Whoever invented stars (got inspired by your freckles)

by cerraelortobruno

Summary

Adora realizes she's in love with Catra. Her nightmares are gone, replaced with images of her soul friend. She plans to do everything she couldn't do before with her: go on dates, kiss, get married... However, war still goes on... Heroes has no rest.

Notes

Nope I regret nothing je

This is situated in S1 before the Portal and Catra is still bitter with Adora's deflection.

It’s been months since Adora deflected the Horde. It was turbulent and not at all pleasant. But, at least, it was done. She found a new family in Bow and Glimmer, after all, her naïve heart always has room for new people to come and stay.

She thinks of Catra too. It didn’t matter what happened between them regarding war. They were not to blame; they didn’t start it in the first place. But their participation still stains with blood their relationship. If it’s still some proximity to call “relationship”.

Late night conversations. Pranks. Running around the Fright Zone. Being alone at the rooftop… Those were the things she missed about that grim place. However, she missed them because Catra was in each of those moments, they would not be as memorable if it wasn't for the rebellious girl she grew up with.

Also, Adora recalls, feeling something warm inside of her whenever she was near Catra or she thought about her.
But her heart aches right now. Because she's far away from the girl that used to make her the happiest.
Perfuma told her that was called "pining". Adora felt uneasy when she said that. All because it implies that Catra broke her heart, but… who left the Horde?
Besides, it insinuates another word Adora was yet getting used to saying… love.

" How can I love Catra that way?" she asked Perfuma once "I've never learnt how to love before."

The Flower Princess released a giggle. Something about the ex-horde girl always caught her eye, was it how oblivious she was?
"Silly, you don't learn how to love in the first place" she simply answered "You just feel it"

Adora felt weird about it. How can she let herself feel love as simple as that? She felt terrified. Her face showed it.

"But don't worry, it is something delightful to feel" she continues "Do you love somebody?"

Adora opened her mouth.

But closed it immediately.
She didn't answer. She excused herself and went to her room.

Do you love somebody?
She wondered too.

Do you feel it when you are near someone?
She felt warmth. She felt some static in her guts.

Do you feel it when you are near someone you love?
She knows some forms of love. Love was different depending on the relationship you have with someone, she recalls Perfuma saying.

She, then, recalls too, that she loves Bow and Glimmer. But she doesn't feel this uneasiness. But still her heart beats alive and red for them.

She loves the Queen; she is a new mother to her. But her body remains quiet and tranquil.

She loves the princesses; they've accepted her despite being an ex-horde soldier. But nothing new.

But when she thinks of Catra, oh… her body feels funny. She can't describe it. It is a flame burning inside her, she feels how her stomach twists and makes her aware of the revolution inside her guts. Like her whole body was screaming YOU LOVE HER! but her mind refuses to pay attention.

OH

Now she figures it out. Embarrassingly after 19 years next to that girl and far away from her she realizes how much importance she has in her life.

How oblivious she was.

How terribly oblivious she was…

Days passed. And nothing changed in Adora's life apart from the fact that she accepted she is in love with Catra.
She was blind before, but now her eyes were wide open. She saw what was in front of her but never paid real attention to it. How Catra behaved when she was around, how cheerful she is. Life wasn't the same when she was not near. Something Brightmoon made her realize.

She didn't know she loved the girl that was with her since day one. Since she has found her on that box. The girl that looked out for Adora, and Adora looked out for her.

She needs Catra to be by her side, to be happy as they used to be. She wants to make her even more happy. Adora decided that once war was over, she would marry that girl. She learnt marriage was a thing after paying a visit to the library of the dads of Bow. She found it really nice and something delightful to think of before going to sleep. Nightmares stopped bothering her once she started thinking about Catra, the feelings that girl provoked on Adora without her being in that room too were intense. The blonde girl thought how wonderful it would be to sleep with Catra by her side once again, her purring soothing her to sleep. The lullabies Catra used to sing for her. The way she was near Adora: cheeky, mischievous, playful and supportive.

God, was there anything not to love?

Adora swore to herself that she will end this war. She will reunite with Catra. They will be friends again and hopefully, one day, she will marry her.

"I will marry Catra" Adora couldn't suppress the dumb grin in her face. She covered it with a big pillow and muffled a high-pitched scream. She felt like a dumb teenager of those movies Glimmer made her watch. But she didn't care. She would be the cheesy teenager for Catra.

She will. She knows it.

Adora always gets what she wants.

Days passed again. War was far from over. The Rebellion's stability was decreasing. They had She-Ra by their side, according to the numerous legends, she would be able to easily stop war. But, was it over?

Adora was feeling how her mental health was going downhill too. She knew it better than anybody else that she was failing in the one job she has.

"You have to train harder, Adora. The Horde is becoming stronger day by day!"

"She-Ra must be more than capable to end this war, how come this one is not?"

"Legends said…"

Bla, bla, bla.
If she listened to every word people spat on her she would go crazy. Mad crazy.
The Horde was becoming stronger as days passed. That was true. She was scared because when she was a cadet, she recalls, the Rebellion seemed to be fiercer and never retreated. This Rebellion, she knows, retreats and appears weaker.
What is the factor that makes the Horde grow stronger? That answer comes in the form of a short girl, fluffy ears and disheveled mane.

Catra.

Now that she was Force Captain, she made herself comfortable in that power position. She was clever and knew how to outsmart the Rebellion, they've lost two towns thanks to Catra's tricks. She was always a mastermind and grew up to be fearless and merciless. Shadow Weaver used to say that was Adora, but the truth was that it was Catra the ruthless one. It didn't help the fact that two princesses where by her side, Entrapta being one of them. She knew how to build machinery with just one hairpin and make it lethal. They were a dangerous trio.
But the Rebellion were concerned with Catra, only Catra.

The brunette was quick, witty and minacious. An absolute dangerous woman. The fact that the Horde grew stronger under her command was a big game changer. However, the Queen and the Princess Alliance weren't amused.

They had to do something regarding Catra.
But, what?

Lately, Adora's sanity depended on Catra. How ironic. The girl she was fighting against was the only good thing to think about recently.
She would survive the morning and the encounter with the brunette at the battlefield to go to bed at night and think about her. The ways she wanted to. There was no war in her imagination. She only saw Catra being healthy, carefree and complete. There was no Shadow Weaver to torment her. She had no Light Hope forcing her to “let go”.

