One Night Only: Dethklok Plays Etheria

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/53347462.

Rating:
Mature

Archive Warnings:
Graphic Depictions Of Violence, Major Character Death

Categories:
F/F, F/M, Multi

Fandoms:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018), Metalocalypse (Cartoon)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Bow/Glimmer (She-Ra), Kyle/Lonnie/Rogelio (She-Ra)

Characters:
Adora (She-Ra), Catra (She-Ra), Bow (She-Ra), Glimmer (She-Ra), Melog (She-Ra), Kyle (She-Ra), Rogelio (She-Ra), Lonnie (She-Ra), Nathan Explosion, Pickles the Drummer, Toki Wartooth, Skwisgaar Skwigelf, William Murderface, Charles Foster Offdensen, Leonard "Rockso" Rockstein, Swift Wind | Spirit

Additional Tags:
Crack, Crack Treated Seriously, Crack Crossover, Humor, Attempt at Humor, Sexual Humor, Swearing, Canon-Typical Violence, Canon-Typical Violence for Metalocalypse, Canon-Untypical Violence for She-Ra, Gore, no beta we die like a needle under the haystack, Alcohol Abuse/Alcoholism, Alcohol, Drug Use, Drug Abuse, Cocaine, Blood and Gore, Blood and Violence

Language:
English

Series:
Part 6 of AthenasLilOwl's OkBuddyCatra Crack

Collections:
r/OkBuddyCatra Crack

Stats:
Published: 2024-01-28 Words: 7,304 Chapters: 1/1

One Night Only: Dethklok Plays Etheria

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/53347462.

Rating:
Mature

Archive Warnings:
Graphic Depictions Of Violence, Major Character Death

Categories:
F/F, F/M, Multi

Fandoms:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018), Metalocalypse (Cartoon)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Bow/Glimmer (She-Ra), Kyle/Lonnie/Rogelio (She-Ra)

Characters:
Adora (She-Ra), Catra (She-Ra), Bow (She-Ra), Glimmer (She-Ra), Melog (She-Ra), Kyle (She-Ra), Rogelio (She-Ra), Lonnie (She-Ra), Nathan Explosion, Pickles the Drummer, Toki Wartooth, Skwisgaar Skwigelf, William Murderface, Charles Foster Offdensen, Leonard "Rockso" Rockstein, Swift Wind | Spirit

Additional Tags:
Crack, Crack Treated Seriously, Crack Crossover, Humor, Attempt at Humor, Sexual Humor, Swearing, Canon-Typical Violence, Canon-Typical Violence for Metalocalypse, Canon-Untypical Violence for She-Ra, Gore, no beta we die like a needle under the haystack, Alcohol Abuse/Alcoholism, Alcohol, Drug Use, Drug Abuse, Cocaine, Blood and Gore, Blood and Violence

Language:
English

Series:
Part 6 of AthenasLilOwl's OkBuddyCatra Crack

Collections:
r/OkBuddyCatra Crack

Stats:
Published: 2024-01-28 Words: 7,304 Chapters: 1/1

One Night Only: Dethklok Plays Etheria

by AthenasLilOwl

Summary

"So let me get this straight. You," Nathan pointed at the Etherians, "are all aliens who live in a magical kingdom and you're in a war with a galactic overlord."

"That's the gist of it, I guess," nodded Bow, putting a spoonful of borscht in his mouth.

"And she is a magical warrior that turns into a ten foot tall super warrior with a massive sword?"

"Yeah?"

"So you're fighting space battles with a sword?" asked Pickles.

"I guess?"

"That's metal," said Nathan. Entire Dethklok nodded in agreement.

"I think that means it's a good thing," Glimmer whispered into Adora's ear. Adora beamed.

After a very drunken night, Dethklok finds themselves on Etheria. Once they find out about Horde Prime's invasion and the consequences thereof, they decide to do what they do best - to put on a metal show.

An r/OkBuddyCatra crack fic.

Notes

Standard disclaimer: This "work" is stupid, imbecilic, infantile, immature, impolite, inconsistent, inconsiderate, out-of-character, rude, crude, vulgar, explicit, degenerate, and the product of a probably seriously ill mind. You know, a crack fic. Frankly, no reasonable person should be reading this. That being said, please enjoy.

In case you read some of my other crack fics before - fair warning, this one is a bit different. Mind the tags and ratings.

This one was inspired by a post of mine on r/OkBuddyCatra asking for prompts. To avoid spoilers, I'll put the prompts in the end notes.

And by the way, the song Dethklok performs is Black Fire Upon Us .

See the end of the work for more notes

When Catra and Adora entered the cave in the Whispering Woods that was their current hideout, they found Glimmer slumped into a corner, sporting a sour mood as thick as brick walls. The same as they left her. The same as she had been for days.

"Hey, Glimmer," Adora spoke softly as she approached her. "You know how your mood hasn't been as stellar as it could be the past few days?"

Glimmer shot her a look that would've killed a lesser woman.

"Oh man, foot, meet mouth. Mouth, meet foot. I'm not good with words. I'm more the punchy type," she said, boxing through thin air. "You know that. Anyway, Catra and I have met someone, and he says he has something that can help."

"Something that can help?" Glimmer perked up. "A weapon? Supplies?"

"No, I mean… something that'll make you feel better."

Glimmer sank back into herself. Adora and Catra exchanged glances.

"I mean, it's worth a try, isn't it?" Adora continued hesitantly, pulling out a small see-through bag with white powder, shimmering in Glimmer's sparkles.

"Who is this person, anyway?" Glimmer asked, full of suspicion, while inspecting the contents of the baggie.

"We… don't really know. We found him lost in the woods. He looks a bit… strange."

"You brought a strange-looking guy to our secret hideout while Prime is looking for us all over?"

"We checked," replied Catra, "he's not chipped."

“Is he from Brightmoon?”

