Waiting

by Midnight_Owl2

Summary

Adora starts to worry after Catra falls unconscious after reading the inscription from the strange memorial in the mysterious ruins they found. Adora and her friends act quickly to get Catra back to Brightmoon where it's safe. Whilst they wait for Catra to awake, Adora discusses her worries with Melog and they managed to connect/communicate with her in ways neither of them imagined.

Notes

This fic is an extra chapter to my original fic: Finding Halfmoon. To understand this fic, I highly advise reading Finding Halfmoon first.

Finding Halfmoon Readers - This story occurs between Chapter 3 (Mysteries) and Chapter 4 (Visions). This extra chapter explores how Adora is feeling after everything that has happened so far. Hope you enjoy.

See the end of the work for more notes

The drawings continue, followed by a bold inscription at the top. Below lies a series of hand prints, all of which are the same shape and style as Catra's hand. There are three together that look to be in the shape of a heart. Catra's hand brushes over them before her hand rests on the smallest one. It's almost like she's in a trance.

"Can you read what it says?" Entrapta asks.

If I wasn't able to read them then I don't know how Catra will be able to. I know she said they look familiar but I have bad feeling about this.

Catra takes a few steps back from the wall and looks up… "Halfmoon."

I barely have any time to react before it happens. A bright green flash of light appears at the top of the rock face. Catra's stumbles backwards, I only just manage to catch her. Her ears lie flat against her head, her eyes tightly shut.

"Catra? Catra what's wrong?"

It's like she can't hear me. The others gather around her, trying to figure out what's happened. Neither of us saw anything, there was no attack, only a word and now she's like this. None the less the others prepare for an attack, whilst I try to work out what has happened to Catra.

"It's not real. It's not real!" Catra's shouts as her claws move to dig into her scalp. I move to the front of her, my hands form a firm grip on her shoulders. If she can't hear me maybe she can feel me.

"What's happening to her? Entrapta did you see anything after she said that word?" Glimmer asks, clearly distressed for her friend.

“I didn’t see anything and my tracker pad didn’t detect anything either… but it did malfunction after she said that word.”

“ENTRAPTA!”

Both Glimmer and Bow shout in unison. If my focus wasn’t on Catra right now I probably would have had the same reaction as them. I can deal with that later.

“I’m sorry but there is no clear sign of an ambush or anyone in the vicinity but us. You know my tracker pad has been acting up ever since we got here. Besides, the green flash of light only appears to be a reflection from a stone gem held within the rock face.”

“That still doesn’t explain what’s happening to Catra.” Bow states as he tries to keep everyone calm.

“PLEASE MAKE IT STOP!”

Catra’s is now practically screaming but no matter how hard I try to communicate with her, to let her know that I’m here and that she’s safe, nothing seems to work.

“Why isn’t anything working? Her panic attacks are never usually this sever. The last time she was like this was back after we got her back from Prime. She usually comes round for them fairly quickly.”

I look over to my friends trying to find some answers. Melog’s mane is turning all shades of colours. I’ve never seem them this confused or anxious before. It’s enough to make me worry even more.

For once Entrapta says something useful… “Maybe she isn’t having a panic attack, well not completely at least. How do we not know that the flash of light has triggered something in her memories which is making her relive something that has already happened?”

“That can trigger a panic attack Entrapta, but she does have a point. Does anyone know how to snap her out of a potential vision crisis.” Bow asks.

“You don’t. As scary as they seem you have to let them run its course.” Glimmer states.

Glimmer is right, as much as I hate to see Catra like this you have to wait it out, regardless of whether it is a panic attack or something more. All you can do is be there for the person in distress.

Melog’s mane starts to slowly return to its natural shade of blue, although their mane now looks a bit tattered and rough just like Catra’s fur. Catra’s breathing is also starting to slow down, even though it is still a bit jittery. Her muscles are starting to relax. I can tell she’s coming round again. I ask our friends to give her some space so she doesn’t feel crowded. My firm grip on her shoulders remains strong…

“Catra?”

Finally, it’s over. Catra looks up to me. Her pupils are nothing more than thin slits. They’re also extremely glassy like she was holding back her tears. I’ve seen this look once before. It’s worrying.

“Adora…”

Catra’s body goes limp and she starts to fall to the ground. It’s my quick reflexes that allow me to catch her. Her eyes look to me one more time before they close shut…

“Catra? Catra! No! Please no! Don’t do this to me!”

Tears threaten to fall from my eyes and I lower us toward the ground holding Catra close. My first instinct is to check for her pulse.

