Adora Travels

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/67852286.

Rating:
Teen And Up Audiences

Archive Warning:
Creator Chose Not To Use Archive Warnings

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Adora & Catra (She-Ra)

Characters:
Adora (She-Ra), Catra (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Adora's overseas, First Meet, meet cute, Catra's from down under, Fish and Chips, travelling, Aussie Slang, Fluff, maybe some kisses, Magicat Catra (She-Ra), Alternate Universe - Modern Setting, Alternate Universe - No Powers, Soft Catra (She-Ra), Adora likes Catra, Adora is a tourist

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2025-07-20 Completed: 2025-08-25 Words: 20,905 Chapters: 5/5

Adora Travels

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/67852286.

Rating:
Teen And Up Audiences

Archive Warning:
Creator Chose Not To Use Archive Warnings

Category:
F/F

Fandom:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018)

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Adora & Catra (She-Ra)

Characters:
Adora (She-Ra), Catra (She-Ra)

Additional Tags:
Adora's overseas, First Meet, meet cute, Catra's from down under, Fish and Chips, travelling, Aussie Slang, Fluff, maybe some kisses, Magicat Catra (She-Ra), Alternate Universe - Modern Setting, Alternate Universe - No Powers, Soft Catra (She-Ra), Adora likes Catra, Adora is a tourist

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2025-07-20 Completed: 2025-08-25 Words: 20,905
Chapters: 5/5

Adora Travels

by masternoveller

Summary

Adora's in a different country and has a few days off after her work conference finishes.
So, who better than a local (magicat) to show Adora around... and maybe have some lunch.

Notes

I was watching a bunch of videos and posts on the socials and came across some rather funny Aussie slang ones.
I thought, it'd be fun to write a fic with some of the slang I use on a daily basis...

Anywho, no CWs on this one.
Pure fluff.
Enjoy!

See the end of the work for more notes

The First One

Adora's finished her conference at the exhibition centre in the middle of the city and heads back to her hotel to unwind. She made sure to take an extra week off since the flight over was practically a day and she's not so sure she wants to do that again so soon. The conference has ended just before midday and she's got the rest of the afternoon to go exploring so she heads downstairs to talk to the concierge about places of interest or to book something to do during the week.

She's about to get to the desk, her head still down as she scrolls through the website with the title, "Things to do in…" when she accidentally walks into someone and drops her phone.

"Woah!" The other person quickly says, "Sorry, mate."

Adora takes a step back as is about to apologise when she sees the most captivating person she's ever met and all she can stutter out is, "Oh…"

The woman, a magicat, that Adora's accidentally walked into is slightly shorter than herself, short brown hair that looks like she just got out of bed, emphasised by the fact there parts sticking up in different directions, her ears twitching around her head, but the thing that gets the blonde's attention is her eyes. They are different colours and Adora has never in her life seen anything like it.

"You alright there?" The magicat asks with a slight bit of concern in her voice.

Adora realises that she's staring and goes red from embarrassment, "Uh, yeah. I'm fine. Sorry."

"All good." The magicat smiles and then bends down to pick up Adora's phone that's dropped to the ground, the screen still on, "Tourist, huh?"

The blush on Adora's face somehow goes redder as she nods, "Yeah. How'd you know?"

"Heaps of stuff to do around here." The magicat says, holding Adora's phone back out to her, the screen still on the page Adora was reading, "Though, depends on what you're into I guess."

Adora nods as she watches the magicat walk off towards the exit, giving a small wave back to the blonde as she leaves.

After speaking to the concierge, she's got a few ideas but what she really wants to do is get lunch before going out and exploring the city.

She steps out and sees the magicat once more, a small smile appears on her lips as she walks towards her and says with a lilt of amusement in her voice, "We have to stop meeting like this."

"Like what?" The familiar magicat replies with a smirk before she chuckles.

Adora rolls her eyes, "Are you from here?"

"This country, yes. This city, not so much." The magicat replies, "Why?"

"Oh." Adora says a little guilty for assuming, "I thought maybe you'd know a good place to go for lunch. You said there's heaps to do around here before in the lobby…"

"Oh, I know a great place to go for lunch." The magicat replies with a grin, "Though… I don't really make it a habit of going places with people I don't know."

Adora tilts her head and then realises, "Oh! Shoot, sorry. I'm Adora."

The blonde sticks out her hand and the magicat takes it and shakes it firmly, "Catra." She smirks again, "Okay, great. We aren't strangers no more. Lunch?"

"Sure." Adora nods as she goes to walk next to Catra, "Where are we going?"

"I know a great place for lunch." Catra replies and then stops suddenly, "Unless you have something in the arvo you have to be back for?"

"Arvo?"

The confused look on Adora's face has Catra nodding before realising that she doesn't understand what she said, "Arvo. Like… afternoon."

"Oh! Arvo!" Adora chuckles to herself and then shakes her head, "No, I've got no plans this afternoon or the rest of the week really…"

Catra hums out as they resume walking, "My tank is parked over there."

"Your… tank?" Adora says somewhere between surprise and shock, "You own a tank? Like… an actual tank?"

Catra looks at her incredulously and then cackles as she continues to walk towards the parking lot and then stop at a white Nissan Patrol from the late 90s, it's a 4x4 and even has a snorkel at the front, "This is the tank."

"That's not a tank." Adora drawls.

"It's not an actual tank, 'dora." Catra laughs, "But it is practically indestructible. Trust me, I've tried. She's just too stubborn to die."

Adora looks at the old but well maintained vehicle, "Uh huh… Is it… safe?"

“Sure is.” Catra replies as she gets her keys out and manually unlocks the door, “For the 90s.”

“Uh…” the blonde says as she opens the door.

“Even has electric windows.” Catra preens as she runs her hand along the dash, “Old girl has done nearly 350,000kms and she still running.”

The blonde gets into the passenger seat and looks around, “At least you’ve got airbags.”

Catra grins as she turns on the radio, it’s been upgraded with USB input but there’s no screen, the magicat points to the glove box, “Chuck in a CD if you want. My radio is a little fucked as I snapped the antenna going through the bush a while back and haven’t got it fixed yet.”

“CDs?” Adora’s eyes light up as she opens the glove box and pulls out a CD organiser and then looks back at Catra, “Wow, this is so… old.”

“Fuck off.” Catra laughs out and Adora isn’t sure if she should be offended or not, “Just pick something, ‘dora.”

The blonde rolls her eyes and flips through the CDs in the wallet, eventually stopping at one and takes it out of the case, trying to insert it into the player, “Catra? It’s not working… It’s not going in…”

“Hang on.” Catra says as she gets into gear and then presses the eject button, another disc comes out, “Here. Put that back into the sleeve please.”

Adora takes the CD and then inserts her chosen on and Catra laughs, the blonde looks over smugly while putting away the other disc, “What?”

“Of course you’d pick the Spice Girls album.” The brunette laughs out, “It’s not even mine, my friend left it in here a while back.”

"Likely story." Adora teases as she sits back and taps her fingers to the beat, "Besides, I don't know what most of those bands are." She flips through the discs once more, "I've never heard of these bands. Bodyjar? Grinspoon? The Superjesus? You're not like… religious are you?"

"I'm assuming you're talking about Superjesus?" Adora nods, "Yeah, no. It's a rock band. The lead singer is fucking hot."

"Uh…" Adora pulls out her phone and searches the band, surprised and relieved to see that the lead singer is a woman, the blonde smiles over at Catra, "She is pretty nice."

"Not nice, fucking hot." Catra repeats with a grin on her face, "The chick from Magic Dirt is bit of alright too."

"I have… no idea what you are talking about." Adora says, "But it seems like you find rock singers, hot."

"I find most women hot." Catra shrugs not looking over at Adora.

"What about me?" Adora baits.

Catra glances over for a moment, "You…"

"Yeah, me." Adora smiles back.

"I mean, you're like… a beach babe." Catra replies glancing over again, "You'd look like a surfy chick if you had your hair down and jumped on a surfboard."

Adora laughs at that description, "Yeah?"

Catra nods, "Yep."

"So… not a sheila?" Adora goads with a quirked up eyebrow.

"A sheila?" Catra repeats and than chuckles, "That's what the old boys at the pub say."

“Ah.” The magicat gets onto the freeway as Adora looks around at the signs on the road, “Where are we going?”

“Hope you don’t mind being out in woop woop for a bit.” Catra replies and then with all seriousness adds, “Don’t worry. It’s not bum fuck country. And even if we were going that far out, it’s not that bad. The people are nice enough.”

Adora’s eyes go wide, “What?!”

“What?”

“The people are nice while they… they… assault you?!” Adora’s voice raises and that’s when Catra realises her mistake and grimaces.

“Oh, fuck. No, that’s not what I meant.” Catra backtracks, “I meant that we aren’t going rural rural. It’s just a saying. You won’t get fucked up the ass without your permission or have anything like that happen, well, not unless it’s consensual between two adults.” The brunette trails off a little bit before getting back to her what she was saying, “My point is, it just means that… there’s not a lot to do out there…”

“That’s a terrible saying.” Adora replies.

“Hm… guess it is.” Catra agrees somewhat, “Anyways we aren’t going beyond woop woop. Well, not really going that far either…”

The blonde taps the words into her words, “I can’t find this place.”

“What place?”

“This… woop woop.”

“It’s not a place.” Catra replies and then chuckles, “It just means it’s kind of middle of nowhere.”

“I’m so confused…”

“Yeah, you’ll get that.” Catra says with another chuckle as she continues to drive.

Adora nods and looks out the windows as Catra continues to drive.

“Have you seen Wolf Creek?” Catra asks out of nowhere, breaking the comfortable silence.

“No.”

“Oh, okay.”

“Why?”

“I was just wondering.” Catra replies.

“What is it?” Adora asks, “Where is it?”

“It’s a movie.”

“Uh huh. About?”

“Bad things that happened in the outback.”

“What kind of bad things?” Adora turns to look at Catra.

“You’re not planning on backpacking in the outback, are you?” Adora shakes her head no, and Catra nods her head, rocking back and forth a little, “Well, if you do plan on doing outback type of things, just… be careful who you accept rides from is all I’m saying.”

Adora furrows her brows, “You’re not like… a serial killer, are you?”

“Me?” Catra turns her head to Adora “I haven’t killed anyone. So… serial, no.”

“You’re not planning on killing me, right?”

“No.” Catra replies, “Sounds like a lot of work.”

“Where are we going?” Adora asks again, her phone in her hand.

“South of the river.” Catra replies, “It’s got the best fish and chips this side of the country.”

“Fish and chips?” Adora repeats incredulously as Catra nods seriously, “How far is this place?”

“About half an hour or so.” The brunette replies, “Should get there at around about ten to two.”

“Ten to two?”

The brunette turns her head to look at Adora who’s serious in her question as she sighs out, “Uh, we’ll get there around one fifty this arvo, I mean afternoon. Fuck me, I feel like I’m talking all proper now.”

Adora can’t help herself and giggles at the brunette’s statement, “Is that not something that you do a lot? Talk proper?”

“Shut the fuck up, ‘dora.” Catra replies with a chuckle.

“Oh, my bad.” The blonde covers her mouth as she laughs, “I mean, you already are so… proper.”

“Whatever.” Catra rolls her eyes, “It’s a bit of boring drive on the freeway, hope you don’t mind if I take the scenic route once we get closer.”

“No, I don’t mind.” Adora replies as she looks out the windscreen, “I haven’t seen much apart the hotel and the conference building. It’s nice to see anything else.”

Catra nods, “Sounds boring.”

“Very boring.”

“Extremely boring.” Catra turns and grins as she gets off at the next exit and then goes onto the scenic route, “Alrighty, get ready for some not-city landscapes.”

Adora grins widely as the scenery changes from city to suburbia and then she sees the ocean and her eyes go wide at the sight as a smile graces her face. Catra turns to see the smile and mentally gives herself a pat on the back.

“Here we are.” Catra says as she pulls up to the parking lot, turning the engine off and unbuckling her seatbelt, the brunette looks around and then smiles, “It’s not too busy today so we can get a table outside to enjoy our late lunch.”

They both get out of the car, the blonde noticing that Catra’s left her window half down, “Um, your window is still down.”

Catra looks back and shrugs, “She’ll be right. It’s a manual anyway and there’s nothing in there worth stealing. So, I’m going to chance it and say, she’ll be right.”

Adora gives her a questioning look, sighing, “Are you even going to lock it?”

“Oh, yeah, right. I can do that.” Catra returns, sticking her key into the door and locking the doors, “Alright, let’s get some food.”

Adora follows behind Catra as they go to the small shop located on the end of a few other shops and across the road from the ocean, the blonde enters and looks up at the board, “Old school.”

Catra turns around and grins, “See anything that catches your fancy?”

The blonde continues to look and then turns back to Catra, “What are you going to get?”

“Fish and chips.” The brunette replies with a smirk, “Maybe a fried Mars bar or a pineapple fritter later if I want something sweet.”

“What’s a fried Mars bar?” The blonde searches the board for it.

“It’s not on the board.” Catra replies and then leans exaggeratedly and stage whispers, “It’s like a local delicacy. Totally bad for you.”

“Right.” Adora nods not understanding, “Well, I guess, I’ll get the fish and chips too.”

“Sure.” Catra walks up to the counter, “Can I get the fish and chips for two please?”

“Anything else?” The server asks ringing up the order.

Catra furrows her brows and then replies, “I’ll also have one pineapple fritter, one fried Mars bar, sauces as per usual.” She looks to the fridge in the corner and adds, “Also two bottles of Portello.”

The server nods, putting in the order, “That all?”

“Yep.” Catra pulls out some cash, “Here. Keep the change.”

The server nods, taking the cash and putting the change in the bowl on the top of the counter, “Shouldn’t be too long.”

“Cool.” Catra replies as she grabs the drinks from the fridge, handing one to Adora while she opens her own bottle and takes a sip, “Ah! I haven’t had one of these in ages.”

Adora opens her bottle too and takes a sip, looking over at the magicat, “Is this alcoholic?”

The magicat tilts her head, “No. It’s not. It’s just a soft drink.”

