War On Borscht

by AthenasLilOwl

Summary

"It's 106 miles to the Fright Zone, we've got a full tank of gas, half a pack of cigarettes, it's dark and we're wearing sunglasses," Catra said.

"Hit it!" said Glimmer.

They drove off with reckless abandon for road rules.

Hordak made borscht illegal in the Horde, and the Horde is having none of it.

An r/OkBuddyCatra crack fic.

Notes

Standard disclaimer: This "work" is stupid, imbecilic, infantile, immature, impolite, inconsistent, inconsiderate, out-of-character, rude, crude, vulgar, explicit, degenerate, and the product of a probably seriously ill mind. You know, a crack fic. Frankly, no reasonable person should be reading this. That being said, please enjoy.

In case you read some of my other fics before - fair warining, this one is a bit different. Mind the tags and ratings.

When you live through years of war on Etheria, you're used to many strange and horrible things. Horrifying weapons, strange screeches of creatures inhibiting the Whispering Woods, and all the weirdness magic brings along with itself being... well, magic. One gets used to it. You learn to sleep through the noises, even if it's a restless, shallow sleep. You learn to deal with loss and destruction. With things changing every day.

What you don't get used to is a lone Horde tank showing up on its own on an early Sunday morning at the gates of Brightmoon, parking there, and honking its horn. Most civilians wouldn't even know tanks had horns to honk.

Witnessing the noise from the royal gardens, Angella interrupted her morning walk with Glimmer and flew down to the main gate.

" 'Ello 'ello 'ello", she said as Glimmer teleported next to her. "Wot's going on here then?"

The honking stopped and the tank's hatch unlocked and opened no more than three inches. A blue and a yellow eye shone through the shadow.

"Get me Adora," Catra demanded.

"Whatever for, darling?"

"We gotta go to war."

"We've been at war for decades, in case you haven't noticed."

"Not that war. That one's boring. We're going to a new war."

"What new war?"

"Just get me Adora", Catra hissed and closed the hatch.

Angella shot Glimmer an expecting look. Glimmer groaned in annoyance and disappeared in a sparkly flash only to appear back in the same spot seconds later, holding onto Adora's elbow.

Adora's hair was messy. She was wearing an old, worn-out shirt that served as her pajamas and nothing else aside from her panties. She was also holding a massive purple dildo.

"Wha-" she uttered, looking around disoriented. She noticed Angella blinking at her wordlessly, then stared at the massive dildo in her hand, then back at Angella, and finally turned radiantly red.

Angella remained quiet. Glimmer snorted. Adora threw the dildo over the fence with all her might.

"Your majesty," she bowed. As she raised her head back up, she noticed that her shirt was not covering her underwear whatsoever, and tried to pull it down. Flashing the queen and the princess in public has got to be a crime, right?

"Top of the mornin', Adora," replied Angella. "I hope we didn't disturb you at an inopportune moment?"

"Not at all, Your Majesty," Adora lied as the dildo landed in a bush far away with a thwack, scaring away some birds.

"It appears you have a visitor," Angella continued.

Glimmer walked over to the Horde tank and kicked it. "Open up, Adora's here!" She yelled.

The hatch opened tentatively at first and then slammed open as Catra saw Adora standing in front of the tank. She climbed out halfway.

"Oy, Adora!" She yelled. "Get in, bozo. We're joining the war on borscht. On the side of borscht."

"What the fuck is the war on borscht?"

"Hordak announced it yesterday. Said borscht is too expensive, now that he can't deduct it from taxes anymore. And that it makes everyone farty. So he made borscht in the Horde illegal."

"Man, fuck that guy," said Glimmer.

"Now half the Horde is mutining. Don't wanna work without borscht. They're even thinking of unionizing."

"So what do you want me for?" Adora asked.

"Get in. We're gonna fuck him up."

"Sound reasonable. Let's go." Adora climbed onto the tank.

"Wait!" Yelled Glimmer. "I'm coming too. Just let me get my switchblade," she said as she disappeared in a flash. She returned with a knife in each hand. "Backup switchblade," she said. "Just in case." She too climbed into the tank.

Inside, Catra handed sunglasses to the other two.

"Put them on," she said. "We ride at dawn."

"Catra, dawn was like five hours ago," said Adora.

Catra shot her a long, menacing look. "Shut up, nerd. We're on a mission from God."

Everyone took their seats and put their sunglasses on.

"Glimmer, what's 'god'?" Adora whispered.

"No idea," Glimmer whispered back.

"It's 106 miles to the Fright Zone, we've got a full tank of gas, half a pack of cigarettes, it's dark and we're wearing sunglasses," Catra said.