In her vision, Adora and Catra were together. They were happy. They were married. She was wearing Adora’s golden pin. They were discussing about having children. Adora imagined Catra as a mother, she felt butterflies in her belly.

This is how love felt. And she felt amazing.

The Queen demanded her presence. Adora walked to the war room where the princess Alliance was waiting for her, too.

Something in the air felt thick and… eerie. Adora was the centre of attention now. It made her anxious for some reason. She was used to be everybody’s centre of attention, but this time it felt like they were about to condemn her.

The Queen speaks. Her lips moves and she spills words and words. Each make Adora’s heart shatter in thousand pieces. Her knees felt weak. Suddenly, the air was unbreathable.

“You…. You want me to…” she asked perplexed. Her face was an open book. Her pupils contracted in two little dots. Her jaw hanged there, trembling as her voice waved as she spoke.

The Queen, then, looks at her. Unaware of the effect her speech had on the blonde girl.

“Yes, Adora” she said “I am demanding you to kill Catra.”

Kill…

She will have to…

Oh, no.

"I..." Adora muttered. Her legs visibly shaking, she thought she would faint right there in front of her new family. Her face felt cold. Her heart, once read and vibrant, felt broken and… and… Oh, she was a mess. She gulped and looked straight at the Queen's eyes, somehow waiting for her to light up and say it was a prank. But nothing but a wall was before her. "I… if you'd excuse me" She didn't leave in a peaceful way. No. She escaped.

She exited that thick room running. Her legs rushed to her room. She wanted nothing but stop existing at that precise moment.

Tears spilling. Her cheeks and shirt were wet now.

" This has to be a joke!" she screams muffling her voice on the pillow she used to grab whenever she dreamed about Catra, now she was using it to escape the infuriating reality that things will never be easier than they are in her imagination.

She used to dream about holding Catra in her arms and cherishing her, kissing her beautiful features. Her scars. But now, she had a new mission that will make her dreams impossible to fulfill.

"I can't kill her!" she vociferates " It's not fair! It's not fucking fair!

She is not going to do it. She is not going to leave Catra behind again.
She is not going to hurt her anymore. Her heart decided it was enough of this war. Of the Rebellion. Of the Horde. Shadow Weaver, Hordak, Light Hope and whoever menaced to separate them.

She cried loudly. She didn't care anymore. Adora was destroyed in her bed. Crying for the girl who, now with this news, will never know Adora loved her.
Adora didn't deserve it, what did she do? After all these years training, trying to be the best to gain the praise from her superiors, now she is rewarded with this?
Catra didn't deserve it, she was fighting a war she didn't start. She was following rules. The Horde was evil, but the Rebellion was not any better.

Catra and Adora deserved to be together, in love or not, and happy. Adora didn't know if Catra would ever love her back, but she was going to find out. They deserved to be friends again, they are not interested in war, it was just destiny's bullshit.

“I just want to be with her!”

She screams. Cries. She is not okay. She is not sure how she will recover from this.

She's been training for greatness. For glory. She was trained, too, to be uncapable of opposing to her superior's commands. Whatever they say, Adora will have to do. Monkey see, monkey do.

At the realization of the uncapable reality made her heart break... Her dreams are shatters, and so her spirit.

Days passed. This time, Adora was not aware of this. She has been locked in her bedroom since the Queen demanded her to do the unthinkable. Bow and Glimmer were worried about her friend, they knew Adora grew up in the Horde and trained to be a perfect soldier, they thought she was accustomed to the idea of killing. But Adora reacted as if it was something new. Perhaps it was, or it was because Catra and her were the same age. Maybe Adora projected herself in Catra and thought how terrible would be to die in the arms of the enemy.

They had plenty of theories.

But none of them solved the problem, Adora was still stuck in her room and the only thing that was heard through the walls were muffled screams and cries of utter pain.

"We have to do something, Bow" said Glimmer once they were far from the blonde girl's bedroom "Adora's been there for five days. She only eats there; she doesn't want to leave".
Glimmer was distressed and so was Bow.
The brunette boy sighed. He was not doing any better than his friend.

"Glimmer, we have to give her space. She's not okay with the Queen's kill order" he tried to be reasonable about it, the blonde girl has never shown this much stress before. He remembers her face showing nothing but terror "She must know that girl, Adora doesn't talk too much about the Horde yet, only the superficial parts. There must be something else going on".

He didn't know that. Perhaps there's something else behind Adora's despair. The most reasonable theory was that Adora has never killed anybody before and being her first kill shocks her. Glimmer agreed. But she felt like Adora must do it despite the gruesome feeling it produces. It was a direct order from the Queen herself. It was something She-Ra was destinated to do, if ending the war meant kill each one of the members of the Horde, She-Ra must be more qualified to complete the task.

“But Adora doesn’t want to talk and it’s urgent” she retorts “She has to be able to do as my mom says, isn’t that girl’s death going to be for good?” she never liked the brunette girl anyway, she was haughty, proud, spiteful and the enemy number one of the Rebellion lately. Before Catra, the Rebellion was strong but steady. As if the Horde and Princess Alliance were equal in power. But with Catra?

The brunette girl has the upper hand.

“I know, I know” he hates to agree with it. He hated the idea of killing someone, but the Horde indeed stronger with Catra in their lines “But Adora doesn’t feel ready to kill her”

Wasn’t ready to kill her…

Herself…

Something inside Glimmer’s mind lighted up.
Bow looked at her not exactly sure if it was something good or bad.

“I have an idea” she took the boy’s hand and dragged him to the storage they had in one of the training rooms.

Bow followed her, it’s not like he had much options anyway. He wondered what occurred to Glimmer’s beautiful… or spiteful mind.

They entered in that dark room, there were plenty of boxes. Each filled up with training gear, equipment. Everything. Glimmer examined one of the boxes, looking for the one object that caught her attention.

She saw it. Red and shiny. It was like a star.

"This is something Entrapta gifted us before we..." she grimaced "left her in the Horde. She said it would be useful if we wanted to increase Adora's powers" The start had also a little controller with three buttons.
Bow holds it in his hands, he examines it. He sees his reflection through the star, red and angry.

"What are you intending to do, Glimmer?" he finally asks.

His friend looked at her feet. Seemingly embarrassed for what's going to say next.

"When Adora was infected with this, she lost her consciousness, she became a literal killing machine" She watches the star, the memories she has of that event are violent, but as a commander she has to endure the bad memories. If they want to win the war, they have to be even more ruthless than the Horde "If we use it on Adora, as She-Ra, she will be able to kill Catra in a way that she won't be even aware she did it.".