“Oh, are you sure?”

“Yes.” Catra replies with certainty, “Why?”

"It just tastes…" Adora takes another sip, trying to put her finger on the taste, "Like port wine?"

"That'd be the grape and berry flavours." The magicat says, "It probably gives it that kind of taste."

Adora nods as she looks around the small shop, "How much do I owe you for lunch?"

"Nothing. My shout." Catra replies with a shrug and before Adora can argue, the magicat puts a hand up to stop her, "Don't argue with me. Just accept it as my treat."

"Okay, fine." Adora tries to cross her arms whilst holding onto the bottle and pouts, "But I get to treat you to a meal before I go."

"Whatever you want, 'Dor." Catra says with a smirk as their order is called, the magicat holds her bottle out to the blonde, "Here, grab this, I'll go grab the food."

The blonde takes the drink from Catra and then once the magicat has collected the food, she follows her out and across the road to a wooden picnic table overseeing the ocean.

"This is nice." Adora remarks as she looks out at the view while Catra sets down the paper package on the table, the blonde sniffs the air, "Mm… that smells so good."

"It's going to taste real good too." Catra grins and then starts to unwrap the paper, spreading it out across the table, "Just watch out for seagulls. Nasty buggers. Don't feed them. They'll just keep coming back for more to the point they'll be outright stealing it out from your fingers."

"Oh. Yeah, I won't feed them." Adora agrees.

"Great. Come on, let's eat." Catra declares as she takes the lids off the sauces, "Oh, leave the pineapple fritter and the fried Mars bar for last. That's dessert."

Adora nods as she pops a chip into her mouth, "Mm… so good."

Catra chuckles, "Try the fish. It's fresh."

"Hm?"

"Yeah, they sell what they catch in the morning. Once it's gone, they shut up shop." Catra explains, "The dinner rush hasn't hit yet."

"Does it usually sell out?" Adora asks eating a piece of fish.

Catra nods with a mouthful of food, she swallows it down and grins, "Yeah, if you get here after 4pm, you're too late."

"But it's…" Adora looks down at the time on her phone, "Just past 2pm."

"Yeah, the tradies finish around 3pm. They'll be swarming here after work looking for a cheap and good feed." Catra says, "Which means we should get going before they get here."

"Why?" Adora asks.

"Beat the traffic back into the city for one." Catra licks her fingers before wiping them onto her pants.

"And two?"

"They get loud and rowdy after they finish work." Catra takes a drink, "Plus, unless you want a bunch of blokes flirting… badly, really badly, with you then that'd be part of my point two."

"Nah, I'm happy to get out of here before then." Adora replies as wipes her fingers on the paper of their meal, "Now, dessert?"

"Yes!" Catra says with excitement, grabbing the fried Mars bar and holding it out to the blonde, "Small bites."

Adora takes the item, eying the magicat suspiciously, “This isn’t like a prank it is?”

“No.” Catra replies flatly, “I wouldn’t have paid for it just to prank you.”

Seemingly satisfied with that answer, she takes a small bite and her eyes widen, “Catra!”

“What?” The magicat says with a small laugh.

“This is a deep fried chocolate bar!” Adora loudly says, “Stars!”

“It’s a Mars bar.” Catra replies grinning, “So? What do you think?”

“I think I’m going to have a heart attack if I finish this.” The blonde says taking another bite and then holds it back over to Catra, “I don’t think I can finish it. It’s… too rich.”

Catra takes it and pops the rest of it into her mouth, moaning out as she chews it, “Mm… oh yeah.”

The blonde then points to the last item on their paper with the leftover chips, “What’s that?”

“It’s a slice of pineapple, deep fried in batter.” Catra says, “A pineapple fritter.”

“Can I try it?”

“Go for it.” Catra replies pushing it towards the blonde, “Let me know what you think.”

Adora picks it up, inspecting it a little and then takes a small bite and then looks at Catra with a wide grin, “Stars… this is so good!”

“Glad you like it.” Catra laughs as she tries to grab it back only for Adora to pull it away, “Hey! Share!”

“Nuh uh!” Adora grins and takes another bite as Catra sits back down dramatically, “Mm… They don’t usually deep fry these at home. It's usually just grilled or baked."

The magicat smiles, preening at the response she's gotten from Adora for lunch, "Good lunch?"

"Yes." Adora replies and holds out the last piece of pineapple to Catra, the magicat leans in and takes it from the blonde's fingers with her mouth as Adora blushes slightly, "Uh… thank you for lunch."

"My pleasure, Adora." Catra says as she digs out a few tissues from her pocket, holding it out to the blonde, "Here. The toilets are just over there if you want to wash your hands or use the dunny."

"I'm assuming dunny means toilet." Adora says though it sounds more like a question.

"Yeah, it's exactly what that is." Catra laughs out, forgetting that the blonde isn't familiar with the slang of this country, "Dunny means toilet."

Adora looks around to where Catra was pointing to, "Yeah. I think I should probably go before we head back."

They quickly clean up their rubbish and Catra walks Adora to the public bathrooms, "I'll wait for you outside."

"You don't need to go?" Adora asks.

"I'll go after you." The blonde nods as she heads inside.

They are back in Catra's 'tank' as the magicat drives them back to the hotel, both happily full as they sit in a comfortable silence, the Spice Girls CD starting over again as Catra pulls into a car space just outside of the hotel.

The magicat turns off the engine, letting them have a moment of silence without the loud engine deafening them as she turns to Adora, "Well, I guess this is your stop, Adora."

The blonde unbuckles her seatbelt and takes a breath before turning to look at Catra's soft eyes staring back at her, her breath hitches slightly, "Thank you for today, Catra. I had a really good time."

"No worries." Catra says as she runs her hands over the steering wheel, not sure where to go with this conversation.

Adora nods back, seemingly at the same conclusion, she bites her bottom lip, "So…"

"So?"

"I'm here for another week…" Adora starts to fidget with her fingers as Catra's tail lands on the blonde's lap, the magicat looking down at her appendage and encouraging Adora to take it, pleasantly surprised by how soft and gentle Adora is with it as she continues, "Would you… do you…"

"Yeah, I'll take you up on your dinner invitation." Catra replies with a smirk and Adora lets out a relieved breath as she nods, "Was that so hard?"

"Shut up." The blonde laughs as she slaps the magicat on the shoulder playfully, Catra catching the wayward arm in her hand and with a smirk, Adora practically fallen forward into the magicat, "Uh… hi."

"Hey Adora." Catra grins, "When should I pick you up for dinner?"

The blonde manages to push herself back up and clears her throat, "Tomorrow?"

"Sure." Catra replies as she presses a soft kiss onto Adora's cheek, "Tomorrow."

The blonde nods with a blush, “Tomorrow.”

“Have you got plans for tonight?” Catra asks and Adora shakes her head, “I know you’ve already spent a heap of time with me already… but do you want to catch a late night movie?”

“Are you asking me out on a date, Catra?” Adora teases.

“No.” the magicat quickly refutes and Adora looks at her unbelievingly, “I’m just asking if you want to watch a dinosaur movie with me tonight. You know, keep me company or whatever…”

“Just company?” The blonde challenges with a slight pout of disappointment.

Faking nonchalance, the magicat shrugs, “Well, yeah. I mean, we can watch a movie. I’m happy if you wanna cuddle up into me or whatever… Maybe make out a little after…”

Adora bursts out laughing, leaning in and reciprocating the kiss on Catra’s cheek, “Sure. That sounds nice.”

“Great!” Catra replies ecstatically, “I’ll meet you at the lobby at eight?”

“You don’t want to come up?” Adora asks surprised, “I mean, you could, you know… come up. If you wanted to, that is…”

“Cute.” Catra replies with a grin, “I’ll meet you in the lobby later, ‘dora.”

This time Adora actually does pout, “Okay.”

“Get some rest, Adora.” Catra says, “I’ve got to meet someone in an hour about a job to return home and I need to stop by the servo and fill my tank on the… tank.”

“Oh, okay.” Adora replies as she leans in once more and presses a kiss on Catra’s cheek, “I’ll see you at eight.”

Catra smiles as she touches her cheek, watching Adora open her door, the magicat quickly jumps out as well and shouts out, “Wait!”

The blonde stops in her tracks, turning around as the magicat runs to catch up with her, “What’s up?”

“Can I grab your phone number?” Catra asks, tapping her phone in her pocket.

“Yes.” Adora replies with a wide grin, “Give me your phone, Cat.”

Catra pulls out her phone, unlocking it and holding it over to the blonde, and when Adora’s done, she texts herself and then hands it back to Catra. The magicat grins, “I look forward to tonight, Adora.”

“Me too.” Adora replies with a chuckle, “Okay, I’ll see you later tonight.”

Catra puts her arm up and waves to Adora walking back to the hotel, a wide grin on her face, “I’ll see you tonight, Adora.”

The Second One

Chapter Summary

Movie Date.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

Catra's waiting around in the lobby of the hotel when her ears swivel around to the sound of the elevator dinging to announce that it's on the ground floor. The doors open and Adora walks out, she's dressed casually with her hair down and wow… what a sight. Catra does a double take, making sure that this beautiful woman is actually Adora as she gets up and walks over to the blonde.

"Hey, Adora." Catra greets with a broad smile, "Did you take a nanna nap?"

Adora tilts her head and raises a questioning eyebrow back at the magicat, "What?"

"I asked you if you took a nap." Catra repeats with the same perplexed look, "Why are you looking at me like that?"

"Did you just…" Adora furrows her brows, not sure if she should be offended or not, "Did you just call me a nanna?"

"What?"

"Before. You asked if I took a nanna nap." Adora repeats, crossing her arms over her chest defensibly, "That's what you said. You asked if I took a nanna nap."

"Oh." Catra's eyes widen, "Yeah, nah. I didn't call you old, if that's what you're thinking, 'Dor. I just meant, if you took a nap. Nothing to do with being… a nanna…"

“Oh.” Adora replies dropping her arms and then rubs the back of her neck, “Yeah, I did take a nap.”

“Was it a power nap or did it turn into a sleep?” Catra prods a little further as she gestures for the blonde to start walking towards the exit with her, “I can’t take naps for that reason. My naps always turn into full on sleep.”

Adora giggles, “What’s a power nap?”

“It’s like napping for like twenty minutes.” Catra replies in thought, “It’s meant to make you feel less tired. The ads on tv made it sound like if you slept for twenty minutes you’d feel less tired and more recharged. Hence, power nap.”

“Ah, right.” Adora nods, “Well, I slept for about an hour. So, would you consider that a nap?”

Catra shrugs, “Sure. Seems short enough.”

The blonde shakes her head with a smile and changes the subject, “Have you had dinner yet?”

“Nah, not yet.” Catra says, “Didn’t have time. I met up with an old mate from school and they just kept talking. And here I thought they were on smoko.”

“Smoko?”

“Break.”

“Like a smoke break?” Adora tries to clarify and Catra nods.

“Yeah, still chain smoking they are.” Catra replies, “They tried switching to the vapes but yeah, nah, they reckon that it’s not the same. Old mate’s been trying to quit, go cold turkey, but, yeah, it’s hard, especially with being FIFO and all the other blokes around smoking it up on their breaks.”

“Uh…”

“Yeah, they aren’t going to be quitting anytime soon, I can tell you that.” Catra says, “Not until they stop doing FIFO on the mines.”

Adora stops and stares at the magicat, ‘Do I really have to ask?”

“FIFO, right?” Catra laughs and Adora nods as they start walking again, “It’s fly in, fly out. Mostly people working on the mines. I couldn’t do it again though. Even if it’s big money.”

“No?”

“Nope.” Catra replies, “Not worth my sanity. Was the same shit, day in and day out. Difference was that I was making really good coin and I stuck it out until I saved up enough to do what I want. My mate’s still doing it though. She’s bad with her money so she’s stuck in a never ending cycle of working and spending.”

Adora nods, the conversation taking a downturn and she decides to change it up, she reaches out and lets her fingers touch Catra’s hand, the magicat looks down and grins, interlacing their hands together, the blonde smiles back in relief, “Do we have time to get dinner?”

Catra pulls out her phone and looks at the time, “Yeah. Movie starts at ten. We’ve got two hours to kill.”

“Great.” Adora smiles and then makes a face, “Do you know any good places we can go for dinner?”

“Is this my treat or your treat or we going to split it down the middle?” Catra asks feigning seriousness before she grins, “Because that’ll determine where we go, ‘Dor.”

“Well, Cat.” the blonde quirks up a challenging eyebrow, “I said I’d take you out for dinner tomorrow and technically… you asked me out on this date tonight.”

“True, true.” Catra nods and then says, “My treat then.”

“We can split it if you want, Catra.” Adora suggests instead.

“Yeah, nah.” The magicat waves Adora’s off, “You can get the popcorn and drinks for the movie.”

“Deal!” Adora squeezes Catra’s hand and laughs.

“Okay.” The magicat laughs too, “I know this really good pub just on the corner. They’ve got the best chicken parma this side of town.”

Adora just smiles back politely, “Sounds… good.”

“Trust me.” Catra grins as they head towards the pub for dinner.

The pair walk in the pub, Adora looks around as Catra leads her to the bar and grabs a couple of menus, the magicat leans forward to talk to the staff member behind the bar, “Hey, are you guys still doing dinner?”

“Yeah, until nine.”

“Great.” Catra replies as she looks to Adora, “Know what you want yet?”

The blonde peruses the menu and scrunches up her face, “What are you getting?”

“The parma.” Catra replies, “And maybe a pint of beer. You?”

Adora glances down at menu once more and then sighs, putting the menu back as she says, “I’ll get whatever you’re getting.”

“Are you sure?” Catra asks and Adora nods, “Right-o. Grab us a table, yeah?”

“Sure.” Adora nods and then heads to an empty table for two and taking a seat as Catra orders.

The magicat returns with a table number and two beers in her hand, placing one in front of Adora, “Here you go. Don’t worry, it’s not a bush chook.”

“Thanks, I have no idea what that means.” Adora smiles back as Catra takes a sit across from her, the blonde holds up her glass to Catra, the magicat clinks her glass and takes a sip with a grin, as does the blonde, “Ah… I haven’t had a beer in a long time.”