It’s strong and steady, her breathing is okay too. So what happened?

The others rush forward, all asking is she okay. I spring into action...

"We need to get her back to Brightmoon."

"I can teleport us back to Darla but I will only be able to get us back to Brightmoon from a certain point. Usually I could do it in one leap but for some reason it's like the Whispering Wood's is preventing me from doing so."

There is a hint of sadness in Glimmer's voice. Although she's powerful she can't fight with the magic of Etheria. Believe me we've tried. Ever since the magic from the Heart of Etheria was released all of the princesses have become stronger when using their powers, but sometimes the magic itself resists.

Why out of all the times it could do that why does it has to be now?

"It'll have to do."

"Alright. Everyone hold on."

POOF

Within a matter of seconds we're back on board of Darla. Everyone rushes to their positions, making sure to have Darla ready to travel at full speed. Bow gets some water for Catra should she wake up soon. Glimmer contacts her dad who promises to make sure that Castaspella is at Brightmoon when we arrive. Entrapta is setting some coordinates on Darla's control pad, choosing the quickest, slightly more bumpy, route to get us home. Melog stays besides me as I rest Catra on one of Darla's more comfortable lounge seats.

~ Awaiting Instruction. Where is your desired destination? ~

"Brightmoon. And Darla, make is quick."

~ Affirmative. Predicted time over arrival at Brightmoon in 15 minutes. ~

"I'll teleport you over there the second I'm able to. She's going to be okay Adora."

I can only hope Glimmer is right. The last time I saw Catra like this I almost lost her. I won't let that happen again. Catra's my everything, I'd be lost without her. I too almost panicked when this happened, but I have to keep it together, for myself and for Catra.

Melog mewls besides me and nudges Catra's hand. She doesn't respond. I stroke Melog on their head, trying my best to ease their distress.

"Hang in there Catra. I've got you. We'll be home soon. You're going to be okay."

"So she's going to be okay?"

"Of course Adora. All that has happened to Catra is that she has entered an unconscious state. Probably a mix of exhaustion and what ever happened when you visited that place has caused her to enter 'burn-out'. You Adora out of all people know what that feels like."

Thank stars Catra's okay. I was starting to worry it was something more serious. I should have seen the signs. Of course she was tired. Those nightmares have been keeping her awake all week. I should have done something sooner. I should have told her to rest. I should have taken the day off with her. I should have fought harder for us.

“Why didn’t She-Ra’s healing abilities work? I know I couldn’t use them on myself because of how exhausted I was but it worked when I last healed Catra.”

“The reason She-Ra didn’t work is because despite She-Ra being able to achieve many amazing things she cannot reverse the affects fatigue. Even great warriors like you need to rest.”

Castaspella’s words puts my mind at ease. At least I know that using She-Ra hasn’t done more damage than good.

Glimmer teleported us to Brightmoon the second she felt her connection again. Micah and Castaspella where ready and waiting for us. I placed Catra gently on our bed and they got to work examining her. I didn’t know until recently that Castaspella, despite being a powerful sorceresses, is also a healer.

Catra and Casta get on quite well. I remember when Catra got her first ever sweater from Casta for her birthday. Catra loves it, even though she has admitted to it being quite itchy at times. I feel more comfortable knowing that someone Catra and I trust is able to make sure she’s okay. It makes trusting healers like Casta easier as we don’t have to worry about speaking to someone we don’t know or trust if needed.

Entrapta and Bow stayed with Darla and arrived back about ten minutes ago. Melog has been resting at Catra’s side ever since we got back, occasionally nudging her hand. I can’t comfort them like Catra does. I don’t know how to ease their pain. I feel so useless.

Glimmer has been besides me ever since we got back, promising me that… “Catra will be okay. She’ll pull through whatever this is.”

“What do we do now? Is there anything we can do to help her.” Glimmer asks wanting to help in anyway she can.

“Sadly the only thing we can do is keep her comfortable and wait for her to wake up.” Micah responds, trying to put Glimmer’s mind at ease.

“How long before you think she’ll wake up?” I hear Bow ask. If I wasn’t so worried about Catra right now I probably would have asked myself.

“It’s difficult to say. You remember when Adora hit ‘burn-out’ she was out of it for a good few hours. It could be shorter than that, but it might be longer than that. It all depends on how exhausted Catra was and how stressed she has been. The only thing we can do is let this run its course.” Castaspella responds. I can sense a hint of worry in her voice.