“He says he’s from… what was it again? Loss Angellas?” Adora looked over to Catra, who shrugged.

Glimmer stared at her in horrified disbelief.

“Something like that.” Catra, running out of fucks to give, was looking disinterestedly around the cave.

Glimmer’s eyes narrowed. “That’s not a real place.”

Adora shrugged.

“Where is he now?”

“Just outside.”

Glimmer got up and made towards the entrance, where she found a twitchy man waiting and poking around nervously in the grass. He had long, bright blue hair and was wearing a tight, green onesie which had a deep cut-out going from his neck all the way down to his groin, exposing his hairy chest for the world to suffer and barely covering the clearly visible bulge underneath. Black and white makeup in the shape of a spiked smile only emphasised the wrinkles of a fifty-something-year-old face. A big red ball with spikes covered his nose.

“What is this, society day?” Glimmer asked, immediately irritated by the clown’s appearance.

“No no no, babydoll, no such thing, society is not nice with poor Doctor Rockzo,” the man chirped with an annoyingly shrill voice. “I’m Doctor Rockzo. I do cocaine.”

Glimmer just blinked at him.

“Are you the cute little thing they told me about? The one that needs to have a good time?” Rockzo approached Glimmer.

“The what now?”

“That’s not what we said,” protested Adora.

“Don’t you worry your cute little head, baby, Doctor Rockzo has got just the thing for you.” He put his arm around her shoulder and leaned into her, whispering into her ear, “Seriously though. I do cocaine. So much cocaine.” His breath reeked of cheap booze and cigarettes.

Glimmer punched him in the stomach as hard as she could and immediately regretted coming into contact with his oily skin. A burning desire to take a bath spread through her chest.

“Don’t touch me, you creep,” she spat disgustedly.

“Doctor Rockzo just wanted to help,” he wheezed, gasping for air on the ground. “But everybody just hates clown,” he whined, “everybody hates Doctor Rockzo because he’s a rock’n’roll clown. It’s not fair. I didn’t do anything.”

Glimmer wondered if it would be a mercy to kill this creature on the spot and resisted the urge to kick him while he was on the ground. Instead, she held out the baggie with the white powder.

“What’s this?” she asked.

“C-c-c-c-c-cocaine, baby, yeah!” Doctor Rockzo chirped while getting up and dusting himself off. “It’ll make you feel real good, baby, I swear. That’s some good stuff you’re holding in your pretty little hand right there.”

“So… medicine?”

“Sure, baby, medicine. It’ll get you on your feet and then some, yeah!”

“How do you take it?”

"Any way you want, baby. In your eye, up your ass, smear it on your teeth, it'll all get it done. Best way is with your nose though, trust Doctor Rockzo. He does a lot of cocaine. Seriously, so much cocaine. Here, let me show you, baby."

He grabbed the baggie out of her hands, opened it up, and took a sniff so loud it echoed through the woods. Adora, Catra, and Glimmer watched in awe as the twitchy ball of misery straightened his back with a guttural scream into a twitchy bundle of energy.

"YEAH, baby, that's the stuff. Doctor Rockzo feels good now. Fuck yeah. Let's get this p-p-p-party star-ted."

"Damn, that stuff's got a kick to it," Catra said.

Glimmer took the baggie Doctor Rockzo was offering her back into her hands, grabbed a pinch of the white powder between her fingers and guided it to her nose. The powder stung her nostrils and she frowned, but she didn't feel anything change, which she came to expect upon observing Doctor Rockzo's reaction to the medicine. Perhaps she hadn't taken enough? As she wondered whether to take more, her thoughts were interrupted by the beeping communicator. She picked it up to see Bow's face appear on the screen.

"Glimmer, I've found something strange," Bow didn't waste any time. "Could need backup. Meet me by the tall tree by the river?"

"Coming," Glimmer confirmed. "I'm off," she added, addressing Adora and Catra. "See you in a minute." She disappeared in a flash of her sparkly magic.

As soon as she disappeared, a silent arrow flew unnoticed through the empty space where her head had been just a moment before and disappeared deep into the woods. Hidden in the bushes, Swiftwind stomped on his crossbow and cursed his fate of fingerless hooves. Soon the monarchy would fall, he swore.

Glimmer and Bow silently approached the meadow under the cover of the Whispering Wood's thickets, quietly observing the five strange-looking men strewn around what appeared to be an even stranger-looking vehicle. It had two visible wheels and a steerage in the centre, surrounded by two beetle-looking steel capsules on each side.

The men appeared utterly disorganised. The skinny tall man with long brown hair frolicked through the meadow, chasing butterflies. A skinny blonde man was leaning against the vehicle, holding and playing a V-shaped black stringed instrument, which oddly made only barely audible sounds. The third, a short man in boots and shorts, was stabbing the ground with a ridiculously and impractically ornate dagger, muttering something to himself. The fourth and fifth, a black-haired boulder of a man and a man with sparse bright red dreadlocks that did nothing to conceal his advanced hair loss, were arguing.

"I told you we should've taken a right at Albuquerque, Nathan, but you never listen!" whined the red-haired one.

"That's because we never went past Albuquerque, Pickles!" yelled his massive opposite. "We were in fucking Florida. Then we went to that bar. That's the last thing I remember. Florida. How the fuck should I take a right at Albuquerque in Florida, Pickles? Huh?"

"Well, you're the one steering. And now we're somewhere fuck knows where and there is nobody here and we have no reception on our phones and there aren't even bars to get drinks. What the fuck are we supposed to do now, Nathan? Toki's gonna miss his morning cartoons!" Pickles whined, pointing at the man frolicking in pursuit of butterflies.

"Is don'ts minds," Toki waved and turned back to chase the pretty insects and giggle.

"There aren't even roads here, Nathan," Pickles continued. "Not even roads. Where the fuck were you driving?"