“Well, to moderation.” Catra declares with a grin as she clinks their glasses again and takes another sip, “Only one tonight. Don’t want to be over the limit driving home after.”

Adora nods, “Do you live far from here?”

“I live on the other side of the country actually.” Catra says putting her glass on the table and leaning back on her chair, “One of my mates needed a favour, so, I volunteered since I don’t have much going on currently.”

“What favour?” Adora asks tapping her fingers on her glass.

“She recently moved over here for a job. Well, a job and her girlfriend.” Catra chuckles, “Anyways, she finished up at her old job, gave herself three days to relocate and of course forgets to pack a few things.”

“Like?”

“Like?” Catra asks back and Adora rolls her eyes and nods, “Like her guitar. Oh, and her important documents.”

“Uh huh.”

“So, instead of mailing them which would have cost a bundle and could get lost.” Catra explains, “Not to mention would probably take a week or two. I said I’d make the trek over for her.”

“That’s really sweet, Catra.” The blonde softens, “She must be a really good friend.”

“Practically family.” The magicat replies with a fond look, “Anyways, I’m crashing in their spare room until I head back west. Plus they shouted me a case of beer too for my troubles.”

Adora gives her a shocked look, “You did all that for a case of beer?”

The magicat laughs, “Yeah, nah. The beer is just the cherry on top. I didn’t expect anything in return. But yeah, a case of beer is usually the price of a favour around here.”

“Okay…” The blonde says with a shake of her head while laughing to herself at how ridiculous that is, “When are you heading back?”

“I was planning to go in the next day or so.” The reply has Adora visibly deflating, the magicat definitely doesn’t miss that as she then says, “Want to go on a road trip?”

“You’re kidding, right?” Adora replies stunned.

“No?” Catra asks with a chuckle as she takes another drink from her glass, “You’d get out of the city and see some places. Mostly red dirt but, yeah, not the city. I can even pay for you to fly back here after if you want.”

“How long of a drive is it to get back?” The blonde asks as she raises the glass to her lips.

“Roughly 36hrs or so.” Catra replies and Adora nearly chokes on her beer, the magicat getting up and patting the blonde on the back, “You alright, ‘Dor?”

Coughing a little and tearing up, the blonde nods, “36 hours!? Are you crazy?”

“No?”

“That’s over a day!” Adora says loudly before lowering her voice when a few other patrons look over, “You’re not seriously going to drive that far are you?”

“Well, yeah? Why not?” Catra shrugs not understanding why Adora seems so shocked, “I do stop. I’m not that crazy.”

“Oh.” Adora says and then realises she assumed incorrectly, “But you did that drive all by yourself?”

Catra nods, “Not the first time.”

“You’ve done it before?”

“Yeah.”

“Why?”

“Why not?” Catra asks right back with a grin, “Come with me. You’ll see a lot more than just the city that you’re staying in.”

“Can I think about it?” Adora asks back.

“Sure.” Catra replies, “Take your time, I’m in no rush to get back.”

The blonde nods as their food gets brought to their table, Adora smiles, “Thank you.”

“Cheers, mate.” Catra says to the waiter.

“No worries.” The waiter replies handing over the cutlery and collecting their table number, “Enjoy.”

“Thanks.” Adora says and then looks at Catra who’s already digging in, “So, what is this again?”

“Chicken parmigiana.” Catra replies as she blows on the piece she’s cut and then pops it into her mouth, “Mm… so good.”

Adora follows suit and then smiles when she finally digs in too, “Is that ham and tomato sauce?”

“Yeah, pretty much. And don’t forget the cheese.” Catra replies as she puts another piece into her mouth, “You okay with salad? I wasn’t sure if you wanted veggies or salad.”

“Salad is fine, Catra.” Adora replies and then adds, “Thank you for dinner too.”

“My pleasure, Adora.” Catra says with a nod, “And thank you for coming out with me.”

“Thank you for inviting me.” The blonde grins back, “And here I thought I was just going to eat in the hotel lobby restaurant all by myself.”

Catra laughs, “Okay, okay. Eat up. We still have a movie to catch.”

They get to the cinemas, Catra walks straight up to the counter and purchases the movie tickets while Adora heads over to the concession stand, looking up at the prices until Catra comes back.

“Got ‘em.” The magicat waves the paper tickets in her hand, “We’re in cinema three.”

Adora nods, “Popcorn and two drinks?”

“Sure.”

“What drink do you want?” Adora asks.

“Cola is fine.” Catra replies as Adora goes to order, the magicat grabs her drink and they walk over to cinema three, it’s currently empty as Catra walks them over to their seats at the back of the theatre, “Quiet tonight.”

Adora nods as she puts her drink in the holder on her far side, lifting the middle armrest so she can put the popcorn between them, “You know it’d be funny if we were the only two people watching this movie tonight.”

“Then in that case, I’d be completely stoked to have gotten a private screening for such a cheap price.” Catra declares and then looks to Adora, “Or maybe I totally planned this.”

The blonde laughs unbelievably, “Yeah, right.” She looks at Catra who’s got a stoic look on her face, “Wait. You didn’t, did you?”

Catra stares back for a moment longer before breaking and smiling, shaking her head “No. Definitely not. I only planned the movie part.”

Adora laughs, slapping the magicat playfully on the thigh, “You nearly had me!”

“Oh, I think I got you.” Catra raises an eyebrow and then laughs.

As Adora is about to retort, the lights dim a little as the ads and previews begin to play. The pair happily tucking into the popcorn as the movie finally starts to play.

The lights come back on once the movie credits start to roll. Catra’s arm still wrapped around the blonde who ended up cuddling in the magicat after a jump scare moment and then never let go. The magicat grins, rubbing her cheek on the top of Adora’s head before pressing a soft kiss there too, “Well…” the magicat starts to say as Catra plays with the magicat’s fingers.

“Well…” Adora repeats lazily.

“Looks like this really was a private screening for two.” Catra observes that they are the only two people in the cinema.

“How romantic. I didn’t mind the cuddling” Adora replies with a chuckle and then yawns, “Mm… you’re so comfortable, I could probably fall asleep on you right now…”

The magicat laughs, “Yeah, nah. Let’s not do that here.”

“But why?” Adora whines out playfully as the magicat gently pushes her back up, “I just got comfortable!”

“Come on, ‘dora.” Catra helps her to her feet, “Grab your rubbish and I’ll walk you back to your hotel.”

“Okay.” The blonde relents easily, picking up her empty drink as Catra grabs the almost finished popcorn and her empty drink as they head out.

Adora grabs Catra’s hand as they walk back towards the hotel, the blonde swinging their joined hands playfully as the magicat grins, “And here I thought you were tired.”

“I am.” The blonde simply replies.

“Me too.” Catra replies with a yawn.

“How far is your place? Or should I say, the place you’re staying at?” Adora asks as she continues to swing their joined hands, “Did you want to get a coffee or something?”

“If I have a coffee now, I’m not going to sleep until daylight.” Catra replies tiredly, “Don’t really want to get into a bingle driving home.”

“If you mean crash, then no. That would be bad.” Adora agrees and then an idea comes to her, “Why don’t you stay at the hotel with me tonight?”

“Nah, I should be right.” Catra brushes off Adora’s offer, “I don’t think it’d be a good idea if I came up.”

“Why not?” Adora asks confused, “We’re just sleeping.”

“I don’t know.” Catra says with a sigh, “Doesn’t seem right. You literally only met me today.”

“And I feel like I’ve known you for a lot longer.” Adora says so sincerely, “Come on, we’re not having sex. I just rather you didn’t drive home tired. You could fall asleep behind the wheel and crash."

"I… I guess I could." Catra reluctantly agrees.

"And you've been drinking." Adora points out.

"Literally one drink." The magicat refutes.

"Still a drink." Adora doubles down, "I wouldn't feel right letting you drive home tired and with alcohol in your system. So, I think it's my duty to make sure you get a good night's sleep before you drive anywhere."

Catra stares at the blonde incredulously, a small smile creeps onto her face, "So… no shagging?"

"Stars, no." Adora rolls her eyes and laughs, "I'm too tired. Plus… yeah."

Catra looks at the blonde questioning, "Plus, what?"

Adora blushes, "I'd rather not have sex tonight… or the next couple of days really... It'd just be really messy…"

It takes a moment for the magicat to put two and two together, "Oh! Right. Nah, yeah… uh." Catra scratches the back of her head, "But if you did, I'm alright with it. Obviously, I wouldn't eat you out but, yeah. Offer is there."

"Stars…" Adora looks away, her face practically on fire as she steers them back into safer territory, "Stay the night with me, Cat. I'd feel a lot more at ease knowing you're safe."

"Twist my arm." Catra replies with a nod, "Okay. Fine."

"Yay!" Adora punches the air with her free arm happily, making Catra laugh, the blonde then realises something else, "Oh, I'll have to get another toothbrush for you."

The magicat nods, “There’s a milkbar just up the road, don’t think they’re open though.”

“Milkbar?”

“Yeah. Like a convenience shop.” Catra clarifies, “Otherwise maybe your hotel provides toothbrushes? I mean, it is pretty high end…”

“I didn’t actually look since I always bring my own. But maybe they do.” Adora thinks out loud, “Well, we’ll go check and then worry about it later.”

“Sure. Whatever you want, ‘Dor.” Catra replies with a smile.

“What are you doing tomorrow?” Adora asks.

“Well, this really gorgeous woman is taking me out for dinner.” Catra says with a grin as she looks at Adora, “But otherwise, the rest of my day is pretty much free. I was planning on hitting the beach, but I think I left my thongs at my mate’s place.”

“Your… thongs?” Adora eyebrows rise up to her forehead, “Why would you be wearing a thong on the beach? What kind of beach is this?”

“Huh?”

“You said you left your thongs at your mate’s place.” Adora repeats, “Why would you wear a thong to the beach.”

“Not a thong, Adora.” Catra laughs, “Thongs. Like slippers or flip flops.”

“Oh…” Adora finally realises and then laughs along with Catra, “Stars, I thought you were talking about underwear!”

“Nah, not talking about my daks.” Catra replies still laughing, “I don’t even wear underwear!”

Adora stops laughing and stares at the magicat, "You don't wear underwear?"

"Nah, why would I?" Catra shrugs and then points to herself, "Anatomy is slightly different from you humanoids. Plus tail holes are just annoying. I mean, look at my pants!"

Adora chances a look and the magicat shoves the blonde's face playfully, "Hey!"

"Quit staring at my ass, 'dora!" Catra laughs even harder as the blonde rolls her eyes at being caught.

"Whatever." The blonde shakes her head and laughs, "I have to wear underwear. I don't like going commando. Feels… breezy."

"Breezy?" Catra repeats and then surmises, "Guess it's just what you're used to, huh?"

"Yeah." Adora nods.

"Do you want to come to the beach too?" Catra asks, "I'm supposed to go to a barbie at around lunch if you want to join."

"Oh, no. That's okay, I don't want to crash your lunch thing." Adora politely declines and then squeezes Catra's hand, "Besides, I need to plan for our dinner date tomorrow night."

"Oh, do you now?"

"Yes. Yes, I do." Adora declares and presses a kiss on Catra's cheek, "You've set the bar pretty high already. What with lunch, dinner and a private late night screening of the latest dinosaur movie."

Catra can't help but laugh as Adora grins back, "You know it's not a competition, right?"

"Yep." Adora nods, "But I'm going to win."

The magicat laughs again at the absurdity, “Baby, I’ve already won.”

Adora’s face stills and her eyes widen as Catra barely even registers what she’s just said, “Did you just…?”

“What?” Catra asks obliviously, “Did I just what?”

“Nothing.” Adora lets it go, it’s probably just a throwaway comment anyway, “Anyway, I have a lot of planning to do. Plus you’ve already got me at a disadvantage, since I’ll have to ask and look up everything online tomorrow just to make it extra special.”

“Whatever you plan on doing or taking me, I’m sure it’ll be great.” Catra replies, “Heck, I’d be happy with a roast chook sanger and a coldie.”

“I-I have no idea what you just said.” Adora shakes her head with a laugh, “But it won’t be whatever that is.”

The magicat grins back, “Okay. Like I said, whatever you choose, I’m sure it’ll be great.”

“It sure will.” Adora replies as they get to the hotel, “Now, come on. I’m tired already.”

Catra lets herself get pulled into the elevator by Adora, the blonde swiping her room key and pressing the button for her floor as they stare at their reflections in the doors.

“Nice room.” Catra says as they enter Adora’s hotel room, “Can’t say I’ve stayed anywhere as nice as this in a long time.”

“It’s a standard room.” Adora replies, “The other rooms are way overpriced for a place to sleep.”

The magicat nods and stares at the lone king bed in the middle of the room, “So, where do I sleep?”

“On the bed?” Adora replies, “You’re not sleeping on the floor and there’s no couch.”

“I can see that.” The magicat walks towards the windows overlooking the city, “Wow, what a view.”

Adora steps up next to Catra, “It’s nicer during the day when you can see everything.”

“Guess I’ll find out in the morning.” Catra says still staring out at the lights.

“Mm.” Adora hums as she walks over to her bathroom, “Ha!”

“What?” Catra turns around to see Adora holding up the packaged toothbrush in her hand triumphantly, the magicat grins, shaking her head, “Dork.”

“This is for you.” Adora holds it out she’s giving out medals at an awards ceremony, “Do you need a change of clothes, I could lend you some of mine.”

The magicat walks over to the wardrobe and opens it, pulling out a bathrobe and holding it up, “This will do. You mind if I sleep in this?”

Adora’s face turns red, the blush creeping over her face and neck at her next thought, “Just, that?”

“Yeah. It’s big enough.” Catra shrugs and then sense the awkwardness in Adora, “Or… I can just sleep in my clothes.”

“No!” Adora quickly quells that thought, “It’s fine. The bed is huge and you’re going to be under the blankets anyways.”

“Okay.” Catra nods and holds up her toothbrush, “Well, guess I better get ready for bed then.”