I should have seen the signs. I should have done something. I could have stopped this from happening. Why did I have to be so stupid. Why… why won’t she tell me the truth about what’s going on?

“Thank you Castaspella and Micah for checking her over. Do you need me to come and find you when she wakes up?”

“You’re very welcome Adora and you don’t need to unless you are concerned. A part from being in this situation Catra appears to be perfectly fine. But if you need anything, you know where to find us.”

As the others go to make their leave, I take a seat next to Catra on our bed. My hand reaches for hers, holding it tightly. It doesn’t feel right when her hand doesn’t respond the same way it usually does.

“We should go. Give them some time alone.” I hear Bow whisper to the others.

“You and Entrapta go ahead. I’ll be with you in a minute.”

The door quietly shuts and I hear faint footsteps move closer towards me. I don’t hide my tears anymore I let them fall…

“This is all my fault Glimmer. I should have seen the signs. I should have never taken her with me t-to see Razz that day. I should have stopped her from going on that mission. S-she's in t-this state because of me."

Glimmer moves quickly and pulls me into a strong hug from the side, allowing me to rest my head against her shoulder as my tears fall at an alarming rate. She gently rubs smooth circles on my back, trying to get me to calm down.

"None of this is your fault Adora. None of us knew what we were going to find or what was going to happen at that place."

"But it is my fault Glimmer. I took her to Razz's who first mentioned Halfmoon and then I took her to that place and then this happened."

"Okay first of all, did you force Catra to go with you to see Razz?"

"No, but I…"

"And did you make Catra go to that place? Did you?"

"No. But I should have said something beforehand. She didn't have to go if she didn't want to."

"I think we both know when Catra gets an idea in her head she going to do it. I don't think she would have gone if she didn't want to. Maybe, with everything going on, she got a bit curious and wanted to see what was going on for herself. Besides, you know how none of us can resist the excitement of a Best Friend Squad Adventure."

A watery giggle escapes me and Glimmer hands me a tissue. It helps to calm me down and my tears start to subside.

"You know Catra would probably threaten to kill you if she heard you say that."

"Probably, but I know she wouldn't dare try. She enjoys them secretly."

Glimmer's not wrong there. As much as Catra denies hating the 'silly group name' I know for a fact she enjoys our adventures. I look to Catra, remembering all the fun adventures we have had and all the worries that have come with them. We got through them all as a team and we'll get through this one too. Melog leans over Catra and licks my hand, softly smiling. I might not be able to communicate with them like Catra does but I'm glad they're here.

After a while, Glimmer decides that it's time for her to leave and give me some space.

"You shout me if you need anything okay. Food, water, whatever it be, just give us a call and either Bow or I will bring it. I'm not having the Horde Scum battering me from not taking care of my best friend."

I smile back at Glimmer, giggling a little bit as I know she's right… "I will I promise. If I need water there's the sink in there and I'm not hungry right now, but if I need anything else. I'll give you a shout. Promise."

Seemingly satisfied by my answer, Glimmer exits my room and I go back to worrying about Catra.

I'm not sure how long it's been: minutes, hours, I have no concept of time. Melog and I decided that it's probably best if we got Catra in her pajamas as they're less restrictive than her normal clothes. I know she deliberately wears them because of the effect her 'boob window' has on me. It was a bit difficult to do, especially considering that Melog doesn't have hands to hold Catra up but we managed.

Catra does appear to be slightly more alter as time has gone on. Her ears and tail have been twitching every so often. Sadly, she has shown no clear sign of waking up yet. Melog's mane is starting to smooth out slightly but their colour is changing slightly every so often. I reach out to stroke them every once in a while, sensing their unease.

"I'm sorry Melog. I wish there was something I could do to make this easier for you. Catra will be okay. I know she'll be okay. I promise."

I'm not really sure who I'm reassuring there: Melog or myself.

The orange sunset soon turns to a clear moonlight sky. Glimmer and Bow at some point brought me some toast as they hadn't seen me at the evening meal. I haven't left Catra's side other than to take my jacket off, for a quick toilet break or to get glass of water every so often. Melog has been the exact same. I reluctantly ate some toast, offering Melog a slice too although they only ate the crusts. I wasn't really in the mood to eat but I know Catra would have a go at me if I didn't look after myself.

Now were here. Melog rests their head on Catra's waist whilst I hold her close on the other side. I wish she'd wake up. I'm worried about her. I just want to know that she's okay.

Unexpectedly, Melog nudges my arm firmly. I rub my eyes and look to them, making sure that they're okay.

