive but I can't help it. When I feel you in the woods I just want to hug you and keep you warm and safe.”

Catra manages to shift her position on Adora’s lap so they are facing each other.“Wait Wait, you mean to tell me that was you all this time?”

Adora smiles fondly and kisses her girlfriend on the forehead. “Yes, it was me, did you really feel it? Like when we are in bed cuddling? Was it too much? Did I make you uncomfortable? Oh no, I did make you uncomfortable din’t I?”

Catra cups Adora’s face with her hands and places a soft kiss on her lips. “Love?”

Adora blinks softly at the touch. “Yes”

“You are overthinking again. Remember what we talked about? More enjoy yourself, less what if’s?”

“I know I know, just… want to make sure I wasn’t ruining the woods for you.”

“Are you kidding?! This makes them even better. A place and a connection only we share. I love it. Hell, it makes me want to get married here.”

Adora’s eyes faintly glow as she smiles back. “Really? Do you want to get married here?”

“Yes, I mean, that would be awesome if it were possible, but it’s not like we have a place to bring people. But honestly, I can’t think of a better place.”

Catra rests her head on Adora’s shoulder, closing her eyes and just enjoying the warmth of her embrace. It’s true the woods hold many painful memories for both of them, but they are trying to retake it, by making new ones. Marrying there, where they are able to feel their happiness and love for each other, would be incredible.

Catra wishes it could be possible and Adora picks up on it through the magic of the woods. “Let me show you something.” she whispers in her fiancé’s ear.

Adora raises an open hand over the woods, closing her eyes as she begins to glow lightly.

Catra shifts to look in the direction of Adora's hand, just in time to see the trees moving away, forming a clearing—rocks cobbling together in the shapes of benches, columns and a ceiling. When the action stops, Adora lowers her hand as the glow subsides.

Catra is looking at what seems to be a rock tent in the middle of the woods, with benches and a small porch in the entrance, tastefully decorated with flowers.

She’s mesmerized at the view.

Adora’s voice breaks the silence. “Will you marry me he-”
Catra silences Adora with a kiss before she can finish. She swears that reality slows down around them as they enjoy this perfect moment.

They pull apart a bit, keeping their foreheads together. Catra can’t contain her smile. “You do know that I proposed first, right? And you are stupid if you need to ask.” She pauses. “Still, you know Glimmer is going to flip her shit, right?”

Adora schooches back a little and propes herself against the tree with Catra still on her lap. “What do you mean she’ll flip her shit?”

Catra laughs. “Oh Stars Adora, please tell me you have noticed. Glimmer is even more excited than us about our wedding!

“She has huge binders with suggestions and themes and locations and dresses, colours and whatever else you can think of. Please tell me that I’m not alone and she’s been trying to torture you too?” Catra asks exasperated.

“Stars, really? I mean, I’ve seen her with the binders but I didn’t know what they were.”

“Yeah, remember yesterday she wanted to talk to me after lunch? I wasted two hours looking through her ‘Locations’ binder. And I can tell you that ‘hippie wedding in the woods’ is not there so expect some table flippin and resistance on her part.”

Adora nudges Catra on the shoulder. “Hey, you could have taken me with you. Misery loves company?”

Catra suddenly grabs Adora by the shoulders, a look of pure horror in her eyes. “No Adora, save yourself!” They both burst out laughing.

“Well, to lessen the flipping, maybe we can compromise. Wedding here, dinner back in the castle? Is the castle in the binder?” Adora offers, deep in thought.

“It is. That could be a good solution to calm Glimmer, for a bit. But I can tell you are thinking of something else.”

Adora gives Catra one of the evilest grins she has ever seen. “How would you feel if I use our wedding to mess a bit with the Queen?”

“What do you mean? Like, a food fight at dinner or something?” Catra laughs at the idea, a food fight would be fun, but she doesn’t want to ruin their wedding gowns.

“No, I want to play some mind games, and make her think we are arguing and stuff. I don’t know exactly yet. Nothing big of course, like we keep having small fights over wedding stuff? Oh oh!! And we can have a big fight at some point! That’d be awesome!” Adora is caught up on her own excitement about the idea and keeps rambling.

“Wait a minute.” She raises a finger, pointing like she has an idea. She always does that, and it always makes Catra smile. “I remember Glimmer telling me that in weddings a dance is traditional after food. I don’t know who thought that was a good idea, but still. Maybe we can ‘have a fight’ and then spar together on the dance floor? Show off our moves a little?”

Adora ponders her words for a moment, picturing it in her mind. It certainly beats just dancing. “We’ll have to train for that though.”

Catra has to take a couple of seconds because she can’t believe her ears. Is Adora, the embodiment of She-Ra, being mischievous? Is she really proposing what Catra thinks? “So, you want us to fake a whole argument, pretend we are angry at each other and end in a pretend fight at the dance floor --on the day of our wedding-- just to mess with glimmer?”

Adora shrinks a little with embarrassment. “Too much?”

“You. Are. So hot right now. I want to jump your bones right here. Are you kidding? It’s going to be so much fun!” Catra could barely contain herself when Adora showed her inner demon, not that she wasn’t stunning anyways.

“Catra! We are not going to fuck on top of a tree!” Adora laughs, but Catra’s pout makes her reconsider. “At the very least wait until we get down, then I’m all yours.”

Catra nestles in Adora’s embrace. “Watch the sunset first with me? It’s gorgeous from up here, with Brightmoon as a backdrop.”