Adora nods, “You can go first. I’m just going to check a few things on my laptop.”

“No wuckas.” Catra nods and walks over to the bathroom while Adora just stares at her confused again, the magicat turning around to elaborate, “It means, no worries, Adora.”

“Oh, right.” Adora nods as she watches Catra disappear into her ensuite and shut the door.

“Goodnight, Adora.” Catra yawns out on the other side of the bed, quickly leaning over and pressing a soft kiss on Adora’s cheek before rolling back onto her side of the huge bed, “I’ll be out of your hair before brekkie. Uh, before breakfast.”

“I know that one.” Adora chuckles softly, “There’s no rush, Cat. I’ve got nothing planned tomorrow apart from dinner. So, take your time.”

The magicat yawns and then repeats, “Goodnight, Adora.”

“Goodnight, Catra.” Adora says as she turns to her side to see Catra falling asleep after switching off the bedside light.

“Sleep sweet, princess.” Catra mumbles under her breath as she falls asleep almost immediately, not realising what she’s just said.

The blonde smiles tiredly back, pushing herself up and pressing her lips onto Catra’s cheek as she whispers, “Sleep sweet.”

Chapter End Notes

Here you go! A chapter 2!
Will there be more, you ask?
I have no idea, but I'm going to say... probably yes - wouldn't mind putting some drop bears or roos or bush chooks in there somewhere... but we'll see.
I mean, if you peeps want more of this... fluff. 😌 😌 🤔

I'm in the middle of writing the final chapter for The Quest - but this one seemed to write itself a lot easier so... here we are.

Thanks for reading, kudos, commenting, bookmarking and subscribing.
You guys are awesome.
Comment away if you want to but no wuckas if you don't.

Like a Sunrise

Chapter Summary

Dinner date.

Chapter Notes

What?! Another chapter?! No way!
YES WAY! Enjoy.

See the end of the chapter for more notes

Adora's waiting nervously in the hotel lobby when sees Catra walk in and she can't help but smile at the sight of the magicat, dressed a little more formally despite the blonde telling her that it wasn't going to be anything fancy.

"Hey, Adora. Been waiting long?" Catra greets the blonde with a smile, looking Adora up and down, "You look, nice."

"Just nice?" Adora says teasingly, looking for a reaction and she gets one where the magicat starts stuttering back at from her underwhelming compliment as the blonde giggles at her, "I'm messing with you, Cat."

"Oh, right." Catra rubs the back of her head and chuckles under her breath, before clearing her throat, "You really do look nice. Well, better than nice. Bloody amazing really. Uh…" she clears her throat again to get back on track, "So, where are we going?"

"You look nice too, by the way." Adora nudges the magicat playfully.

Catra pats down her maroon suit jacket over her black faded jeans and tshirt, "Well, I wasn't sure how fancy I'd have to be for tonight."

Adora looks down at herself, she dressed in grey pants and a white long sleeve shirt, "I don't think it's super fancy. The photos online didn't seem too formal and there's nothing there that says there's a dress code or anything."

"Cool." Catra replies and then looks around the blonde, "No jacket?"

"Do I need one?" Adora asks.

"Might get a little nippy at night." Catra replies, "So, yeah, I reckon you should probably grab one. If you've got one that is."

"I'll have to go back upstairs." Adora sighs dramatically and the magicat chuckles, "Come with me?"

"Sure." Catra shrugs as she follows the blonde back to the lifts.

Adora opens the door to her room, holding it open so Catra can follow in behind her, and then goes towards the chair where her jacket is situated, quickly grabbing it and putting it on, "There. Better?"

"Yeah." Catra replies, "Much better."

"Ready to go?" Adora asks as she grabs Catra's hand and heads to the door, "I made reservations for 7pm."

"Lead the way, Adora." Catra grins as she squeezes Adora's hand, "I look forward to wherever you're taking me tonight."

"I hope you like steak." The blonde says and Catra nods.

"I wouldn't say no to reef and beef." Catra replies and then adds questioning, "Well, I'm guessing they have surf and turf."

"Um…" Adora thinks to herself as they wait for the lifts, "I'm not sure."

“Which part?”

“Huh?”

“Which part aren’t you sure about?” Catra asks as the lift doors open and they step inside.

“The whole thing.” Adora replies a little embarrassingly, “I have no idea what you’re talking about again.”

“Just means if they have a bit of seafood with the steaks.” Catra explains and Adora makes an ‘oh’ sound, “You’ll get used to me soon enough. Or not. It’s all good either way.”

“Uh huh.” Adora nods unconvinced, “I guess we’ll find out if they have what you want when we get there.”

The magicat nods.

“Hey, I know this place.” Catra grins in recognition, “I’ve been here before. And yes, they’ve got surf and turf.”

“I’ll take your word for it.” Adora laughs out and then pulls the magicat into the restaurant she’s picked out for them, “I hope this place would be okay. The reviews seemed good.”

“Oh, it’s completely underrated.” Catra says as they walk up to the hostess, “What’s your booking under?”

“Hello, I have a reservation for two under Adora.” The blonde says.

The hostess looks down the list and finds her name, “Yes. Right this way.”

They are shown to a table for two situated by the window overlooking the city lights, the magicat pulling out Adora’s chair for her, making the blonde roll her eyes good naturedly, “How suave.”

“Shut up, princess.” Catra grumbles under her breath as she takes her own seat.

“What did you call me?” Adora grins at catching out the pet name Catra’s given her.

“Nothing.” The magicat pretends to be interested in the menu despite already knowing what she wants as the hostess returns.

“Good evening. Would you like water for the table? We have tap, still or sparkling.” The hostess starts to say.

“Tap is fine.” Catra replies quickly before realising that she didn’t even ask Adora, “Sorry, do you want something different?”

“No, tap water is fine.” Adora says with a smile.

The hostess nods, “Would you like any other drinks to start with?”

Adora looks to Catra, “Do you want a drink? Beer or something?”

“Nah, I’m good for now.” Catra politely declines, “Think I’ll save my beer for dinner.”

“Okay.” She turns back to the hostess, “Just water for now, thank you.”

The hostess nods, “I’ll be back in a few minutes to take your order.”

“Thanks.” Catra replies as the hostess walks away to fetch their water, the magicat grins at Adora, “So, what are you going to order? I can tell you the grilled barra here is really good too.”
Adora looks through the menu and frowns, “I can’t find the grilled barra.”
Catra does a quick once over the menu and finds it quickly, “It’s the fourth one down on the mains.”

“Grill barramundi with steamed vegetables and house made sauce.” Adora reads out and then rolls her eyes at the magicat, “You could have said barramundi.”
The magicat just smiles back as they wait for the hostess to come back to take their orders.

“Oh man, I’m so full.” Catra leans back in her chair and pats her stomach, “I don’t think I have room for dessert.”

“There’s always room for dessert.” Adora says with a giggle, “Maybe you shouldn’t have had the surf and turf after all. Your steak was as big as the plate.”

“I know. But it was so good.” Catra groans out, “Can’t get better than local produce.”

“Hm, you’re right.” Adora agrees with a nod as the menus are brought back for them to peruse for dessert, “So, pass on dessert?”

Catra pulls the menu to herself and looks through it and then chuckles under her breath, the act catching Adora’s attention as she looks at her in question, “Sorry, it’s just that the pavlova is still on this menu.”

“Pavlova?” Adora looks at the menu, “I don’t think I’ve ever had that.”

“For this price, you can probably get five from the supermarket.” Catra says, “Heck, I can put together one of these if you want to try it. And you can pick the fruit.”

“Oh.” Adora furrows her brows, “I think I’m a little too full right now for dessert.”

“Don’t deny yourself just because I’m stuffed.” Catra tells the blonde, “If you see something you like, just get it.”

“Well, isn’t that why we’re at dinner?” The tease goes over the magicat’s head for a moment before Catra realises what Adora’s said, the blonde waiting with a smirk as Catra laughs out.

“Huh.” Catra finally says after catching her breath, “You’re going to give me a stitch if you keep making me laugh, ‘Dor.”

The blonde smiles widely, proud of herself, “Are you ready to go?”

“Yes.” Catra replies as she waves down a waiter to get the bill and then adds, “I’ll get you a golden Gaytime from the milkbar later if you want dessert.”

Adora pauses from getting up and stares at the magicat, “Uh, is that like some kind of…” the blonde leans in and whispers the last word, “Euphemism?”

“No?” Catra replies as she stands up and takes her jacket off the back of her chair to put back on before walking over to help Adora with hers, “Why would it be?”

“You said, ‘golden Gaytime.’” Adora repeats as she accepts Catra’s help with her jacket as she heads towards the register to pay, “Are you… because we’re not… I’m mean, this is just the first date and I don’t really…”

“Woah!” Catra stops Adora in her train of thought and gives her a small smile, “It’s an ice cream.”

“What?”

“A Golden Gaytime is an icecream.” Catra says, “Like a Paddle Pop or a Drumstick.”

“Oh.” Adora replies with a slight blush at her word vomit earlier, “I didn’t…”

“It’s our first proper dinner date, Adora.” Catra repeats the words back to Adora with the same smile from before, “We don’t have to do anything except keep each other company, maybe even hold your hand again or a few cheek kisses."

The blonde pulls out her wallet and taps her card on the machine to pay for their meals, thanking the server before grabbing Catra's hand and pressing a kiss on the magicat's cheek, "That, I'm happy to do."

Catra grins widely, "But we're still going to have a Gaytime."

"Ice cream." Adora corrects, "And in that case, yes, I'd love to try it."

"We'll see. I'm still full for now." Catra laughs as they head out of the restaurant.

Catra reaches out for Adora's hand as they enjoy the walk to work off dinner, the magicat looks up and sees the full moon and then looks to the blonde, "It's a full moon tonight."

"Oh yeah." Adora looks up too and smiles, "Are you going to turn into a werewolf? Or is it, werecat?"

The magicat raises an eyebrow at the blonde, "Yeah, nah. Though there's probably more chance of me turning into Blinky Bill and climbing up a tree and falling asleep with how full I am after that freaking amazing dinner date. Care to join me for a power nap?"

"I'm not sleeping up in a tree." Adora replies shaking her head and chuckling, "Also is Blinky Bill some kind of monster?"

Catra laughs out, "Blinky Bill is a koala."

"Oh, like a bear?" The blonde asks feeling confident.

"Uh, not a bear." Catra says, "Koalas aren't actually bears. I mean, we call them drop bears but they really aren't bears."

“Drop bears?”

“On account of dropping from the top of trees onto unassuming tourists.” Catra replies seriously and then adds, “They’ve got claws. Like mine but… meaner.”

Adora furrows her brows, “They sound scary.”

“They really aren’t.” The magicat grins, “They spend all day sleeping and eating in eucalyptus trees. What a life, huh?”

“What are they?” Adora asks and Catra looks at her a little confused, “You said that koalas aren’t bears. What are they then?”

“Marsupials.” Catra replies, “Like roos. They’ve got pouches.”

“Huh.” Adora says as she takes in the information, “I haven’t seen any animals since I’ve been here.”

“You want to see some?” Catra asks.

“I don’t want to go to a zoo to see them though.” The blonde squeezes Catra’s hand as they start to walk again, “Guess I haven’t really left the city enough to see much of the wildlife.”

“What are you doing tomorrow?” The magicat asks with a smile.

“I don’t have any plans.” Adora admits, “Why?”

“We can go for a bushwalk around the hills or something, if you’re up for it.” Catra suggests with the same smile, “It’s not even really a bushwalk, but more like a walk in the park with kangaroos and whatnots.”

“Is it far?” The blonde asks.

Catra shakes her head, “It’s not in the city is all I’m going to say. Yeah, nah, it’s not too far from here. Maybe an hour drive or so.”

“An hour?!” Adora nearly shrieks out in disbelief, “How is an hour not far?”

“Hm… It’s pretty standard if you ask me.” The magicat shrugs, “So, you in?”

“Sure.” Adora replies with a shrug of her own, “What time?”

“We’ll go before traffic builds up.” The magicat replies with a grin, “Pick you up around 530am?”

“You’re joking, right?” Adora replies in disbelief.

“Nope. No furphy’s from me.” Catra replies, “I’m deadest serious about beating the traffic.”

Adora sighs and points out, “It’s still going to be dark at that time.”

“It’ll be totally romantic. We can watch the sunrise and I can call you Rhonda and tell you that you’re hot.” The magicat laughs out at her own joke, before realising Adora has no idea what she’s taking about, “It’s from an old ad where this chick is on holidays and she’s projecting that the guy is hitting on her.”

“You might need to show me that one.” Adora replies amused.

“Hot like a sunrise.” Catra says with a chuckle, before adding, “Classic.”

The blonde giggles at the magicat reminiscing about an old ad on tv, “Are we going to get breakfast too after or before?”

“We can hit up the Maccas if you want.” Catra says as they stop at the crosswalk and wait for the red man to turn green, “Then again, the lunch bars and cafes might already be open for tradies that early. I haven’t really been up that early when I’ve been over here to know.”

“What’s Maccas?”

“Oh, right. It’s McDonald’s. Or Mickey Dees or whatever you call it where you’re from.” Catra clarifies, “Actually now that I think about it, there's actually a pretty good bakery on the corner just over there."

"What do you call Burger King over here?" Adora asks thinking about some of the other places from back home.

"Hungry Jacks."

Adora snorts out a laugh, "What about Subway?"

"Subway." The magicat points towards the corner where the bakery sits darkly, "That's the bakery I was talking about."

Adora perks up, "I've walked past there to go to my conference but never got a chance to go in. It smells amazing in there, all that fresh bread and coffee aromas."

"Yeah, it's pretty sick, isn't it?" Catra nods in agreeance and then gets a weird look back from Adora, "What? What did I say?"

"Sick?"

"No! That's a good thing!" Catra corrects, "Like a really good thing. Like… fully sick!"

The look on Adora's face doesn't change as she doesn't understand.

The magicat sighs, "Uh, I'm sure the café isn't sick. I'm sure it's really good. I mean it smells really good when I've walked past too. But I've always been too late and all the good dough is gone."