Nathan let out a deep groan and covered his eyes in annoyance.

Glimmer's foot was restless with boredom. She scratched her itchy nose and continued observing in hiding.

"I told you I should drive," mumbled the man stabbing the ground.

"Shut up, Murderface," Nathan and Pickles barked simultaneously.

"All I'm saying is, if I had been the one driving, we'd still be drunk in a strip club now. A strip club with monster trucks," Murderface continued sulkingly.

"Whys yous wants to watch monsters trucks strip?" asked the tall blonde man without interrupting his playing. "I wants to watchs girls strips, nots monsters trucks. Monsters trucks are dildos."

"Your mom's dildos, Skwisgaar!" Murderface shouted.

"No, yours mom's dildos," Skwisgaar replied calmly.

"Enough!" Nathan yelled. "We need to figure out where we are and how to get out of here. And you fucking around isn't helping. So pack your shit up, we're leaving."

"Leaving where?" Pickles asked.

"I don't know. I guess we'll see. Just go straight ahead until we find a road. And then follow that road."

"Fine."

"And Murderface," Nathan turned to the short man, "go piss now. I'm not stopping in five minutes because you forgot to go again."

"I'm not gonna -"

"Nathan's right," Pickles agreed. "Go have a piss, Murderface."

“Fine, geez.” Murderface approached the woods and let his trousers down right in front of Bow and Glimmer. The close-up image of a thirty-something-year-old man’s penis which was routinely used to play death metal bass solos on stage would haunt them in nightmares for years to come. Etheria didn’t have therapists equipped to deal with the horrors Murderface was hiding in his pants.

Bow and Glimmer leapt up from their cover. “Halt, wait!” they yelled, averting their eyes. But it was too late - the penis was already burned onto their retinas, and a sprinkle of urine splashed onto their legs as Murderface, stumbling over his trousers around his ankles, fell over backwards.

“What the fuck?” he screamed.

“What the fuck!” Bow and Glimmer screamed.

“Who the fuck are you?” Nathan growled.

“Who the fuck are you?” Glimmer yelled back.

“Aww man, I pissed on my pants,” Murderface lamented. “Fuck you, you made me piss my pants!”

“Yous pissed yours pants two times yesterdays nights ins the bars,” Skwisgaar added calmly, still playing his guitar. “This is nots a news developments.”

“What the fuck are you doing in the bushes?” Nathan continued.

“Checking you out. We thought you may be with the enemy.”

“We’re Dethklok. We’re with no one.”

“And I’m Glimmer. Queen of Brightmoon.”

“Where the fuck is Brightmoon?”

“Must be in Europe,” Pickles suggested.

“You’re in it. You’re in my kingdom.”

“Great. We’ve managed to drink our way into Europe again,” Nathan sighed and covered his eyes with his hand again.

“So you’re not with Prime?” Bow asked.

“No, we’ve got our own record label,” Pickles replied.

“We’ll have to check,” Glimmer insisted.

“Check what?”

“Your necks. That you’re not chipped.”

“I had my chipped tooth fixed last month.”

“Not your teeth, your necks. Prime puts his tech chips on people’s necks.”

“We’re not cyborgs. Although that would be kinda metal.”

“Just show us your necks, please?” Bow asked. “So we can put this all behind us and go somewhere safe?”

“Ugh, fine.”

Bow and Glimmer found themselves staring at the most muscular necks they’d ever seen in their lives.

“We’re metalheads. We headbang,” Nathan explained unhelpfully. Bow and Glimmer nodded, pretending to understand what those words meant.

Content not to find any of Prime’s chips attached to their spines, Bow and Glimmer invited them back to the safety of the camp. As they entered the woods, a tree fell onto the exact spot where Glimmer had been standing moments before.

“Huh, strange,” she shrugged it off as she led Dethklok into the depths of the forest.

Hidden in the thickets, Swiftwind spat out the axe he was holding between his teeth so he could curse out his bad luck.

“So let me get this straight. You,” Nathan pointed at the Etherians, “are all aliens who live in a magical kingdom and you’re in a war with a galactic overlord.”

“That’s the gist of it, I guess,” nodded Bow, putting a spoonful of borscht in his mouth.

Doctor Rockzo, having demonstrated to Glimmer an expert’s approach to the nasal application of Kokainum once again, was running around the cave in the background, crashing into nearly everything on his path, tipping over boxes and crates.

“And this galactic overlord is chipping people to turn them into mindless slaves of his hive mind?” Pickles continued.

“Pretty much,” Adora replied, observing the clown’s dealings with growing concern.

" ‘Slave of the hive mind’ is a good name for a metal song," Nathan mumbled. He pulled out his tape recorder and pressed a button with a click. “Note to self: Song called ‘slave of the hive mind’,” he spoke into the recording device. “That’s brutal.” Putting the recorder away, he looked at Adora.

“And she is a magical warrior that turns into a ten foot tall super warrior with a massive sword?”

“Yeah?”

“So you’re fighting space battles with a sword?” asked Pickles.

“I guess?”

“That’s metal,” said Nathan. Entire Dethklok nodded in agreement.

“Waits,” interjected Skwisgaar. “Is its a metals swords? Or a lasers swords?”

“It’s metal, I guess? Some kind of magic metal?”

“Yes. Metals swords is goods. Thats is metals as fucks,” he nodded again, not interrupting his fast strumming on the unplugged electric guitar he didn’t separate from.

“I think that means it’s a good thing,” Glimmer whispered into Adora’s ear. Adora beamed.

Nathan pulled out his tape recorder again. “Song idea: Space battles with swords. Space vikings. Slaughter between the stars.”

“And you have cats that talk, and cats that don’t talk?” continued Pickles.

“Do you mean Catra? She’s not really a cat, no,” Adora replied.

Doctor Rockzo dropped another box with a crash.

“Neither is Melog,” added Bow. “Technically, at least. Where are those two, anyway?”