Bow contemplated it for a long minute. Glimmer's idea was crazy but made sense. But, again, he was not comfortable with the idea of killing Catra. It was against his beliefs. However, it was not his order, it was the Queen demanding Catra's head. He was not royal to interfere.

"Don't worry, Bow" Glimmer reassured him "Catra won't be a menace no more, Adora must be scared because she never killed before. But if she's not conscious she will do it with no problem" she smiled at him "We only have to keep this secret from her for the rest of our lives"

The boy trembled. He was shocked. Hearing Glimmer's plan is not nice at all. After all, there was a live on the line.

He nodded. They shake hands and the deal is settled.

There was not much he could do. This war was not his fault.

They decided they will attach it to She-Ra's gemstone before heading to Thaymore.

But deciding how to kill somebody was definitely his fault…

Days passed. There were no signals of Adora's recovery. However, the Queen was growing impatient. The war was still going on. The Horde, day by day, was gaining more territory. The next city on the line was Thaymore. Adora had to go back there to stop Catra.

This time it was different, they needed the Princess Alliance's assistance because, once again, the brunette girl was outsmarting the Rebellion, under her command the Horde was conquering more terrains. If they don't go to Thaymore, they will lose it. And that town was important for strategic reasons.

Adora and her friends were heading there. As she was flying on Swift Wind's back, she was thinking about a plan to let Catra escape. If Adora couldn't escape her destiny, maybe Catra can.

"I sense something bad is going on with you" said the noble steed "May I ask what is going on?"

It took aback Adora. Maybe it was She-Ra and Swift Wind's connection what gave away her gloominess, but she couldn't lie to her friend.

"You…" she tried. But it is harder whenever she speaks "You wouldn't understand, Swifty".

The unicorn was concerned now. He thought Adora was just sleep deprived again, but something deep in their hearts knew it was something more.

“You and I are a whole person, Adora” he continues “I won’t judge you, is it the Kill Order?”

Adora remained silent. Not because she was caught red-handed, but because she was going to face her destiny sooner or later.

The horse, then, opened her mouth. The realization he made wasn’t comforting.
“Is that girl, isn’t it?”

Now, a painful cry was the answer. Adora felt weak, weaker than before. She cried again. This time harder and louder.

“This is so unfair!” she screamed. The Princesses weren’t listening to her as she was up in the sky “Why do I have to do this!? I….” she sobs shakingly “I don’t want to kill her!”

Swift Wind, being as sincere as he was, didn’t want to speak because nothing he was about to say was going to do good to Adora. He knew his friend was distressed, worried. But something inside her heart screamed there was something deeper and more meaningful, but couldn’t decipher what.
He felt useless, and as he was landing in a camping site some miles away the battlefield, he let go a heavy sigh.

“I am tired, Swifty…” she said as she jumps off his back. They see their friends from afar, they are here too. She tries to hide the traces of her tears and despair. She didn’t need the pity of some princesses right now.
She sees Glimmer and Bow getting ready to fight. The princesses chatting as they were grabbing some equipment. She saw her family. But there was an empty spot there. She knew Catra belonged there with her, with her newfound family. She didn’t belong in a graveyard.

She knew what she was about to do was risky and stupid. But she really wanted to screw the world this time.
“Would you forgive me If I do something about it, Swifty?” she said and ran. Not even waiting for an answer.

She ran past Glimmer and Bow. She heard Glimmer screaming her name and come back. But Adora wasn’t in the mood to listen to anybody. All she wanted to do was embrace Catra and… and…

She will figure it out when she finds the girl.

“Bow! Hurry up!” Glimmer screamed as she was chasing Adora “She’s is running away, c’mon!”
They were running, but Adora was always faster than them. Now, with a new mission in mind she was the fastest girl alive. They had the controller in their hands, the star was collocated carefully in She-Ra’s gemstone. But they resolved to activate it once Adora was fighting Catra.

“We have to find her! Bow!” she grabbed her friend by his hand and teleported her somewhere near Horde’s campsite.

There was no sight of Adora…

Adora was running, now transformed into She-Ra. She arrived to the Horde’s campsite rather easy and faster than she thought. There was almost nobody, the battlefield must be crowded of them.

She thought she was alone, but a well-known figure caught her eye. In the middle of the woods, she saw the slim silhouette of no other than Catra. She was from afar the battlefield, that was weird, she is not one to miss a fight. She will start one if necessary. But there was, and as soon as their glances connected Adora had the urge to run and hold her in her hands.

She obeyed her instincts and run to the girl. The brunette was taken aback.

“Adora!?” she prepared to fight, extending her claws. But She-Ra was not even running in a menacing way. She was grabbed by the waist and lifted up, Adora let her fall over her broad shoulder
“What the fuck, Adora!?”
She-Ra started running fast, leaving behind the campsite and the battlefield. She didn’t care as tears were falling from her eyes, she didn’t know what was that for. If it was because she was going to let Catra go for good, because she was grabbing her, because she was on her arms. She was overwhelmed. But she didn’t have time to waste.
She run. And run.

When they were finally somewhere safe, she let the cat girl go. Now, she was facing the love of her life. She was confused and demanded an explanation. But Adora was just studying her features before letting her go away.

“Adora!” she screamed “What the fuck are you doing now!?”.

She was alarmed as the scary kitty she was.

“Is this some kind of tric- “she stopped talking as Adora placed a big hand on Catra’s cheek, caressing her lovingly. Her freckles, her chubby cheeks. Her eyes. She was going to miss it.

"You are beautiful" her mind says.

"You have to run, Catra" but her lips are the one that speaks. "What? Why is- "she tries to form a question but there are so many she can't form a single one.

"You have to go away, far away from here" Adora pleaded. She grabs both Catra's shoulders in a treasurable way. The blonde girl watched how uneasy the brunette was, she couldn't blame her.

"Adora, say something that makes sense" Catra pleads back. Her voice broke a bit, she was getting troubled now. This was not a normal Adora being preoccupied over something dumb kind of situation, this required her complete scrutinity. She recognizes this feeling. Adora is having a panic attack.

"Breathe, please" she says as she grabs Adora's face so she doesn't move. The blonde girl, now transformed in an Amazonian goddess, attempted to calm down. She really tried her best, but she was absolutely distressed.

She wheezed. She couldn't do it.