"Ha!" Adora laughs out at the pun, "We'll then it's set. Brekky at the bakery tomorrow morning."

The magicat raises an impressed eyebrow up at the blonde, "I see I'm rubbing off on you, 'Dor."

"Maybe." Adora brushes off but clearly preening.

Catra chuckles, “I’m doing a really bad job talking proper, aren’t I?”

“A little.” The blonde replies with a laugh as they get back to Adora’s hotel, “Well, this is me.”

“Sure is.” Catra replies looking around the lobby as she keeps hold of Adora’s hand.

“Want to come up?” Adora asks shyly.

“I would love to.” The magicat replies quickly before squeezing Adora’s hand, “But I actually need to head back tonight.”

“Oh.” Adora says trying not to feel so disappointed.

“I’m supposed to pick my friends up and drive them home after their work party.” Catra explains, “But if I didn’t, I’d be up there in a heartbeat, princess.”

“Yeah?” The blonde looks up with a small smile on her lips.

“Bloody oath I would be.” Catra nods and Adora smiles wider, “Get some sleep, ‘Dor. We’ve got an early start tomorrow morning.”

“Come up for a bit until your friends call?” Adora tries a different tact.

Unable to resist, the magicat nods and lets herself get pulled into the lift with Adora, “Yeah, okay.”

The blonde smiles as they get into the lift, the magicat pulled into Adora arms until the blonde’s back hits the back of the lift and she gasps out before they both break out in a laugh as the doors finally shuts, the blonde looks into Catra’s eyes, “Hi.”

“Hey, Adora.” Catra whispers back staring back deeply into Adora’s eyes as the blonde smiles back, the magicat leans in, “Can I…?”

“Yes.” Adora says closing the gap and presses her lips onto Catra’s in an all too short lived first kiss when the lift doors open up to her floor, the blonde pushes Catra back before grabbing her hand and pulling them towards her room, “Come on.”

“Righto.” Catra agrees easily and lets herself once again be led to the blonde’s room.

The magicat’s phone rings for the second time and Catra chuckles as the blonde just pulls her in closer, “Adora. I have to go.”

“No… stay…” Adora presses a few more kisses on the magicat’s lips, “5 more minutes...”

“You said that last time.” Catra replies with a laugh, “I really have to go…”

The blonde pouts, “Fine. Go and leave me like this.”

Catra leans in and presses her lips onto Adora’s pouting lips, “Can I come back after?”

Adora’s pout turns up into a smile, “What if…”

“What if?”

“What if I came with you?” Adora suggests.

“You want to come with me?” Catra repeats surprised.

“I mean, yeah, if you want me to.” Adora replies with a hopeful look in her eyes.

“Yes. I’ve got enough room in the tank.” Catra grins as her phone goes off again, she quickly grabs it and answers it, “Hey. Yeah, I’m on my way. Give me ten. Okay, see you soon.” She turns back to Adora who’s still grabbing at her, “Okay, princess. You might need to keep me awake, ‘cos I’m pretty buggered after today.”

“I’ll keep you awake and alert.” Adora leans in and presses a kiss onto Catra’s neck as the magicat sighs into it before grabbing the blonde and lifting her up and into her arms, getting Adora to her feet, “What? What’s the matter, Cat?”

The magicat growls out playfully, “You are very distracting…” the blonde leans in again for another kiss, Catra sighs out, “Come on. We better get going.”

“Okay.” Catra lowers the blonde back to her feet and then says more to herself than to Adora, “Hopefully I don’t run in a boozebus tonight. That’d really make me late.”

“Wildcat!” Scorpia greets the magicat a little drunkenly as she stumbles towards Catra’s vehicle, a wiry blonde with her that waves to the magicat, “Did you get stopped by the police again for another random breath test?”

“You know it, fucking RBTs.” Catra replies with a laugh, “Come on, get in. It’s freezing out there tonight.”

The pair stumble into the backseat and awkwardly buckle up before finally settling and then realising there’s a stranger riding shotgun, “Gosh, hi there!”

“Hi, I’m Adora.” The blonde waves to the pair in the backseat, “I hope you don’t mind me tagging along tonight.”

“No, we don’t mind at all.” Scorpia replies with a grin, “It’s always nice to meet Catra’s girlfriends.”

“I’m Perfuma and this is Scorpia.” The wiry blonde introduces herself and diverting the conversation from her girlfriend’s slip, “Catra is really sweet. She drove all the way from the other side of the country to here so Scorpia wouldn’t need to pay for the things she forgot to bring over.”

“I didn’t do it for nothing.” Catra defends as she pulls onto the road, “I got a carton of beer out of it.”

“Well, worth it.” Scorpia nods, she taps Adora on the shoulder, “I offered to pay for her fuel and accommodation on the way over, but she didn’t want it.”

“Why would I? I’ve got my swag in the bag and my ol’ trusty mozzie net.” Catra points out, “Plus I’ve also got my tent too, not to mention I can always sleep in my tank. Besides, you’re letting me crash with you guys before I head back.”

“You are always welcome at our place.” Perfuma tells the magicat, “And we are also more than happy to pay for you to fly over so you don’t have to spend all that time on the road.”

“Yeah, nah. I don’t mind the drive, can’t stand being stuck in a tin can in the air with no control over anything.” Catra shrugs back as the grins into the rearview mirror to see Perfuma roll her eyes at her, “I’m taking Adora to the park tomorrow. Hopefully catch a few roos or something on the walk.”

“As long as you leave them alone, you’ll be safe.” Perfuma advises seriously before giggling happily as Scorpia whispers something into her ear.

“Did you guys have a good time at your little shindig?” Catra asks the pair, who respond by nodding and giggling, “Guess your both a little pissed, huh?”

“I had a couple of drinks.” Scorpia admits proudly, “Can still walk in a straight line.”

“Sure you can.” The magicat chuckles as she slows down for a red light and then groans out when she looks again, “For fuck’s sakes. Another one?”

“Another what?” Perfuma asks looking up and then seeing the flashing lights and then giggles, “I guess the cops love breath testing you.”

The magicat breathes out as she feels Adora's hand on her thigh, Catra looks down and Adora smiles back, "Best not try to go around them, might seem suspicious."

"Defo would." Catra agrees with a nod as the light turns green and she drives towards the booze bus for the second time that night.

"Evening, this is a random breath test." The officer says as they hold out the breathalyser towards the open window and Catra, "Have you had anything to drink tonight."

"Nah, mate." Catra replies trying not to seem irate.

"Okay, one long breath into the mouthpiece until I tell you to stop." The officer instructs as Catra leans forward, takes a deep breath in and then blows into the device, the machine beeps a few times and then the officer tells her to stop.

Catra sits back and waits until there's another beep and the officer then says, "You're all good to go. Have a good night."

"Cheers." Catra replies before taking off once again.

"Are you sure you two don't want to come in for a little bit?" Perfuma asks, "I can make us a cuppa."

"I've got to get Adora back." Catra politely declines, "And then come drive back here."

"Or!" Scorpia pipes up a little too enthusiastically and then looks at Adora, "Since you've got such an early start tomorrow, why not just stay with Adora tonight in the city?"

There's a shy smile on Adora's face, the blonde clearly likes the idea as she does her best to not seem too eager or hopeful at the prospect of the magicat staying another night with her. Catra for her part just turns to Adora, "I don't want to be a hassle, 'Dor. I'm more than happy to drop you off and then come back."

"No!" Adora quickly says before repeating a lot calmer, "No. Scorpia's right. It'd make more sense if you just stayed with me tonight instead of driving back and forth. Especially with the early morning start."

"Or…" Catra grins and Adora furrows her brows, "We can just stay here tonight."

"Oh, I didn't think of that." The blonde admits and then remembers, "But all my stuff is still back in my room…"

"I'm with Scorpia on this one, Catra." Perfuma comes up behind her girlfriend and hugs her arm tiredly, "Just stay with Adora tonight. It'd make more sense than you going back forth."

The magicat yawns, nodding before turning to Adora, "Yeah, I guess you're right. Lemme just go grab some stuff and we can get going."

Adora turns over and looks at Catra staring back at her, laying on their sides as the blonde reaches out and lets her hand rest of Catra's side, "Do you think there'll be any Blinky Bill's tomorrow in the park?"

The magicat chuckles, "Maybe. Those koalas are pretty elusive. We'll defo see some roos. They're everywhere." Catra blinks slowly at the blonde, a smile on her face, "I've seen a bush chook once over here."

"What is that? A wild chicken or something?" Adora giggles at the thought.

Catra laughs as well and then shakes her head, "It's an emu. When we do that road trip, you're going to see a bunch of wildlife from roos, foxes, emus, rabbits, goats, cows and camels."

“Camels?”

“Yeah, they’re kind of wild up north.” The magicat replies with the same smile on her face, “Might even see some snakes and lizards.”

“Mm… I don’t know about that…” Adora bites her bottom lip, “I’ve heard stories about all those deadly animals that are out to get you over here.”

This time Catra laughs a little louder, her body shaking the bed and Adora joins in, “It’s true. Pretty much everything in this country is out to get you. I’ll do my best to ensure your safety.”

“Uh huh.” Adora nods unconvinced by that declaration.

“And just to prove it, I’m not going to go all Steve Irwin and take you to the mangroves or any croc infested waters to wrangle them.” Catra says, “Or bring you to go free diving with great whites. Though watch out for them jellyfish or blue ring octopuses though… they are defo nasty if they get ya.”

Adora’s eyes widen at even the thought of doing any of those things, “Why would I want to get bitten, eaten or stung by the wildlife, Cat?”

The magicat shrugs, “Just putting it out there.” Catra pauses for a moment before leaning forward and pressing her lips onto Adora’s, “Actually, there’s a place up north that lets you swim with crocs if that’s something that floats your boat…”

“Stars no.” Adora quickly replies, “I rather not. Happy to see them from a safe distance.”

The magicat nods with a chuckle, “Sure, sure.”

Adora yawns, “Mm… better set my alarms…”

Catra turns over and does the same, turning on her alarm as well for the morning before settling back into bed, “Get some shut eye, princess. Big day tomorrow.”

Adora nods, turning over and shuffling herself back into Catra’s body, the magicat instinctively wrapping her arm around the blonde to being her as close as possible, pressing a kiss on the blonde’s shoulder, Adora hums out happily, “I’m going to need coffee in the morning.”

“No worries, princess.” Catra chuckles, “My shout on brekky.”

Chapter End Notes

Here's the reference for the 'Hot like a sunrise' ad - https://youtu.be/85ubtVs5n6A?si=pWHkiNcoGnBDZ-Lg
I have no idea how to hyperlink it... so if you do, let me know and i can do it so you don't have to copy and paste.

This wasn't supposed to be a multi chapter fic... but what the hey, I'm having too much fun with confusing the heck out of everyone.
And yes, if you ever meet me, it's pretty much the way I talk in real life... haha
I do quite enjoy boganing things up especially when I'm staying in country towns.

If you need clarification with any of the slang or references - drop me a comment and I'll clear it up for you. 😉

Thanks for reading, kudos, commenting, bookmarking and subscribing!
I'm also on tumblr - @masternoveller posting random stuff from my work adventures and updates on my fics.
feel free to message me on there if you rather not ask your question on slang/references on the comments here. 😁 😉

The Park

Chapter Summary

Catra brings Adora to the park to explore the flora and fauna.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

"Man, I'm so tired." Adora yawns out as she settles back into the passenger seat, a coffee cup still being nursed in her hands as she blinks her eyes wearily out at the dark skies through the front windscreen as Catra starts to drive, "You really weren't kidding about getting an early start."

"Nope." Catra turns her head and grins, "At least the bakery was good and not too busy with tradies."

"Mm. It really was good. Though I'm not really into those… what were they called again?" Adora looks over to Catra for an answer.

"It was a Vegemite scroll." Catra supplies with a slight chuckle, "You should have seen your face. It was like… argh! Betrayal!"

Adora rolls her eyes while the magicat cackles, "I thought it was chocolate!" the blonde pouts and then scrunches out her face, "You could have warned me!"

"I tried to!" Catra argues back with a laugh, "But you bit into it before I could even say anything! Didn't you read the labels on the displays?"

"No!" Adora whines, "I was too excited!"

"Such a goose." The magicat shakes her head fondly, "I got you a brekky wrap, didn't I?"

“Yes. You did.” Adora smiles back, “Thank you. And for my coffee too.”

“Like I said, my treat.” Catra shrugs happily and then narrows her eyes when they turn a corner and the rising sun comes into view, “Hey, Adora? Pass me my sunnies please?”

“Sunnies?”

“Yeah, my sunnies. Should be in the glove box or the middle console…” Catra replies, “I’m sure I have a pair in here somewhere…”

Adora puts her drink into the cup holder in the middle and then starts to search inside the glove box and then the middle console before frowning, then she perks up and turns to look to the side and grins, “Aha!” Adora pulls out a tube of sunscreen, “Here you go.”

Catra glances down quickly and then quirks an eyebrow at the blonde, “That’s sunscreen.”

“Yeah. Isn’t that what you want?” Adora replies confused, “Sunnies. Sunscreen?”

“No, not quite…” Catra replies with a small chuckles, “I meant sunglasses.”

“Oh. Well, that’s just plan confusing.” Adora replies with a little huff and then opens the glove box up again and pulls out the sunglasses case, “Here. Your sunnies.”

“Oh, I don’t need them.” Catra says and Adora looks at her confused once more.

“What? Then why did you ask for them?” The blonde asks exasperated.

“It’s for you.” The magicat replies as she reaches into the driver door storage and pulls out another pouch, “This one’s mine.”

The magicat takes her unique set of sunglasses and puts them on, "Go on. You're going to need them when the sun blinds you once we start heading east."

"Huh?" Adora looks down at the case in her hands and when she looks up and Catra gets onto the highway she hisses out when the rising sun hits her straight into the eyes, "Stars! That's bright!"

Catra laughs as she manages to watch in her periphery Adora scramble to put the sunglasses on, "Yeah, it's shit, isn't it?"