“I’ll go check,” Adora said, leaping up from her seat and strutting towards the cave exit.

As soon as she set foot outside, she spotted Catra on the metal monstrosity that was the five-seater Dethbike, which was parked close to the entrance. Catra was on all fours, her back arched and fur standing up, hissing and swatting at Melog below who also displayed all feline signs of aggression.

“Catra…?”

Catra’s head snapped towards Adora and instantly flushed with embarrassment. Her tail sank back down.

“What are you doing…?”

"Defending my spot from Melog. They wanted to push me off."

"From the vehicle?"

"Yes."

"Why are you on the vehicle, Catra? You're not even in a seat?"

"The engine's still warm," Catra admitted. "It's quality real estate for a nap."

Melog rose onto their hind legs and tried to push Catra off, to which she responded with hissing and swatting, her tail instantly raised and fluffed up again.

"I'm gonna leave you to it then," Adora said as she slowly backed into the cave.

"Okay. So I think I've got the gist of it," Murderface was saying as Adora took her seat again. "The only thing I don't understand is this. What the fuck is the fucking clown doing here."

"I don't know," whinnied Doctor Rockzo, not halting his chaotic marathon through the cave. "Doctor Rockzo woke up lost in the woods until the two babes found and saved me." He put his arm around Adora, who pushed it away immediately, accidentally spilling over Glimmer's cup in the process.

"I'm so sorry, Glimmer!" Adora instantly leapt up to clean the mess she's made.

"Don't worry about it."

Glimmer snorted another line of medicine in an attempt to make the clown's voice bearable. It was irritating even when he wasn't speaking. Her nose barely stung this time, but she felt herself getting impatient. Her foot bounced up and down under the table.

"How did you get here?" Bow asked.

“We don’t know,” replied Pickles. “We were out drinking yesterday night and then blacked out as usual and then… we woke up in the forest.”

“Last thing I remember is ordering one hundred beers,” added Nathan. “Like, literally. Literally one hundred beers.”

“Mes toos,” said Toki.

“Mes toos,” said Skwisgaar. “Ands somes vodkas.”

“That still doesn’t explain why the clown is here with us now,” sulked Murderface.

“Hes was with us yesterdays toos,” replied Skwisgaar.

“What? Why?”

“Because I inviteds him,” replied Toki.

“Why did you invite the fucking clown?”

“Because I likes him and he’s my friends and I wants to hangs outs with him!”

“You know I hate him! He fucking sucks!”

“No, he doesn’ts!”

“Yes, he does! He’s a fucking clown! And he’s disgusting. And touchy.”

“I likes thats about hims!”

“Enough!” Nathan interrupted. “We’re not having this discussion again. The clown’s here now. Deal with it. There’s a genocidal galactic overlord out there. The clown can stay until the genocidal galactic overlord is gone.”

“Oh, thank you, Nathan, baby, I knew you’d be on my side!” Doctor Rockzo chirped.

“If you touch me, I’ll kick your teeth in,” spat Nathan.

“We’ll discuss this again back home,” Murderface mumbled.

“We should all get some sleep,” Bow suggested. “While we still can. Adora, it’s your turn to have the first watch. Catra’s doing the second shift.”

Adora nodded and went to grab a blanket to keep warm in the cold windy night. And to give Catra every second she could for her to sort out her beef with Melog in privacy.

One by one, they all made into their sleeping bags for what would turn out to be a night with little rest. Swiftwind looked at Glimmer’s spilt cup in grief, as it had contained the last of his poison.

Glimmer woke to a stench of sweat and cigarette breath biting her nose, only to find a heavily made-up grinning clown face staring at her from mere inches away.

“You wanna do cocaine?” Doctor Rockzo whispered.

Glimmer screamed.

Doctor Rockzo screamed back at her with a smile on his face.

Bow, asleep behind Glimmer, shot up fully alert. “What’s going on?” he asked sharply while scanning the cave to assess the situation.

Glimmer grabbed Doctor Rockzo by the throat and disappeared in a flash, reappearing moments later on her own, breathing heavily.

“What was that?” Bow asked.

“That fucking creep crossed the line. Got way too close.”

“See, I told you the clown sucks,” Murderface added from his sleeping bag. The screaming had woken everyone in the cave.

“He doesn’ts sucks, he’s justs misunderstoods,” argued Toki.

Glimmer shot him an angry look.

“Where is he now?” Bow asked.

“I don’t know, I left him somewhere in the Crimson Waste.”

“You put him in the desert?”

“Oh don’t look at me like that. He’ll be fine. Plenty of people live there.”

“Glimmer…”

“I hope he dies there,” added Murderface.

“No, he’lls survives. He’s likes a cockroachs,” said Skwisgaar, who was using the opportunity of being awake late at night to practice playing scales up and down on his guitar at inhuman speeds. “Likes a cocroaches withs clowns makeups.”

“I knew you’d gets its!” smiled Toki. “He is likes a cockroachs. Shinys and funs and wants to lives in yours kitchens and eats yours foods with yous.”

Glimmer and Murderface groaned.

“Let’s get back to sleep,” Bow sighed. “There’s only a few hours left before dawn. And we’ve got a long day ahead of us.”

“What do you mean ‘there is no booze’?” Nathan pushed.

“Exactly that: That we have no booze,” Bow replied.

“Why not?”

“Because we’re in the middle of an invasion. We had to grab whatever we could when we were escaping, and booze was not a priority.”

“How can you live like this,” yammered Pickles. “No booze. That’s no life.”

“Well, it is what it is. We’re not big drinkers anyway.”

“That’s so not metal,” Nathan added.

Bow shrugged.

“Just to clarify: No booze.”

“No.”

“None?”

“None.”

“No bars? No restaurants? No strip clubs? No liquor stores? No gas stations?”

“Nope.”

