Buff Blondes and Cat Girls

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/58017064.

Rating:
Teen And Up Audiences

Archive Warning:
No Archive Warnings Apply

Category:
F/F

Fandoms:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018), RWBY

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Blake Belladonna/Yang Xiao Long

Characters:
Adora (She-Ra), Catra (She-Ra), Yang Xiao Long, Blake Belladonna

Additional Tags:
Bar date, awkward flirting and interactions, hint of jealousy, they blush a lot lmao, Arm Wrestling, Friendship, Crossover, Catradora meeting Bumbleby

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2024-08-08 Words: 1,646 Chapters: 1/1

Buff Blondes and Cat Girls

Posted originally on the Archive of Our Own at http://archiveofourown.org/works/58017064.

Rating:
Teen And Up Audiences

Archive Warning:
No Archive Warnings Apply

Category:
F/F

Fandoms:
She-Ra and the Princesses of Power (2018), RWBY

Relationships:
Adora/Catra (She-Ra), Blake Belladonna/Yang Xiao Long

Characters:
Adora (She-Ra), Catra (She-Ra), Yang Xiao Long, Blake Belladonna

Additional Tags:
Bar date, awkward flirting and interactions, hint of jealousy, they blush a lot lmao, Arm Wrestling, Friendship, Crossover, Catradora meeting Bumbleby

Language:
English

Stats:
Published: 2024-08-08 Words: 1,646 Chapters: 1/1

Buff Blondes and Cat Girls

by xian70

Summary

"Hey, blonde!" Adora says to Yang, faking an angry voice. "Are you seriously hitting on my girl? I will make you regret it!". Catra purrs.

"Huh?" replies Yang, confused. "I wasn't actually hitting on anyone. She started it!"

"Don't mess with me!" replies Adora. "If you really want a cat girlfriend, go find one of your own!"

Yang's face lights up. Her smiling gaze flies to Blake. "Actually..."

---

or: After an argument during a date, Catra flirts with a blonde to make Adora jealous, and Adora tries to get back at her by approaching another catgirl, unaware that these two are also girlfriends.

Notes

Catradora meets Bumbleby!

“You’re such an idiot!”, Catra shouts angrily.

“I’m not...”, Adora replies. “No, listen. I don’t want to argue with you again. I’m going to the bathroom. When I come back, I hope you’ve cooled off.” And she gets up from her chair.

“Maybe you won’t find me here when you come back,” the catgirl says with a grim face. “Or who knows, I’ll find another blonde to spend the evening with.”

“Whatever,” Adora replies, striding away from the counter to the bathroom door without looking back. She opens the door and enters the room.

Stars, Catra is so infuriating, Adora thinks as she rinses her face in the sink. After years of pining and misunderstandings, the two have recently made up, become friends again and even started dating. And yet, the tensions sometimes resurface. And when it does, the feline falls back into her old ways, misinterpreting Adora’s actions and feelings. So it was tonight, when a casual remark from the blonde about her friend Glimmer’s upcoming party triggered Catra’s jealousy and fear of abandonment, fueled by years of being told by her bitch of a foster mom that she was just an obstacle, a distraction for an Adora destined for great things. And no matter how much Adora herself tried to convince her that it wasn’t true: Catra’s stubbornness in these matters is unparalleled.

Adora wipes her face. Hoping that her girlfriend has calmed down, she leaves the bathroom and heads back to the counter. But when she is only a few steps away, she freezes. Catra is sitting next to another girl and is having a friendly conversation with her. The other girl is tall and sturdy, with long, thick golden hair, and is wearing a brown jacket and an orange scarf. Adora realizes that Catra is flirting with her. She says something, smiling with her beautiful, seductive eyes of two different colors, and the blonde laughs, a little embarrassed, at her jokes. Catra’s tail, behind her, is wagging back and forth.

At one point, Catra turns her head, sees Adora standing in the middle of the bar, and gives her a grin. Then she goes back to flirting with the other blonde. Adora feels anger and jealousy fill her body.

Oh, is that it? she thinks. You want to make me jealous? Well, two can play this game.

Adora looks around, searching for the right person. But no one seems to catch her eye or interest... until she notices another girl with cat-like features, namely two black cat ears, sitting at the counter a few meters away from Catra and the blonde... The girl is slim and raven-haired, dressed in a black and white buttoned vest and looks bored, sipping a cocktail and throwing strange looks at the flirting couple.

Wow, she's cute, Adora thinks. Maybe I do have a thing for catgirls... Anyway, she's perfect to get back at Catra. Let's see how she reacts to my irresistible charm... if what everyone says about my charm is true.

Adora walks over to the counter and sits down next to the black-haired girl.

"Hi," she says.

The girl turns and glances at her curiously. After a few seconds of silence, she replies. "Hi."

"I couldn't help but notice your cat ears," Adora says. "They're really cute..."

The girl blushes slightly, still staring at Adora curiously. "Thanks," she says dryly. Then, pointing at Adora's hair, she adds, "Nice ponytail."

Adora's cheeks flush. The catgirl turns her amber eyes away from her and looks back at the other couple.

Okay, time to step it up, Adora thinks. And with an awkward smile she says, "I hope you know CPR, because you're taking my breath away."

The catgirl rolls her eyes. Sighing, but also smiling, she says, "How come you dumb blondes are so bad at flirting?"