Glimmer teleported them in a safe place, a little bit isolated. The battlefield was far away from them, but she still heard how the Princess Alliance took down most of the Horde soldiers. They wouldn't need their help.

She needed to find Adora, if she's ever lucky enough to see her…

"Bow!" she whispered to him. She pointed somewhere behind those bushes. The brunette boy looked at whatever Glimmer was showing him.

He saw Adora, no… She-Ra. And in front of her was Catra, who was cradling Adora's face with her hands.

"She's got her, Bow!" Glimmer said desperately "She will hurt Adora if we don't hurry up!"

Catra was always ruthless and thirsty for blood. She hurts Adora for sport, that was what the Princess Alliance agreed. The world would be far better and safer if Catra was wiped out of it. Her existence brings nothing good. Blood, pain, hate… they all existed while Catra was existing in this world.
The Horde was not as strong as it was today. All thanks to Catra. How could they say she deserved to live when she only does evil while being alive?

“We have to activate it, now!” she screams at her friend, who is taken aback by Glimmer’s roughness. The boy has the controller in his hands. The princess steals it, leaving the boy with nothing to hold.

She hears a weak wait as Bow grabs her shoulders, his nails digging in her skin. It is obvious at this given point that the brunette boy was far from comfortable with what is about to happen.
“No, Bow!” she spats, not even listening at the words her friend wished to say “If we wait any longer Catra will hurt Adora! I can’t forgive myself anymore for that!”

She looked at the activation button in front of her, she swears her vision turned into a dark tunnel as her body vibrated uncomfortably.

This is for Adora! This is for Etheria!
She recites in her head as she pushes the button.

What happens next makes her body freeze.

Catra presses her forehead against Adora's. This is what she always did whenever the blonde girl was overwhelmed with training, Shadow Weaver's expectations or a minimum inconvenience that makes her plans fail.

She knew every inch of Adora, every feeling she would never express because she never wants to admit that she is not feeling right. Catra knows it. And now, Adora was in that situation.

"Just breathe, please" she whispers. Mismatched eyes studied Adora's expressions, even though she was transformed into She-Ra, the truth was is that the eight-foot-tall warrior takes after her. She sees Adora in those shiny light blue orbs.

Adora leans closer. Her heavy crown against Catra's mask. Her nose touching Catra's. She wished to be born without shame, without fear of rejection. Her life would be much easier without those two.

"Catra… I…"

Catra's expression twisted into terror as she watched crimson veins spreading through She-Ra's arms, neck…

“Adora! What is going on!?” She screams. Adora wanted to respond but her vision blurred, as if her eyes were covered in a red curtain.

Red as blood only was. Thick as blood only was. Those veins hugged her body like vines, enamored of her.

But Adora felt everything but love.

A single glottal roar was enough to announce the awakening of a dangerous monster…

“Ugh, Adora, would you stay still for a second?” groaned Catra as she was bandaging the blonde girl’s sprained ankle.

They were in the infirmary. Adora was training a bit too hard. No… way too hard. She’s been training for five hours straight with little to no rest.
Adora lets another glottal roar.

“I’m sorry!” said the cat girl as she tried again, this time more careful “Your ankle is just far too sensitive, it’s not my fault, y’know?”
Adora groans again because even though Catra moves her hands suavely, her injure hurts at the minimum brush of skin.

“I know it’s not your fault…” she responds. She lets go a lot of and as Catra bandages her ankle.

“It wouldn’t have happened if I didn’t get distracted” Adora laments, she talks but it is more to herself than Catra. The brunette rolls her eyes.

“Of course, you have to find an excuse instead of admitting that you should have listened to me when I said you had to rest” she spits to her friend. Mismatched eyes confronted grey blue eyes. If there was something Catra would never stop doing is look after Adora, even if the stubborn blonde brushes it off or does something reckless anyway. Catra would never stop trying.

“C’mon, Catra, don’t go hard on me right now…” she hisses as she tries to sit straight. The girl by her side just looks at her not even amused with Adora “Shadow Weaver was watching me train, I couldn’t waste time resting, I had t-“

“To be the best, to train harder” Catra recites “Bla, bla, bla. It is always the same with you”
Adora scowls at her friend. Now, she was angry.

“What is that supposed to mean?” Her eyebrows are furrowed. She is never angry at Catra, but sometimes she crosses lines she is not supposed to.

“Oh?” Catra scoffs now, not even believing what is happening “Are you mad now?” she gets closer to Adora, not even bothering of invading her personal space “You are too blind, Adora! That is what I mean!”

Catra is about to leave the infirmary. But turns around to see her friend. Her golden and blue eyes are glassy. She is about to cry.

“One day you will understand how much it hurts you to be a people pleaser”

She runs after that. Leaving Adora on that hard mattress in the infirmary. She was about to respond but the magicat is now far away from her, not even her excelled hearing would catch any of Adora’s words.

The blonde girl groans, this time because she’s angry at Catra. She always does the same, she spits venomous words and then runs away. Like the coward she is. She cares about Catra, but sometimes she is hard to tolerate, as Shadow Weaver once said. She started to comprehend her mother figure. Catra is hard to love, even more now that she’s just turned fourteen a couple of days ago. She acts like she knows everything and nobody can’t contradict her. But Catra knows nothing, she’s just the same little girl she found on a box years ago.

She doesn’t know that training to be Force Captain is important. She doesn’t know Shadow Weaver’s approval is important. She doesn’t know being useful and perfect is important. Why? Because she’s young and she knows nothing.

Adora mutters bitter curses to herself. She needs to spit the venom out her guts. She hopes that her friend understands her, but the brunette never listened, no… she never listens.

“Glimmer!” Bow screams terrified as he sees how his friend turns into a wild beast “What is going on!?”

Both were looking at the scene in front of them. An unhinged She-Ra attacking the Horde’s youngest Force Captain. She tries to strike her with the Sword of Protection, but the brunette dodges it by the skin of her teeth.
“I… I don’t know!” Glimmer was at the verge of having a panic attack, it was building inside of her.

Another roar escapes from She-Ra’s lungs as she fails to grab Catra’s throat.

"What do you mean you don't know?" Bow shouts at her "She's supposed to be controlled from here, but Adora is just… just" Deranged…

They cover their eyes before She-Ra swings her sword at Catra.

Again, the girl dodges it. But her stamina is decreasing. She doesn't know how long she will stand on her feet.

"Adora!" Catra screams at the top of her lungs. Her voice was broken in fear "You have to wake up!"