“Well fuck this!” Nathan threw over a table.

“Hey!” Bow protested.

“And that’s because of the galactic overlord invading you?”

“… yes?”

“That does it. Guys,” Nathan called out, turning towards the rest of Dethklok, “we gotta do something about this overlord guy.”

“What do you want us to do?” Skwisgaar asked lazily, fingering his guitar.

“The thing we do best. We are gonna put on a show. Not just any show. We’re gonna play the darkest, blackest, most brutal metal concert in the galaxy,” he said, clenching his fist. “We are going to melt the skin off their faces and the flesh of their bones. We are going to make them regret ever separating Dethklok from booze. Demons will crawl back to hell to wither in their dark dungeons. Death will ride through their ranks on its pale horse. It’s going to be brutal.”

“Fuck yeah!” Murderface fistbumped the air, while Bow and Glimmer looked at each other in disbelief.

“How exactly is a concert going to help?” Bow asked tentatively.

“I don’t know,” replied Nathan. “But it always does. Weird things keep happening when we play. And now, we’re going to use metal for war. Oh, wait,” he said, pulling out his recording device. “Note to self: Metal for war - good song title,” he spoke into it.

Bow and Glimmer exchanged looks again, unsure whether it was them or Dethklok who had lost their mind.

“We need a stage,” Nathan said, addressing Bow and Glimmer. “What’s the biggest stage with the loudest equipment you have on the planet?”

“I guess right now, that would be Horde Prime’s spires? He used them to project himself as a huge hologram and talk to the entire planet, so probably that?”

“Perfect,” said Nathan, “that’s exactly what we need. How do we get there?”

“Funny you ask. We were planning on sneaking in there anyway. We should be able to neutralize the hive network from there with this device Entrapta built.”

“Good. Let’s go then.”

“What, now?”

“Yes, now. I don’t wanna stay sober on this piece of shit planet.”

“Hey!” Bow and Glimmer protested.

“Guys, pack your shit up,” Nathan ordered. “We’re going to this spire thing to put on a show.”

“Nathan,” Pickles interjected. “Just one problem.”

“What?”

“There’s no booze.”

“I know. That’s why we’re doing this.”

“No, Nathan. There’s no booze.”

“I know.”

“No, Nathan. How are we supposed to play without booze? We never play sober.”

It took a moment for Nathan to click.
“Fuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuuck,” he groaned.

“You sure you don’t have any booze?” Pickles tried again.

“Yes, very sure.”

“Hm. Ok.” Pickles pondered their predicament. “Well, maybe the cocaine will do?” he suggested.

“I guess,” Skwisgaar agreed.

“If there’s nothing else,” Murderface mumbled.

“If it’s justs for this shows, thens its should suffice,” Toki added.

“Fine,” Nathan said. “It’ll do. Can we have the cocaine?”

Glimmer patted her right pocket. Then her left pocket. Then her back pockets. Then her entire body.

“That motherfucker stole it!” she yelled.

“I hate that motherfucking clown so damn much,” Murderface mumbled.

“Oh that piece of shit, when I get to him…” Glimmer muttered.

“Okay. Okay. So first we go and find the fucking clown and get the cocaine,” Nathan sighed, pinching himself between the eyes to relieve the incoming headache, “and then we get to the fucking spire, play the most brutal show ever to have existed, and then we get hammered. Any objections?”

While Bow and Glimmer had several, they kept them to themselves. As stupid as this was, they could use every bit of help they could get to make it alive into the spires.

As the last daylight disappeared on the horizon, Nathan knocked on the shack’s shabby door. It nearly fell apart. Hushed voices from the inside betrayed that his knocking was heard, and soon a scrawny young man opened the door.

“We’re looking for the clown.”

“Look within,” the young man replied and closed the door.

“Wait, Kyle?” Adora, concealed behind the mountainous Nathan, stepped forward and knocked on the door again. “Kyle, is that you?”

“Adora?” Kyle opened the door again.

“What are you doing here?” she asked.

“What are you doing here?”

"We came searching for the clown. Glimmer dropped him off in the desert yesterday night, and now we followed his footsteps in the sand here. Is he here?"

"Maybe, maybe not. What's it to you?"

"Well look at that, Kyle has grown a spine," Catra said. "Who would've thought."

"Oh. You're here too."

"What are you doing here?" Catra stuck to the question. "Didn't you want to stay with the Horde?"

"Nah, we deserted a while ago. It's a long story."

"Couldn't you have forested instead? This desert sucks," Murderface bitched.

"The guys here are going to help us launch an attack on Horde Prime," Adora continued, pointing at Dethklok. "But we need the… medicine the clown is carrying. So is he around?"

"You mean the cocaine?"

"So he is here," Catra concluded.

"Come in," Kyle sighed.

The shack was sparsely furnished. A handful of sleeping bags were stuck in a corner, folded into rolls. Lonnie and the massive lizardman that was Rogelio were sitting with Doctor Rockzo. Rogelio, towering above the others, was also holding the baby Hordak clone, who was asleep in his arms.

"There you are!" Glimmer yelled, pointing at Doctor Rockzo. "You stole my cocaine!"

"Nah, baby, that was my cocaine, I brought it. I'm Doctor Rockzo. I do cocaine."

“You bitchface took it out of my pocket while I was asleep,” Glimmer continued yelling.

“Why don’t you make yourselves comfortable,” Kyle suggested with a sigh. “It’s getting dark. You’ll probably have to spend the night. The Waste is treacherous in the dark.” He went to stoke the fire and hung a kettle above it to make some tea. “And please no more yelling. You’ll wake the little one.”

As everyone took a seat wherever they could find some free space, Adora greeted the other former Horde soldiers with hearty hugs and introduced them to Bow and Glimmer. Stories were exchanged over the weak tea that Kyle offered them - stories of journeys through space to face Horde Prime, stories of battles and desertion, stories of fighting for survival during the invasion. No Etherian had had it easy in recent days. Neither did Dethklok, given that the deserters didn’t have any booze on hand either.