"Yeah." Adora rubs her eyes and quickly puts the sunglasses back on, "How are you even driving right now?"

"With great difficulty." The magicat replies, flipping the visor down to give her a little relief, "Once we get off at the exit, it'll be better. We won't be looking directly into it."

"Okay." Adora shields her face with her hand, eventually just shutting her eyes behind her hand.

It's not long before Catra takes the exit and they finally get some reprieve from the glaring sunlight that's been blinding them both.

"How far from here?" Adora asks as she picks up her now cold coffee and drinks the rest of it, "Can we make a pit stop?"

"I think there might be a servo or two with loos on the way there." Catra says more to herself in thought than to Adora, "Though, they are pretty hit and miss. Sometimes it's better to piss in the bush than use one of those servo loos."

"Uh…" Adora says with uncertainty, "Are there no other options?"

The magicat turns to the blonde, "Don't worry, princess. You won't need to pee in the bushes. Well, not unless you need to go while we're trekking." Catra glances over at Adora, "How desperate are you right now?"

“I’m not too bad.” Adora admits, “I can hold it for a little longer.”

“No worries.” Catra nods, “I think I’m going to bypass these metro servos. They can be pretty iffy compared to the country ones. I know there’s a sports centre on the way we can stop at. Those are generally pretty clean.”

“Okay. Thank you.” Adora breathes out a sigh of relief and the adds, “Just so you know, I have been camping before.”

“Uh huh.” Catra acknowledges and then grins, “Well, then you’ll have no problems doing a road trip with me across the country.”

The blonde grins back, “It’ll have to be when I can come back though. I’m headed home in a few days.”

“Yeah, of course.” Catra nods with smiles that’s a little sad, she turns to Adora and says with conviction, “I can wait.”

“Wait, really?” Surprise in Adora’s voice as Catra nods forward, risking a glance over for a second and flashes a quick smile as the blonde straightens up, “You’d seriously wait for me to come back to do a road trip with me?”

“Yeah? Why not?” Catra replies.

“Because…” Adora answers with a frown as she stares at Catra’s side profile and sighs, “I don’t even know when I’m going to be back. And you’d wait for me?”

“Yeah. Course I would.” The magicat doubles down, “I would come visit you, but I don’t have a passport and honestly… I pretty sure I wouldn’t even be let in looking like this.”

“Like what?”

“Like…” Catra thinks for a moment, “Different.”

“Different?” Adora tilts her head at the magicat.

“Come on, Adora.” Catra says like her point shouldn’t need to be explained, but the look that Adora’s giving her has her shaking her head and explaining it anyway, “Where you’re from, I’m pretty sure I’m going to get denied entry on account of my species.”

“Oh.”

“Yeah.”

The realisation hits Adora and the blonde almost has to face palm herself, “Oh, shit. I totally forgot, also it’s so not fair. I’m so sorry.”

“Don’t be sorry, Adora.” Catra reassures the blonde, “It’s not your fault. It’s just how the world is right now and whatever.”

Adora sighs, “Still. It’s just not fair.”

“Eh, it’s fine.” Catra brushes off the blonde’s concern, but Adora reaches out and grabs the magicat’s free hand.

“For real.” Adora says with a squeeze of Catra’s hand and the magicat nods back, “Guess I’m going to have to come back sooner rather than later.”

“Yeah?” Catra’s ears perk up.

“Yeah.” Adora repeats with a wide smile and then looks out the front and sees something, quickly letting of Catra’s hand and pointing out the window, “Stars! Look! It’s a kangaroo! Catra! Look!”

The magicat looks over and spots the small group of kangaroos in the paddock grazing by the side of the road, “Oh yeah. As long as they stay over there, we’re all good.”

“Huh?”

“Those roos have a killer jump. Clear fences easily.” Catra explains, “There’s even been videos of them on top of sheds and stuff.”

“That’s crazy.” Adora turns her body to keep her eyes on the wildlife, “They’re so cute!”

“Hey!” Catra laughs out, “You’re going to make me jealous, Adora.”

The blonde laughs out too, “Well, they are cute.” The blonde leans in and presses a soft kiss on Catra’s check, “But you’re the cutest.”

“Damn right I am.” Catra declares with a triumphant grin on her face, “Though you’re an absolute beauty. An absolute stunner.”

“Shut up!” Adora blushes, slapping the magicat on the shoulder, “You’re such a talker.”

“Smooth, right?” Catra replies waggling her eyebrows playfully making the pair of them laugh, “Okay, okay. But for real? Keep an eye on those fuckers. Those roos are fucking unpredictable. I’ve nearly hit a few of them and damn well nearly got myself wrapped around a tree.”

“What? Are you serious?” Adora’s voice goes up an octave, “Catra! You can’t hit them with your car!”

“I don’t want to hit them with my tank.” Catra replies with an eye roll, “One, it’s not a good thing. And two, those roos are going to fuck us up and my tank.”

“Okay then. We agree then.” Adora surmises despite the fact that Catra doesn’t want to hit one or any type of wildlife, the blonde sits back, seeming sated with the sight of the animals as she smiles to herself, “Thank you.”

“For what?” Catra asks offhandedly.

"For doing all of this." Adora puts her hand on the magicat's thigh, "You didn't have to."

"I wanted to." Catra replies, "And you're very welcome, Adora."

The blonde smiles as lets her fingers dance on top of Catra's thigh as the magicat, she feels Catra place her free hand on top of Adora's, "Okay, now I really need to pee."

"Better?" Catra asks as she leans against the door of her vehicle as she watches Adora exit the sports centre after using the restroom.

"Much, thank you." Adora replies drying her hands on her pants, "What about you? Don't you need to go?"

"I'm all good." Catra says as she turns around and opens the door for Adora get in, "Righto, the park isn't too far from here."

Adora gets in, the magicat shutting the door behind her before getting behind the wheel once more, "Okay."

Catra parks up in the small car park, a few other vehicles already there but it's not full at all, she turns to Adora, "We're here."

The blonde stretches out in her seat, "Mm…"

"Come on. Out you get." Catra laughs as she exits the vehicle and stretches her arms up above her head as Adora rolls her eyes and unbuckles her seatbelt.

The blonde shuts the door once she's out and takes in a deep breath, "I love the smell of the forrest."

"It's a park." Catra says as she starts to rummage around the back of the tank, "Ah, got it."

"What have you got?" Adora comes around next to Catra who's pulled out a backpack, "Let me help?"

"Sure thing." Catra holds the bag to Adora, "I'll grab the esky."

"Esky?"

"Yeah." Catra nods, "Can't go trekking without some tucker, can we?"

"I'm assuming you mean food." Adora swings the bag over her shoulders as she watches Catra pull out a plastic box with a handle, "That's a cool box."

"Same same." Catra shrugs and shuts the door, pulling out her keys and locking up her vehicle, "Okay, good to go?"

"Yes." Adora grins out, readjusting the pack on her shoulders, "I'm ready."

"Great." The magicat says as a couple are walking back to their car when one of them looks up with a nod and smiles, "Morning, mate."

"Hey." The couple wave to the magicat, "It's chilly up there."

"Oh yeah?" The couple nod in unison, "It's supposed to warm up though."

"Ah, true." One of the pair nods, "Guess it because old mate here thought it'd be a good idea to get up before the crack of dawn and go bushwalking around in the dark."

"Hey! You agreed to it!" The other one argues as Catra turns to Adora amused.

"Of course I did. I love seeing the sunrise with you." The other one says and then the pair coo at one another before pressing their lips together in a kiss, "Mm… wanna go back to my place for a shag?"

"We live together." The other one says, "But yeah, let's go home."

Catra and Adora watch as the pair get into their car and drive off. The pair looking at one another before breaking out in a laugh.

"Wow, I was not expecting that." Adora says trying to compose herself, "But that was so cute."

"Gay guys, right?" Catra agrees with a nod, "Totally cute. Though, you're cute too."

"Hey, we already went through this on the drive over. You're the cute one." Adora reminds the magicat, "I'm the hot one."

That makes Catra cackle out, wheezing out a, "I did not call you hot, Adora."

"You so did." Adora crosses her arms with a smirk.

"Nope. I called you an absolute stunner." Catra reminds the blonde, "And a beauty. Though that's what I'd call my tank when I've cleaned her up."

"Hey!" Adora shoves the magicat playfully with a giggle before looking around, "Which way?"

"Trails are up that way." Catra points to the trails marked out on the wooden posts, "There's a few to choose from. I was thinking maybe the 10km one. It's only got two small hills but at the top of the second one there's a killer view."

"Sure. Whichever one is fine." Adora smiles back as Catra grabs the blonde's free hand, "Lead the way."

"Rightio." Catra grins back, "Well, onwards."

"Hey, Adora." Catra squeezes Adora's hand.

"Hm?" The blonde hums as she looks over the magicat, swinging their joined hands together playfully, "What's up?"

"Over there." Catra points to the left and watches the blonde's reaction.

"Stars! There's more of them!" Adora coos at seeing a kangaroo and a joey next to it, "They're so cute!"

"Yeah, just stay on the track, princess. They may look cute but they've got a kick that'll knock the snot out of you if they crack the shits at you." Catra warns, "Defo don't want to be in a boxing match with one of them."

"Uh, I'll just stay on the track and watch from here, then." Adora nods in understanding and then her eyes light up when the joey gets back into its mum's pouch, reemerging with it's head sticking out and the blonde coos again, "Stars! Did you see that? They are so cute!"

Catra chuckles under her breath, "Yeah, I guess."

They keep walking along the trial and come to the part where they walk under the trees, "Brr… it's cold under the trees." Adora shivers.

"Backpack." Catra says and motions for Adora to stop, helping the blonde to take the bag off and pulling out a jacket, zipping it back up and then holds it out to Adora, "Here. Put that on."

"You just happen to pack a jacket?" Adora looks at the item, "My jacket. When did you even grab this?"

"This morning when you were in the shower." Catra throws the backpack over her shoulder while Adora puts her jacket on, "Besides, it's nippy this time of morning. Don't want to get cold, do we?"

"Thank you." Adora pulls Catra in for a hug, "You're very sweet."

"And your hot." Catra replies making Adora giggle.

"Ha! I knew it!" Adora laughs out upon being proven right, "You do think I'm hot."

"Defo." The magicat grins into their hug, "Come on, the quicker we get to the top of the hill, the quicker we can see this awesome view."

"Okay." Adora pulls back from the hug only to be pulled back in by Catra, laughing she starts to say, "Cat, what are you-mmph… mmm…"

Pulling back from their kiss, Catra smiles, "Sorry. I should have… mmph!"

This time Adora smirks back, "Don't apologize and just kiss me."

"Righto." Catra goes back in for some more kisses until they are out of breath, the magicat resting her forehead on Adora's and then looks up, "Hey, Adora. Look up."

"Hm?"

"Up." Catra repeats, gesturing with her head, "Up there."

Adora turns her head and squints her eyes, "What am I looking at Cat?"

The magicat smiles and points with her finger, "Up there, Adora."

Shifting slightly, Adora looks to where Catra is pointing up at the trees and then sees it, "Is that…?"

"That'd be a possum, princess." Catra whispers, "They're usually nocturnal but I guess this one is just up and about this morning."

"It's so small." Adora observes, "Kind of like a squirrel."

"Yeah, they do get bigger. Not the gliders but some of those possums do." Catra says as she bends down to pick up the esky,

"Come on. That one is probably looking for somewhere safe to sleep for the day."

"Okay." Adora nods, "Hey, let me get that."

"Sure." Catra holds the esky out to Adora.

And just as Adora takes hold of the cool box, the weight of it has her dropping it to the ground with an, "Oof. How is this so heavy?"

"It's got water in it." Catra shrugs and then takes off the backpack and holds it out to Adora, "Here. Swap."

"No, I've got this." Adora replies stubbornly and lifts the esky up, "See. I was just a little surprised is all."

"Okay." Catra nods and puts the backpack back on, "This way."

"I need to stop for a minute." Adora calls out to Catra who's a few steps ahead, gently putting the esky on the floor and shaking out her arms, "My arms are dead."

"Water?" Catra asks as she opens up the lid of the esky and pulls out a bottle of water and holds it out to Adora who takes it.

"Thanks." Adora screws the lid and takes a sip.

"If you're buggered…" The magicat closes the lid and gestures for Adora to take a seat on top, "It's safe as houses."

Adora tilts her head with a questioning look.

"It's sturdy." Catra reiterates, "Take a break, Adora. Have a seat."

"Oh, thanks." The blonde lowers herself cautiously onto the esky before letting herself settle for a moment while Catra looks around the trees once more, "What are you looking at?"

"Couple of koalas up there." Catra points up ahead and Adora feels herself reenergized as she gets to her feet to have a look too, "They're just chilling up in those trees."

"Wow." Adora says as she finally sees them too, "They look like little bears. Which I know, they aren't."

"I'm chuffed that you remembered." Catra preens, "Those guys will sleep all day like lazy buggers."

Adora laughs, "What a life, huh?"

"Living the dream, more like it." Catra replies back, "So I take it you're good to keep going?"

"Yes." The blonde replies and then adds, "Though… can we swap?"

"Sure. I'll grab the esky. You can take the backpack." Catra shrugs off the bag and Adora grabs it and swings it over her shoulders, "I don't mind a little bit of hard yakka."

Adora rolls her eyes, "I carried it most of the way."

"You sure did." Catra replies with a grin, "Alright, well, come on muscles. We're nearly at the top."

"Finally." Catra breathes out in relief when they get to the top where there's a lookout, "Made it."

"That wasn't so bad." Adora pants out a little from the final climb.

"Yeah, was a real piece of piss." Catra says off the cuff as she stretches her arms out after situating the esky under a tree off to the side of the track, "Wanna go check out the lookout?"

"Are you going to leave that there?" Adora asks regarding the esky.

"Yeah?"

"It's not going to like, get stole or anything is it?" Adora asks looking around and not seeing anyone else.

"Nah, she'll be right." Catra says easily, "It's a complicated ol' thing anyways to open it. Got a latch and everything."

The blonde quirks an eyebrow up at the magicat, "You're ridiculous."

"A true larrikin."