"Hit it!" said Glimmer.

They drove off with reckless abandon for road rules. In just ten minutes twenty-seven Brightmoon police cars were at their tail, honking and sirens wailing, trailing them for traffic violations. They got rid of them after all twenty-seven Brightmoon police cars failed to make a turn, drove off a cliff, and stockpiled in the ravine below, yelling unpleasantries at them as they exited the crashed cars.

About halfway in, Catra noticed Adora's getup.

"Nice panties," she said, pointing at the pink flowery pattern. "Do they come in gay?"

"Har-har. Adora's panties are straight girl panties. Brilliant quip. Well done," Adora replied with annoyance. "I'm not even gay. How does that make any sense?"

Both Catra and Glimmer whipped their heads towards her.

"What do you mean, you're not gay?" Catra asked with narrowing eyes.

"That I'm not gay?"

"Adora. What are you talking about. You're gay as fuck."

"Am not!"

"Yes, you are."

"Am not! You're just making stuff up."

Catra took a deep breath.

"Adora. Sweet, stupid, dumbfuck Adora. Remember all those times we had an hour to ourselves and you wanted to make out with me because you were bored?"

"Yes?"

"That was gay. Very gay."

Glimmer nodded in agreement.

"But-"

"Remember all those times you asked me to take extra long in the showers so we'd be the last two in there so I could lick you between your legs and put my fingers inside you until you come?"

"Yes?"

"That's gay. Gay as hell, in fact. Doesn't get much more gay than that, to be honest."

"But that's not a gay thing, straight girls do that too! Don't they, Glimmer?"

"Well... They do, just not with other girls. That's kinda what it means."

"But Catra's not a girl, she's a cat!"

"Bruv. You've seen me naked. You've eaten my pussy. Several times. How do you not know that I'm a girl?"

"Because you're a cat?"

Something seemed to click for Glimmer.

"Adora," she asked. "Did you think 'cat' is a gender?"

Adora shrugged. "Yes? Are you saying it isn't?"

"Bruv."

"Bruv."

Adora stared at her feet and sighed.

"So I'm gay?" She asked shyly.

"Yes," replied Glimmer.

"Very much so, yes," said Catra.

"So does that mean I can't date a cat? Hypothetically, of course."

Glimmer sighed. "Adora, my sweet dumbfuck. Yes, you can date Catra. But only if she stops doing war crimes."

"So then why can Bow date you? You're doing war crimes too."

"That's different."

"How?"

"Erm... 'cause we're the good guys? Our war crimes don't count."

"Lol," said Catra. "Lmao."

Glimmer groaned. "Fiiine. You can date Catra."

For the rest of the ride, Adora beamed at a Catra who desperately was trying to avoid her gaze and hide her blush.

Glimmer marvelled at the state of the Fright Zone. Half the buildings were on fire. The other half sported makeshift flags depicting beets, spoons, and soup bowls. People ran for cover, chanted slogans, and fought each other.

"Damn," she said, "you Horde scum take your borscht seriously."

"Borscht is love, borscht is life," chanted Adora and Catra in unison.

Nobody obstructed their passage to the central zone. Everyone was too busy kicking each other's teeth in, and nobody really wanted to take on a tank that was just passing through.

They quickly made their way towards Hordak's private chambers. They figured that's where he'd most likely be found. To their surprise, the usual guard posts were abandoned. Signs of fights and battle were strewn through the corridors - blaster marks, damaged walls, and occasional corpses.

Closing in on Hordak's residence, their path was blocked by a dozen Horde soldiers with a red hand painted on their faces.

"Halt, who goes there?" one of them called out.

"Just us three," replied Catra.

"Are you with the borscht? Or against it?" the soldier asked.

"Borscht is love, borscht is life," chanted Adora and Catra in unison.

"Welcome, sisters. Join us in our righteous cause. We're looking for the blasphemous Hordak so we may send him to the soupless hell with our own hands."

Catra recognized the soldier underneath the red paint.

"Dillon!" She exclaimed as she approached him, "You son of a bitch!"

They slapped their hands together into a firm handshake, flexing their muscles, revealing their beefy arms were as wide as tree trunks.

"Let us make haste, sisters. For it shall be lunchtime soon, and the borscht will be served without us."

They hurried into Hordak's chambers, which they found in disarray. Boxes, papers, and all sorts of tools and trinkets were strewn throughout the room. Hordak was sitting in the corner, leaning against the wall and holding a stump where his right arm used to be, bleeding profusely into a pool of blood that formed underneath him. In front of him lay Shadow Weaver with her neck snapped at a painful-looking angle.