Eventually, Adora told them about their plans to storm Horde’s spires, to hijack his networks and disable the hive communications. And that Dethklok was willing to help so they could play a gig for all Etheria to see. But they needed the cocaine for Dethklok to perform a proper Dethklok show.

“So you just want to march up in there tomorrow?” Kyle asked astounded.

“Kinda. We’ll try sneaking in first, but that probably won’t get us far. Once we’re detected, it’s all out battle into the spire. We’ll only need a couple of undisturbed minutes in there to disable the communications. From then on, it should get easier. Heck, we could basically win the war. Prime’s clones fall apart as soon as they’re disconnected. Mentally, at least.”

“Win the war,” Kyle leaned back in awe. “That sounds too good to be true.”

“We got to try at least,” insisted Adora. “It’s our best chance.”

“And for that you want cocaine?” Doctor Rockzo asked sleazily while pulling out the nearly empty baggie.

“Fuck, did you finish it all by yourself?” Glimmer shouted.

“Oh don’t worry, baby, Doctor Rockzo’s got you covered,” he said and produced four more burstingly full baggies of white powder. “You wanna do some cocaine?”

“Fuck yeah!” Glimmer leapt up, oblivious to Bow’s concerned gaze.

“So you really think you could end this war?” Kyle asked again.

“Yes. We have to.”

“Huh. I guess I never really thought about that.”

Doctor Rockzo and Glimmer sniffed a line off the table.

“About ending the war?”

“No, that for sure, but I mean… after. We’ve gone from being soldiers to deserters struggling to hide and survive. But with the war over, we wouldn’t need to anymore. We could… I don’t know, have a future?”

Loud sniffing sounds filled the room again.

“Huh,” Adora uttered. “I guess didn’t really think about an ‘after’ either.”

“It feels weird. A bit scary, I guess.”

“Don’t be scared, baby, here, have some,” Doctor Rockzo offered, preparing another line.

“Is this… safe?” Kyle asked.

“Yeah, baby, it’ll make you feel real good, trust me. Even the fucking queen does it with Doctor Rockzo, it’s fine,” he insisted.

Kyle shrugged and leaned over the fine line of white powder to inhale it.

"Did you guys ever think about what comes after the war?" Adora asked Bow and Glimmer.

"Sure. We've got to rebuild. And then I've got a kingdom to run," Glimmer replied.

"I gotta make sure my dads are all right, and then I guess help wherever I can?" Bow said.

"And I can't wait to have a proper bed again," Glimmer added, rubbing her nose. "I need to fuck my boy archer proper for once. In a proper bed. Like for an entire day. No, two days. No, three. Three days of fucking my boy. Non-stop."

Bow went beet-red from head to toe. So did Adora, while Catra chuckled.

"What?" Glimmer asked. "It's not like it's a secret."

Kyle snorted down the residues of the powder in his nostrils and rubbed his stinging nose. "Fuck it," he exclaimed, "I want that too."

Glimmer's and Bow's heads snapped towards him.

"Not you," Kyle continued sheepishly with a slight blush. "A bed. And some peace. And quiet. And some company," he said, turning to Rogelio. "You hear that? When this is over, we're getting a bed, and I'll be fucking you good and proper, love." He grabbed him by the neck and kissed him, sticking his tongue inside him almost immediately. They made out for an uncomfortably long time in front of everyone. Nobody had an idea how to interrupt the moaning and slurping, and they just kept staring at the spectacle unfolding in front of their eyes unable to look away. Except for Doctor Rockzo, who, naturally, snorted another line of coke.

"And you too," Kyle said, wiping his lips as soon as he finally separated from Rogelio and turning to Lonnie. "The three of us are going to have us a good fuckathon once this is over." He began making out with her as if shame and timidity were foreign concepts of estranged cultures to him, not constant companions throughout his life.

"Damn, Kyle's got it going on," Catra whispered.

"Jealous?" Adora whispered back.

"Shut up," Catra whispered back, blushing.

"Fuck this," Kyle yelled as he untangled his tongue from Lonnie's. He leapt up, and the raging erection he was sporting lifted up the table.

"Rockzo, give me another shot!" he demanded.

"Here you go, baby," Doctor Rockzo said while throwing a baggie towards him.

Kyle took another deep snort and let out a scream of ecstasy, while most of the guests were just trying to shield their eyes from his pitched tent pointing all over the room.

"Fuck yeah!" Kyle bellowed. "And fuck this. We're going to battle. I'm going to battle. Because I," he shouted while putting his hands down his pants, "have the power. By the power of Greyskull!"

An electric tingling filled the room as magic lightning struck Kyle's meatsword. His ragged Horde uniform disappeared, turning into a tightly strapped chest piece, while Kyle's body itself grew twice in size and at least tenfold in muscle mass. He-Kyle's physique could easily rival She-Ra's now, although the sword he was holding was made for love, not war. Rogelio, Lonnie, Bow, and Glimmer fanned themselves with some fresh air, enjoying what they were seeing.

“To battle!” he shouted with a deep manly-man voice and ran through the shack’s wall, leaving a He-Kyle-shaped hole in it.

“Erm…” Adora managed to stammer looking through the hole in the wall, “Do we go after him?”

Lonnie shrugged. “Nah. He’ll be fine. He knows where to find us. And he’s not gonna get into too much trouble. There’s desert for miles around us.”

Adora concernedly looked through the hole again, but He-Kyle was already too far gone to be seen.

“Let’s get to sleep,” Bow suggested. “Tomorrow’s a big day.”