Adora cradles Catra in her arms. “Gorgeous you say?”

“Second to you, of course.”

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Ever since Netosa told Glimmer that Adora and Catra were going to get married in the Whispering Woods, she has been trying to find the pair of idiots and change their minds.

She just received the news a couple hours ago and was running like crazy looking for either one of them. Glimmer was determined to change their minds. How could anyone be that crazy!.

A wedding in the woods? Who in their right mind would get married in the middle of nowhere?! There are lots of bad things there. Doesn’t Adora remember the huge spiders, monsters and lions and tigers and bears? Oh my!

Suddenly, everything went upside down.

“Ow, Ow! Oh, stars!” Adora says, pinching the bridge of her nose and rubbing her temples. “What just happened?! Oh Glimmer, is that you?”

Everything hurts is the only thing on the Queen’s mind at that moment. Apparently, she just ran into Adora, at almost full speed, at the turn of a corridor, knocking them both down.

Adora was already standing when Glimmer looked up, with a hand open to help her friend up. “Are you okay, Glimmer? Where were you going so fast?”

“I was actually looking for you, to be honest. Is it true what I’ve heard?”

Adora looks at Glimmer, raising her eyebrows, playing with a finger on her chin. “I can’t tell you if it’s true if I don’t know what we are talking about Glim.”

Glimmer tries to compose herself, shaking the dust of her clothes and breathing deeply. “I’ve heard that Catra and you intend to get married in the Whispering Woods. Is that so?”

“Yes.” Glimmer can feel She-Ra’s powers in Adora’s gaze. She could swear her eyes almost started glowing. Adora is not going to change her mind, but damn her if Glimmer isn’t going to try.

“You can’t be serious Adora. You can’t tell me with a straight face that you want to get married in the Woods.” Glimmer can’t believe what she’s hearing. She was just talking with Catra about this a couple days ago. She showed her the Locations binder and she could have sworn that they agreed to have the wedding on castle grounds. “Does Catra know about this?”

Adora seems taken aback by Glimmer’s doubts, but can anyone blame her? Who ditches a Castle wedding for a Woods wedding? “I don’t know what to tell you Glimmer. She does know, and it was actually her decision, too. If it’ll make you feel better, we can go to check the site out. You’ll see that is as every bit as awesome as the grounds here an—”

“And what if some animals decide to have tasty guests for lunch? Or the Woods throw something at us? You know the Woods have done that in the past. Weird spider-snake-whatever monsters that we have to run from.”

Adora sighs and Glimmer realizes her message isn’t getting through. “Ok, first of all that wasn’t the Woods. That was inside the Crystal Castle and you know it. Second, that was also Light Hope messing with us. For obvious reasons that isn’t going to happen again. There isn’t anything to be afraid of in the Woods any longer. But you are welcome to post a couple of guards if that puts your mind at ease."

Glimmer knows all of this, but still. Bow and her wedding at Brightmoon was awesome, and she wants one just as awesome for her friends. She gives it a last ditch attempt. "But what if it rains? Have you thought of that?"

"It has a roof. We and all the guests can take refuge under it and continue without issue." Adora warmly smiles at Glimmer. "Glim, this is happening. We're both set on it. You know the Woods are important to us. It'll be awesome, I promise."

"Okay, okay, you used to be easier to convince, you know?"

Adora gets that smile that means she's thinking about Catra. "Maybe, but someone taught me to be a little selfish."

Glimmer can't help but smile herself. She can't imagine Catra and Adora with other people. Catra showed Adora that not everything was self sacrifice. That she has worth on her own and deserves to follow her own dreams as an individual.

Adora in turn showed Catra love; that the world was not all pain and survival of the fittest as they were taught at the Horde. That there were really people who loved her and wanted to be her friends, even her family, with no ulterior motive.

Glimmer decides she can live with a wedding in the Woods.

"Ok ok, I'll trust everything will be as awesome as you say, but I don't want to hear you later complain about twigs in your hairdo, dirt on your shoes, giant spiders crashing the reception... and all of that crap." The Queen concedes with a laugh. "What was that you wanted to bring me to the ballroom for?"

Having closed the Woods issue, Adora lets out a sigh of relief and continues. "Well, we both agree that you are right on one thing. The castle is pretty cool, so we wanted to ask if you would allow us to have dinner with everyone back here. I know Catra isn't here right now, but this is a request from us both. We want the wedding itself in the Whispering Woods and then we can come back here for food and a small party. Nettosa told us it's called a Reception."

Glimmer grins, at least not everything will be in the woods. "So you are willing to compromise?"

Adora smiles, taking the victory Glimmer offers. "Pretty much, yeah. The idea was to borrow the ballroom, your cooks and… maybe enough staff for the whole shindig?" Adora adds the last part about the staff with a sheepish smile.

"Don't worry, I'll take care of everything for dinner. The cake alone will be amazing!"

As if on cue, Catra appears out of nowhere, followed by Scorpia and Perfuma. The group walks towards Glimmer and Adora.

"What is going to be amazing, Glim? Should I be afraid of something?" Catra asks walking inside, ears twitching lightly.

Perfuma walks, arms linked with Scorpia, as she greets the group with a wave. "So nice to see you both! We followed Catra from the castle gates. We wanted to ask all of you to dinner later tonight. Does it sound ok?"