She repeats You have to wake up!

"Adora!" she shouts "You have to wake up!"

…….

The blonde girl wakes up panting heavily. She was about to scream, but two tender hands covered her mouth before it happened.
She throws her hands, trying to fight the weight over her lap.

"Hey, hey…" says a very well-known voice. Adora feels the hard grip on her wrists. She's unable to fight.

"Hey, dummy…" says the brunette "You'll hurt yourself if you keep thrashing…"

The blonde girl seems to regain consciousness as she stops moving.
"Catra?" she mutters. Her voice hoarse as she was starting to fully wake up.

The girl was on her lap. Catra lets her wrist go. Adora looks around the room, it was quiet. Their squad was sleeping. Only Catra and her were awake.

"What is going on?" she asks as she rubs her eyes.

Catra sighs "You were having nightmares again…"

Adora sighs too. Oh… now she remembers. She was indeed in a very bad place in her dreams. She was training way too hard; Shadow Weaver was watching. Then, in front of her appears two princesses ready to kill her. Adora tries to fight them, but she was too exhausted to strike and dodge. She manages to hit and run, but one of them grabs her sprained ankle and drags her back to the battlefield, when she was about to kill her, Shadow Weaver stops the simulation. She walks to Adora with a disappointed expression printed on her face.

" I've expected so much more of you, Adora" she says grimly " But you've never met my expectations, no matter how hard I train you, how much love I give you. You never return anything I give you"

She cries silently. She doesn't notice, but her friend does.

Catra hugs Adora closely by the shoulders, attracting the blonde to rest her head on the crook of her neck.
Adora sniffs and sobs. She hugs Catra back. She feels the brunette purr for her. She always does it because Adora likes it. The vibration. How soothing it is. It distracts her from real pain.

"Shh… You'll be okay" she whispers to the taller girl. She pats lovingly her shoulder blades.

"Whatever that dream was, you are not there anymore…" The brunette whispers. Adora nuzzles against Catra's gray locks of hair.

Both stayed silent for a few minutes until Adora stopped her crying.

Catra was a bit embarrassed to ask, since she thought Adora was still mad at her for the events of today.

"Do you mind if I sleep with you?"

Adora hugs her in an iron grip. Attracting her more to herself.

"Please…"

.....

"Please, Glimmer!" pleads Bow as he tries to grasp the controller from the princess's hands "Let's end this nightmare right now!"

The princess dodges his friend advances. In front of her, the gruesome scene of Catra panting exhausted. She has some wounds on her arms. Her limbs would be cut off if it wasn't for the fact that she has very good reflexes to evade She-Ra's vicious attacks. But there was blood splattered all over the ground.

"No!" she screams "She must…. She must end Catra first, Bow! Don't make it harder than it is supposed to be!"

“It’s inhumane! Glimmer, you have to stop her right now!”

Glimmer wanted to protest, but Bow was right. It was inhumane to give Catra this type of death. But what the Horde does under her command is inhumane too and there she is spreading misery and blood.

“Stop it, Bow!” she screams at her friend “She’s not worthy of mercy! What can’t you fucking understand!?”

She wants to scream now. She-Ra is supposed to be able to kill a magicat easily, but even in that unhinged state she’s having a hard time.

“Why can’t you fucking kill her!?” she shouts to herself “Fuck!”

.....

It’s been months since Catra has been sleeping with Adora. The top bunk remained unused since that night. The brunette has been her lifeline from the moment they became friends to present time.

Adora, however, has been behaving bad lately. She feels grumpier, easy to irritate. Her friend loves to push her buttons and Adora snaps like a rubber band.
She adjudicates all of this to her nightmares. They always make her stay up all night till her body is exhausted and gives up to sleep only half an hour before matutine training starts.

But since Catra’s been sleeping with her, those nightmares seemed to disappear. How could that happen?
Adora thinks, with a smile on her face, that is because Catra purrs for her, kneads her stomach and nuzzles against her neck. She is warm too. Something inside Adora’s guts awakes. A little fire to weak to be considered wild but strong enough to remain intact.

She is not afraid to admit to herself that Catra is everything that makes her sleep well. And now, she is getting ready to admit it to her friend.
They are at the rooftop at the moment.

Catra swings her tail lazily between her legs. Adora and her are laying in the floor. It is a hot day in the Horde, so hot that sparring has to be replaced with day off. It doesn’t happen so often, when the temperature rises, usually thanks to the Fright Zone’s pollution, soldiers have to stop their activities because it is not worthy to train if cadets are going to faint in the middle of the ring.
So, the girls hang out in the rooftop being… lazy. Adora is not used to that feeling, but Catra knows how to relax so she wastes no time.

Speaking of which, the young kitten has her eyes closed. A little smile on her lips. She's loosened up there next to Adora.

But Adora could never get used to being quiet.

"You know?" and so she breaks the silence "I have been thinking about how since you've been sleeping with you, I haven't had any nightmares again…"
Adora closes her eyes and sighs.

She can't see two intense orbs watching her.

The cat girl woke up from her slumber as soon as she heard Adora's voice.
But the blonde girl wasn't looking at her.

Catra smiles at her.
"I'm glad" she whispers "I'm glad it helps"

Adora opens her eyes and looks at her friend. Grey blue and golden/blue reunite again.

“It does, Catra” she reinforces with a lazy smile “I don’t know how to thank you, I really want to show gratitude to you” She grabs Catra’s hands and intertwin their fingers, as they always do when they want to reassure some statement.

Catra releases her girly, high-pitched chuckle. Showing her fangs. Adora’s face starts to burn at the sight of her friend’s singularity.

“Maybe, don’t try to punch me when you sleep?” she chuckles again.

“Will do, as long as you sleep with me, I won’t have any bad dream again”

“Yeah, I know…” Catra sighs before continuing “You always have those ugly dreams where you fight princesses, I know… or those involving Shadow Weaver”

As soon as Catra mentioned her, the whole body of the blonde girl froze. She wants to calm down her emotions, she is starting to feel uneasy with Catra’s speech, or whatever she’s about to say. Adora knows Catra will say something venomous.

“Yeah, I know…” but she brushes it off for good “But I’ll get over them someday”

Suddenly she’s very uncomfortable.

"Those involving Shadow Weaver puts you in a very bad place… also, you get grumpier" she mutters the last part to herself, but Adora of course catches every word Catra lethally delivered.