They got as close as they could to the spire while remaining undetected, but nothing in this world could’ve prepared them for what they saw when they arrived. Carnage. Utter and complete carnage. Dozens, if not hundreds, of Prime’s bots and drones lay destroyed in the fields. Broken bodies of Prime’s clones were scattered, beaten and shattered. Some dismembered, some decapitated. With limbs sticking out in painful-looking angles. Bones and ribs broke through their skin, their teeth strewn through the fields like pearls before swine. Few were still twitching, but life left them soon enough.

“Brutal,” Nathan commented. Dethklok nodded in agreement.

“Who or what did this?” Glimmer asked. The He-Kyle-shaped hole in the main entrance doors answered that question rather quickly. They found him inside, preparing a new line of coke from a nearly empty baggie.

“Ah, there you are!” he greeted them. “Sorry you missed all the fun, but I got impatient.”

The Etherians stared at his hands covered in blood and guts with deep horror, and just as much dread at his still raging erection protruding under his tight He-Kyle shorts. Poor Lonnie and Rogelio, some thought. Lucky Lonnie and Rogelio, others thought.

"Anyway, what was this about getting their communications down?" He-Kyle continued before diving his nostrils into the powder.

"Right. I'm on it," Bow jumped into action. He quickly found the terminal he was looking for and began wiring cables and tapping on keyboards, while everyone else stood around awkwardly and tried not to think about the ~~erection~~ elephant in the room.

The awkward silence was only perturbed by Bow's silent cursing while he was working his tech master magic. The cursing became increasingly frequent and louder until Bow finally yelled out a hearty "Fuck" and wiped sweat off his brow.

"What's wrong?" Glimmer asked concerned.

"It's not working. Prime must have noticed that we snatched the data. The encryption's completely different. I can't access the hive mind network."

"Well, shit. What do we do now?"

"How about some cocaine?" Doctor Rockzo suggested.

"No. Now we do it our way," Nathan said calmly.

"Pssst, Nathan," Pickles whispered. "Our way includes the cocaine. No booze, remember?"

"Oh yeah. Rockzo, give us the cocaine. And you, arrow boy, can you set up a live broadcast?"

"I think so, yes."

"Then do it." He turned to Dethklok. "You heard him, guys. Now get your coke, and then set up. Dethklok is playing a gig tonight."

A terrible sound, never heard before on Etheria, shook the ground. It screeched through the air, heavy as a hundred tons of steel being dragged over decaying asphalt, weeping under the heavy load. Every living creature with ears on them listened up and looked towards the spires strewn over the planet, where the monumental sound came from. Two titanic holograms of Toki Wartooth and Skwisgaar Swigelf appeared, projected from the spires, as they were playing their guitars. Not a second later, fast drumming joined the permeating noise. A five hundred feet tall projection of Pickles the Drummer joined Toki and Skwisgaar. As a heavy, deep base joined the ensemble, so did Murderface's image. They set off a moderately paced song.

With them having laid down the tune, Nathan Explosion finally appeared as well, holding a microphone.

"Etherians," he growled into the mic and clenched his free fist. "We are Dethklok. And we are here to play the darkest, most brutal metal the galaxy has ever heard. So listen up, because we won't do this for free again. Ever."

The air trembled as Pickles added double-bases and Toki and Skwisgaar picked up the melody, laying down the main motif of the song. Etherians felt the soundwaves blasting through them. The drum beats were pumping through their veins like a second heart. The guitars were shredding through their muscles like knives. The heavy sound shook their very core.

Finally, Nathan pulled the mic back up and began.

Tonight, we ride on clouds of fire

We're damned by gods, our deaths conspired

We fear no mortals in this world

The gift we give you is your soul

As the guitar solo set in, dark red lightning flashes spread from the spires, covering the entire planet in a dim chaotic fishnet of crimson tattered bursts of unknown power, knocking everyone off their feet to the ground.

Fly with us, tonight

Fly with us, tonight

One by one, Etherians got back up on their feet. As they lifted themselves from the ground, the chips on their necks fell off like dry leaves, buzzing with red sparks.

The sky will break

Black fire will wake

As they gathered their wits, Etherians looked upon Prime's clones among them. Being dressed in all white and with their shiny green eyes shining, they stood out like lighthouses. Like moths to a flame, the Etherians were drawn towards the subjects of their hatred and vengeance.

Fly on, through the night

We built an alliance, our numbers are strong

We gather, but we don't pray to gods

"What fools, what lunatics", they must think of us

Sticks. Branches. Spoons. Kitchen knives. Forks. Brooms. Torches. Pitchforks. Hammers. Sickles. Whatever could serve as a makeshift weapon was being picked up by Etherians as they encircled Horde Prime's clones and bots among them.

On this night, we will journey

Far, beyond this world

And you must know

That we will never come back home, again

Prime's clones and bots were getting beaten to death without hesitation, without mercy. Their poisonously green blood splattered through the red skies as if Etherians tried to paint the black clouds into its colour. Skulls were smashed. Limbs were broken. Teeth were kicked in. Ribs were shattered. Heads were caved in. The Etherians' fervor was relentless.

But now we must fly, beasts in the night

Tragic in the sky, battlefield in sight

Storm gathers strong, cold blackened flame

Tell us our future, stories of the slain

Fire grows strong, freezing our skin

Vision is clouded, the rain will begin!

Horde Prime, sitting on his white throne far away on his main ship, was watching Dethklok's broadcast intently with mild concern. He did not understand what was going on, nor why his mind control chips were failing so suddenly. With his focus aimed at Dethklok, he failed to notice that the entire hive mind was also listening in. He also failed to notice the eyes of his servant clones behind him losing their green colour to a brightly shining red.

Dangerous creatures, those that opposed us

Raped all their power, bartered with warlocks

Cheated the demons for ancient spells

The blackened fire waits to consume us

Clones fell over Prime like a haystack over a needle. They tore him apart, limb from limb, and finally turned against each other in their rage. Green blood flooded the white floors of Prime's ship as mayhem overtook it.