"Hey!" Adora protests. "I'm not bad at it! My name is Adora, by the way."

"Blake," the catgirl replies. "And look, I noticed how you were looking at that other girl earlier. Is she a Faunus too? Anyway, she's been hitting on my... teammate for at least five minutes. I didn't interfere only because I enjoy seeing Yang blush in embarrassment at obvious attempts at seduction. But I have to say, this situation is starting to get on my nerves."

Adora turns and, like Blake, watches Catra and the other blonde - Yang, did she say is her name? - continuing their conversation. She doesn't miss the fact that the other two are also looking at them. Yang, in particular, seems increasingly embarrassed, partly because Catra has begun to graze her legs with her prehensile tail.

"Okay, this is too much," Blake says, slamming her glass down on the counter. "That girl's going too far."

"No, stop," Adora tells her. "She... Catra... isn't being serious. She's just flirting with your girlfriend to make me jealous. Just like I was flirting with you. I was faking it to make her jealous, I mean. Not that you're not cute, mind you."

Blake looks at her for a moment. Then she laughs. "I get it now! But I still have to rescue Yang. My friend seems to be struggling with such a beautiful and bold girl. And I'm afraid she has a thing for cat-like features," she adds, blushing.

"So we have something else in common!" Adora laughs, also blushing.

“How do we separate them?” Blake asks.

“Leave it to me!” Adora says. And she gets up from her chair and walks over to the other couple. Blake, intrigued, does the same.

Catra looks up and notices them approaching. A smile appears on her face. Yang turns to them as well, with an expression of relief at seeing Blake, but also of confusion at seeing Adora at her side.

“Hey, blonde!” Adora says to Yang, faking an angry voice. “Are you seriously hitting on my girl? I will make you regret it!”

Catra purrs.

“Huh?” replies Yang, confused. “I wasn’t actually hitting on anyone. She started it!”

“Don’t mess with me!” replies Adora. “If you really want a cat girlfriend, go find one of your own!”

Yang’s face lights up. Her smiling gaze flies to Blake. “Actually...”

“Hey, Adora,” Catra interrupts them, addressing Adora and continuing to purr. “How’s it going?”

“Catra, don’t play dumb. Are you really going to leave me for this lame chick?” Adora replies, feigning indignation. “She’s got some nice muscles, I’ll give you that. Maybe she thinks she’s a warrior. But I bet I could beat her in a blink.”

Yang stands, her hands on her hips. “Beat me? Are you serious, girl?”

“Super serious,” Adora says. “What do you say, blonde? Shall we arm wrestle?”

“Oh, be careful, Adora,” Blake says, grinning and holding onto Yang’s arm. “My friend is quite strong, you know.”

Yang's eyes glow. She stands and moves closer to Adora until they're just inches apart. "I'm ready," she says. Her hair looks almost on fire. "I never say no to a challenge."

"Then let's begin," Adora says. It warms her heart to hear Catra continue to purr as she watches.

The two blondes walk to a table in the back of the room and sit across from each other. Catra and Blake follow, standing and watching as the two contestants place their bent elbows on the table with their hands firmly gripped.

"Are you ready?" Adora says.

"I was born ready," Yang says. But before the contest begins, she turns to Blake with a broad smile: "By the way, do you know why cats always lose in arm wrestling?"

Blake looks at her confused.

"Because they fourfeet," Yang replies.

"Ugh," Catra groans. Blake rolls her eyes. Yang and Adora burst out laughing together.

"Come on, let's get started!" Adora says, holding back a snort.

The two blondes begin their match, grunting and trying to pin their opponent's hand. The two catgirls watch them intently. The contestants are so engrossed in their competition that they don't notice the loving looks Catra and Blake give them.

After about ten minutes there is still no winner. The effort is so great that both Adora and Yang seem unable to breathe, their faces completely contorted into grimaces, their foreheads drenched in sweat.

"Maybe we should intervene before they pass out from exhaustion," Blake says quietly to Catra. "What do you think?"

“I think you’re right, kitten. These dumbasses don’t know when to stop,” Catra answers. And she approaches Adora, wraps her tail around her hips and kisses her forehead. At the same time, Blake leans over to Yang and gives her a kiss on the cheek.

Suddenly the two blondes blush, their hands separate and both arms hit the table. The two catgirls laugh.

“W-what was that?”, Adora says confused.

“Blake...” says Yang. “What did you...”

“What idiots!” laughs Catra. “But that’s why we love them.”

“You can say that again!” says Blake, hugging Yang. And she adds to her friend: “Come on, let’s end this charade. You two need another cocktail.”

The four girls return to the counter where the bartender has four glasses ready for them. After exchanging smiles, Adora and Yang sit down, still sweating. Catra wastes no time in sitting on Adora’s lap, wrapping her arms around her shoulders. Blake sits next to Yang, holding her hands in her own.

“So, have you settled who’s stronger?” the black-haired girl asks.

“Of course I am!” Yang replies. “I just didn’t want to use all my strength.”

“No, I am!” Adora says. “I didn’t want to make you look bad in front of your girlfriend.”

Yang turns red. Seeing her reaction, Blake smiles again.

And Catra, after planting another kiss on Adora’s face, raises her glass to the other girls and proposes a toast. The four glasses touch.

All four girls laugh again. And Blake says, “I think this is the beginning of a beautiful friendship.”

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!