"Mreow?"

They tilt their head and form a question mark shape with their tail. I know what this sound means.

"I'm okay Melog. Just worried that's all. How you holding up?"

I don't know why I asked that. I'm not sure if I'll be able to decipher everything exactly that they say without Catra's help. Not to mention I feel exhausted so my translation skill will be off.

Melog doesn't respond like they usually do. Instead they look at me slightly unimpressed. They move around Catra, over to my side and press their forehead against my own. Just like Catra they can tell exactly when I'm lying. Melog places a paw over my hand that currently has hold of Catra's. I think this is there way of saying that I can talk to them if it'll help. I take a deep sigh and speak my worries…

"I can't lose her Melog. Not again. I know that's an overreaction to what's going on but the other's don't know Catra like I do. I've seen her and taken care of her when she's sick. I've seen her and healed her when she's hurt. I've seen her and been there for her when she's worried, but I've only ever seen her like this once. Back before we meet you, back when we were on Prime's ship…"

My voice hitches slightly. Faint tears start to appear in the corner of my eyes. I try my best to hold them back, determined to get through talking through my worries before they fall. I move my head away from Melog so I can talk to them directly. Their paw remains in place on top of my hand. I find the strength to continue talking…

"I thought I'd lost her Melog. I thought I'd lost her for good. My world was crushed. There was nothing left to fight for. If it wasn't for She-Ra's healing powers being able to bring her back I don't know how I would have gone on. I promised to bring her home, to love her like I always have, to keep her safe… I'm a failure Melog. I failed to keep her safe. If I had somehow gotten her to open up to me sooner, if I had fought for her harder, made more time for us when she was ready to talk to me, maybe this never would have happened. I hurts that I can do nothing more than be here for her. I don't deserve her. I love her so much Melog it hurts."

With a few deep breathes I'm able to keep my tears at bay. I've done enough crying for one night and I know for a fact that crying even more will just make my eyes more sore tomorrow.

Melog's purring even outs as they place their head against mine once more. At first, I thought they were doing this as a way of comforting me, but then their mane starts to glow a bright series of rainbow colours. The room around us starts dissapear.

"Melog what are you…"

Flash

"What? Where are we?"

I look around our room, or what should be our room, to find that I have been transported to a completely different place entirely. We're at the top of Brightmoon's castle, on the rooftop gardens.

H-How did I get here?

A small nudge at the side of my legs grabs my attention. Melog stands beside me, their mane flowing through an array of different colours at a steady pace.

"Mreow."

They turn their head to face in front of me. Sitting there, on the rooftop bench that overlooks the sea and Whispering Wood is Catra. Her hair is short and her scar from the chip is still visible. Her ears seem relaxed and her tail sways at a calming pace. Then I hear a sound that I recognise and realise that she isn't alone.

"Hey Melog. Care to join me?"

Another version of Melog jumps up and sits next to Catra on the bench, looking out to the scenery in front. It's at this moment that I realise Melog is sharing a memory with me, a memory that I think occurred not long after the war ended and Catra and I first starting dating.

The current Melog, the one who is sharing this memory with me, encourages me to walk forward. They sit on the low wall in front of Catra and get me to stand beside them so I can see Catra, or rather the memory Catra, more clearly. She looks peaceful, calm, relaxed. It's a wonderful sight to see.

"Beautiful isn't it. It's really different compared to when Adora and I used to go to our secret spot on the watch tower back in the Fright Zone when we were kids. I never though Etheria could be so, so…"

"Mreow."

"Yeah that."

Catra laughs softly before taking a deep, content sigh. Surprisingly her expression shifts. She looks concerned about something. Her knees bend upwards, her arms and tail wrap around her legs, holding them close to her chest.

"What if I mess up Melog?"

"Murp?"

"What if I mess it up between me and Adora? I've loved her all my life. I've been in love with her before I even knew what love was. I never thought she'd love me back, but here we are. I did some terrible thing's in the past Melog, thing's that I regret and wish I could take back. Thing's I want to make right and to make up for my mistakes. Adora… she saved me. Gave me a reason to live. She makes me want to be a better person. I am a better person when I'm with her. I'm a better person because she made me see what I 'm truly capable of. She made me see that I am worthy of love too. She sees me for me, loves me for who I truly am. Adora's perfect, she's beautiful, she's smart, daring. Adora's my everything. Sometime I feel like I don't deserve her. Sometimes I worry that one day she'll wake up and realize that I'm not worth her time or love and she'll leave me… again."