But Adora knows Catra is just pushing buttons. She wants to see her reaction to certain topics, that's how she is.

"Well, yeah, of course. I try to be the best, and I think I am" but Adora won't let her win "I just want Shadow Weaver to notice me in any way I can, sometimes those dreams are about her mistreating me and I don't want the same treatment for me…."

"Oh, you mean like the way she treats me?" Now, it was Catra's turn to feel offended. Her expression turned into anger.

"No! I didn't mean it like that…" Adora was angry at this given point. Catra was getting mad about a situation she instigated. How convenient. "What I mean is that she's great with me, I sometimes fear that she will no longer be…" she is mad at Catra, she can't understand her, even if they are best friends sometimes, they are not in the same page of the book. Catra knows nothing. Adora knows everything. "You should be more like me if you want to be treated equally, but you never listen, you are a brat that gets what deserves"

Silence fall down them.
Adora regretted to say it. She recognizes when Catra is nervous about a comeback. She tries to be fierce and aggressive but sometimes she can't handle the fact that people talk back.

“Adora…” her voice breaks. Suddenly, her raspy voice was drowned in tears “You… you, dumb face!” she spits. Adora is taken by surprise, she’s used to Catra’s yelling but it is always directed to another person, she never rises her voice to Adora “I can’t believe what you do to please an old rag of a woman!”

Adora, nonetheless, knew Catra would never say something nice in that state. She always has something poisonous to say. But the blonde girl has had enough.

“Catra!” she barks back, but was immediately interrupted.

“Shut up and listen to yourself!” the cat girl mutters some ugly curses under her breath. She wheezes. Her hands are fists now, her knuckles turn white due to the pressure “God damn, you don’t see it too!? Huh!?” tears fall now, bathing those freckles “You don’t see how much you give for the people that give zero fucks for you!?”

Adora retorts as Catra spills fuck! and God dammit!

“Language, Catra!” she is angry, it doesn’t even hurt her that Catra is straight up crying in front of her “It is Shadow Weaver who you are talking about!”

That is enough for Catra.

“And what the fuck would she ever do to me, Adora?” she looks daggers at the blonde girl “Punish me? She always finds an excuse to punish me, you idiot! But you?” she groans now, some people would declare she’s roaring “You are so blind to see how much it affects you to be a dumb fuck perfectionist! How much it hurts you to be a people pleaser!”

She pushed Adora roughly. The blonde girl didn’t fall backwards because she expected this type of reaction from the brunette.

“Fuck off, Catra! You don’t know what you are talking about!” Catra invades Adora’s personal space, she looks straight at her friend’s cold grey blue eyes.

“No, you fuck off and also, go fuck yourself! That is exactly what Shadow Weaver wants you to do! To get all fucked up and miserable like she is!”

She pushes her again and run. Not before spitting “You’ll realize someday how it slowly kills you to be the best, to be a martyr…”

And so, she runs away.

It doesn’t even matter that Adora shouts Catra! repeatedly. She never came back.

Later that night, Adora found herself alone in the barracks. She is showered and in bed. But something was missing, well, certain someone.

She was wide awake waiting for Catra to show up, she supposed she was taking a long shower. When she's anxious she doesn't care about her rejection to water, she just wants something cold to hit her body.

Adora closes her eyes, trying to sleep.

Minutes passes by, she doesn't notice though. Then, a heavy lump alerts her.

"What the…" she sits up. She is about to strike but the eyes studying her are easy to recognize.
"Oh, you are back…" she whispers to herself, not even realizing that Catra arches an eyebrow in utter confusion. She sounds relieved, but the brunette girl understands another meaning.

"Uh, yes?" she responds "Do you… want me to sleep on my bed tonight?" she sounds insecure. As if she didn't want to sleep on her bed ever again.

Adora opens her eyes and pleads.

"No! No, please…" she sighs, it is harder than she thought "Please, don't. I thought you were mad, that's all." She sighs again and hides her face with her hands.
Catra gets inside the bed, cuddling with Adora. Both are now covered with the thick blanket.

"I am not mad at you…" the cat girl suspires "I am mad with Shadow Weaver and Hordak and what they do to you, that's all"

Adora inhales and exhales. At least her best friend is not mad at her precisely, but some odd feeling still lingers.

"Catra, I know you are mad at them, but you have to understand that they do it because they want the best for me, that's why I'm the best soldier" Adora looks at her friend's eyes. Expecting her to understand "Even if it hurts, they do it because they want the best. You know I fear the day Shadow Weaver finds someone better than me, more capable than I, you can't blame me for feeling pressured" she wants to say more but finds herself unable to continue. Her body shakes and her voice quivers as she tries her best to speak.

Catra hugs her friend tight, very tightly.

"Adora, you dummy…" she whispers against the blonde's neck "It won't happen. Trust me now, you are far too good, they don't even have a chance against you"

“H-How do you know?” Now, her voice was drowned in tears. She wanted real answers. Not emotional, empty answers.

“Because…” Catra responds “you are strong, very strong. You are smart, even though I don’t like to admit it, and pretty. Very pretty. Shadow Weaver won’t find someone like you. I just hate you don’t see it” Adora’s arms embraces Catra’s waist attracting her more to herself. She needed her warm body against her own “I just hate how you hurt yourself trying to please her, those nightmares exist because you don’t take care of yourself…” Catra sets free her purring. This is what makes Adora happy. If she’s unable to content herself, Catra will have to be in charge of Adora’s sanity “That’s why I look after you until you get ready, hopefully it will happen someday”

…….

You look out for me and I look out for you…

They promised a long time ago. No one laid a finger on them as long as they were together to protect each other. Until they split ways.

Now, Adora fights for the Rebellion and Catra remains in the Horde.

They fought and hurt themselves plenty of times. But the injure was never deadly.
Catra scratched Adora's back, leaving angry red lines for the rest of her life. Adora marked Catra's body with bruises that made her body ache for weeks.

It was like some kind of secret code. They would hurt each other but not to the point of dying.
This new She-Ra, however, didn't grasp the concept of it.

Catra swore her arm was nonfunctioning for life. Whatever Adora did to her, it cut important nerves to move it. One less weapon on her favor.

She-Ra, with her menacing presence, was getting closer to her. That wicked grin printed on her face. She was having a blast watching the cat girl squirm in pain.

The Sword of Protection was bathed with Catra's blood. The cat girl never felt so much terror in her life.
She was raised with electrocution, suffocation, abuses of any type… but nothing made her realize she was going to die as violently as she was now. She is about to die in She-Ra's arms.

