How We Met

by GlitraHasConsumedMe

Summary

Perfuma tells Mermista about the day she met her girlfriend

Notes

This is just a little thing I threw together for Tumblr's She-Ra Crack Ship Weekend event (posted a little late because I forgot the dates-)

It's all for silly fun so I didn't try super hard with this, but hopefully y'all still enjoy!!

Perfuma affectionately tucked a flower behind her girlfriend's ear, kissing her cheek before the former Horde soldier waved goodbye and went off with her friends.

"I still can't wrap my head around how someone like you ended up with someone like that." Mermista said, arms crossed as she watched the trio leave.

"Well, our love story was forged through the flames of war, so of course some people are bound to find it confusing." Perfuma said understandingly.

"I get that, but like, her?" Mermista squinted and frowned in a look the blonde had come to comprehend as confusion.

Perfuma giggled and shrugged. "Well, how we met is actually a pretty funny story, when you think about it."

"Oh great, a flashback story." Mermista rolled her eyes before the scene changed.

"Perfuma, you take the left flank! Adora straight ahead, I'll handle the right!" Glimmer shouted before teleporting right into an enemy to punch them right in the face.

Perfuma summoned some vines from beneath the soil, watching as they burst forth and wrapped four soldiers up to dangle upside down.

One of the soldiers removed their helmet, lifting the vine around their ankle to their lips as their teeth ripped through the plant and they flopped gracelessly to the ground.

Standing up, Perfuma watched the soldier slick her hair back to reveal a look of pure determination and rage.

"Stand down, princess*. Surrender to the Horde or else!" She shouted.*

Perfuma chuckled and grinned at yet another intimidation tactic from the opposing side. "I'm afraid I won't go down that easily." She said, snapping her fingers as two more vines wrapped around the other woman's wrists, and with a flick of her hand, the Horde soldier was brought to her knees with her comrades still writhing in their airborne vines around them.

Perfuma took a few steps towards the wildly thrashing girl and crouched to her level with a smile. "You Horde soldiers are always so full of anger, maybe you should try meditation." She suggested in a tone of voice that would not imply they were currently surrounded by a brutal battle.

“Medi-what?” The soldier blinked in confusion before shaking her head. “Who cares, let me go already!”

“My name is Perfuma,” the princess ignored her, “What's yours?”

“Like I'd tell the enemy anything about me!” The girl growled.

Perfuma shook her head with a sigh and sat down on her knees to bring them to eye level with one another. “If you tell me your name, I'll let you go. Sound fair?” She compromised with a smile.

The soldier opened her mouth to retort, then closed it, staying silent for a few moments before letting out a frustrated groan. “Lonnie.” She huffed.

“What was that, dear?” Perfuma teased.

“My name. It's Lonnie.” Lonnie said through grit teeth. “Now hold up your end of the deal.”

Perfuma stood, taking note of the way Lonnie's hand tightened around her stun baton. She nodded and took a step back before commanding the vines to release Lonnie as well as drop her teammates. Hard and unconscious.

As soon as she was freed, Lonnie lunged to her feet, aiming her baton at Perfuma's side. The princess easily side-stepped, grabbing Lonnie by the arm to pin it to her back with an ease most wouldn't expect from the most non-threatening looking of the Rebellion.

"Lonnie, Lonnie, Lonnie." Perfuma shook her head and tutted. "Again with the anger! Are you sure you don't want to try dome meditation? It's really quite good for you!"

Lonnie cried out in annoyance. "Let go of me, you Rebellion loser!" She said, struggling to free her arm which was gripped tighter with each attempt to move.

Perfuma pressed a pressure point in Lonnie's wrist, causing it to go limp enough for Perfuma to easily pluck the stun baton from her hand. "Try it with me. In for three, out for four." She said and demonstrated some easy to grasp breathing exercises.

"Don't taunt me!" Lonnie said, and with a heave of effort threw her weight into the princess, turning on her heel mid-fall to pin Perfuma to the ground.

"Oh my." Perfuma blinked up, cheeks turning red. "Well, I guess you are my type, after all." She muttered mostly to herself.

"What?!" Lonnie's face lit up with blush at her words, eyes widening.

“Say, do you think it would be wrong of me to ask if I can kiss you?” Perfuma wondered aloud, raising her neck slightly from the ground to move her face closer. “Because I think I would really like to kiss you right now.”

“I… I…” Lonnie tried to find words, but couldn't seem to mentally rationalise a reason not to kiss a pretty, willing girl. She huffed out a slew of curses before jerking her head down in a lip-bruising kiss.

Perfuma grinned against her lips, easily slipping her hands out from where Lonnie had them pinned to wrap her arms around the soldier's neck, kissing until she heard clamoring on both sides to retreat.

“Well, this was fun. I'm sure I'll see you again?” Perfuma said, sliding out from under a very stunned Lonnie and brushing herself off as she stood. “Until next time!” She waved, blowing the Horde cadet a kiss goodbye.

“Really? That's all it took? A kiss?” Mermista raised an eyebrow.

“Well, I'm sure there are more…enticing battlefield stories I could tell, but I don't think the age rating of this story would allow me to go into any detail.” Perfuma chuckled fondly at the memories and licked her lips.

“Okay, I didn't need to hear that part.” Mermista said, though couldn't hide her flushed cheeks.

“Hey, Perfuma!” Lonnie grinned as she jogged over after her sparring session, kissing her girlfriend's cheek.

“Welcome back! How was your workout?” Perfuma grinned. “Well, we should be going. It was great seeing you again, Mermista!”

And with that the couple walked away hand in hand, leaving behind a totally-not-at-all envious Mermista (who definitely doesn't want a pretty, sweaty, muscular girlfriend of her own to latch onto).