Catra looks at Adora with an enthusiastic smile, her tail lashing. She takes her fiancé's hand and gives her a soft kiss. "I told them it was ok since we have nothing planned. But I wanted to check with you first."

Adora wraps her arm around Catra's waist in a hug, joining their hips. "I'd love to! We can catch up and you can tell us how it is that you are not married ye-."

Before Adora can finish, Scorpia scoops the pair up in one of her trademark hugs that practically pops Catra's eyes out. "We are going to have so much fun!"

Perfuma rests a soft hand on Scorpia's arm and squeezes softly. "Love, be careful with friends, remember? Think of them like when we are working with flowers."

Scorpia quickly loosens the hug and gently lowers the couple, softly ruffling their hair. "Oh shoo, I'm so sorry! I didn't hurt you right? I forget that not everyone likes the same hugs." She rests her pincer over Perfuma's shoulders.

The princess of Plumeria rests her arm on her girlfriend's hip, mirroring Adora and Catra. A Plumeria blossoms on Scorpia's belt. "We'll leave you two lovebirds to do your wedding planning and meet back for dinner?"

"Sounds lovely, we'll be there." Adora answers softly. Satisfied with the conversation, Scorpia and Perfuma make their exit, leaving the best friend squad—minus Bow—in the room.

Catra crosses her arms, mood shifting suddenly, and looks back at Glimmer suspiciously. "As I was asking before, what is going to be-" she mocks a high pitched Glimmer voice. "Amazing!"

Glimmer nonchalantly tries to dismiss Catra with a wave of her hand. "Oh, it was nothing, we were talking about how you will have the wedding reception here and that the cake alone is going to be amazing."

Catra spins on her place, distancing herself a bit from Adora, but still holding onto her hip. "I think we agreed on 'No Cake,' Adora. Remember what happened last time? We don't want a repetition of what happened last time."

Glimmer tries to play it cool, hoping to keep an argument from exploding.
"That was an accident, Catra. You can't swear off all cakes just because the chocolate one gave you a little tummy ache."

Catra releases Adora, walking slowly towards Glimmer, hands on her hips. "Not even you believe your words right now. A little tummy ache? I was volcanoing toxic sludge out of both ends! Not even Adora wanted to kiss me after that for three days straight! No cake! And that's final."

Glimmer could see Adora pouting slightly. She loved chocolate cake and that could be leveraged. She moved to Adora's side, pointing the pout to Catra. "But will you look at that face Catra? Are you going to deny her a cake?"

Catra crosses her arms in front of her chest, narrowing her eyes. Glimmer can feel the weight of the magicat's gaze upon them both. It somehow makes Adora smaller. "So, let me get this straight." She huffs. "You want me to agree to have a specific dessert that I cannot enjoy, at our wedding? Among all the tasty desserts that can be created and enjoyed by everyone, including me, you want me to agree to have the one that makes me puke like an open fire hydrant?"

Adora's gaze was fixed on the ground while her fiance was speaking, she looked up at Catra, crossing her arms too in defiance. "We could have other cakes there, too. Chocolate doesn't have to be the only one. That way everyone gets -"

"When are you going to stand up for yourself Adora? Or for me for that matter?!" Catra barely manages to keep herself from screaming like in the past. Glimmer is almost scared until she notices Catra's features. Her ears pinned back, her tail coiled along her left leg. Catra sighs defeated, arms dropping by her sides. "I thought at least OUR wedding would be about us." She starts walking away. "But it seems that's too much to wish for."

"Catra, wait!" Adora runs after her fiancé, leaving the Queen alone in the room, her voice fading in Brightmoon's corridors. "Wait please!!"

Glimer looks around, trying to find something to lean onto.
"I might have messed that up…" she thinks out loud as she sits down on one of the chairs.

Adora and Catra return to the Woods the day before the wedding.
They have a score to settle.

It wasn't difficult to convince her fiancé to spend the day after the wedding together in the Woods—or even to convince her to bring a change of training clothes.. What was really daunting was giving Glimmer the slip through all of Brightmoon's corridors to sneak out. Only thanks to Juliet and the Royal Guard's help did they manage to make it.

Since the Cake Incident Glimmer toned down significantly, but was still nagging them about all the preparations… and also trying to help them fix their relationship . 'Karma sure is a bitch.' Catra wonders to herself. 'Maybe we shouldn't have messed with Glim that much? Then again, we almost eloped to outer space to get away from all the pestering.'

She's so lost in that train of thought, just walking holding Adora's hand, that she doesn't notice the root sticking out in the ground in front of her.

"Catra!!" Adora screams as her fiancé's hand slips from hers. Catra, who is in the air flying headfirst towards the ground, clenches waiting for an impact.

It never comes. Adora jumps to catch her in a blinding flash of light. In half a heartbeat She-Ra scoops Catra into a ball and lands rolling safely with her fiance in her arms.

Opening her eyes, Catra tries to gather her bearings and understand what just happened. Adora looks back at her, glow subsiding as she helps them both upright.

“Are you okay, Catra?”

Catra shakes the dust of her clothes, still a bit loopy from the adrenaline rush. “I’m okay, I’m okay, don’t worr—Wait, did you just turn into She-Ra so you could save me ? From a fall ?” Catra adds a snarky tone to the last words.

“Pretty much, yeah. It’s a privilege you have, because you are so cute and lovable. Don’t abuse it.”