"Adora!" she screams as blood falls from her mouth, combined with saliva "What the fuck are you doing!? Stop it already!" she broke in front of the Amazonian Goddess. She started crying overwhelmingly. She never cried in the middle of a fight. But this time it was different, she presumed it was her last battle she'll ever take part of.

Catra is panting hard, she's running out of energy to keep this confrontation going on.

"Adora, stop it!" she pleads again "I give up! I give up! God damn, I fucking give up!" she raises her hands. But this new She-Ra doesn't care. She approaches her.

Meanwhile, Bow was trying to get the controller out Glimmer's hands. But it was useless. The princess holds it strongly.

"Glimmer, stop this nonsense!" he begs, now crying at the sight of Catra being hurt "She gives up! She gives up! Please I beg you!" The archer implores, now on his knees. He didn't know what other pathetic show he has to perform to stop Adora from killing Catra, but it was Glimmer who was in charge of Adora's erratic behavior.

"Stop it, Bow!" she cries. She really is crying too. War is raw and brute. Catra was brutal in the battlefield. She didn't care about people's lives. Why would they ever care? "This is not over until Adora fucking kills her! God damn!"

Both are crying. The scene before them is too gruesome to bear. They have seen how war was like, but this part of it never felt as graphic and disgusting as this one. A towering woman tearing apart another woman insufficiently strong to fight back this monster. The cat girl had only one hand to defend herself, the other one was barely hanging on meat and bone. Blood bathing the land. Catra was panting heavily. Her tears mixing up with blood.

She cried even harder as soon as She-Ra grabbed her by the throat.
The woman laughed wickedly. She was not sane. Catra looked at her eyes. Red and violent. This was not Adora.
Not her Adora.

"Adora! Stop it!" she begs again "Whatever the Rebellion told you to do, you have to fight it! You have t-UH!" She-Ra presses her fingers against the slim neck. Catra was getting suffocated "This can't be…" she says forcefully. The blonde girl listens to her "This is not fair, Adora! I don't deserve to die like this!"

She-Ra rises her sword, now pointing at Catra's chest.

"This is not fair! Not fucking fair!" she screams frustrated and angry. Catra is not going to die without spitting venom "After all these fucking years! This is not how I deserve to die! Fuck!"

She looks straight at her oldest friend.

“This is not fair, Adora!” she continues screaming “You are my best friend! The love of my life! How can you do this to me!?” She-Ra presses a little stronger this time. Shutting Catra’s mouth.

Tears falling again.

Catra’s vision starts to blur…

This time, Shadow Weaver was particularly vicious with Catra’s punishment. She was supposed to only electrocute her, but something funny occurred to her. She ended up testing some other torture methods on the brunette.

Well, they are more like rehab methods. As Shadow Weaver tells Adora. But Catra insists they are not.

At this precise moment, Adora was hugging her friend. The cat girl involved herself with the thick blanket, like she did when they were kids. She was sniffing and sobbing uncontrollably.

She screams how much it hurts; how unfair her life is.
Adora's heart breaks every time Catra speaks.

"Shh, Catra… it's okay" she hugs a bit tighter "You are not there anymore"

She kisses her forehead and head as she caresses behind her ears. She knows how good it makes Catra feel.

She tries, but she's not so good at words, as they don't come easy. But physical contact is the only method that always help Catra to feel comforted.

The girl starts to purr. It is more to herself than Adora's delight.

"Catra…" the blonde girl says "I promise I will never lay a finger on you; I won't ever make you feel this miserable".

She hugs the sobbing girl. She embraces her with her lean arms. They are gaining muscle, as Adora and Catra are still in the period of growing up. But still, there's strength in her grip.

“I won’t ever hurt you…” she whispers in her fluffy ear. “I won’t ever hurt you”

She recites to the brunette.
But something catches her attention.

She saw some red petals on the floor, they are falling slowly with grace. Adora has some of them on her boots.

Catra sobs even harder this time. She reveals her chest to Adora, her shirt was blooming. Literally. Tones of petals come out her chest like a red sea.
She looks straight at Adora’s eyes. They are angry. Catra is furious at Adora. Her eyes never reflected betrayal as strong as this precise moment.

Adora sees the big injure, how her chest was split open as red petals were discarded on the floor.

No one said a word. No one dared to say a word.

“Glimmer!” Bow at this point is feral. His kindness and tranquility vanished as soon as he saw Adora doing the unthinkable. He is about to throw up. “She did it! She fucking did it!”

The princess froze in her spot. Her hands were sweaty, holding the controller with her whole life.

She was crying softly.

“Just fucking push the button, Glimmer!” The brunette boy was howling and crying. He snatched the controller from his friend’s hands. He pushes the button. His tears make his vision blurry, but he succeeds.

The red, glowing crystal star in the gemstone of She-Ra’s sword contracts itself. The veins decorating the skin of the warrior halted and came back to the source. The red, angry star exploded, leaving the light blue gemstone alone again to heal itself.

She-Ra converts back in Adora and slumps over a body on the floor.

Her head throbs. She regains consciousness slowly and paused. But her ears catch the perceptible sobbing of a girl beneath her. This voice…

She is not proud of this but… Adora recognizes this sobbing anywhere.

She looks down. The girl beneath her is sobbing hard, very hard. She's heartbroken and terrified.

"Catra!?"

She screams as soon as she recognizes those two orbs watching her back. Cara is covered in blood; her lip is broken.

The sanguine fluid flows all over her chest, and then Adora sees it. The Sword of Protection stabbing Catra's chest.

She did it…

"Catra!" she screams again "What the fuck!? How- "Adora tries to cradle Catra's face, but the brunette weakly hisses at her. Her voice is hoarse and some tears are spilled in the process. Catra tries to defend herself, she is still in danger, she presumes.

She did it

"Catra… Wh-what the hell happened?" the voice of the blonde gets weaker as she studies her friend. She is hurt, deadly injured. Adora is about to throw up at the scene in front of her. The girl who was once vibrant and strong was converted into a bloody rag, too weak to move.

Catra was crying.

Her eyes reflected anger and betrayal.
"I told you to stop…" she groans. It hurts to speak; her body is getting uncomfortably weaker "I fucking told you to stop!" she releases a hoarse cry of pain. Her tears mixed up with the blood and mud on her cheeks.

But now it's too late, her mind thinks.