Oh Catra. Don't think like that. I'm determined to keep my promise this time.

I'm never, ever going to leave her again. She's perfect, and beautiful and by far the most courageous and caring person I have ever met… why can't she see that?

Instinctively, my hand reaches out to comfort her but my hand fades right through her shoulder… oh right this is a memory.

Memory Melog moves closer to Catra, licking her face and nudging her with strong force. They start making a series of noises and start purring up a storm. A soft smile appears on their face and Catra's mood instantly changes.

"Okay, okay Melog I get it." She start to laugh before shoving Melog off her and moving to stroke through their mane…"Thanks Melog. I really needed to hear that. You really think Adora and I are soulmates?"

"Mreow, purr, Mreow."

"Of course. I've loved her my whole life. I just told you she's my everything. I've loved her forever. Where you not listening? I would do anything for her. I love her so much. She's… she's my Adora."

And she's my Catra. Always has been and always will be.

"Hey Catra."

A tall, blonde figure slowly walks up to Catra from behind.

Hang on a second that's me. Huh… I guess I do look nice with my hair down?

"Hey Adora."

"There you are. I've been looking everywhere for you."

“Well clearly not everywhere if you’re only just finding me up here now. I’ve been up here for at least an hour.”

Catra starts to laugh to herself. She stands and wraps her arms around my neck, no wait memory Adora's neck, and places a soft kiss to her lips…

“You look nice with your hair down. You should wear it like this way more often.”

“Well maybe I will considering you like it so much.”

Note to self: wear my hair down more often.

“Beautiful view isn’t.” Memory me say.

“Yeah but not as beautiful as you.”
“ …not as beautiful as you.” Memory Catra and real me say in unison.

Just like I did back then I start to blush. I remember this day, but not as much as I probably should. I think Catra and I need to make some time for ourselves, just us, to be together like this again. I miss this. I miss being like this with her.

“So come on dummy. What have you got planned for us today?” Catra says as she takes the memory versions of my hand.

The memory is starting to fade as the past versions of us walk away, but not before I hear the words I once spoke…

“Well I thought we’d go and see what new creatures we can find in the Whispering Woods. I found this really nice waterfall nearby that’d I’d like to show you. Would be nice place to maybe settle down and build our own place one day?  Oh and then I thought I’d take you to visit Madam Razz.”

“Who’s Madam Razz?”

"Oh Madam Razz is a really nice person. I met her in the Whispering Wood's when I was first learning how to use She-Ra. She's amazing and makes the best blueberry pies. You're going to love her."

The memory ends there and when I open my eyes we're back in mine and Catra's room in Brightmoon. I look down to find that Catra is still in her unconscious state but she appears to be more settled than before. When I look back at Melog their mane has returned to their natural blue colour. They shake their head and murp before smiling at me.

My unshed tears start to fall before I can stop them and I start to have a small breakdown. I hold Melog tight, stroking their mane as they let me cuddle close to them. All the worries, all the stressing and the sleepless nights… I always thought that I was never be good enough for Catra, that I was never worthy of her love. She's my everything and I love her more than words can say. I never knew that we were both having these worries.

"Thank you." I whisper into Melog's mane once I find to strength to speak again.

About half an hour later, Melog and I settle down besides Catra ready to let sleep take over. I've fought sleep for as long as possible but exhaustion is starting to take its toll. I position myself so I can hold Catra close with one arm, but still reach over and stroke through Melog's mane with the other. I get them to promise me that they'll wake me up should they need me or Catra awakes in the night. We seek comfort in each other, knowing that no matter what happens we will be there for Catra and each other. I place a kiss to Catra's forehead before resting my head on her chest, letting her strong heartbeat and steady breathing lure me to sleep.

"I love you Catra. I'm not going anywhere, not this time… I promise."

End Notes

Hope you enjoyed reading this extra chapter for Finding Halfmoon. There is another extra content chapter to come tomorrow so be sure to keep an eye out for it.

It was really interesting to write this fic as I have only written in Adora's character once before for my first fic TATEOTW extra chapters. It was nice to explore this and experiment how Melog would communicate with Adora in a situation where Catra wouldn't be able to translate for her.

Hope you enjoy reading this fic. Please let me know what you thought in the comments. I love hearing your thoughts. There are plenty more extra chapters to come but until then, please continue to enjoy reading Finding Halfmoon 😊

Please drop by the archive and comment to let the author know if you enjoyed their work!