Adora crosses her arms in front of her chest, but can’t help the smile as Catra narrows the distance between them, arms open for a hug. “You’re an idiot.”

Adora welcomes her, and rests their foreheads together whispering back “But soon I’ll be your idiot.”

Catra shuts her idiot up with a kiss before she says something that will make her blush.

"Anyway princess, we should get going. Last time it didn't take me soooo much to get there."

"Hey, you are the one tripping all over the place and stopping for kisses and stuff, just saying," Adora verbally jabs at her fiancé who is just looking back at her with an eyebrow raised. "I don't even know where we are going."

"So that's how it's gonna be, uh?" Catra starts walking down their original trail again. She looks back over her shoulder towards Adora, pulling her claws out. "I'll race you!" And just before she can hear anything back, bolts running.

"Cheater!" Adora screams out of earshot as she runs after Catra. "No fair!!"

Catra looks back to see Adora gaining on her. Neither of them is running at full tilt, and that's kind of the beauty of it now. Is not about survival, but about messing with each other, and that is always fun.

Catra stops at a small clearing, taking off the backpack with their lunches and leaning it on a tree.

Seconds later Adora arrives panting lightly, does the same with the rest of their supplies, and leans against the tree. "You are a sore loser Catra," Adora accuses.

"What are you talking about!" Catra turns to face her. "I won. You just got here and I've been here chilling for like a minute."

"Yeah right, a second at most. And you cheated at the start like you usually do." Adora sticks her tongue out. "So that makes me the winner by default. As always."

Catra rests her arms on her hips briefly before pointing a finger at Adora. "First of all, don't point that at me unless you intend to use it properly. Second, what makes you a winner by default as you say?"

Adora just sticks her tongue out, again, making faces back at Catra.

"Adooora." Catra warns, walking towards her.

"I did save the Universe and get the girl. That's pretty much winning 101 right there isn't it?" She grins widely.

Catra reaches out with her hand and literally wipes the grin off Adora's face. "You are a dork." They both start laughing in a fit.

When they part ways, Catra backs on to the clearing, taunting Adora. "Anyway Princess, are we going to train or what? Come on!”

“Here? This is the clearing you were talking about? It’s even smaller than our usual place. What makes it so amazing?” Adora looks around, trying to find something worth spending the day there.

“You lack imagination love. No three dimensional thinking” Catra just jumps and claws her position almost three meters up the trunk of one tree.

Adora tracks her moves, grinning at the view before her. “You know there won’t be any trees at the ballroom right?”

“There are columns, Adora. You can jump off them. I can claw to them and you can jump, the guests can go ‘ooooooh’ and then we make out after.” Catra counters with a smile.

Adora can’t believe the words. Glimmer gave them an earful that one time they almost knocked a statue while making out and now Catra is talking about clawing the columns? “Wait a second, you want to claw Brightmoon’s Ballroom pillars, in front of Glimmer?”

Catra jumps back down from her perch, shaking her hands and clothes free of debris. “I’ll bet you whatever you want, that she won’t even notice.”

Adora shakes her head in disbelief. “Okay then, you’re on.” She summons the Sword of Protection as Catra goes for her wip.

“Oh Princess, you have no idea how on I am.”

The start sparring together.

They’re used to training in Brightmoons gardens where they always end up with a bit of an audience. Because of that, they usually dial back the intensity, but here? They left caution at the castle grounds, and completely let loose.

Whenever they train, they do it with their signature weapons—Catra’s whip and Adora’s sword—always trying to get the best of each other. They know their rhythms and are attuned to each other, which is the main reason their fights are so evenly matched. They still manage to learn new things each time they spar.

This time Adora learns that, just because a tree is able to hold Catra, doesn’t mean that it won’t be knocked over when She-Ra jumps on it with all her might.

Catra learns that just because almost any tree will hold her weight, that doesn’t mean she can slide down it with her claws; and not expect tree shreds to fall over her.

Their tally was:

Crushed trees - 3

Shredded trees - 7

Their sparing gets a little more playful after a couple hours of training. They begin pinning each other against the trees, puting each other in armlocks, stealing passionate kisses and bites, furtive hands under white and gold or burgundy clothes.

The endless teasing is making Adora wet with anticipation, and she decides to take matters on her own hands. It’s time to play dirty.

She shifts her sword into a lazzo, the flash of light taking Catra by surprise. The distraction allows Adora to wrap it around Catra’s waist and yank her down from her perch.

She falls in slow motion before Adora’s eyes, tearing another tree to shreds as her claws are yanked from the trunk. The whole thing shakes back and forth as Catra finally detaches from the tree and skillfully lands unharmed with a roll. But before she can get up, the loose leaves, branches and shreds of tree all fall down, burying her.

Adora runs to the shrubbery that was her fiancé just moments ago. “Catra! Are you ok? Oh Stars, I didn’t expect the tree to fall to pieces on top of you. I’m so sorry!”

Catra's head pops out from the debris and shoots Adora a death glare. "You are so gonna pay for this, you know?" She pulls herself out of the tree remains, slowly walking towards Adora, unwrapping the lazzo from her waist.

"Oh yeah? What are you going to do then?" Adora playfully taunts her fiancé as Catra wraps her arms around Adora's waist, lazzo still on her hands. Catra leans into her ear and whispers. "I just said it, I'm gonna make you pay Princess, or do you doubt my words?"