"Larry who?" Adora tilts her head.

"Don't worry about it." Catra waves the question off and then gestures towards the lookout, "Shall we?"

"We shall." Adora grabs Catra's hand and they head toward the lookout, "Woah, this is amazing."

"It really is." The magicat says leaning against the top of the railing, "One of my favourite spots whenever I have a chance to come here."

"Oh, look! There's a waterfall over there!" Adora points out excitedly and Catra chuckles, "It's so beautiful this view."

"Pretty sure there's platypus in that creek over there." Catra adds, "Though you'd be lucky as Larry to see one in the wild. Elusive as shit."

"I thought you said not to worry about Larry." Adora throws back with an amused look on her face.

"Larry who?" The magicat repeats back to the blonde with a grin of her own and then laughs, "In the warmer months this whole place is drowned out by the sound of cicadas. Fucking deafening."

Adora nods as she looks down and around at the view.

The sound of birds singing has Catra's ears twitching about as a familiar call gets closer and then a bird glides in and lands on the railing not too far from the magicat, surprising Catra, "Hey, buddy." She says to the kookaburra who just stares back at her.

"Who are you talking to?" Adora starts to say and then sees the bird, "Oh, can you talk to birds?"

"Nah, don't have the talent." Catra replies as the kookaburra starts to chirp out its familiar song, "Old mate here is probably looking for food."

"It's pretty." Adora says staring at the bird.

"Them kooka's are always laughing." Catra says turning her head back to the bird, "Still better than the sound of a Galah or those cockys."

"Cockys?"

"Cockatoos." Catra elaborates, "Don't worry, we'll hear all the birds soon enough once the sun comes up."

Adora smiles, "I can't wait." And then sighs out a little disappointingly when the bird flies away, "Oh, bye birdie."

They spend a little more time taking in the scenery, Adora even snapping a few shots with her camera and maybe a few selfies of her and Catra together before they head back to where the magicat had left their esky.

"Told ya, she'd be right." Catra grins when she sees her esky still there and not disturbed, "I've got lunch."

"Really?" Adora asks surprised, despite the fact she'd been carrying it some of the way up to this point.

"Yeah." The magicat picks up the box and finds a nice spot on the grass under the sun, pulling out a picnic blanket from the backpack and laying it on top of the grass, placing the esky on top, "Take a seat, Adora."

The blonde plonks herself down on the blanket crossed legged, watching as Catra pulls out a few items from inside the box, "What have you got in there?"

"Some sangas, drinks and fruit." Catra says as she holds out a sandwich to Adora, "Roast chicken, mayo and cheese."

"Mm." The blonde eagerly takes it, unwrapping it and takes a bite, "Mm… wow. I didn't realise how hungry I was."

The magicat chuckles under her breath, "Eat up. I've got heaps or I'm going to have to carry all of this back down to my tank."

Adora nods happily, "What drinks have you got?"

"What do you want?" Catra opens up the esky lid, "Soft drinks, juice, water."

"Juice sounds good." Adora answers after swallowing down her mouthful, "Might save the soft drinks for the drive back."

"Sounds good." Catra replies as she holds out bottle of juice for the blonde, "Take your time, don't choke."

"Are all the sandwiches the same?" Adora asks as she pops the last bit into her mouth and eyes the esky.

"Yeah, thought it'd make more sense if I just used up the rest of the chook instead of getting other stuff too." Catra replies, "I mean, I was going to make some fairy bread as well but seems a little overkill. We can get something else later if you want. I can get us some lollies or something later if that's what you're after."

"No, this is fine. Better than fine. It's great." Adora gets up and grabs a second sandwich as Catra smiles back at her, "Ooh, strawberries!"

"Yeah, that's for later." Catra bites into her sandwich and chews, "Hopefully they aren't too sour."

The blonde shrugs happily as she continues to eat, enjoying the company and her surroundings.

As Catra is driving them back towards the hotel, Adora turns her head to the magicat, "We didn't see any… what did you call them, bush chooks?"

"Emus? No. They aren't as prevalent here as they are in other places." Catra replies fondly, "When you come back and we head over west, I'll take you to an island with quokkas so friendly they practically come up to you to say hi."

"Oh, that'd be really cool." Adora beams and then pulls out her phone to search what those are, "How do you spell 'quokkas'? Oh, I think I got it…"

"They're real photogenic." Catra says as Adora starts to squeal in delight as seeing the images of them, "If we go during the off season, you'll be able to see their young too."

Adora nods happily, "I can't wait!"

After a moment of silence, where Adora is still scrolling away and looking at photos online of the animals, Catra clears her throat, "So… when do you leave?"

"Friday night." Adora replies, "My flight's at 11pm."

"Late." Catra nods as she continues to drive, "How are you getting there?"

"I was going to grab a cab." The blonde pockets her phone and then looks at Catra, "Why?"

"I can drop you off. Save you some coin." Catra offers nonchalantly.

The blonde sighs, "Just drop me off?"

"Well, I'd see you off too." Catra says, "Keep you company or whatever until your flight get called and stuff."

"That's sweet." Adora reaches out and cups the magicat's cheek.

"So… yes?" Catra turns her head to glance at Adora, her cheek resting softly against the blonde's warm hand, "Want me to take you to the airport?"

"Yes." Adora quickly replies, "I mean, if it's not a problem."

"It's no wuckas." Catra says with a grin and then pulls into a parking space just outside the hotel, "Well, we're back."

"That was a lot quicker than getting to the park." Adora says as she slumps back into her seat but unbuckles her seatbelt once the magicat has turned off the engine, "Do you want to come up?"

"Yeah, if that's alright? I'm absolutely rooted after that." Catra admits slumping back in her chair too and grinning over at Adora, "Not to say that I'm planning to root you now…"

Adora quirks an eyebrow, "Is that a euphemism?"

"Yes." Catra nods and then yawns, "But I think I'm going to need a nanna nap before I drive back to Scorp's later."

"Or… you can just stay with me again tonight?" Adora offers hopefully.

"I'd be happy as a pig rolling around in shit if I could." Catra replies with a nod and then sees the amused look on Adora's face, "I mean, yes. Fuck, yes. I feel like I need to pay for half of your hotel rate at this point."

"Nope. Don't you dare." Adora chastises, "You've given me way more experiences than I could have paid for."

"I can give you more experiences." Catra smirks back before laughing out at her own joke, the blonde shoving at the magicat weakly, "Okay, we'll head up and take a power nap. Oh and I'm going to have to call up Scorp and tell her I'm bailing on dinner tonight with them."

"Oh, if you have plans tonight…" Adora starts.

"I don't." Catra quickly cuts the blonde off, "But I should probably let her know sooner rather than later. We can catch up tomorrow night. You should come with."

"Oh, I don't want to intrude…" Adora bites her bottom lip.

"I'm sure they'll be stoked to see you again." Catra reassures the blonde, "I'll give them a call and let them know to expect us tomorrow night?"

Adora nods, "Only if it's okay with them."

Catra nods and opens her door, "Shall we then? I can feel that nap dawning on me."

The blonde laughs, opening her door as well and letting Catra take her hand as they head back up to her room for a well earned rest.

Chapter End Notes

I feel like I'm going to have to turn this into a series... but we'll see.

I've been in Kalgoorlie for work last week and my digs weren't the most... writer friendly (there was no desk or chair).
Gotta love staying in dongas...

Plus I had a few long days plus a 6+ hour drive back home afterwards...

Anyways, I've got some of my Captain Catra written up and will work on The Quest tomorrow.

Thanks for reading, kudos, commenting, subscribing and bookmarking.

Later

Chapter Summary

It's the end of Adora's trip.

Chapter Notes

See the end of the chapter for notes

"Morning, sunshine." Catra's raspy voice greets Adora after spending the rest of the night trying to complete a Lord of the Rings movie marathon that lasted only the first movie and not even to the end of it before falling asleep.

Adora grumbles and turns over, clearly not ready to wake up, "Go back to sleep. It's too early and I'm on vacation."

"Ah, yes. Holiday mode." Catra chuckles as she flops back down on the bed harshly making the whole thing bounce, "Wow, this this is springy for a high-end kind of place."

"Catra!" The blonde whines out, "The sun's not up yet. Go back to sleep."

"That because your curtains are still shut." The magicat says plastering herself onto Adora's back, "Mm… I get why koalas do this."

"Do what?" Adora breathes out.

"Joeys clinging onto mum's back." Catra replies purring happily as she 'clings' onto Adora's back, "Though I don't think you'd enjoy my claws in your back."

"Please don't dig your claws into my back." Adora softly says as she pulls Catra's arms around her tighter, "Hugs and cuddles are acceptable, claw free."

“You got it.” Catra trills and settles, closing her eyes, “I shouldn’t get too used to this. Once you head back home, I’ll have to navigate life Adora-less.”

The blonde sighs and after a few moments turns over onto her back, Catra’s arm still over her chest as she blinks her eyes open at the magicat, “You’re going to make me sad, Cat.”

Catra cups Adora’s cheek, her thumb rubbing over the smooth skin as she feels Adora take in a stuttering breath, clearly upset, “Maybe you could chuck a couple of sickies… extend this vactation”

Adora laughs wetly, a few tears sliding down her cheek, “Sickies?”

“Sick days.” Catra smiles wiping the tears from Adora’s cheek with her thumb, “I guess you guys call it… playing hooky or something? We call it chucking a sicky.”

“But I’m not sick.” Adora points out.

“Don’t have to be. Which is kind of the point.” Catra nods with a grin, “Doesn’t mean you can’t chuck one.”

“If you mean take a day off then I’d say that you’re a bad influence.” Adora quirks an eyebrow up at the magicat, “Besides, how is one day off going to make me feel less sad?”

“Take longer.” Catra shrugs, “Take a lot more sickies.”

“Or…” Adora runs her hands along Catra’s arm, “Why don’t you come over to me? You could stay with me and I could show you around.”

The magicat shakes her head, “I really can’t.”

“Why not?” Adora looks at her disappointed, “You don’t want to?”

“It’s not that I don’t want to.” Catra says softly as she looks into Adora’s eyes, “But it’s just not the right time. Not with the way things are currently."

"Oh." Adora seems to understand, "It's a hybrid thing, isn't it?"

The magicat nods.

Adora sighs out, "That sucks."

"Yeah, defo does." Catra agrees, "Plus the whole passport thing… it might take a while."

"Mm." The blonde hums out flatly as Catra breathes out, she looks into Catra's eyes, "This isn't goodbye. I'm not done with you. Not even when I have to go."

Catra grins, "No?"

"No." Adora wraps her arms around Catra, squeezing and then releasing, "Definitely not."

"Okay." The magicat says muffled into Adora's neck, "What did you want to do today?"

"I don't know. You're the tour guide around here." The blonde giggles out, "Aren't you supposed to know all the good spots?"

"I know of some spots. Doesn't make me an expert for the whole country, Adora. And it's a big place." Catra laughs out as she pulls herself out of Adora's arms and stretches out before sitting up against the bedhead, "Depends on what you feel like doing today."

Adora shrugs as she tries to pull Catra back down, "I'm feeling kind of lazy today to be honest."

"Ah, yes." Catra nods with another grin, "We can veg out today if that's what you want to do."

"And what would that involve?" Adora asks closing her eyes once more.

“Well, for starters I guess I’ll let you get a little more beauty sleep.” Catra replies, the blonde huffs and playfully shoves the magicat making her chuckle, “And then, I don’t know… we can get some room service or whatever.”

“Room service is expensive.” Adora points out.

“Sure is exy.” Catra agrees and then she hums out in thought, “Well, we can go to the shops and pick up some supplies.”

“Later. Sleep first.” The blonde yawns out, “What time is it even?”

“Let me check.” Catra grabs her phone and checks the time, “It’s quarter past five.”

“Quarter past five… Catra!” Adora whines out once more, “Go back to sleep! It’s not even 6am yet!”

“I need to move my tank.” Catra says, “Don’t want to get a ticket for over parking.”

“What time?”

“Pretty sure parking starts up at 8am. But I’m in a clearway zone. So I’m going to need to get off the road and into a proper car park before 6am.” Catra replies and then shuffles a little, “I might actually go move it now while there’s still a shit load of spaces.”

“Uh… I’ll come with you.” Adora offers and starts to move to get up as well, “I’m not letting you walk out there alone.”

“I’ll be fine, ‘dor.” Catra reassures the blonde, “Done it heaps before.”

“No. It’s fine.” Adora flips the blanket off and swings her legs off the side of the bed, stretching out and yawning before realising she’s not actually wearing any pants and moves the blanket back over to cover her legs, “I just need to get dressed first.”

“Yep.” Catra replies and gets off the bed, “I’ll just… uh, turn around. Yeah.”

The magicat turns around and listens as Adora gets out of bed and goes through her things to pull out a pair of pants, “Okay, you can turn around now.”

“It’s nippy out. Might want to grab a jacket.” Catra says as she throws on her own and then grabs her keys, wallet and phone, “Ready?”

Adora puts on her jacket over her pyjama top, grabbing the room key as well as her own stuff too, “Yes. Let’s go.”

“Righto.” Catra nods and heads towards the door and opens it, Adora steps out and they wait for the door to close and lock, the magicat grins at blonde, “I completely forgot that you were wearing that.”

“Wearing what?” Adora asks as she attempts to tie her hair up, yawning in the process before giving up and letting her hair back down tiredly and the groaning out in defeat as they step inside the elevator, “My body is betraying me!”

Catra cackles out, “Defeated by your own hair, huh?”

“Shut it, Cat.” Adora chastises tiredly, “It’s too early.”

“Yeah, nah.” Catra laughs out, “I’m usually up around this time anyway. Force of habit since my body hasn’t adjusted to no more early morning starts.”

“What were you saying about what I’m wearing?” Adora asks looking at her herself in the reflection in the lift doors, “What’s wrong with what I’m wearing?”

“You have horses on your shirt.” Catra grins, “Cute.”

Adora peeks under her jacket and shrugs, “I like horses. What’s wrong with that?”