Adora hugs Catra, cradling her face lovingly. Her eyes are wide open and glassy. Her hands shake uncontrollably.

She did it

"Catra… Catra, please…" she begs as she presses her forehead against the brunette "Please, don't go I… I…" she starts to panic; she looks around but nobody is nearby. She hears the sound of battling and explosions from afar. Adora starts screaming for help.

"Somebody, help me!" she pleads at the top of her lungs.

But there was no one close. She supposed.

She screams again. Somebody! Help!

Nothing...

"Catra" she presses her forehead against her friend's "I don't know what happened, I didn't mean to…" Her voice is drowned in tears. It can't be possible.

But you killed her!

"Fuck, it's not fair…" she cries with Catra now "I…You- "she sobs and swallows her tears "You were supposed to be with me for the rest of my life!"

But you've ruined it!

Catra is perplexed. After all this fighting and trashing, she can't believe her ears.

"I…" she says weakly "I wanted that too…"
Catra said too.

She can't bring herself to hate Adora. Not after leaving the Horde, not even now that it was her sword that was inside her chest.

She is weak for Adora. Torturously weak for her. She was so enamore of Adora she forgot Shadow Weaver's abuse. But Adora didn't love her enough to leave the Horde when Shadow Weaver or Hordak hurt her.

"I wanted you to stay…" she sobs as she speaks. Catra looks at Adora's eyes. The memories of comforting her, knocking about with her. Everything involving Adora comes to her mind.

But Catra can't help but crying. She's dying in the arms of the girl she loves the most. The love of her life herself killed Catra.

"I wanted you to be with me…" she says sadly. Lamenting her present "I wanted you to stay, why… why is…" she can't continue. She coughs blood.

Adora knows it's too late to save her. Catra is too weak now. The blood loss is evident.

She knows this time she has to let go. Let Catra go in peace.

I love you, oh my God...

She presses kisses all over Catra's face. She is bad with comforting words, she knows it. The brunette girl squeaks, she is taken aback.

"What are you…" she coughs again "what are you doing, Adora?" the blonde girl's fingers caress her cheek. She gets closer to Catra's lips.

She studies Catra's face. Even though she is weak, her eyes still glow with something Adora can't believe it's directed to her: love. Her freckles are what caught her eye. No one was like Catra, she thinks. No one is as gorgeous as her.
No one looked out for her like Catra did. How dumb she was. Catra was right.

"You and I are supposed to be together, Cat…" she brushes her lips against the brunette's "You were supposed to be my wife, and I was supposed to be yours"

Catra opens her eyes, as much as she can.
She dreamed about this moment for too long. Too long. And it finally happened.

Adora kisses Catra. She presses her lips so lovingly, so intimate. She kisses Catra with so much care, she's afraid of breaking her. She moves suavely over the brunette's lips. She is contented. She swears Catra is purring very lowly.

The first kiss tastes like heaven. Catra moves her lips too, she does her best.

They both cry in the kiss, because it is the first and last.

Life was always unfair with these two kids. Since they were young, they had to fight for a cause it’s not theirs. They were destined for greatness, but…. Victory has the bittersweet taste of blood.

One of them has to part first. The other has to stay and… and…

Pretend to be strong.

Adora separated from Catra. The girl was now unresponsive, her lips formed a contented smile. The blonde drowned a howl.

She kissed her lips once again.

It's over now.
The end of a bittersweet story.

She takes the sword off Catra’s chest. The nauseous sound of meat detaching from the blade makes her gag.

She lifts Catra in a bridal style. She hoped one day she would be doing this. But not in this way.
Adora studied Catra’s face. Her features were so soft now. At least her last expression wasn’t in pain. She was relaxed and blissed. The kiss helped her. Her freckles were rosy. The heat of her body remained. Adora doesn’t know how longer it would last, but probably not too much time.

She starts walking aimlessly.

She kisses her forehead. Tears fall over it.

“I love you so much…” she speaks softly to her “I love you so much, kitty. I didn’t know it before, but I found out that I love you, adore you…” she keeps walking as she speaks.

She walks. Till she’s far away from the scene.

What was only heard were muffled sobs and sweet nothing.

She was so engulfed in her thoughts and sorrow she didn't see her friends watching her from afar. Bow and Glimmer came out from the bushes. They are shocked at the realization about Adora’s difficulty with the Kill Order.

“She loved her”

Bow says.

Adora kept walking. She needs to find somewhere quiet and kind to bury her lover. Battlefield is not a sweet place for Catra. She doesn't deserve this. She was a young soldier girl trained to obey orders, no one else but Catra knew how raw and brute were Hordak's punishment and how heartless was Shadow Weaver when she didn't get what she wanted.

She kept crying. She hugged Catra's body even tighter. Catra always warned her about duty killing her. She was so right.

So horribly right.

Whoever invented starts,

tried to recreate the beauty of your freckles

in the sky

Adora always said Catra was wrong. When she was young she assumed she knew nothing. But... she was right all along.

Whoever invented stars,

got inspired by your freckles

for the delight of mine

Catra always looked after her, she knew what was best for Adora. But she was so blind, embarrassingly blind that she didn't see what was evident for Catra.

She always knew, she always cared about Adora. But the blonde girl listened to Shadow Weaver and dismissed her best friend's words.

She kept walking and thinking. How Shadow Weaver wanted power from Adora. How the Queen wanted services from Adora. How her friends wanted She-Ra to fight for the Rebellion.

I can't believe how much I love you.

How much I am willing to give up for you.

It hurts sometimes whenever duty opposes,

when what I need is a kiss of yours

But Catra? She loved her when she was nobody. Just dull and boring Adora. If life was simplier maybe they would be dating right now. They would be talking about future plans. Spending time together whenever they could.

You have no idea, no...

You have no idea

how much I am willing to fight the world

just for a kiss of yours.

Adora smiled with melancholy. They could be kissing again. But she remembers how the world never rewarded her efforts. Neither Catra's. She was never enough for Shadow Weaver, she was never enough for the Queen.

But for Catra, she was more than enough. Her company and warmth were enough to make Catra love her.

Adora's life was never rewarding, not even with her mighty powers. They just implied new responsabilities and new people to please. And new nightmares to come...

But life is unfair

Oh, life is so unfair

for the kids of the war

Oh, love

Life was always unfair

For the kids of the Horde

End Notes

I hope you like it an enjoy every part of it. I had fun because I never mentioned Character Death so I hope I break someone's heart jejejej