Unbeknownst to Adora, Catra places her foot between her legs, behind Adora's own. In one swift motion, she wraps She-Ra's bracelets with her own lazzo, pulls both hands above their heads and swipes her foot, so She-Ra falls backwards, with Catra on top.

"Ooof! Catra what are you do -iiing " Adora moans as Catra bites her pulse point at the neck, sending shivers down her torso to between her legs. Catra just enjoys herself, leaving a mark there while Adora squirms helpless underneath her, magically enhanced muscles tensing against the bindings.

"I told you, you are going to pay for that Princess." She whispers deviously. In a lower tone she checks in. "Color?"

Adora's blues lock on to Catra's mismatched eyes, pupils fully dilated, unable to hide the soft moan that escapes her lips. "Green, so, so green Love."

Catra smiles and changes to a more commanding voice. “Now, are you going to be a good girl for me?” She pulls Adora up with her by the improvised golden leash. “Come with me Princess, we’re gonna have some fun.”

“I’ll be good, I swear.” Adora whimpers as she’s taken to a nearby oak tree. Catra secures the other end of the lazzo to one of the lower branches, leaving Adora tied, arms above her head, to the tree.

Catra faces her trophy , with one claw out that she uses to score, cut and remove She-Ra’s chestpiece. Adora quivers under Catra’s touch as she loses the armor.

Catra uses a soft finger to pull Adora’s chin down slightly and they lock eyes together for a second before Catra lovingly nibbles at Adora’s jaw. “You weren’t nice before, so now I’m gonna have my way with you, and you are going to be my big plaything, understand?” Catra commands, enjoying the smell of her fiancé's excitement.

Adora closes her eyes and whispers. “As you wish.”

Catra takes her sweet time bringing Adora over the edge. By the time she has done it, Adora’s legs are wobbling. Catra helps her to the ground while she shifts out of She-Ra and vanishes the bindings. “Are you ok love? Do your arms hurt? Wrists?”

Adora lets out a deep breath and hides on the crook of Catra's neck. "It was wonderful, amazing, intense. I'm better than ok Catra, but just give me thirty minutes before we go again?"

Catra laughs, actually having to hold her stomach. "What?! That wasn't enough for you Princess?" Catra looks at Adora like one would look at a tasty steak. "Should I tie you up again love?" She taunts Adora in a low voice.

Now is Adora's turn to break in a fit of laughter. "I was talking about training again for a bit. But give me food and, like an hour more of rest and we'll talk about that encore. Didn't you pack some lunch?" Adora rubs her thighs and offers her fiancé a pout specifically designed to melt her heart. "Would you be an awesome wife-to-be and bring us some sandwiches and drinks? Pretty please with sugar on top?"

"Wow, pretty please? You really do want me to tie you up after." Catra laughs as she walks to grab their backpacks and bring the supplies back to where Adora is scooched against a tree, waiting for her.

She offers Adora a bottle of water and some food that she gladly accepts. Catra sits next to her, leaning against her side, taking a big gulp of her own water bottle. "I should call you the Princess of Horniness. Princess of Power is a thing of the pa-- ouch!" Catra yelps as Adora suddenly pinches her. "What the hell idiot!! Why'd you do that? That hurt!"

Adora looks into Catra’s eyes. Her blues seem to be looking deep into her soul. “I. am. so in love with you. I don’t know what I did to be so lucky.” She softly cradles Catra’s face with her hands. “The pinch was because you are a Brat with capital B, and I can't help but also love that part of you.” She rests her forehead against Catra’s, their lips almost touching. “This, is so you will ravish me later one more time.”

Catra closes her eyes melting into the words, into Adora’s arms and the kiss that follows.

When they part ways, Catra whispers softly. “Pinch me again my love.”

Love in the Woods

Chapter Summary

They are getting married, but will that be the most intense moment of the day?

Enjoy!

Chapter Notes

I wanted to add a bit that was cut from the chapter before this one.
I didn't know how to make a "day change" (got blocked, okay?) so that's what the ribbon means.

Before the ribbon, day after the wedding.
After the ribbon, the day of the wedding.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Night is about to fall on the Whispering Woods, the last rays of sun caressing the treetops and warming Catra and Adora's tangled bodies. Catra wakes slowly as the soft breeze makes the parts of her body not covered by Adora's body feel cold.

She runs a claw down Adora's spine and feels her whole body shiver. She still can't help the grin that appears on her face even though she's done this very thing dozens of times.

"Mmmmmh, which one is it?" Adora purrs as she snuggles further in Catra's chest.

“What do you mean which one, Princess?” Catra asks while Adora chuckles at her question.

“ Oh , so you haven’t noticed. You usually wake me up like that when you want some fun, or when you are hungry.” Catra raises an eyebrow, Adora throws her a kiss and smiles. “So, which one is it this time?”

“Neither, Princess Horny. It’s getting late and we are getting married in… less that sixteen hours? And… I may love the way you shiver and squirm in my arms when I do that.”

“Soooo… Obviously sex then?” Adora laughs and Catra can’t help the words that escape her lips. “Dummy.”

They spend a few more minutes cuddled together, enjoying each other's warmth, until Catra breaks the silence.

“We should get going you know... But…” Catra shifts sheepishly next to Adora, until she finally gets up. “We should get going.”

Adora knows her wife-to-be is holding back something and gets up too, holding her in a staring match. “No. No way. Not unless you tell me what's on your mind first. No important secrets Catra, we talked about this.”