“I just wasn’t expecting it is all.” The magicat replies, “I like it. It’s not everyday you meet someone that’s so passionate about something enough to wear it on their chest.”

“Don’t shame me about liking horses, Cat.” Adora warns as the magicat puts her hands up, “There’s nothing wrong with it.”

“Mate.” Catra deadpans to the blonde, “I’m literally a magicat. You liking horses is not a problem. I’m as furry as they come. Which makes sense why you like me.”

Adora rolls her eyes, “I don’t like you because you’re a magicat.”

“Oh, no?”

“No.” The blonde shakes her head, “I like you because you’re a decent person. Kind and has gone out of your way to show me around.”

“Well, anyone would have done that.” Catra shrugs.

“Not without wanting something from me in return.” Adora breathes out and then looks at Catra, “But not you. You’re just… nice.”

“Don’t call me nice, princess.” Catra turns her head to the blonde, “Don’t want to look soft on the outside.”

The elevator dings and the doors open, Catra holding her arm out across the doors and lets Adora out first before following shortly after, the blonde turns around, “Point proven.”

“Whatever.” Catra chuckles, “It’s a force of habit.”

“Uh huh.” Adora replies unconvinced as they walk through the lobby, “Where are you going to move your truck to?”

“It’s a ute.” The magicat corrects, “A truck is bigger. Like a lorry.”

“Uh, it is a truck.” The blonde points out.

“Yeah, nah.” Catra replies as they get to her vehicle, the magicat unlocking the passenger door and opening it for Adora to get in, “In ya go.”

“Thank you.” Adora smiles before shivering inside, “It’s so cold in here.”

“Yeah.” Catra replies as get in behind the steering wheel, starting up the engine and getting the heat going, “Did tell you it was nippy outside. If you’re still cold, you can grab my jumper in the back.”

With chattering teeth, the blonde shakes her head starting to feel the heat coming through, “No, I’m alright once this thing gets warmed up.”

“Okay.” Catra nods and then flicks the headlights on, “Now… where to park…”

“You don’t know?” Adora asks holding her hands up in front of the vents, “Where do you usually park?”

“At Scorp’s.” Catra replies and then puts the in gear and drives out of her street parking spot, “Oh, I know the perfect spot.”

“Are you sure you’re allowed to park here?” Adora asks looking at the confusing street sign.

“Yeah, she’ll be right.” The magicat looks up at the sign and nods in confirmation, “Parking time starts at 8am. And as long as I’m gone by 11am, I won’t get a ticket.”

Adora stares at the sign, “If you’re sure…”

“I’m sure.” Catra replies and holds her hand out, “Coffee?”

“I’m not dressed for coffee.” Adora pulls the jacket around her top tighter.

“I wouldn’t worry about that.” Catra says as the blonde gives her a questioning look, “You’ll see what I’m talking about when we get there.”

“Okay…” They both get out of Catra’s ute and the magicat grabs onto Adora’s hand, the blonde pleasantly surprised by how warm Catra’s hand it, “Stars. Your hand is so warm!”

“I run hot.” Catra replies as she gently squeezes Adora’s hand, “It’s not too far from here.”

“Barefoot?” Adora says as she watches a few customers enter without wearing any shoes at all, she spots a few people milling around in not much at all, “How are they not cold just wearing bathers?”

“No idea. I’m cold just looking at them. And I’m covered in fur.” Catra admits, “See. You practically fit in with this crowd.”

“How am I fitting in when I’m in my pyjamas and everyone else is in bathers?” The blonde quirks an eyebrow up at the magicat.

“Just cos they’re in cosies doesn’t make them less than.” Catra replies as Adora gives her a strange look, “All I’m saying is that no one cares what you wear in here as long as your bits are covered.”

Adora looks around at the attire in the café and then tilts her head a Catra, narrowing her eyes, “Uh huh.”

“Okay, well, budgie smugglers still count as covering up.” Catra shrugs as she leads Adora to the counter, “Do you know what you want to get?”

“Oh, I haven’t had a look yet.” Adora replies as she quickly goes to peruse the displays, “Anything you recommend?”

“Depends on what you’re into.” Catra replies, “Personally I’m a sucker for a brekky wrap. But a toastie will do just fine too.”

“I did like that brekky wrap yesterday morning.” Adora thinks out loud, “I think I’ll try it again.”

“Sure thing, Adora.” Catra laughs out as she walks up to the counter and orders.

“How much do I owe you for breakfast?” Adora asks happily sated and now nursing her coffee in her hands.

“Nothing. My shout.” Catra replies grabbing their rubbish and heading over to the bins, a yawn comes over her, “But if you want to pay me back, let me take a nap in your bed just a little bit longer.”

“Just a nap?” Adora asks back.

“Yeah. Just a nap.” The magicat yawns again, “Look, it’s cool if you say no, Adora.”

“No! I mean, yes.” The blonde quickly says, “Yes. Come back to my room to sleep.”

Catra narrows her eyes at Adora, “Okay… thanks.”

“It’s fine.” Adora brushes it off as Catra gestures for the blonde to get up, “Oh, like, right now?”

Laughing, Catra nods, “Yeah, now would be good. I’ve got to move my tank before 11am.”

“Oh, right.” Adora says and with her free hand grabs Catra’s, “Come on then. I could use some more sleep too.”

“Hey, why did you hesitate before when I asked you if I could nap in your room?” Catra asks as Adora opens the door to her room.

The blonde bites her bottom lip in lieu of answering as Catra just stares at her from the door after closing it.

“Adora?”

“Look, it’s silly.” Adora breathes out with a slight blush as she turns away, taking off her jacket and placing it on the back of the chair.

“What’s silly?”

“Nothing.”

“Adora.”

The blonde shakes her head as she gets back under the covers, “Are you coming to bed?”

“No, Adora.” Catra replies as she leans against the shut door, “There’s something bothering you.”

“It’s nothing.” The blonde huffs out, “Just… let it go.”

Shaking her head, Catra sighs, “I can’t sleep with you.”

“What?”

“I can’t sleep with you, Adora.” Catra repeats, “And I don’t mean like the napping kind of sleep.”

Adora sits up and looks at the magicat, “You don’t want to sleep with me?”

“I do want to sleep with you. But I just… can’t.” Catra sighs again.

“Uh…” Adora doesn’t know what to say to that.

The magicat hugs herself a little as she continues, “I’m happy to nap with you but I can’t sleep with you. It would just… hurt too much when you eventually leave to go home.”

“Oh.” The blonde mouths the word.

“Yeah. And don’t get me wrong, I’m not against a shag or whatever, it’s just…” Catra looks up at the blonde and gives her a wry smile, “If we did sleep together… if I got a taste of what I could have and then lost it… I don’t know if I could go on.”

This time Adora sighs, “I know what you mean.”

“Yeah?”

“Yeah.” The blonde nods, “I’ve never had a long distance relationship before.”

“Is that what this is? A relationship?” Catra tries to jest.

“Cat, come over here.” Adora softly says, “Please.”

The magicat nods and makes her way to the bed, kneeling next to Adora, “I’ve never done long distance either.”

“Get in here with me.” Adora gestures beside her, “We can just cuddle.”

Catra nods and strips off her jacket before getting in bed next to Adora, turning onto her side and looking at the blonde, “There’s so many things I wish…”

“I know.” Adora nods with a small but sad smile, “They say that sometimes you find what you want when you least expect it.”

“That’s true.” Catra chuckles under her breath, “I was defo not expecting to fall in love with the blondie in the lobby of a hotel looking for local experiences.”

Adora laughs out and then crinkles her eyebrows, “Did you just…?”

“Just what?”

“Did you just say you love me?” Adora says with hope in her voice that she didn’t hear it wrong.

“No.” The blonde deflates upon hearing that, Catra grins back, “I didn’t say I love you. What I said was I was not expecting to fall in love with you.”

“Oh, you!” Adora pulls the magicat into her in a wrestle as Catra laughs out even louder, “You scared me!”

“I scared you?!” Catra wheezes out with laughter, “You haven’t even told me how you feel yet, princess!”

“Haven’t I?” Adora thinks to herself as her fingers keep hold onto the magicat.

“Yeah, nah. You haven’t.” Catra repeats.

“Oh.” Adora’s hands move up to cup Catra’s face, bringing her into a soft kiss, “Well, this is absolutely crazy. But I love you too.”

Catra smiles as she brings Adora back in for another kiss, before pulling back and groaning out, “Fuck. This is a really bad idea, isn’t it?”

“Totally.” Adora agrees with a sigh, “But I don’t think you have much of a choice now.”

“Don’t I?” Catra quirks an eyebrow up at the blonde with a grin.

“Nope.” The blonde pulls the magicat in for a tight hug, Catra breathes Adora in, rubbing her cheek against the blonde, “We’re going to make this work, right?”

“That’s the plan.” Catra says muffled into Adora’s neck, “I’m all in if you are.”

“How is this even going to work?” Adora pushes Catra onto her back and then wraps herself around the magicat, resting her head on Catra’s chest.

Catra presses a kiss into Adora’s hair, “We’ll figure it out.”

“Will we?” The blonde looks up questioning as Catra nods, “How can you be so sure?”

“I just am.” Catra replies confidently as Adora hums out, “Okay, enough depressing shit. Can we at least enjoy what time we have left before you have to go home?”

Adora sighs but nods, “Okay. What do you want to do?”

“Nap.” Catra replies with a small smile, doing her best to make the blonde feel better, “Then after that, I’m sure there’s a few places we can go and explore.”

“Okay.” Adora nods again and then yawns, “Sleep?”

“Oh, hang on. I’ve just got to set my alarm.” Catra grabs her phone and puts an alarm on to wake up, “Don’t want to get a ticket for overparking.”

“No.” The blonde agrees before closing her eyes and falling asleep listening to Catra’s heartbeat.

Departure Day

“I don’t want to go.” Adora pouts, her eyes still red from crying, “Come with me.”

Catra chuckles and hugs Adora tighter in her arms, "I would love to. But I'm pretty sure I'm just going to be deported as soon as I land when they find out I don't have a passport or a visa."

Adora grips onto Catra a little tighter, "I love you."

"I love you too." Catra whispers into Adora's hair, "Besides you're going to be back in a couple of months."

"Too long." Adora whines out.

"Well, it'll give me time to get my place sorted." Catra replies, "I'm going to have to move some stuff around…"

"I can't wait to see where you live!" Adora perks up despite the fact that she's going to be leaving soon, "I can't wait to live with you!"

"You're nuts." Catra laughs under her breath, "You're not living with me. Just staying with me for a little bit. Stars, you might be sick of me when you come back and realise I'm not all that interesting."

"You're an idiot." Adora rolls her eyes and presses her lips onto Catra's, "We've spent like an entire week together. Pretty sure I'm not going to get sick of you."

"A week compared to a lifetime not the same, Adora." Catra deadpans and then smiles, "But I think I could spend a lifetime with you and not get sick of you."

"Awe, you promise?" Adora grins out.

"Bloody oath, I promise." Catra replies and just before she's about to say something else, an announcement comes through for Adora's plane to start boarding, "Well, I think you're boarding soon."

Adora sighs, her arms still wrapped around Catra gripping a little tighter, "I'm going to miss you so much."

“Me too.” Catra replies trying to keep her voice steady as she watches a few more tears roll down Adora’s face, “You’ll be back soon.”

“I will. But it’s so far away.” Adora sniffles, wiping her face with her hand as Catra leans in and presses her lips onto Adora’s once more, “It’s not fair.”

“Everyday brings you closer to coming back, Adora.” Catra reminds the blonde, “Remember that.”

Adora nods, “I will.”

“And when you get back, we’re going to be spending at least a couple of days in bed.” Catra declares as Adora wetly laughs, “And I don’t mean just taking nanna naps. I’m talking the good stuff.”

“Deep sleep?” Adora jests as she sniffles.

Catra laughs out, the action making Adora smile as her plane is called for final boarding, “You better get going before you miss the plane, Adora.”

The blonde nods again, this time wrapping her arms around Catra’s neck and kisses her once more, this time with as much love as she can muster before breaking apart and this time a tear rolls down the magicat’s cheek, the blonde wiping it with her thumb, “I love you.”

“I love you too.” Catra swallows down hard, “You better get going.”

Reluctantly they part, Catra walks Adora hand in hand until they are at the gate, only a few passengers ahead of her, “I’ll see you soon.” Adora says as she presses her lips onto Catra’s for the last time.

“I’ll see you later.” Catra grins out, wiping her face with back of her hand.

Catra watches as the gate attendant scans Adora's boarding pass and then waves the blonde off as she gives her a sad smile and waves back before walking down the bridge towards to plane.

Adora: Did you upgrade me to first class??!

Catra: Yeah, I did. Why? No like?

Adora: Catra!

Adora: You didn't have to do that!

Catra: I wanted to.

Catra: Have a good and safe flight, Adora.

Catra: I love you and let me know when you land.

Adora: I love you too and yes I definitely will!

Adora: I have to turn my phone off now

Adora: I love you. LOVE YOU!

Catra: Love you too.

Catra: I'll be waiting for your return.

Catra: I'll make sure my bed is nap ready when you come back

Adora: I can't wait to come back!

Adora: Okay I really have to go

Adora: I love you!

Catra: My tank will be ready for that road trip when you come back.

Catra: I can’t wait to take you on a ride… pun intended… XD

Catra: I love you too

Adora: Last one! This isn’t goodbye…

Catra: It’s not goodbye…

Catra: It’s just…

Catra: I’ll see you later

Chapter End Notes

And... that's it... for now.
If I find some motivation, I'll do a follow up.

Thanks for reading, commenting, kudos, bookmarking and subscribing.
This was supposed to be a one shot... but yeah, like that was going to happen... 😂

I'm working away currently, but my digs are good tonight.
Which means I got some writing done. YAY!
Until next time! Stay safe peeps!

End Notes

Thanks for reading, kudos and if you want to... comment.
I haven't decided if I'm going to do another chapter or not... but, we'll see.

Okay, I'm away this coming week... so I'm going to work on my other two fics that are so close to finishing...
And then... I'm probably going to get started on season 3 of I'd Kill For You... probably...

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!