"You have committed crimes against borscht and her people. What say you in your defence?" asked Dillon.

"You worthless scum have lost your damn mind," Hordak groaned, visibly in pain. "Even Shadow Weaver dared to raise a hand against me. For soup. Fucking soup. You're all insane."

"You know what's insane, Hordak?" Catra asked, kneeling in front of him. "Questioning the borscht. Thou shalt not question the borscht. Thou shalt eat the borscht. Borscht is love, borscht is life."

"Borscht is love, borscht is life," chanted the other Horde soldiers in the room.

"For your sins against borscht, you will now die an honourless death," spoke Dillon.

"Who gets to kill him?" a soldier in the back asked. They pondered the question.

Glimmer pulled out her switchblade. "How about everyone? Everyone gets a stab, and then we see how far we get?"

The soldiers murmured and nodded.

"That is agreeable," said Dillon. "Everyone, form a line. Rock-Paper-Scissors determines who gets the first stab."

As the first soldier approached the dying Hordak with the blade in his hand, Glimmer yelled, "Wait!"

"What is it, sister?"

"Just a moment."

She stood in front of Hordak, looked down on him, and kicked him in the nuts with everything she had.

"That's for killing my dad, you little bitch," she added as Hordak toppled to the side and threw up.

"All yours now," she said, moving aside.

And so, Hordak was stabbed two hundred and fifty-six times. Everybody wanted a second, then a third, then a fourth go at him. He was likely dead already after the first few dozen, but nobody cared to spoil the fun. It was as good a team-building exercise as any.

With everyone satisfied and bathed in Hordak's blood, Catra asked to borrow the blade.

"What for?" asked Glimmer.

"I just wanna shank a second bitch," she replied, pointing at the dead Shadow Weaver. "Just in case. And for funsies. As a treat."

"You do you," Glimmer said, handing the blade over.

Catra turned Shadow Weaver's corpse over on her back and began stabbing into her cold chest. Noticing her endeavour, the other Horde soldiers politely asked to join in. The team building exercise had worked wonders for the team spirit in the room, and Shadow Weaver and Hordak had shared the first place as the Horde's most hated people for years anyway.

Glimmer pulled up her second switchblade. "Backup blade. I knew it would come in handy," she muttered and approached Hordak's corpse.

Catra, observing the other soldiers having their turn with desecrating Shadow Weaver's corpse, noticed Glimmer kneeling next to Hordak. "What are you doing?" she asked. "Didn't get enough stabs in already?"

"Getting his head. I'm gonna eat borscht out of his skull tonight."

"Damn, Sparkles," Catra whistled, "you're metal as fuck."

Glimmer shot her a horns sign with fire in her eyes, her mouth widening with a sharp-toothed grin.

Things had calmed down by nightfall, and the troupe had gathered around a fire in celebration of the eternal borscht's victory over the heathens, feasting on the holy soup.

"Well, that went over quicker than expected," Catra said, leaning back.

"So I guess the war is over now?" Glimmer asked and slurped borscht out of her trophy skull.

"Probably? By the looks of it, all officers are dead. And all the foot soldiers want is their borscht. So I guess we can call it quits?"

"Cool," said Glimmer. "Imagine if we continued it for years instead. How lame would that be?"

"I know, right? I probably would've needed to think about new ways of fucking the entire planet up all the time."

"And I probably would've gone on to keep sacrificing myself for stupid reasons," added Adora.

"Guys, guys." Glimmer squealed excitedly. "Imagine Hordak wasn't like this one guy, but some clone, and there's like thousands of him out there, and then there's this one super bad Hordak that mind-controls all of them, and then they come to invade because Hordak told them where we are, and then we'd have to fight an intergalactic war instead of just regular planet war. How fucked up would that be?"

"You should write fanfiction," said Catra. "with an imagination like that."

They all laughed at the silly thought of some Hordak above all Hordaks. A Prime Hordak. What a silly thought to have.

"Wait," said Glimmer. "How do you know what fanfiction is?"

"We do have internet here. According to the script we're supposed to be evil, not underdeveloped."

"I bet you read romcoms. And hurt/comfort. You sap."

"No, I don't."

"Hey, there's nothing wrong with romcoms," Adora pouted.

"I read smut. It's free porn. Good fanfics are porn fanfics."

"There's porn fanfics?" asked Adora.

"Sure."

"What are they like?"

Sensual funky porn background music began to play out of nowhere.

"Here, let me show you," Catra whispered and kissed Adora.

And then they all fucked, because good fanfics are porn fanfics.