Catra offers a weak smile and sighs. “You have to promise not to laugh at me.”

Adora is a little taken aback by her sudden concern, but tries to reassure her fiancé. “You know if it is important to you, I’d never laugh. You can tell me anything, love.”

Catra’s lips twist with the faintest smile. “Would you dance with me?”

Adora is completely taken by surprise. Back at the horde dancing was just another tool for war. They hadn’t danced together since Princess Prom, and that was like a lifetime ago for both of them.

Still, while Catra asking for a dance is surely unexpected, it was not unwelcome. Adora is more than happy to comply.

“It’s stupid anyway, we are late and should go back.” Catra tries to excuse as she hugs herself, a bit sad and disappointed with Adora’s apparent lack of interest. “Don’t worry ab--”

Adora picks her up in a hug almost rivaling Scorpia’s and spins her around.

“Of course I will dance with you!” She puts her back on the ground, but still keeps hugging her. “How could you say that! It’s not stupid Catra, I’d be delighted to dance with you. I was just surprised, I assumed you didn’t like to dance.”

Catra's face lights up, almost like Adora said yes to her proposal again. She offers a hand to her fiancé. "Will you do me the honor of a dance?"

"It would be my pleasure." Adora takes the offer and proceeds to lead Catra as they both hum a slow song.

In the return trip Catra makes Adora promise never to tell anyone that she likes dancing. Adora is too happy to oblige as long as she keeps dancing with her.

When they reach Brightmoon Melog is waiting outside to help them avoid Glimmer as they sneak back to their room and turn in for the night.

Everything is a blur as they are pulled from their room to dressing, hairdo—which Catra agreed to on the condition that it was minimal—the before pictures and finally a horse carriage that took them to the Whispering Woods where everyone was waiting.

King Micah officiates, as they walk the aisle together—because of course they would take each other to their own wedding—going through their vows, hands shaking as they exchange tokens, tearful eyes as they declare their unyielding love for each other.

"Get a room!!" Someone screams when they kiss at the end, but they don't hear it. Bow cries his eyes out as Glimmer jumps and screams by his side. Perfuma whispers "We are next," to Scorpia and they share a tame kiss. Entrapta is just jumping around taking pictures of everything and everyone, 'for research purposes' she keeps saying. Mermista slaps Seahawk in the back of the head before he grabs one of the decorative torches and Frosta rolls her eyes at the whole display of craziness.

But Catra and Adora are blissfully unaware of everything as they kiss, just feeling each other through the magic of the woods, enjoying the small respite.

However, it doesn't last long as someone—Adora swears it was Bow's dads—takes them outside for some after pictures and drinks, starting the whirlwind all over again..

They are taken back to Brightmoon where it seems like half of Etheria is there waiting for them. More pictures ensue as representatives from all the kingdoms congratulate the couple.

Catra loses track of the number of people they meet that afternoon.

"Come with me." Castaspella says as she pulls the couple from the seemingly endless photo shoot and takes them inside in a hurry. But just as they were going to thank her for the rescue, she takes them to the Ballroom, lavishly decorated for the event and packed with all their guests.

Cheers and congratulations roar as Casta walks them to their table with George, Lance, Glimmer, Bow, Micah and Castapella.

"Long live the Princesses of Power!!" Someone screams as they sit.

Catra lingers, trying to look for who screamed, but is pulled down by her wife. "Princesses of Power? What do they mean?" She asks no one in particular.

Adora tries to hide her snicker as Micah answers. "Didn't Adora tell you? Now that you are married you share the title. You are a princess now Catra."

"Hey, princess ." Adora manages to flirt with her wife between chuckles before breaking in a fit of laughter.

Catra covers her eyes as she sighs exasperated. “This isn’t happening.” She looks back at Adora through parted fingers. “I want a divorce,” clearly not liking this new title one bit

The waiters start bringing out plates of food as they fiercely discuss the issue of title rights .

Different conversations break around the table by the second course as George and Lance try to shift attention off of the title issue. They discuss their latest findings in First Ones ruins with Adora and ask for some help translating something later.

Micah, Castapella and Glimmer talk sorcery and Catra is left discussing her latest interest with Bow—archery.

Catra and Adora seem to avoid each other, preferring to talk with the rest of the guests, even when they get up to make the rounds around the different tables they do it separately.

Their friends can feel the uneasiness between them and try to help them out, but it only seems to make things worse.

By the time dessert arrives and everyone is engaged in it, Catra looks at Adora and they share a nod, get up and leave the room.

Glimmer looks up and tries to stop them, but they are already left. Around the room people continue dancing, having drinks, or stuffing their faces full of tasty desserts. No one else seems to notice the newlyweds' absence as they enjoy the event.

"Mmmmh, Glim?" Bow says, pulling her out of her thoughts, a worried expression on his face, as he glances at his watch.

"Yes, dear?" Glimmer responds.

"Have you seen Adora or Catra? Where have they gone? Their desserts are getting warm."

Glimmer stifles a laugh and nudges her husband in the shoulder. "Are you sure they aren't doing the nasty in the bathroom?"

"I don't think so, they don't take this long and… I think they were arguing, again about the title thing."

"They've been arguing for months now about wedding stuff. It's normal, they'll fix whatever it is. They started the day without drama and got this far."

Bow sighs. They've had this conversation before, but now is not the time.