So now, we'll say goodbye

Because tonight, we die

So, we say goodbye

So, we'll say goodbye

We die!

One by one, Prime's ships in Etheria's orbit were shaken by explosions and fell through the skies, drawing long burning trails of black fire through the skies.

Tonight, we ride on clouds of fire

We're damned by gods, our deaths conspired

We fear no mortals in these worlds

The gift we give you is your soul

"That was amazing," Adora beamed.

"Frankly, insane," agreed Bow.

They all watched Prime's burning ships fall through the red skies like shooting stars.

"We're Dethklok. We're always amazing", replied Nathan. "Now, where's the booze?"

"I can't believe it's over. It's done. It's not real, is it?"

"Looks pretty real to me," replied Catra.

"We won?"

"Looks like it."

“We won. We won! Hell yeah, we won! You hear that, Swiftwind, we won!” In her joy, she slapped the winged horse next to her on the butt. This startled the easily spooked birdbrain, who kicked out his hind legs, hitting Glimmer square in the face and splattering her brains all over the wall.

“Brutal,” said Nathan, staring at the scene.

“Fuck, Glimmer!” The Etherians gathered around her twitching body, which was soon rendered lifeless.

“Is she… dead?” Swiftwind asked timidly.

“She is,” Bow replied in tears. “Why did you do that, Swiftwind? What’s wrong with you?”

“It was an accident! She slapped me and I got startled! Everyone knows never to approach a horse from behind!”

“Oh Glimmer,” Adora wailed. Catra quietly sat next to her, her tail tucked in, ears low.

“So… she’s dead?” Swiftwind asked again.

“Yes, Swiftwind, she’s gone,” Adora replied grimly.

“FUCK YES!” Swiftwind jumped up and down. “Down with the monarchy! Long live anarchy for my equestrian brothers and sisters! No longer will we serve the bidding of the royal masters!”

“That’s… brutal,” said Nathan. “Oh, wait.” He pulled out his recording device again. “Note to self: Song ideas. Killed by a horse for anarchy. Horse-archy. Hoof in your skull. Hoofskulled. Face hooved. No, wait, we already did ‘face fisted’. Maybe ‘splattered by a hoof’? A horse paints with brains on the wall?” He turned off the recording with a click. “I’ll have to workshop this.”

As the Etherians, including Swiftwind, were looking at him in disbelief, a brightly shining circular portal opened next to them. A dozen men with guns and black linen bags on their heads leapt through it, taking formation and followed by a bespectacled man in a suit and immaculate hair.

“There you are, boys,” the man said. “I’ve been looking all over for you.”

“Oh, hey Charles,” Nathan replied.

“Who’s this?” Catra asked.

“This is Charles. Our manager.”

“Hi, nice to meet you,” Charles interrupted. “Unfortunately, we’re on a tight schedule. Keeping the portal open costs us about twenty-three million dollars per second. So we should hurry up. And go. Go home. Now. This instant. Chop-chop. Let’s go.”

“But I don’ts wanna goes yet,” Toki argued. “We just mades a lots of news friends and I wants to hangs outs with them for a bit.”

“Can’t you give us a minute? We just finished playing a gig,” Pickles whined. “We didn’t even get our drinks yet.”

“Why were you playing a gig on a foreign planet?” Charles asked.

“There was this whole thing with some galactic overlord,” Nathan replied, “and because he was invading or something they didn’t have any booze, yada yada, so we played a gig so we could finally get some booze now.”

“So, to clarify, you played a concert in exchange for alcohol?”

“I mean… kinda.”

“What do you mean, ‘kinda’?”

“They didn’t really promise anything. And we didn’t sign a contract.”

Charles’ eyes narrowed. “You played a concert without a contract?”

"Yeah, you said we should never sign any contracts without you present. So we didn't."

Charles sighed.

"All right boys, let's just agree to never do this again. And let's go home now. Come on."

Dethklok stared at their feet.

"Come on," Charles insisted. "Let's go. We gotta go. Now. Chop-chop. Now. Let's go. Come on. Come on. Let's go."

Nathan groaned.

"We've got booze at home," Charles offered.

"Alright, fine, let's go," Nathan said. "Bye, guys. See you around or something."

And with that, Dethklok (and Doctor Rockzo) stepped through the portal never to be seen on Etheria again, once again having saved a planet while having no fucking clue what they were doing. And to those of you grieving Queen Glimmer's death, let me leave you with Dethklok's immortal words inspired by Mashed Potato Johnson:

There is no escape but death; Your life is just a murder train a-comin'

The End <3

End Notes

Hope you enjoyed it! This was my first attempt at an actual crossover treated seriously. I'd say it definitely swung more into the Metalocalypse directon than the She-Ra one. At least in my mind, this whole thing played like a good old Metalocalypse episode. Hope it did for you too!

As promised, here are the prompts: It all started with this post , where I asked for prompts, promising to make a crack fic out of the three most upvoted ones. The winners were:

u/JamesTheIceQueen with:

> Kyle turns out to be He-Man. He can warp into his special form by holding his erect penis and yelling "BY THE POWER OF GRAYSKULL".

u/Darksouls_Is_Easy with:

> Catra acts around Melog like a normal cat and has a an akward moment when someone finds out.

u/PullItFromTheColimit with:

> I don't have a main theme, but a background plot could be Swiftwind constantly trying to assasinate (an adult) Glimmer in exagerated ways in order to overthrow the oppressive regime that is an absolute monarchy. You will have my eternal gratitude if he actually succeeds.
>
> Also, happy new year to you.

and a special shout-out to u/General-Estate-3273 for > catra and abora sell glimmer powder which is like cocaine but sparkly and then horde prile is like the goverment and hunts the gays in his space car that goes vroom which put the idea of Catra and Adora selling cocaine to Glimmer, which brought Doctor Rockzo into my mind, which escalated in... well... this.

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!