"You know that's not the same. You have been pestering them all the time, and now all this bickering about the Princess title. I don’t know what’s going on but you have to stop it or fix it or whatever.”

“I just helped with the wedding! Nothing else! I wanted for them to have one as nice as ours,” Glimmer retorts with a bit of a grimace.

Around them people slowly stop dancing and start looking in the same direction, something drawing their attention.

“But that’s just it. It’s their wedding, and you made it about your preferences.” Bow grumbles.

Brightmoon guards in full gear and spears begin popping seemingly from behind the columns of the hall and start herding people away from the dance floor and against the perimeter of the hall.

It suddenly clicks for Glimmer. In trying to help their friends she didn’t pay much attention to what they wanted their wedding to be.

“I’m such a bi—”.

A loud bang takes over the hall, overpowering Glimmer’s as the ceremonial gates are blown open and Catra gets thrown into the room.

The crowd gasps frantic at the sight of the guards hurriedly forming a perimeter around the people, defensively protecting them with the spears Catra manages to roll and land in the middle of the room, stabilizing with her tail and arms in a fighting stance. Somehow she seems to have ditched her wedding gowns and is dressed in a burgundy sports bra and what appears to be rags of her suit, a whip holstered in her belt.

"Guards!!" Adora screams at the top of her lungs as she runs into the room. All guards turn and train their spears towards the figure that just landed, the metallic clanking of armor and weapons filling the room.

"You were just going to disappear again?! I'm never letting you go! For the honor of Grayskull!!" Adora almost yells at her wife as she summons the Sword of Protection and She-Ra.

"I never wanted any of this!" Catra says waving her arms around. "I was never destined for this Princess of Power bullshit!"

The guards withdraw their spears and use them to form a circle around the couple, preventing the piling onlookers from entering the improvised arena where the newlyweds are about to have their first married fight.

Glimmer is trying to make heads or tails of the situation, blinks in between them, hands up trying to put an end to whatever is happening.

“Guys, please!! Stop! I’m sorry I shouldn’t have been so pushy and—”

“Stay out of this!” Adora and Catra scream at her. Glimmer remains frozen in place, not knowing what to do but trying to prevent her two best friends from killing each other on their wedding day.

The crowd murmurs as music starts playing. Glimmer is startled as two guards pull her by the shoulders, back behind the line with all the guests. One guard leans into her ear and whispers. “It's better if you let this play out your majesty.”

Catra winks at Adora as she uncoils her whip and crouches, ready to charge.

Adora swings her sword one handed, smiling back, blade ready over her head.

Glimmer raises an eyebrow at the guard as the music picks up and whispers back. “Wha-wait! You know something? What is happening!?”

She looks back at the arena where she can see her friends looking at each other like they are about to fuck in the wrong way. But then, just as the queen was about to look away, Adora smiles and Catra winks back.

Just as the song’s vocals start, Catra jumps over Adora.

Adora almost had a heart attack the moment Glimmer blinked between them. The sudden burst of panic froze her in place and she could swear Catra didn't know what to do either. This was one thing they didn't train for, but screaming back at her seemed to work.

Luckily for them, Juliet was on top of the situation and stepped in with a couple of guards, swiftly taking Glimmer away.

Adora just hoped her panic didn't show on her face. They just needed to keep the illusion for a couple more seconds.

Juliet nods at her and Adora suddenly snaps out of her thoughts, becoming aware of the music slowly building up, and of her wife all claws, fangs and beautiful mismatched eyes. She knows they are supposed to fake a fight, to be angry with each other, but she can't help a warm smile building on her lips.

This is her wife! She’s married to the woman of her dreams! How can she not smile fondly at that?

Catra gives the most imperceptible smirk at her and winks, grabbing her whip and letting it loose on the ground.

Adora can’t help herself and smiles back swinging her sword around for a little show, ending with it over her head as the vocals of the song begin.

She's got a fetish for fine art
A pair of knee-socks and an oversized sweatshirt

Catra jumps over Adora’s head as she swings her sword barely missing Catra’s tail as the crowd gasps.

She goes right to my heart
She comes a'knocking with her stocking and I get hurt

Catra lands on one of the columns, digging her claws to hold on, while thrusting her wip to grab Adora’s ankle, pulling on it to make her lose balance.

I get the feeling I'm in deep
Troubled waters but they're only thigh-high

As Adora starts to lose balance she stabs the ground with her sword and uses the leverage to pivot away just as Catra lands knee first at her wife’s feet.

This kind of girl don't get no sleep
Don't wake your father, skip the starters, strap those garters up
Oh my my!

Adora leans in to softly kiss Catra. “You know I can’t get enough of you kneeled at my feet right? Are you going to behave for me later?”

Catra jumps up and takes Adora by the waist with one arm. “You wish princess, you know this is for show. We’ll later see who gets to kneel before who.” They keep exchanging soft caresses as they dance , or more precisely, attempt to take the lead from each other.

Checkered pattern on your skirt
I see you flaunting, see you taunting, it's so sickening
I can't resist the way you flirt

Right as Adora is going to grab her sword she has to jump to avoid Catra trying to sweep across her legs.

I should be dead but my heartbeat's quickening
I get the feeling less is more

Adora shifts her sword into a staff and throws her first strike at Catra as she's landing

It's an excuse just to shake your little derrière
That ratio; a perfect score
A girl's status is measured by her denier

Catra evades the blow and throws her fists boxing style towards Adora, even adding a few leg sweeps for the show. Adora blocks each one with the staff as they move together along the arena.

Lie down baby

Arch your back now
Maybe you can help me get what I want

Adora sweeps Catra's feet with the staff, but she manages to catch herself on all fours.

Curve your little spine and tell me that you're mine
It's all about the game and what you flaunt

Catra jumps over to the other side of the arena, clawing another column and uses her whip to steal Adora's staff.

Yeah, I know that there's no pleasing you
When you know that you're not teasing me
She's an absolute terror for Absolute Territory

"Hey! No fair!" Adora pleads with Catra with a pout, but can't be sure she hears her over the music.

Catra descends over her, blocking her fists with the staff and pinning Adora's arms behind her back.

She's taken by surprise as they didn't practice that , but Catra's devilish grin tells her everything she needs to know.

Catra wants a break from the dance, and she's going to steal a kiss from her. Adora surrenders to making out with her, pinned in the middle of the arena.

For a few seconds Adora is not in her wedding dance. The arena and the guards around them vanish and she's just naked in the woods with Catra like last night.

That's it, baby, take control
You're so enticing, mesmerizing, don't know how to react
You're gonna steal my very soul

More manslaughter than the third impact

She’s snapped back to reality by a gente nudge from Catra. She wills the staff out of existence, leaving Catra without the leverage she had to pin her arms. She walks away from Catra, taunting her.

I see you strutting in that pleat
Double-taking, yeah I'm shaking and you know it shows

This kind of girl just can't be beat

She whispers in my ear

Take off your clothes

Adora summons her lazzo and tries to grab Catra with it, but she just vaults over Adora, evading her lazzo, throwing a wink and landing behind her.

Lie down baby, Arch your back now

Maybe you can help me get what I want

As Adora turns, Catra grabs her arm with her whip just as Adora does the same.

Curve your little spine and tell me that you're mine

It's all about the game and what you flaunt

They look into each other’s eyes and with a smile pull at the same time. The newlyweds end tangled together in their weapons in the middle of the arena.

Yeah, I know that there's no pleasing you

When you know that you're not teasing me

Adora bites her lip while looking into her wife’s eyes as she smirks back smugly. Catra is about to say something, but is silenced by Adora’s lips.

They forget about the rest of their routine and surrender to a passionate kiss as hands drift over the mess of clothes, whip and lazzo.

She's an absolute terror for Absolute Territory

The guards hit the butt of their spears to the ground, sending a thundering noise through the room as the song ends. The crowd disperses and people start to cheer the couple. Another mellow song begins, inviting the guests to continue dancing as before.

Adora isn’t paying attention to any of this. She’s too busy holding it together after the dance, makeouts and innuendos. Her fingers still glide over Catra’s back as she notices that they can’t move.

Catra must have noticed, too as she looks at Adora with a fake panicked look that just makes them both break in fit of laughter.

“That. Was. Awesome!! Did you train for this? You recorded it right? Tell me you recorded it!” Bow says as he and Glimmer run up to them.

“Uu uuhm a little help Bow?” Catra says in between giggles.

Adora closes her eyes and breathes deeply to suppress her laughter. “Don’t worry love, I’ve got it.”

Warm light envelops them both as Adora returns to her normal size and transforms Catra and her clothes back to their original wedding gowns, leaving Catra’s whip at her side, just because she thinks it's hot.

“I can’t believe you two!” Glimmer tries—and fails—to sound angry. “I thought you were about to kill each other… again! You two are brats! You weren’t even really angry about the stupid title?”

Catra looks at her with a smirk, arms crossed, leaning on Adora’s chest. "It’s Bratty Princess of Power to you, Sparkles. Remember months ago, we were in our room and I said I'd kill you?”

Glimmer sighs pinching the bridge of her nose. “Catra, you have said that so many times lately that it has lost all meaning.”

Adora laughs behind Catra and pulls a burgundy pen from her pocket with a melog silhouette along it. “Remember how I got this?”

Glimmer’s face suddenly goes completely white as she realizes what Catra was talking about. “Hey, I apologised for that, so wait… this is payback for messing with the proposal letter?"

Catra cuts in, trying to prevent some of Glimmer's future payback on her wife. "And for being a bit of a bridezilla. You got on our nerves a bit, Sparkles."

Bow fake coughs and hugs Glimmer with an arm around her waist. “We were talking about it just before your dance started, right love?”

Glimmer raises her hands in defeat, smiling a bit through her embarrassed expression. “I know I know, I just wanted you to have the best we…—Wait, you weren't even angry at each other? You almost called the wedding off at one point!”

The newlyweds share a complicit gaze. Adora practically squeezes out a laugh from Catra as she hugs her from behind. "No Sparkles, we did it just to mess with you, it was so much fun."

“Oh you Horde Scum. I’ll get you back, you know that, right?” Glimmer tries—and fails again—to scold Catra.

Adora’s spaces out from the conversation, a look of ultimate bliss on her face as she hides in Catra’s neck. She quivers wonderfully as she breathes her wife’s scent in. For all she cares, there’s no one around them right now as she begins to bite at her wife’s neck.

“Hey, hey! Leave something for the wedding night, you two.” Glimmer sighs frustratedly and starts angrily waving and pointing at them.

"I swear you two are the brattiest… worst…" She tries to hide her laugh, failing and breaking. "You two were made for each other."
